Grosvenor Sound Films, for a background for the entertainment for Royalty which inspires the title of the Arthur Tracy "Command Performance," used the Golder's Green Hippodrome, in the Hampstead area, from early in the morning until the theatre was wanted for a public performance at night. The unit spent several days in the Hippodrome, staging a footlights presentation of "Carmen," with Tracy's singing of the "Toreador" song as its highlight. A full orchestra and chorus were recruited from the Old Vic and British National Opera companies.

Sinclair Hill, directing, is celebrating his twenty-fifth year in films; he first went on the floor in 1912 at the old Itala studio in Turin, where "Cabiria" was made. One of his extras at that time was named Valentino. "Command Performance" is Hill's seventy-sixth picture.

Chatterton for Wilcox

Ruth Chatterton's engagement by Herbert Wilcox for the starring part opposite Anton Walbrook in "The Rat" is her first in British films. The original Ivor Novello play has been a big box-office success in England; the screen adaptation has been done by Hans Rameau, who worked on Walbrook's big Continental success, "Maskerade"; Marjorie Gaffney is scripting it. Shooting starts at Denham in three weeks, under the direction of Jack Raymond. Walbrook has just finished the role of the Prince Consort in Wilcox's "Victoria the Great," now in New York.

Itemized

Roland Young will play in the next Jessie Matthews vehicle for G-B, "Full Sail," which goes on the floor at Pinewood this month. Barry Mackay, Noel Madison and Jack Whiting also are cast.

Erich von Stroheim is to be a German Secret Service man in "Mademoiselle Docteur," with Dita Parlo, a Max Schach Trafalgar production for United Artists release, to be directed by Edmond T. Greville, famous for "Remous." First shots were made at Pinewood last week.

William Collier, Jr., now of Warner-First National studio at Teddington, was presented with a daughter on Independence Day.

"London Melody" is the new title of the Herbert Wilcox production written by Ray Lewis. Originally the title was "Neapolitan Love Song."

Alexander Korda will produce a series of short subjects at Denham, featuring new players, with the idea of developing them for feature roles.

They will be shown at 250 Odeon theatres controlled by Oscar Deutsch, and patrons will be asked to fill in voting cards, to obtain the customers' evaluation of the players' abilities.

Comment Remains

Paramount British News has refused to withdraw a comment in its pictures of the recent Swanley train smash, which was protested by the Timber Development Ass'n. The comment stressed the loss of life due to wooden construction of railway cars.

G. T. Cummmins, Paramount editor, said: "The pictures speak for themselves. In rail smashes in all parts of the world the coaches that have stood the crash, and had less loss of life, have been made of steel."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

"CITY OF OURS"

The problem often uppermost in the minds of conscientious subsequent-run managers, especially in the bigger cities, is how to compete successfully and within budget limitations for additional business with nearby houses playing ahead. There are obstacles, no doubt, and not always imaginary. But cases are known where theatremen running behind first and even second runs within reaching distance refuse to consider their policy limitations as insurmountable obstacles to higher grosses. In other words, these men figure there is extra patronage to be gotten and they go after it as though the nearest opposition situation was miles away.

Well, and why not? In the first place, as one member put it, if theatregoing is a habit, then why cannot more of the neighborhood folks be educated to patronize the theatre nearest their homes? Assuming that everything else is equal in two nearby situations, with the exception of policy, should the fact that one house plays behind the other provide an acceptable reason for the manager to throw up his hands and call it a day? Hardly, we opine.

Some years back, confronted with a similar situation, your Chairman conceived the device of marking out upon a large scale map definite boundaries around the district from which the theatre drew. Across the face of this newly-created zone was boldly lettered the words "City of Ours", and the map hung prominently where it could not escape the notice of the entire staff.

From then on, every date was treated as a first-run in the "City of Ours", the entire district publicized persistently and consistently from that angle. Merchants were sold on the idea, the neighborhood businessmen's association enthused and in due time was obtained a fair share of the business which until then had proceeded regularly across town to district theatres playing ahead.

More current is the case of Jack Finck, at the last-run Sunset Theatre in a highly competitive section of Brooklyn, New York. Seeking about for ways and means to stimulate his takings, Finck struck on the smart idea—but let Jack tell it in his own way:

"Running a last-run house on top of wide-awake first and second runs is a tough proposition. Therefore, in selling my pictures, I thought the best thing would be to organize, to sell my house to the neighborhood merchants and let them help sell the theatre. The first thing I did was to organize the Sunset Merchants' Association, choosing merchants within a few blocks radius.

"I had to sell the women; so, with the association's cooperation, sponsored a 'Ladies' Household Matinee' which doubled my Friday matinee grosses. Then the men started to complain, they wanted a break, too; so we put on a special Friday night event for them and now my Friday business has come up to where it is one of my best nights.

"I thought this might be interesting to subsequent-run houses. If you can't contact your patrons direct, contact the merchants they buy from."

Your big city is nothing else than a number of joined "smaller cities". Theatremen operating in the "smaller cities" might profitably regard their situations in the same manner essentially as do managers in less congested spots unhampered by opposition the metropolitan showman chooses to find unduly restrictive.

NO ARGUMENT TO THAT

In their ceaseless digging for angles productive of sock publicity, do all theatremen work to the full those ore-bearing veins immediately to hand? Which thought is brought to mind by a tearsheet from the Cleveland News featuring in Howard Beaufait's widely-read "Here Today" column an interview on ticket-selling and its ramifications with Natilda Powers, Loew's Stillman cashier. That the theatre is apt to receive important breaks on other slants besides pictures is indicated by the accompanying note from Manager Jack Lykes, wherein he points out these possibilities in the departments of the theatre proper.

"There is plenty of publicity to be had other than routine stuff," writes Jack. "Every theatre has material for unusual stories which the papers are only too glad to use, what with readers showing keen interest in theatre news. The cooling plant, backstage, projection room, service staff, all make good copy for human interest stories."

There may be varying opinions as have to do with dollar-and-cents results from institutional advertising. But there can be little argument on the worth of intelligently directed institutional publicity.

Columnists plagued by daily deadlines ofttimes are as willing to be sold as are managers anxious to sell them.

Quigley Plaque Winners for June

The first Arkansas theatreman and the first of his circuit to win a Quigley Plaque, W. Clyde Smith, City Manager in Hot Springs for Malco Theatres, was voted the Bronze for June for his entry on "Mountain Music", at the Paramount, in the resort city.

The fourth Canadian showman to win Plaque honors, H. C. Deacon Main, manager, Grand Theatre, Sudbury, Ontario, was awarded the Silver for June on "Silent Barriers". Details of campaign on following page include tiein with the Mayor for Open Letter reproduced at left.

An Open Letter From the Mayor to the Citizens of Sudbury

To

The Citizens of Sudbury—

It is a pleasure for me, as Mayor of Sudbury, to identify myself with the celebration of "C.P.R. WEEK" in Sudbury.

The outstanding motion picture "SILENT BARRIERS" which plays at the Grand Theatre all next week, tells in a stirring manner the vivid story of the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway across Canada.

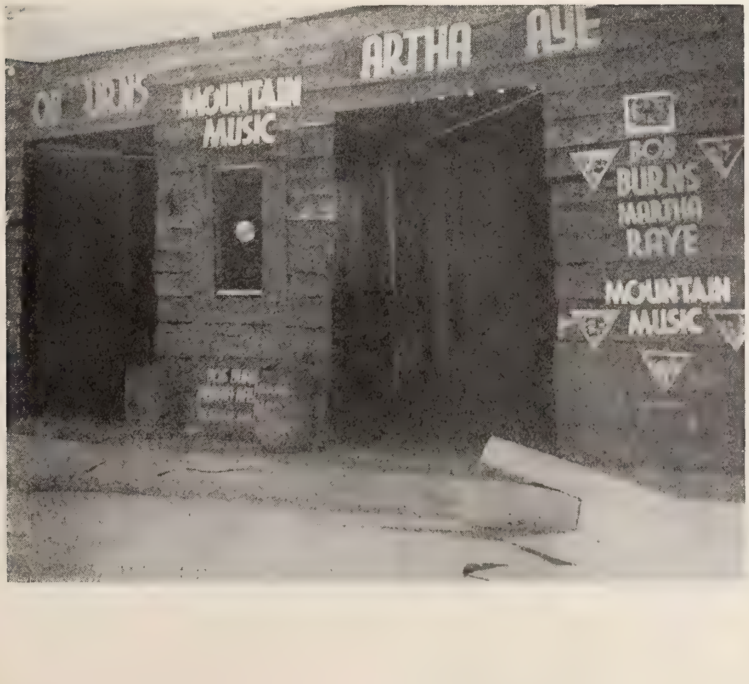
The motion picture record of this page of Canadian history is being made the occasion for celebrating "C.P.R. WEEK" in our city. Local merchants have arranged special sales attractions, and every effort is being made to make next week a tribute to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and an outstanding spring buying week in the local stores.

I hope Sudbury citizens will do their part to make this occasion a memorable one for all concerned.

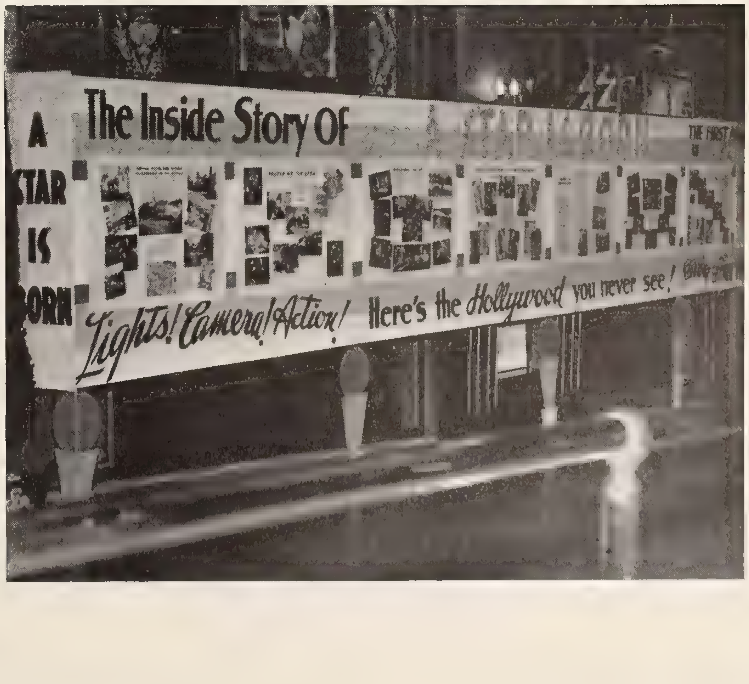
As Mayor of Sudbury I would also like to extend a warm welcome to all those out-of-town visitors who are coming into town on the C.P.R. excursion, which has been arranged to coincide with "C.P.R. WEEK."

JOHN RUDD
Mayor

Smith's realistic front at the Paramount, Hot Springs, composed of bark slabs and railing fence at edge of sidewalk. Detailed account of the campaign will be found on a following page.



Thirty-foot display showing photographs of "Star Is Born" while in production proved to be one of the lobby highlights in the campaign put on by C. T. Spencer, manager, at the Capitol, in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.



QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Marine Stuff

Week ahead of "Singing Marine" at the New York Strand song plugger dressed in uniform covered sheet music departments of various stores singing hits from the picture. Blue satin banner hung from floor, standard was placed in each location with tiein copy. Another advance stunt was distribution in the midtown section of Powell roses by girls dressed in sailor blouses and white slacks.

For attention at beaches sailboats covered metropolitan water resorts with title copy painted on sails. Preview screening was held for marine corps officers and on opening night reserve officers in full dress uniform paraded to the theatre carrying banners.

Contest

Arrangements were made by Louie Lamm, Palace, Lorain, Ohio, for a twins-contest in connection with his "Prince and the Pauper" date. Held on the stage week ahead of opening, with 18 sets competing, audiences judged the winners on the basis of the ones who looked most alike. Cash prize went to winner and tickets to runnersup. Papers cooperated with stories and photos of entrants.

Parade

Special permission was obtained from local Wilkinsburg, Pa., high school for use of school band to help sell "Maytime" for Dick Brown, Rowland Theatre. Boys paraded main streets opening day, ending at theatre where special concert was given. Two boys carried banners at head of parade reading "Join the parade, see" etc. Brown also promoted full co-op page, selling merchants the ads himself, each store's ad including cut of either MacDonald or Eddy. Doorknob hangers paid for by merchant's ad on reverse side were distributed house to house and local florist also cooperated distributing heralds attached to roses reading "a bouquet of romance from Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy," etc., etc.

Revues

Found by Frank Harpster, Warner's Ohio, Mansfield, Ohio, to be a consistent grosser in his high school revue which he usually spots about six weeks after school opens. Harpster selects his talent from among the students and finds the returns sufficiently encouraging for recommendation in other spots.

MONOGRAM PROMOTES ACE STAR DISPLAY

Smart window at the New York Gimbel department store was arranged by Manny Reiner of Lou Lifton's Monogram publicity staff for tiein of various of the company's stars and Moviematic cameras. Display featured Movita and Warren Hull in "Paradise Lost"; Jack Randall, Owen Davis, Jr., and Joan Woodbury, in "Luck of Roaring Camp".

"Goofygrams"

Several co-op ads featured Charlie Winchell's "Woman Chases Man" campaign at the Century, Minneapolis, with prominent shoe store taking large ads on the gag "chase yourself into this store for Miriam Hopkins' new shoe." Store used art of stars and playdates in ads. Fashion shop topped off co-op ad with banner streamer and beauty chain concentrated on counter displays of Miriam Hopkins and daily demonstrations plugging the makeup and picture.

Columnist used the "goofygrams" idea explaining the gags with liberal mention of picture and awarding guest tickets for best material submitted on names of goofy people and the things they do. Five humorous rules for avoiding bill collectors advanced in pressbook also got big play. Inquiring reporter stunt was used.

School Tiein

Tieup with all neighborhood schools was effected on "Romeo and Juliet" by Don Williams, Colonial, Brooklyn, N. Y., whereby guest tickets went to those students correctly answering list of questions pertaining to the picture. Principals got behind the contest, distributing folders and blotters to the students and sanctioning announcements which were made on bulletin boards and in English classes. Two schools made up matinee parties. PTA's and various church organizations were contacted and public libraries displayed stills with credit copy two weeks in advance.

Ushers' Card

On "Make Way For Tomorrow" at the Olympia Theatre, Miami, publicist Jonas Perlberg reports card signed by ushers which purported to be the lowdown on the picture. Copy headed "from the bottom of my heart. Cards were distributed by ushers to patrons at theatre.

Editorial

Four smart newspaper breaks were obtained by Joe DiPesa for date on "Star Is Born" at Loew's State and Orpheum, Boston, first of which was editorial dwelling on chances of extras obtaining stardom in which picture and theatres were mentioned. Second was break on William Wellman, director of the picture being local boy featured with story and photos. Third was story dwelling on same theme which included synopsis on picture and fourth was series of giant co-op ads.

Merchant Show

Neatly conceived was special display booth at Keokuk Chamber of Commerce Manufacturers and Merchants Show devoted to buildup on "Mountain Music" at the Iowa Theatre. Space was decorated with scene stills and for further atmosphere manager K. C. Whetstein dug up old squirrel rifle, jug of mountain dew and also some of the amusing ads on the picture that Paramount ran in Esquire.

Prop Elephant

The fact that live elephants are scarce around Miami at this time of the year did not deter publicist Jonas Perlberg who, with Manager Joe Abercrombie of the Rex constructed huge pachyderm with some old bicycle parts, grey cloth, tin and nails. Used as a bally, gag was found effective in promoting Elephant Boy."

Profit

Two full page co-op ads were obtained by Joe Miklos, Joe Borrenstein's assistant at the Embassy, New Britain, Conn. Miklos not only did a nice job of selling "Maytime" and "This Is Your Affair," but also turned in a slight profit to the theatre. Though newspaper charged regular rates, theatremen were able to promote merchants to pay the higher rate.

Local Angle

On "Hit Parade," Harry VanNoy seized on the local angle for the date at the Paramount, Anderson, Ind. It seems that a local boy appearing in the picture had previously worked for General Motors and his appearance in the picture was considered good enough for a page one story in the Company's house organ which also plugged the picture.

CIVIC HEADS EXTEND COOPERATION TO JUNE AWARDS PLAQUE WINNERS

Promotions Organized by Main And Smith Furthered by Aid Of Mayors and Other Leaders

Since the city of Sudbury, in Ontario, Canada, owes its existence to the Canadian Pacific, the community being started as a construction camp by the railroad, it was fitting that Manager H. C. Deacon Main's campaign on "Silent Barriers" at the Grand, in that spot, be promoted through the cooperation of the road executives. And with such cooperation obtained, the C. P. name and the railway angles of the picture were made the outstanding features of the campaign. Other points emphasized were the historical and educational angles, the Canadian locale of the screening, the drama and the star, Richard Arlen.

Further reasons for the strong campaign behind the date included the knowledge that many of the men now employed locally aided in the early construction of the road, the prestige of the C. P. name which gave the engagement a higher level of attention than is usual, and publicity to be secured through the Canadian Rockies portrayed in the picture.

The railroad officials won over, Deacon was able to obtain further cooperation from the Sudbury Star, leading paper, previously not given to motion picture and theatre publicity. Station CKSO also extended its facilities more generously for the occasion.

Railroad Cooperates on Drive

To open the campaign, a "C. P. R. Week" was decided upon ahead of the date and leading merchants invited to participate. Special reverse slugs were made up, copy reading "this is an official C. P. R. Week Store," followed by a box carrying title and theatre. Main reports the inclusion of the word "official" brought in merchants dealing with the railroad who otherwise would not have been interested. These slugs were planted extensively in newspaper ads by the merchants, who also gave key windows for elaborate displays. Stores also used window stickers and banners incorporating the same copy, the entire idea tied to special sales, excursion rates arranged by the C. P., etc. Civic aid was rendered by the Mayor of Sudbury in an open letter wherein locals and visitors were invited to take part in the event, body of the letter featuring the picture.

The special excursion set by the road was publicized by thousands of heralds distributed over many miles of C. P. territory for three weeks ahead and in which the show was billed heavily. Dates of the excursion coincided with regular monthly payday at the mines.

Top newspaper tiein was a photo contest, prizes of cash and guest tickets given for the best old-time photos of the city and those having to do with the railroad's activities in that sector. Judging was based on historical interest and the theatreman reports over 50 received, all over 25 years of age with entries received from as far away as Toronto. Paper gave the tiein lots of publicity and wound up with a full page of reproductions showing the winners. Radio announcements also kept interest high.

MONTH'S CAMPAIGNS ONLY ARE ELIGIBLE

Entrants in the Quigley Awards are cautioned that entries for any single month must be on pictures played during that month. From time to time, entries are received found ineligible for this reason. The only exception made occurs when through no fault of the entrant campaigns are delayed in the mails. July deadline is midnight, Saturday, Aug. 7.

Successful campaign in the schools was put on with letters written to all principals stressing the educational and historical value of the picture, though these angles were not plugged in the general advertising for obvious reasons. Special children's matinees were set, street cars and busses chartered to bring children in from all over the district, the youngsters paying their own transportation.

To impress the date upon the educators, Main employed the device of sending a second letter two days later, the second enclosing guest tickets and written as though to make good for the error of not sending the ducats in the first note. Results showed a high attendance from the schools with 60 per cent of all students in the district over eight years of age reported to have purchased admissions for the special matinees.

Other advertising included full-page co-op with five of the old established stores participating center of the layout showing early photo of the city with special story written by the publisher. Another large co-op display was taken by the railroad which used the locale of the picture to publicize the C. P. resort hotels. In addition to the individual ads on the special "week" Main started his own campaign some nine days ahead with small copy leading up to an eight-column smash.

For the attention of those patrons inclined more to strong action in their picture fare, Deacon had throwaways made up stressing the drama in the picture and these were distributed house-to-house in the foreign language sections of town. Another novelty was made up by printing picture copy on regulation train order forms obtained from the railroad. These were given out among the better-class homes in Sudbury and the district, the copy stressing the historical and Empire angles.

Entirely prepared to welcome the date on "Mountain Music," as the theme of the picture had to do with Arkansas, W. Clyde Smith worked out a comprehensive campaign for the opening at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., featured by the Southern premiere of the feature. This was put on in typical style, guests including the mayor, federal officials, civic heads, etc. Invited also were relatives of Bob Burns.

In advance, there was a parade by Boy Scouts and Boys' Bazooka Band, theatre banners being carried by the marchers and permission for the event obtained from the mayor. The bazooka players also were featured at local celebrations during the week ahead. In keeping with the picture and for the attention of the local socialites, Smith arranged a Mountain Music Hill Billy Party at the theatre, couples coming to the theatre appropriately costumed. Prizes were awarded for best dressed couples and an extra feature was a mock Hill Billy marriage.

These activities were reported fully in the local press which also featured another tiein on the date, an Old Fiddlers' Mountain Music contest held on Saturday night before the opening at a central spot near Hot Springs and broadcast over KTHS.

Many Ballys Used

Ballyhoos were plentiful and interesting. Week ahead, Smith planted a small mountain cabin in the lobby with costumed boys sitting on kegs and whittling in approved Arkansas manner. Ushers, too, were garbed in hillbilly apparel, cashiers in gingham with hair in pigtails. On opening night an authentic six-piece hillbilly band was brought down from the mountains to give a concert in front of the theatre. Boys similarly clad made the main streets carrying theatre posters and two other juveniles carrying squirrel rifles attracted attention by objecting loudly to the new city parking meters.

The famous "Wafford," the Bob Burns piggie, was introduced to the home folks through a local porker who was placed in a pen in front of the theatre and named "Bob Burns Wafford II." The piglet was decorated with ribbons and fed from a bottle. Mountain donkey drawing bannered cart about town was another attention-arrester. Found effective, too, was a series of special nights honoring towns within 30 miles of Hot Springs. Windows were planted featuring the jumbo Western Union wires with blowups of the stars, 60-foot banner hung from building in best spot in town, old barns and buildings roughly lettered with theatre copy as were fences, and walls. Sidewalks were stenciled in the same manner.

Securing the slabs from local saw mill, Smith built special log cabin front with railing fence built across sidewalk. Heads of the stars and the title in cutout block letters were added. Extra copies of Clyde's weekly Movie News were distributed within a radius of 30 miles, the special issue containing many co-op ads. All newspaper copy emphasized the Arkansas setting of the picture and put over neatly by Smith was a teaser campaign using copy and layout with cut of Bob Burns similar in style to the star's regular syndicated column.

Exploitation in Holland Shows Definite Progress

American Publicity and Advertising Methods Find Favor With Dutch Theatremen

by PH. DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

It is undoubtedly interesting to give some details of the publicity situation in Holland where the extended American publicity-campaigns as same reached Europe did not fail to influence the methods of making publicity for pictures and to be of great importance for the exploitation of pictures.

Properly speaking, film publicity in Holland is still in a status of development. Many exhibitors who saw decreasing their business during the last few years, now try indeed to make better business by better exploitation, but of course immediate results must be awaited. I don't want to say that real good publicity did not exist in Holland until the present moment: the big Amsterdam theatres, for instance, always tried to sell a picture to the public by any kind of publicity and generally made profits of their campaigns. The American film-publicity in the first place spoke to the heart of the Dutch theatre-managers, far more than that of other countries importing their productions into Holland.

Publicity Methods Detailed

It is undoubtedly worth stating the different subdivisions Dutch publicity has been based on first: Front stunts and lobby display. As to this, Holland can stand comparison to other countries by putting often modern effects and original poster display at the theatre-entrance. This kind of publicity is always of attraction to the picture-goer. The patrons are accustomed to it, and if it happened sometimes that lobby displays really were untasteful, generally same are most attractive for the picture-goer.

Window display in shops: The exhibitor plans, e. g., a tie-up with well known stores and shops in order to expose stills, posters, etc., of the picture in question, whereas the owner of the store takes profit of this display as a publicity for the article he sells. This kind of publicity is well known in America, too.

Publicity by cars: Posters on both sides of a big car driving through the city and announcing the coming performances of the picture. The costs of hiring such cars are about fl. 35, weekly.

Advertisements in the Dutch press are published on Thursday, as the cinema week begins at Friday. These ads are very expensive. The prices of each newspaper are different, but generally the average price for cinema ads is fl. 0,45 per line (8 lines=1 inch), under special conditions with the theatres. For a country like Holland this publicity remains always most attractive.

For an important picture special publicity is used with advance ads on Wednesday, Tuesday and sometimes even on Monday or Sunday. Advertisements are also inserted in weekly and monthly periodicals, giving always a lot of free publicity by general articles forwarded to them by the publicity departments of the booking offices.

LITTLE PUBLICITY ALLOWED ON RADIO

By government regulation, radio publicity and the usual tieups open to theatremen on this side are not available in Holland, the only air exploitation allowed being broadcast of music from the various theatres and sometimes dramatizations based upon a picture. AVRO, VARA, KRO and NCRV are the leading Dutch radio stations.

Free publicity in the newspapers is generally obtained by these booking offices. The most important Amsterdam newspapers are: "De Telegraaf," with special reduced edition "De Courant-Het Nieuws van den Dag" (more popular) with 100,000 readers. The number of newspapers bought on the street is only few; most people have a regular subscription. This paper is read all over the country, and is of first importance for the theatre-manager. Further: "Het Volk" (The People) the social-democrat organ, with several other editions out of Amsterdam, and with a total edition of 200,000 copies. This paper shows many interests into theatre trade; "Algemeen Handelsblad," a liberal daily, with about 60,000 copies; "De Tijd" (The Times) and "De Maasbode," both Catholic papers, the latter at Rotterdam, but read also in Amsterdam. When publishing their criticisms on the pictures, these newspapers give their opinions in accordance with the opinion of the Catholic Board of Censorship.

One week before releasing a picture its trailer is shown. The composition of a Dutch picture program consists of American, French or German newsreel (America prominent), Dutch newsreel in nearly all theatres), cartoons, sometimes two-reel or one-reel short, trailer, advertising of several films (the theatre itself has nothing to do with this, as the screening rights are paid for by an advertising office), and stage-show (in some theatres only), and the feature.

Throwaways Found Effective

For some pictures throwaways are printed and distributed in several ways: at the box-office of the theatre, in the street, in the houses, etc. These throwaways may not be distributed in the Amsterdam city, and so much of their value is lost. However, when the folder has a good and attractive composition, it is used.

Dutch posters. For an important picture a Dutch two-sheet poster is made, and bought by the theatre in the capitals. These posters are subdivided among several firms, shops, etc., to display at their front-door.

The important theatres have their own house organs with several notes and items on the picture, synopsis and general articles. Throughout the whole town (I take Amsterdam as an example) fences are rented, mostly for two weeks or a month, and only for big pictures.

Besides the before-mentioned subjects a special publicity is made by a special exploitation campaign for a picture. This campaign of course always differs. As an example the "Rose Marie" campaign proved to be very effective. This campaign began with Canoe Races on one of Amsterdam's canals; the topic of the day (Sunday afternoon) was Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy being pursued by Indians. The campaign itself took its summit by an illumination with decoration with flowers of the well known Mint-tower for which permission of the municipality of Amsterdam was obtained. With big figures the name "Rose Marie" was announced to the public passing by this tower by thousands.

Rose Day Organized

Further, a Rose-day was organized, in cooperation with the Initiative Committee Amsterdam. The decoration of the Mint-tower also was effected under the patronage of the said committee. This Rose-day among others contained a window contest with big free advertisement and window display throughout the whole town. Many picture enlargements were used and excellent stunts were made. Several shops handed out little bouquets to their customers, and roses were distributed on a large scale. Of course, the radio companies continuously played music from the picture. Roses also were handed out in the theatres, Rose-Marie bonbons, Rose Marie in fruits, Rose Marie cake have been made, poster stamps distributed. A mounted Indian crossed the town "looking for Rose Marie," a flower boat crossed the several canals, of course provided with ad-shields, rose cars were riding along the whole day, excellent fences were hired, newspaper advertisements beginning already on Monday, and at last the organization of a Rose-ball in a well known Amsterdam music hall, Bellevue, that metamorphosed all its rooms into a flower garden.

Holland is not accustomed to real big publicity campaigns, but examples like this certainly will be followed by others. The newspapers gave an enormous free publicity every day, with several stills of Mint-tower, canoe-races, etc., and the theatres on the country also profit from the experiences of the Dutch capital, as even the papers out of Amsterdam daily provided their readers with news of this publicity. Generally the theatres in the country are launching their pictures without a special publicity, limiting their propaganda to the distribution of folders, sometimes posters and window displays. Steadily a change is coming.

FABIAN BROOKLYN THEATRES ADS

The New York area for the first time is represented in the current Round Table individual adman series by Joe Lee, the ol' theatre doctor, now engaged, and progressively, in telling the folks about it as the advertising and publicity director for the Fabian Theatres, in Brooklyn, N. Y. Lee finds the sockeroo highly effective in his newspaper advertising with especial emphasis on reverse displays. Further pages reproducing the efforts of independent and circuit admen will be published from time to time.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

manages the Dickinson Theatre, Junction City, Kan., and entered showbusiness in 1919 as usher and later was sent to operate in booth. After the usual jobs around theatres Hazlett signed up with the Dickinson Circuit in Kansas to manage two of the outfit's theatres. The only other circuit Jack has been connected with is the Dresch and Frankle outfit in Cincinnati.

A. S. WHITTAKER

is the publicity director of the Sound City Films and Distributors in London, England, and since our entire membership is always interested in reading of the activities of their overseas brothers, we extend a very cordial welcome to you, Whittaker, to keep us posted on things exploitation in London.

FRED CROSS

is assistant to Round Tabler Joe Stribling at the Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla., who recommends him for membership. With the two of you signed up, there's certainly no reason why the Kiowa shouldn't be well represented. Can we count on the two of you?

THOMAS M. ZEIDMAN

is the assistant manager of the Sam Harris Theatre, New York City, only a few blocks removed from club headquarters so we certainly expect that he shall drop in one of these days to say hello. We haven't heard from you since you signed up, Zeidman; that's not the true club spirit, you know.

REX BELL

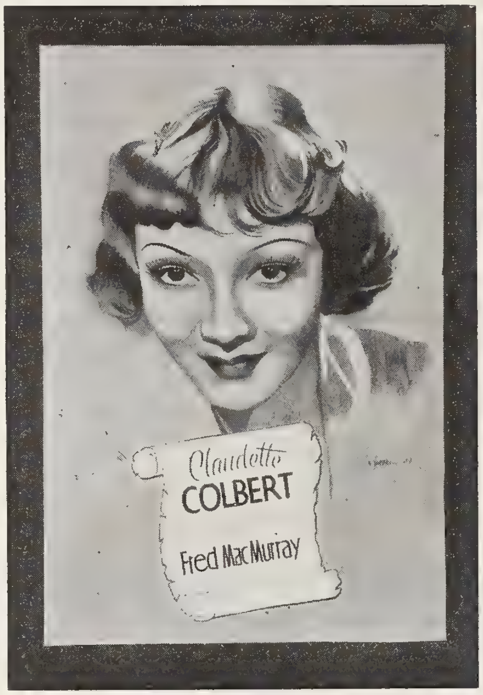
manages the State Theatre in Waterloo, Iowa, the newest theatre to be erected in that city. Bell says for the past three years he has been an assistant manager for the Kaplan Theatres, of which the State is one, and has just received his promotion as manager. In addition, Rex tells us he reads our section weekly; that being the case, how about showing your reciprocity by sending along some stunts that other member-readers can adapt to their own situations?

R. H. SHAFFER

manages the Palace Theatre in Canton, Ohio, for the Inter-State Theatres to which job he was promoted six months ago, from the Palace Theatre, Canton. Shaffer has also been at the State Theatre in East Liverpool from which spot we received many contributions, so let's hear from you soon again, Shaffer.

R. F. WILBERN

is the partner-manager of the Palace and Folly Theatres in Duncan, Okla., which is part of the Griffith Amusement Company organization. Since Wilbern's activities have already been reported in our section, we shall take this means of formally welcoming him and expressing the hope that he shall continue to keep us posted.



Above poster for "Maid of Salem" was created by Bill Venable, staff artist for Clyde Smith at the Malco Paramount in Hot Springs, Ark. Display was done in pastels on velour background.

JAMES G. DAVIS

is the assistant manager of the M. & P. Olympic Theatre, Chelsea, Mass., and Jim started in showbusiness at the age of sixteen as part-time usher at the Olympia, Lynn, Mass. Worked there a year and was promoted to doorman and soon made chief of service. After a few years in that job, Davis was promoted to assistant manager and then transferred to his present spot.

M. W. CANTRELL

manages the Wilby-Kincey Imperial Theatre in Lenoir, N. C., and with so many of his circuit's managers active Round Tabler members we are anticipating another newcomer to our club to be an active contributor. How about telling us something about your recent exploitation stunts at the Imperial, Cantrell?

is out in Englewood, N. J., managing the Skouras Englewood Theatre and he is close enough to club headquarters to come in and pay us a visit so that we might get personally acquainted on that next day off. Can we expect to see you here soon, Sklarin?

KENNETH BLACKLEDGE

is in Wellington, Texas, managing the Ritz and Texan Theatres for the Griffith Amusement Company. Your circuit also boasts of many active members, Ken, and so we extend a cordial welcome to you and remind you that your obligation to the club only starts when you sign on the dotted line, so we shall look forward to hearing from you at not too infrequent intervals.

SPENCE PIERCE

advertising director of Warners' Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., comes well recommended to us by zone manager Howard Waugh, whose okay is good enough for us. Since Waugh speaks so highly of Pierce's ability we are looking forward with keen interest to his first contribution to the section.

WALTER HORN

is in Newark, N. J., managing the American Theatre for the P. Juze Playhouses, Inc. Newark isn't so far away you know, Walter, that you can't make a promise to yourself to come up and see us next time you're over this way. And remember, signing on the dotted line just starts your obligation to the club, so get ready to send along accounts of your recent activities at the American.

T. E. LOPATO

is the exchange manager for 20th Century-Fox Fed., Inc., Tientsen, China, and if he but knew how interested his Round Table brothers are in the activities of overseas showmen, he most certainly would keep us posted on what's what there. We have quite a few contributors from China and we are hoping that Lopato will swell the ranks by an additional new member that we shall hear from often.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Last week we were driving in Iowa and calling on the boys and trying to straighten 'em out and it was 104 in the shade, and April Shower doesn't furnish much shade, and it finally occurred to us that a man who would drive around when it was 104 ought to have his head examined. We had ours examined and they couldn't find anything but sawdust, so we headed for Omaha, where we met a lot of our old friends, all just as sober as we were.

One of 'em came up and put his arm around our neck and said, "Say, Colonel, my subscription to the Herald is about expiring. Will you renew it for me?" What a question. Would we renew it for him! Renewing subscriptions is about the most pleasant thing we do.

This fellow sells pictures for Columbia Pictures Corporation; that is, we believe he is with Columbia, anyhow—

There is a chap we know quite well
And he's an up-to-date stem-winder;
He sells the pictures to beat ——,
And his name is Izzy Weiner.

There are some young boys in this town, the same as there are in every town, who ought to be steered in the right direction. For parents to raise them in idleness and to mingle with bad company is not the surest road that leads to higher things, but rather to a seat on the garbage wagon. That old saying, "As the twig is bent the tree inclines," is a pretty true saying. You remember what happened to "Old dog Tray," don't you? Tray didn't kill any sheep but he was caught in bad company, and this reminds us of that old proverb which says "He who lies down with the dogs will get up with the fleas."

Yesterday we had an invitation to go with a committee to hunt up the "shelter belts" and make an investigation, but we didn't go; we hadn't lost any shelter belts, and besides that the weather is too hot to hunt jackrabbits (at government expense), and further than that we are having plenty to do looking after these —— grasshoppers.

But speaking of grasshoppers reminds us to inquire if you have ever known a grasshopper to go on a diet. We wish our doctor would prescribe the same diet for 'em that he did for us. You can believe it or not, but one old hopper ate up our hoehandle and has now started on our wire fence, and if they were down in Washington they would probably eat Lincoln's monument. The most of 'em are politicians; they don't give a continental ding dong for anybody just so they can get plenty of feed.

A bulldog is all right if you know how to treat him, but you have to treat him right. Now you take Bill Weaver of the Herald for instance. When Bill went to call on old man Smith's hired girl that time the old man's friendly bulldog met him at the front gate and Bill's feet suddenly got chilly and he went back home. He failed to remember that a faint heart never won a bulldog. But it was different with A-Mike Vogel of the "Round Table" department. When A-Mike went to coon some of the old man's watermelons he took along some beefsteak seasoned with arsenic to treat the dog to. You simply got to treat 'em right and A-Mike knows how to treat 'em.

We pride ourselves on our independence, but is there such a thing as "Independence?" It is true we broke away from England on July 4th, 1776; that is, we believe that was the date, although we weren't there at that time and can't speak positively, but that is the date as we remember it.

We can remember when we were a boy back in Indiana they used to celebrate July 4th every year and it was our privilege, as well as duty, to recite "Darius Green and His Flying Machine" and read the "Declaration of Independence" for the uplift of the community, although at least 99 per cent of the audience didn't seem to want to be "uplifted." Anyhow, that was our part of the program and it seemed to be necessary to arouse the proper enthusiasm before time for fried chicken and lemonade.

We believe that everybody ought to read the "Declaration of Independence."

We remember old man Watkins' boy Elmer tied a bunch of crackers to the tail of Jim Ferguson's Airedale and set them afire and he ran into his Uncle's barn and set the barn afire, and that night Elmer had to go to bed without any supper, and ever since then we have felt sorry for Elmer.

Every person is dependent to a certain degree upon someone else. Every nation is dependent to a certain degree upon some other nation, but we, of this nation, pat ourselves on the back and boast of our "Independence." The only person we ever knew who was absolutely independent was Jake Smart's hired girl Myrtle. We took Myrtle to a celebration once and she was so independent that she got out of the buggy and walked back home.

We see by a recent issue of the Herald that our old college chum, Bill Weaver, has been transferred from the New York Herald office to the Hollywood office. Hollywood is to be congratulated.

If we are not too late for introductions we would like to introduce Bill to one of Hollywood's fair ladies, Miss Mildred Early. Bill, meet Mildred. Mildred, meet Bill. But say, Mildred, we want you to remember that Bill is already married, so don't try to pull any of that Hollywood stuff on him, for he is very easily persuaded.

OR, WHO CARES?

THE publicity affaire Goldwyn-Roosevelt is a tangle of tawdry errors, misunderstandings, misinterpretations.

Foremost it is regrettable that on an apparent issue of facts there is a tendency to make the abundant and often vigorously able Goldwyn publicity a subject of extra caution, if not suspicion, in the newspaper offices of the land. There was not enough meter in the story to justify "poetic license." Whoever sent that one out for Mr. Samuel Goldwyn did him no service, and he seems to have been directly quoted.

The subsequent apology for an erroneous conveyance that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was to write advertisements for "Stella Dallas" was widely published, but, inevitably, not so widely as the first story.

AND that, too, by the astigmatic reasoning of some sectors of showland, has been hailed as a second triumph of publicity. The motion picture is not so mean and obscure as to be honored or served by apology.

Again, the primary misconception involved is considerable. Had the original account been correct it would have recorded something less than a cosmic achievement for the art. After all Mrs. Roosevelt is continuously available in the newspapers as a writer of this and that for vending by syndication and she is intermittently on the radio, with broadcasts sponsored, for instance, by Shelby Arch Preserver and Lamont Corliss Soap. The motion picture industry need not be in a lather about joining that category.

BRITISH VIEWPOINT

SPEAKING of the British Quota, as every mail and cable has for a fortnight, it is interesting to observe that the letter columns of the great London Times have become a forum on this subject, too, another fact indicative of a breadth of national interest there far beyond the immediate concerns of the amusement industry.

And currently to hand is a forthright letter to The Times by the most candid Mr. Ernest Betts, one time film critic of the Sunday Express of London and more recently in production as a story editor.

Mr. Betts thinks not too much of the quota idea in some of its aspects, with an aside remark about " . . . America whose claims to superiority we so persistently deny while putting 80 per cent of their pictures on our screens."

"YOU can pass 50 Quota Acts guaranteeing that any wangling of accounts will instantly send the wangler to gaol, and you can have 50 'hanging committees' viewing pictures until the dawn, and you can define 50 times over the nature of a quality test, and it will still be (as Mr. Dent argued) a box office test; and, indeed, what else should it be?

"But if we could make films to pass this test there would be no need for a Films Act, and that is the point. . . . "

Earlier in his communication Mr. Betts pointedly observed: "We do not want to become copyists of America, for you cannot sell America something which America can do better. But we can and should sell something which England can do better, and this is the essence of the problem, the quota being a creative step designed to create better British films. . . ."

WHO IS TEASED, NOW?

OFTEN there has been occasion on this page to comment on the adoption of showmanship by American industry. All merchandising today seems to be built around entertainment notions and personalities. It is getting difficult to distinguish between a show and a sales talk.

So one was not to be surprised the other day to find the "strip tease," just recently exiled from Forty-second street, turning up in the concerns of Capital and Labor, with governmental complications.

The charge is made by a regional director of the National Labor Relations Board that a coal company down in Harlan County, Kentucky, imported strip tease dancers to put on entertainment as a counter attraction to meetings of the United Mine Workers. It seems that the coal diggers took their choice and went to the shows. That seems to make the Regional Director mad as hell.

"Bread and circuses" may be approved as a national policy, but not, it seems, for industry.

There is temptation to the suggestion that the Regional Director missed an opportunity to see what he could do with some Federal equipment in the way of counter attractions from New York WPA theatre and such sterling offerings as "Injunction Granted" or "Horse Eats Hat."

ABOUT a year ago Mr. George Bernard Shaw, who has written for "Fame" and some other publications, was murmuring something about it being time to start work on his obituary. This week, July 26, he noted, without celebration, his eighty-first birthday, in exuberantly good health. Mr. Shaw is the Samuel Goldwyn of British literature.

CONSPICUOUS among the motion picture influences on contemporary culture is the curse of the close-up in the candid camera presentations of the xanthic modern press. It may be journalism to put the reader into intimate familiarity with public figures, but there is no good reason for going down into their pores. What they call candid is frequently merely shameless.

"WICKED America, especially movies, ruining British morals," is a headline in the New York World-Telegram, quoting the Very Reverend W. E. R. Morrow, provost of Chelmsford cathedral. Presumably the distinguished provost would make us retroactively responsible for influences on the characters and conducts of Henry VIII, Lord Byron and Oscar Wilde.

This Week

What Is It?

It has acted to increase prices in the theatre supply market by as much as 30 per cent. It has not been a factor in advancing costs; prices have been forced upward by other causes. It has so unbalanced price structures that a potential expenditure of $100,000,000 is dammed up. It has tended to level the field by making the same discounts available to the small buyer as the large circuits enjoy. The Robinson-Patman Act, enacted by Congress on the initiation of grocery dealers, has resulted in these contradictory effects, in the view of manufacturers, circuit buyers, and executives of affiliated purchasing companies.

A man on the street explanation of the Act and its reported effects starts on page 13.

Quota Prospects

The British Government's proposals for new Quota legislation were introduced to the House of Commons in the form of a White Paper meaning, primarily, that Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, will have no further consultations with representatives of the industry. This news also has redoubled the activities of the various branches to get the ear of Members of Parliament. The minimum cost clause is a particular subject of off-the-floor conversations of exhibitors with parliamentarians.

Latest developments concerning the progress of the new Quota bill are recorded on page 68.

Earnings Gain

Income reports by Consolidated Film Industries and Heywood-Wakefield, dividend declarations by RCA and Loew's Boston Theatres, and United States admission tax collections gave further reflection this week to gains in earnings in amusements.

Other financial news of the week included Loew's withholding of the names of its subsidiaries from the Securities and Exchange Commission, as reported on page 88.

Bank Night Ban

Proponents of Bank Night operations were dealt another serious blow with the conviction in Hartford of a theatre manager on charges of conducting a lottery. In answer to the defendant's contention that the game was an advertising scheme the superior court judge ruled: "If so, it is not, therefore, permissible under the law." The conviction came after an appeal was taken from a similar decision handed down by a town court.

The case and other chance game activities are reported on page 65.

RKO Briefs

Briefs have been filed with George W. Alger, special master, by all affected parties in the proposed RKO reorganization plan. Mr. Alger must report to William Bondy, federal judge, as to whether the plan is "fair, feasible and equitable." While it is conceded the plan is feasible, the independent committee for the protection of common stockholders charges it is not fair.

Details of the reorganization progress are on page 49.

A New Move at Akron

Akron, Ohio, theatre owners are engaging in strenuous efforts to halt new theatre construction, in an attempt to stave off any new competition which would, they claim, create a serious situation in view of the removal of large local rubber industries because of labor troubles.

The reasons and anticipated results of the movement are explained at length on page 72.

ASCAP Labor Link

Likelihood that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers would affiliate with the American Federation of Labor strengthened this week. ASCAP's board of directors is scheduled to meet to act upon the proposal within two weeks. Conferences between E. C. Mills, of ASCAP, and Joseph N. Weber, of the American Federation of Musicians, held last week, were disclosed to have concerned methods by which the two organizations could cooperate in fighting anti-ASCAP legislation. Probable means would be a mutual assistance pact by which the society would deny licenses to radio stations refusing to maintain stand-by orchestras in return for the Federation's assistance in combatting measures inimical to ASCAP.

Theatre Television

Television programs in 500 theatres, transmitted from a single negative film, has been predicted for the near future by Scophony, Ltd., of England. At a recent demonstration the company transmitted film scenes from one part of a building to another. The apparatus gave a flickerless and clear picture five by four feet, the HERALD correspondent said. The company claims pictures 16 by 12 feet will be possible before the end of the year. The small pictures and the limited character of programs transmitted by the British Broadcasting Company are the chief obstacles to television progress, according to S. Sagall, manager director of Scophony.

Mr. Sagall's viewpoint and the television demonstration are discussed by Bruce Allan on page 61.

Burlesque to Films

Burlesque, in its modified form, has met with such little success in New York, announcement already has been made that two of the houses will be converted into strictly motion picture theatres. The two are the Republic, on 42nd Street, and the Gaiety, on 46th Street. Other operators are reported as considering similar action with the result 42nd Street may have a total of ten film houses between 7th and 8th Avenues.

Developments are reported on page 60.

Tariff Concessions

The League of Nations has received from the newsreels in Europe a petition for obtaining tariff concessions for the reels, on the grounds that they are entitled to treatment equal to that of other news media, principally the press.

Union Internationale de la Presse Filmee presented supporting figures, as noted on page 25.

¶ "Last April I decided to cancel my subscription to MOTION PICTURE HERALD and subscribe to a cheaper magazine. This I find was a mistake, as it is almost impossible to get along without it. May I subscribe now? Also would you send back copies for June and July."

Labor Marches

The Screen Actors Guild moved to enforce its Guild shop for eastern production, the striking cartoonists of the Max Fleischer Studios in New York received support from a national shoppers' organization, and discussions continued in the home offices for the drawing up of union contracts for exchange employees. The activity in the east indicated that headquarters for the movement to unionize the motion picture industry have moved from the coast where peace reigns in the studios.

The move is reported on page 28.

Equity Expansion

Organization of all radio performers, long known to be an objective of Actors' Equity Association, has been entrusted by Equity to Associated Actors and Artistes of America which will tighten its present functions so as to control directly "anything dealing with the actor's welfare," one of its first announced activities being to issue a charter to a new, autonomous and as yet unnamed union which will attempt to enlist all radio performers except members of the American Federation of Musicians. Frank Gillmore, president of Equity and of the Four A's, will relinquish his routine duties in the older actors' group to take a more active part in the new controlling organization.

Roxy Reorganization

Twentieth Century-Fox will take possession of the Roxy Theatre, New York, immediately after a required 30-day period elapses from the time the reorganization plan for the house was approved by the court. An order, confirming the plan, was signed by Francis G. Caffey, United States district court judge. All objections to the plan are disposed of in the order.

Advance

Motion picture shares on the New York Exchange after following the irregular trend of the market during the first six months of the year started the second half well up among the leaders in a general rally of the list. Although the net gain in valuation of the stocks to July 23rd was $7,608,875, the shares of many companies showed losses for the half year. With the outlook for the remainder of the year unimpaired it was expected the valuation would be increased substantially in the immediate future.

The Analyst traces the course of film stocks and general business through the gyrations of the big board on page 50.

Partnership

After several months of negotiations a new operating contract has been signed by A. H. Blank and Paramount for the Tri-States circuit. Terms of the agreement include the relinquishing by Paramount of its option to repurchase Mr. Blank's interest. In return for this consideration, Paramount receives a half interest in Mr. Blank's personally owned Central States circuit of 37 houses. There are 80 theatres in the Tri-States circuit.

Other details of the agreement are on page 65.

Circuit Expanding

Jones, Linick and Schaefer, Chicago circuit which relinquished a number of theatres a few years ago, after having leased and operated half a hundred houses in the last quarter century, is building up again. Now operating five theatres, four in the Loop, the circuit is adding two more in the fall, and others are to follow.

The story of the Chicago circuit's new activities is on page 76.

Monopoly Charged

A complaint from a theatre in Newark, N. J., that it was unable to obtain product resulted in a conference among six large distributors and a special assistant attorney general at which the charge of violation of the anti-trust laws was denied. A report of the discussion was sent to Washington, but no indication of the procedure to be followed was given.

See page 60.

Ten Point Program

A renewed attempt by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to obtain distributor cooperation on its 10-point trade practice program was indicated in a report that Edward Kuykendall, president, was considering calling a special meeting of the board to canvass the attitude of members.

The report is on page 65.

Buyers' Strike

At an "enthusiastic meeting" in Chicago theatre owners and leaders of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, presided over by Peter J. Wood of Ohio, heard reports from various Allied units on the progress of a movement to boycott Paramount product. A statement issued by Mr. Wood said exhibitors were shown to be "overwhelmingly" in favor of the strike and were carrying out the decisions of a recent conference in Washington at which it was proposed that theatre owners, accusing Paramount of holding over to 1937-38 six features promised for 1936-37, should cancel all dates for the distributor's product, refrain from negotiating with the company for new product and test their charges in the courts.

Mr. Wood's statement is quoted and the meeting fully reported on page 64.

Enthusiastic

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the Universal board of directors, returning from Europe was enthusiastic over the company's new foreign sales department, under the direction of Gus Schaefer, and about the prospects for increased business for the company on the continent.

His ship-side interview is reported on page 49.

Resigns

Richard A. Rowland has severed relations with Grand National over a dispute on an assignment. The producer was to supervise a color film which was shelved and no replacement was given, he said.

SUPPLY DEALERS, BUYERS DIFFER ON PATMAN ACT

Price Uncertainties Delay Much of $100,000,000 Outlay for Remodeling, Says Buyer; No Effect, Manufacturer Retorts

The Robinson-Patman Act, affecting the motion picture industry through the $30,000,000 a year theatre supply market, has impounded potential business totaling $100,000,000 behind a dam of uncertain price structures, definitely increased but not stabilized; or,

It has had little or no effect in the supply market and definitely is not a factor in increased prices; or,

It has stabilized discount practices and has rendered useless, for purposes of economy, the establishment of purchasing departments as separate corporate entities by large circuits.

From manufacturers of seats, projectors, carpets and carbons; from the purchasing executives of large circuits; from officials of such affiliated buying companies as Paramount's Penn York Corporation and Warner Brothers' Continental Theatre Accessories Company, and, indirectly, from supply dealers who refused to discuss the matter directly, came these widely divergent opinions on the Act, its meaning, purposes and effects.

On only one point did the views coincide sufficiently to warrant drawing a conclusion. Because of the confusion resulting from disagreement as to what discounts the law prohibits or allows, those circuits which purchase supplies through affiliated companies, incorporated for that purpose, have found they have little advantage over others buying direct from the manufacturer or dealer.

The Act, passed on the initiation of a group of independent grocery dealers and directed primarily against chain store monopoly in retail food marketing, was framed purposely in broad language to avoid the pitfalls which trapped and invalidated a number of previous Administration essays in the field of commerce regulation. Attorneys in close touch with the aims, previous rulings and precedents of the Federal Trade Commission, after a year of studying the law are agreed that only interpretation by the courts on a sufficient number of individual cases to determine the scope and validity of each of its provisions can resolve the present uncertainty.

Price Increase Cited

In the meantime manufacturers, according to the purchasing executives, relying on the judgment of their legal staffs as to what discounts are allowable and what might constitute violations, have revised their price structures and the revision has been generally upward. Estimates of the extent of this increase vary widely, again from the buyer's viewpoint. Herman Maier, head of the purchasing department of Warner Brothers, placed it at from 20 to 30 per cent but added that it would be difficult to determine precisely how much of this percentage could be attributed directly to the cancellation of discounts because of the Robinson-Patman Act.

BUYER AND SELLER EQUALLY LIABLE

A unique provision of the Robinson-Patman Act, it has been pointed out by lawyers who have studied its provisions, is that which places the burden of guilt on both the buyer and the seller when price discrimination can be proved.

The Act provides that price discrimination is illegal "where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce or to injure, destroy or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefits of such discrimination."

Arthur J. Kerwin, purchasing executive for the RKO circuit, which buys directly, agreed that part of the increased costs felt in the last year could be attributed to the effects of the Act. Strict and literal enforcement of the law would add possibly as much as 30 per cent to present costs, he said, pointing out that many of the discounts still allowed by manufacturers conceivably could be questioned under the Act as it stands.

One such, he said, is the socalled advertising discount granted by manufacturers on the presumption that the use of their product by a purchaser of established prestige is of considerable value in selling other customers. Such advertising discounts are definitely prohibited by the Act, according to some authorities, and yet many companies continue to grant them.

Sees $100,000,000 Market

Mr. Maier estimated that repairs and remodeling necessary today in the theatres of the country would cost $100,000,000 at present prices. Much of this, he said, would be spent immediately from increased profits if prices were stabilized sufficiently to justify the investment. Theatre owners, however, will not undertake extensive modernization or remodeling while prices of equipment vary almost from month to month, he added.

An additional factor in the general increase, the Warner executive said, is the fact that a few manufacturers, chiefly the smaller ones, have taken advantage of the uncertainty over what changes in price structures will be made obligatory by interpretation of the Act, to increase their prices unnecessarily. In many cases too, he said, trade associations have been suspected of fixing prices under the guise of making revisions ostensibly required by the Act. Thus, he pointed out, the very end which the Act seeks to avoid is reached in the name of enforcement of the law.

Most troublesome of the points over which there is disagreement, in the view of purchasing executives, is that which touches on the discounts which a manufacturer or wholesaler may allow for quantity purchases. In the past these discounts have been allowed by theatre equipment and supply manufacturers in two principal forms, one a direct discount on a sliding scale for quantity purchased at one time, and the second a credit or rebate at the end of a year on the total volume of business transacted through the year.

Differential Discount Out

Lawyers for some companies, among them filing equipment manufacturers, are of the opinion that both these forms of discounts are permitted. Other companies, among them National Carbon Company, have discontinued the differential discount, based on yearly volume of business transacted, as a violation. Wright Patman, congressman from Texas and co-author of the Act, told members of the General Purchasing Agents Association at one of many discussions held by that group, that such differential discounts are contrary to the provisions.

The first proviso, attached to the main clause of the Act which forbids the seller of any and all commodities to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, reads, "Provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent differentials which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered." It is further provided that the Federal Trade Commission shall have the power to "fix and establish quantity limits and revise the same as it finds necessary. . . . "

Lawyers have raised the point that virtually all discounts for quantity would be eliminated if the clause were interpreted literally, since manufacturers would find it difficult to prove how much saving results from any single quantity sale. The saving in shipping costs would be the only tangible factor which could be shown, they said.

Would Aid Affiliates

Literal interpretation of this clause thus would be to the advantage of such circuits as Paramount and Warner Brothers and the Wilby-Kincey circuit with Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Corporation. These companies have warehousing facilities and to some extent buy supplies and equipment in large shipments, storing them at a central point from which requisitions from the theatres are filled.

Such advantage, however, is only a possibility and depends on the interpretation of other clauses in the Act, including the problem of jobbers' discounts, which are many and varied. It was to take advantage of these that the affiliated supply corporations were principally organized.

Warner Brothers formed Continental as a national theatre supply dealer with the intention of entering the field on a wide scale. During the depression the company found that in order to compete with independent dealers already in the field it was necessary to extend long term credit to nearly all accounts. Losses incurred through establishment of this policy led to abandonment of the original plan. The company now does only a small business with a few outside accounts. Warners' own theatres buy only major items such as seats, projectors or carpets through Continental; the managers are encouraged to purchase minor supplies from local dealers.

The Paramount company, Penn York, does little if any business other than with the Paramount theatre partners, but all supplies purchased for the home offices, exchanges and a major percentage of the theatres are bought through it. Loew's, RKO and National Theatres, the Twentieth Century-Fox circuit, buy either direct from the manufacturer or from independent dealers.

Prices Not Stable

The advantages and disadvantages to the circuits of buying through such affiliated companies have changed but little under the Robinson-Patman Act, at least in the expressed view of their executives. Uncertainty over the legality of the various discounts, which have been customary, tends to make the price structures under which buying has been done under both methods equally unstable, they explained. Some manufacturers who have been accustomed to grant extra jobbers' discounts to the affiliated dealers have discontinued them entirely or have made distinctions on the ground that certain of the companies were not bona fide jobbers, selling to the open market at the same prices they grant their affiliated theatres.

Carpet companies and electrical equipment manufacturers, however, selling the two largest individual items in a theatre supply budget, have followed the practice of considering heavy buyers, such as the large circuits, as jobbers and granting them corresponding discounts, regardless of whether the sale is made through a company created for the purpose or direct to the consumer. This policy is questionable under the law but like other points it can only be upheld or condemned as a violation on the basis of a court interpretation.

Affiliated supply companies which refuse to sell in the open market at the same prices which they grant to their own theatres not only would not be entitled to jobbers' discounts, if such discounts themselves are ruled legal, but would be liable for violation of the Act on the ground of discrimination, according to a strict interpretation. Proof of such discrimination would be difficult if not impossible to obtain, especially in view of the fact that the affiliated companies do not solicit outside business.

Pointing out that any direct attack on such companies as Penn York through a complaint to the Federal Trade Commission is unlikely in view of these facts, Harry Nadel, Paramount purchasing executive, said that this buying method has many advantages for both manufacturer and buyer. Large shipments of material are made at infrequent intervals by the manufacturer to a central warehouse instead of delivery of the same quantity of goods in small lots to several hundred theatres scattered throughout the country. On the buyer's side, he said, bookkeeping is simplified through centralization and the additional discounts granted at present cover the cost of reshipment to theatres.

These same discounts, however, are available in many cases to circuits which buy direct. RKO, according to Mr. Kerwin, buys many supplies at the same price paid by Warner Brothers and Paramount. In other lines the difference is only about 5 per cent, he said, the gain being not more than enough to cover the additional overhead required by the affiliated supply companies.

PATMAN ACT SEEN AS 'WHIPPING BOY'

One reason for the furore over the Robinson-Patman Act and for the easy assumption that it is responsible for many of the evils affecting retail trade stems is implied in an explanation given by an executive of a seating company.

"When a buyer questions a quoted price," he pointed out, "salesmen are prone to cite advancing costs of raw material and labor and cap their argument with a vague reference to the Patman Act, leaving the inference that, of course, that law is in the main responsible. It is an easy way out and generally works."

Manufacturers Minimize Effect

Discussion of the present effects of the Act by manufacturers produced a slightly different picture. The general view of those who would discuss the matter was that while prices have increased as much as 20 per cent the Patman Act in no way has been responsible. In general, too, it was denied that the Act had occasioned any substantial revision of discount scales to bring them within the law. Spokesmen for the companies premised their remarks on this point with the statement that such discounts always have been fixed and offered to buyers without discrimination.

Representatives of companies manufacturing projection equipment, seats and carpets pointed out, however, that any change in discount policy under the Act would operate to the disadvantage of circuits maintaining affiliated buying companies, since such buyers would be placed on the same level as other large purchasers.

Joseph B. Kleckner, president and general manager of Motiograph, Inc., makers of sound projectors and equipment, was explicit on the point. The Patman Act not only has not been a factor in the general advance in prices, he said, but has tended rather to keep prices down and to steady the market because discounts formerly extended only to large buyers are now made available for all. Circuit buyers, he pointed out, resent this because they believe they are entitled to a better price for quantity purchases.

Rising costs of raw materials and labor and a shortage of skilled labor, particularly in the optical field, Mr. Kleckner said, have been entirely responsible for any increase in prices. He pointed out that castings which cost six cents two years ago now cost 14 cents, the price of steel has quadrupled and labor costs have increased 75 per cent in 18 months.

Observance Claimed

Spokesmen for other manufacturers were less explicit and more anonymous. An official of the International Projector Corporation pointed out that his company manufactured projectors exclusively for sale through National Theatre Supply Company and consequently did not come directly under the provisions of the Act. Similarly the Heywood Wakefield Company sells theatre seats through its own retail outlets, eliminating jobbers' and wholesalers' discounts.

An executive of the Haywood Wakefield company pointed out that if the Act were strictly enforced there would be little or no advantage to circuits in maintaining affiliated purchasing companies, since the elimination of special discounts would prevent any great saving. He voiced the opinion that the Act has not directly affected prices in the theatre supply market and that most large manufacturing companies were observing the letter of the law even before the Act was passed.

Manufacturers of carpets and drapes reiterated this view, as did spokesmen for electrical equipment companies. National Carbon Company, controlling the domestic market for an item that occupies an important place on an exhibitor's budget, has followed a course typical among large manufacturers. At the advice of a special bureau of its legal department the company has dropped some discounts, including the differential rebate, and continued others. That strict observance of the provisions of the Act so far as they can be defined does not control prices except in a general way was reflected by a recent price war during which supply dealers, all buying carbons from National Carbon at a fixed scale, resold them to exhibitors at cost in a reported effort to drive from the field small dealers whose chief stock in trade are carbons.

Supply dealers themselves, questioned on the effects of the Act, refused to discuss its operations beyond the claim that it is being observed according to the best interpretation they can obtain.

Chicago Theatre Owners Offer Tax Compromise

In a closed session held this week with the city finance committee, Chicago theatre owners offered to pay an increase of twenty-five per cent in license fees as a compromise to meet the demands of the city's officials for a three per cent levy on gross receipts.

If the proposed step to increase license fees is taken it is considered likely that some revision will be made in licensing and a new classification will be given to certain theatres now thought by the city officials to be paying inadequate fees.

A further meeting between the finance committee and the theatre men to discuss the situation was set for later in the week.

Warn Mexican Theatres On Misleading Advertising

by JAMES LOCKART

in Mexico City

Theatres in Mexico City failing to charge admission prices specified in their advertising will be fined or otherwise penalized, the civic amusement department has warned.

Some exhibitors, it was found, either omit mention of their prices, state it vaguely, or else charge prices higher than those announced or intimated.

Burt Kelly, former Nat Levine aide at Republic, will join Mr. Levine's staff when the producer takes up his duties at MGM August 1st.

I NEVER DID THIS BEFORE

by Ben Hecht

I've always had the notion that the theatre could hit harder than the screen, bounce higher, say more and dig deeper.

After an hour and a half look at Mr. Goldwyn's production of "Dead End", I entered Mr. Goldwyn's office with head hung and ready to join the true faith, and murmur that I may have been wrong.

It is perhaps unfair to the stage to use the picture "Dead End" as a spokesman for the cinema-side. Because this opus as put on the screen by Mr. Goldwyn's troupe of geniuses is as good a movie (the word 'movie' is anathema to Mr. G.) as Hollywood has ever produced.

It is a more unflinching, undecorated and brilliant attack on the emotions than any stage play, including its own Broadway origin, I've seen in years.

Odd though it is to find one's self writing a blurb for a Goldwyn picture, it's my own fault, not Mr G.'s. Among the things I did when I broke down and begged Mr. G.'s pardon for not having adored the art of the cinema before, was ask his permission to square myself with the Muses by coming out once flat-footed with a Hosannah for a movie.

Mr. G. graciously granted me this permission and here is my Hosannah—seventy trumpets strong and all pealing "Dead End" is a knockout.

NEWSREELS IN EUROPE APPEAL TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS FOR FAIRNESS

Urge Lowering of Tariff Duties And Identical Treatment of Written News; Some Important Concessions Were Made

The attention of the League of Nations in Geneva was diverted momentarily last week from the Sino-Japanese and Spanish warfare to the motion picture, with the filing of a plea against the discrimination shown newsreels in the high tariffs now prevailing in European countries.

A concerted appeal for economic concessions to the newsreel was made at a meeting of the Federation Internationale de la Presse Cinematographique and the Union Internationale de la Presse Filmee, held in Paris. Then, in a declaration directed to the League of Nations, to certain governments, and to state railways, attention was called to existing "heavy-duty" requirements on the newsreels as contrasted with generally favored treatment enjoyed by other news media, principally the press.

Finance ministries were requested to "examine possibilities for proper alleviation involving definite lowering of tariff duties in the importation of newsreels," according to a communication from Nils Hansell, Jr., in Paris.

Speaking before some 50 assembled delegates representing ten different countries, H. Piron of Belgium, president of the Union Internationale de la Presse Filmee, presented supporting figures.

"Information obtained by us," he said, "indicates that charges for the importation of exposed films are: Francs 5 and 25 per meter on positive and negative film, respectively, in France; 5 and 3.5 d. per foot in ordinary and in preferential tariff, respectively, the latter not applicable to the newsreels, in England; 2,000 R.M. per 100 kilos in Germany: 20 gold crowns (Austrian) per 100 kilos, in Austria; 20,000 slotys per 100 kilos, in Poland; 34 and 52 centimes per meter on undeveloped and on positive film, respectively, in Belgium; and 2 drachmas (in coin) per kilo in addition to a 75 per cent import tax, in Greece. The charges are somewhat complicated in the Netherlands but can be estimated in a general way as being in excess of one quarter of total value."

"These several instances demonstrate clearly," Mr. Piron continued, "the heavy burden carried by the motion picture newsreels, whose box office value is measured in terms of only one or two weeks.

Urge Equal Facilities

"With respect to written news there are no import restrictions in such countries as France, England, Germany, Austria, Poland, Greece, Belgium, and Netherlands.

"And moreover, such news benefits from favorable tariff and communications concessions in a number of countries, notably France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, and the Netherlands, although these same countries grant no similar treatment for the newsreels.

"In view of this condition, then, it becomes desirable that the governments recognize the importance of the newsreel and that they accord it the same facilities now enjoyed by the press."

A Long Fight

At the headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in New York, it was said that the motion picture industry in Europe, of which the American motion picture is an important part, has been trying for years to win favorable concessions for the newsreel, principally by having them classified as "educational films," enabling the reels to enjoy the non-tariff and other privileges held by educationals. In some countries it was said such concessions already have been obtained, and the movement generally is in that direction.

An executive of one of the American newsreels, after conferring with his Paris director, declared that the American reels will cooperate fully in any such movement.

Because of the troubled military, economic and social conditions in the various European countries, it is quite unlikely, however, that any concessions will be made in the strict censorship of the newsreels.

Allow $389,436 Claim Against Fox Theatres

The claim of $389,436 of the Philadelphia Company for Guaranteeing Mortages against the Fox Theatres Corporation was allowed in full by the U. S. court of appeals in a decision which reversed a lower court ruling. The district court had limited the award to $48,134.

The claim is founded upon failure by Fox Theatres to pay interest and taxes on a loan of $1,800,000 made by the Philadelphia company to a Fox subsidiary, the Market & 17th Street Corporation, in 1930. Milton C. Weisman, Fox receiver, opposed the claim on the ground that only $30,134 had been paid by the plaintiff and asked the court to fix settlement at that sum.

Defer RKO-Warco Suit to August 2

Hearings of the suit of the K-P Theatre Corporation, RKO subsidiary, against Warco Trading Company to compel fulfillment of a contract calling for the demolition of the Grand Opera House, New York, and the erection of a 4,000 seat theatre were adjourned until August 2nd. The hearings will take place in N. Y. supreme court before Justice Aaron Steuer.

Roxy Plan Gets Court Approval

Twentieth Century-Fox will take over the Roxy Theatre, New York, during the latter part of August under the terms a reorganization plan which was formally confirmed in an order signed by Francis G. Caffey, United States district court judge.

The order also contained approval of the new first mortgage indenture and film franchise and disposed of all objections to the plan. Howard S. Cullman, Roxy trustee, was directed to continue the business until Twentieth Century-Fox takes possession and to file a verified statement of all unexpired contracts and leases. The contract under which the company will take over the house will be closed immediately after a required 30-day period elapses.

The court reserves decision on a $9,881 claim filed by Louis Karasik for legal fees. The Pound Bondholders Protective Committee informed the court Mr. Karasik has agreed to settle the claim for $3,500.

A hearing for technical purposes will be held August 11th, and a hearing on applications for fees will be held October 8th.

A net loss of $8,137 for the period from May 28th to June 24th was shown in the report filed Tuesday by Howard S. Cullman, Roxy trustee, in the United States district court. The report is based upon unaudited figures and the loss is shown before deductions for interest on funded indebtedness, expenses, etc.

Disbursements for the period were $110,661 and receipts $103,203, showing an excess of disbursements over receipts of $7,458. Cash on hand is $64,213, as compared with $71,672 on May 27. Admissions totaled $90,121; film rentals were $12,367; special talent, $14,267; stage, $7,642; orchestra, $8,740; advertising, $13,072; house salary, $11,558; rent, taxes and insurance, $14,073.

GILLMORE HEADS COUP TO BRING ALL ACTORS INTO ONE UNION FOR AFL

Associated Actors and Artists To Cover All Performers; Frank Gillmore to Relax Duties as Head of Equity Group

The most far-reaching step in the unionization of actors since the formation of Actors' Equity Association in 1913 and the organization of the Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood came with dramatic suddenness Monday when it was announced that "One big actors' union" would be formed to embrace performers in all forms of theatrical enterprise.

Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity since its inception almost 25 years ago, will gradually relax his present duties to devote time to the reorganization of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, the international American Federation of Labor affiliate which covers all performers, in an effort to make its position the dominating one in theatrical labor. It is understood that Mr. Gillmore will continue as nominal head of Actors' Equity until the expiration of his present contract in May, 1940, but a search for his successor has already been started.

The new duties of Mr. Gillmore will be to "coordinate the actions of the actor unions and to use the benefit of his experience in legislation, according to Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild who is expected to exert a major influence in the new setup.

The initial step of the "big union" will be to charter an autonomous Radio Actors' Guild. It is claimed more than 600 radio performers already have responded.

In order to achieve the new consolidation, AAAA plans to institute a method of interchangeability of membership cards in the various actors' unions. Such a system would permit actors to transfer from one branch of the amusement field to the other without payment of initiation fees to various unions. The yearly per capita tax which unions were previously required to pay the AAAA will be raised from 75 cents to $1.50.

The new setup is in the nature of a victory for the Screen Actors' Guild which recently won a contract from producers in Hollywood. Since this Guild and Actors' Equity control the AAAA, whose chief function thus far has been to issue charters and settle jurisdictional disputes, little trouble is expected in effecting the consolidation. The reorganization is expected to be opposed by some of the smaller member unions, but they lack the strength to check it.

One of the first disputes the new "omnibus union" will settle is that between the American Guild of Music Artists, headed by Lawrence Tibbett, and the Grand Opera Artists Association, which holds an AFL charter. In exchange for financial support from the Tibbett group for the formation of the Radio Actors unit, it is expected that the AAAA will award the AFL charter of the Grand Opera Association to the Guild of Musical Artists.

The combining of the 12 member unions into an effective entity is a departure from the traditional craft lines of the AFL and more in the nature of the framework advocated by the Committee for Industrial Organization, the John L. Lewis movement.

The reorganization of the AAAA was expected to draw the fire of some of the smaller actor unions, but they lack the votes to check it. Other members of the AAAA besides Equity, the Screen Actors' Guild and the Grand Opera Artists' Association are the American Federation of Actors, the Burlesque Artists' Association, the Hebrew Actors' Union, the Hebrew Chorus Union, the German White Rats Union, the Hungarian Actors' Union, the Grand Opera Choral Alliance and the Chorus Equity Association.

The choice of a successor to Mr. Gillmore, who was first elected Equity president in 1929, was expected to precipitiate a lively intra-Equity fight.

Wilcox Arrives For RKO-British Production Talks

One of the major objectives of Herbert Wilcox, London producer, who arrived in New York Monday from England, is to discuss with RKO officials his proposals for handling the company's British production requirements arising out of British quota legislation now pending.

Mr. Wilcox said preliminary conferences had been held on the subject and that he hopes to arrive at a complete understanding with RKO during his 10-day visit in New York. He said that he had changed his early plans for the production of nine average-cost pictures to five higher-cost films. The budget for the five has been placed at around $4,000,000.

Mr. Wilcox said that success of the discussions with RKO would not affect the per picture budget for his program, but might result in increasing the number of pictures to more than the five proposed now.

The producer declared his belief that there would be no changes in the present British government's proposed quota and added that he did not think American companies would make quota pictures simply to fulfill the requirements of the Act, but would indulge in the production of quality pictures in England.

Mr. Wilcox brought with him a print of "Victoria the Great," $800,000 production based on the life of the British queen with Anna Neagle in the title role. RKO will distribute the picture here with the possibility that it may be roadshown in this country, as it was in England. The film is scheduled for September opening at the Music Hall, Mr. Wilcox planning to return here at that time for its American premiere.

Mr. Wilcox denied knowledge of plans of Leo Spitz or Ned E. Depinet to accompany him on his return to England to familiarize themselves with British production. Mr. Depinet, Jules Levy, Joseph Moskowitz and Phil Reisman were at the dock of the French line to greet Mr. Wilcox on his arrival on the Ile de France.

Unions Turn Attention to Film Studios in New York; Screen Actors' Executive in East To Negotiate for New Contracts

Developments in the movement for unionization of the film industry indicate that labor, having settled its differences in the Hollywood studios, is concentrating its efforts in the east where the Screen Actors Guild is completing arrangements for contracts and where headquarters for organization of exchange and theatre workers are located.

With the arrival of Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary for the Guild, in New York, negotiations began this week for contracts under which all players engaged in production in the east after August 1st will be members of the Guild and new wage scales and contract provisions will be recognized by eastern producers.

All important producers have given the Guild verbal assurance of their willingness to recognize the contracts and employ only Guild members, according to Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative of the organization. These include Vitaphone, Educational, Mentone, Audio Productions and others. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last week signed the first contract made in the east providing that nine actors who are working on location at West Point will become Guild members.

Striking cartoonists of the Max Fleischer Studios in New York received new support from the League of Women Shoppers, which protested to circuit managers against the continued showing of animated cartoons produced in the studio at 1600 Broadway.

The drawing up of tentative agreements with exchange employees throughout the country is expected to be completed before September it was learned from distributor representatives who are conferring with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees at home offices in New York. Discussions on contracts for two of the remaining 12 exchange centers, Minneapolis and Omaha, were in progress this week.

Affiliates of the Committee for Industrial Organization, forced into the background in the motion picture industry by the activities of the IATSE continued its attempts to gain a foothold. An effort to organize exchange office employees in Philadelphia last week failed when only a few workers attended an organization meeting. Last Saturday the Warner Brothers employees in the Philadelphia exchanges went on a five day week in what was construed as a counter move.

Closed shop contracts have been signed by the United Theatrical Employees' Union, CIO affiliate in Milwaukee, according to Gunnar Mickelson, CIO director.

The IATSE is active in this field also, new theatrical employees' locals having been organized this week in Boston and Washington and it is expected the drive will be intensified.

"BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938"

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Taboo and Defi

Story taboos have been thicker than rumors in Hollywood ever since the first camera turned. But almost everyone has been licked by a combination of producing and selling brains. Hollywood's idea of making a picture that seemingly has all the cards stacked against it is make it good so that no matter what the theme the picture will make money if properly sold. Consequently the burden is thrown upon the shoulders of the exhibitor.

Of all the frighteners probably the most fearsome is the womanless story, in spite of the fact that such stories frequently turned out to be great screen material. Among pictures of this type that might be mentioned are "Men Without Women," "Dawn Patrol" and "The Lost Patrol."

Many a womanless picture sold through proper exploitation has made money. They have been successful because exhibitors adapting smart and ingenious showmanship picked up where the producer left off. MGM turned out a great picture when it made "Captains Courageous," yet the company knew that a womanless story, according to Hollywood, had a Jonah on it.

Knowing the picture was good, the problem was to convince the public of the fact. To do this the company started a new method of selling. It put the film into the Carthay Circle theatre at a $1.50 top. Much money was spent in advertising and the show did a fair business at the Carthay. Yet, had it lost money, the experiment still would have been a good investment, as subsequent events proved. Given just a long enough run so that its commercial potentialities were not completely milked and after receiving a great deal of favorable word-of-mouth advertising, it was moved into Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese theatres. In its week run it did $30,500 at the State and $14,000 at the Chinese. The openings in New York, Detroit, Cleveland, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago, following the west coast premiere, also were reported highly successful.

So effective was MGM's opening of "Captains Courageous" in stimulating interest for subsequent runs that Twentieth Century-Fox adapted the practice in the case of "Wee Willie Winkie." As brains had been put into the production of both films, brains also were put into their selling.

57 Films in Work

Production continued heavy during the week of July 16-23. Although eleven pictures were finished, twelve were started, raising to 57 the number actually in work. This is seven more in the process of manufacture than during the same period one year ago and twenty more than were being shot in 1935 at the time.

MICKEY MOUSE GETS LITERARY HONOR

Mickey Mouse obtained a foothold in the world of letters last week when a book featuring him was placed on the recommended reading list of New York City's elementary schools. The text of the book, written by Jean Ayer, is illustrated by Walt Disney.

Harold G. Campbell, superintendent of schools, credited the Disney character with encouraging children in early reading.

Three started at Paramount. The most important undoubtedly is "Wells Fargo," which Frank Lloyd is producing and directing. It will present Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns, Lloyd Nolan, Mary Nash, Ralph Morgan, Porter Hall, Robert Cummings, June Martel and Barlowe Borland. Leading players in "Blossoms of Broadway," a B. P. Schulberg production, are Edward Arnold, Shirley Ross and William Frawley. Richard Wallace is directing. In "Arizona Ames," being directed by Charles Barton, will be seen Gilbert Roland, Marsha Hunt, Charles Bickford, Akim Tamiroff, Monte Blue, James Meade and Billie Lee.

Universal Launches Two

Universal started two productions. The cast for "Sudden Bill Dorn" includes Buck Jones, Evelyn Brent, Frank McGlynn, Sr., and Noel Madison. Ray Taylor is directing. "Adventures End," a Trem Carr production, will present John Wayne, Diana Gibson, Moroni Olsen, Montague Love, Paul White and Maurice Black. Arthur Lubin is the director.

"My Dear Miss Aldrich" was started at MGM. Principals presently listed are Edna Mae Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Janet Beecher, Walter Pidgeon and J. Farrell MacDonald. Direction was assigned to George B. Seitz.

At Grand National studio "Here's Flash Casey" went before the cameras. Eric Linden and Boots Mallory are featured with Howard Lang, Harry Harvey, John Crehan, Holmes Herbert and Cully Richards in support. Lynne Shores is directing.

Columbia started "Park Avenue Dames." The cast includes Richard Arlen, Fay Wray, Mary Russell, Wyn Cahoon, Scott Colton, Raymond Walburn, Gene Morgan, Marc Lawrence and George McKay. Al Rogell is the director.

"Look Out, Mr. Moto," second in the series of pictures based on the fictional Japanese detective, started at 20th Century-Fox. It will feature Peter Lorre with Rochelle Hudson, Chick Chandler, George Regas, Robert Kent and J. Edmund Bromberg. Norman Foster is directing.

Warner began work on "Sergeant Murphy." The cast includes Ronald Regan, Mary McGuire, Max Hoffman, Jr., and Donald Crisp. E. Reeves Eason is directing.

RKO-Radio's new activity is "A Damsel in Distress." Fred Astaire is starred with George Burns and Gracie Allen.

Tom Keene's first picture for Monogram, "God's Country and the Man," also got underway.

Warners Complete Two

Two of the completed picture group are credited to Warner Bros. In "Missing Witness" are John Litel, Dick Purcell, Jean Dale, Eddie Acuff, William Haade, Mary Treen, Michael Mark, Ben Weldon, Raymond Hatton, Veda Ann Borg, Sheila Bromley, John Harron and Marcia Ralston. William Clemens directed. Names listed in "Two Platoons" are Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Robert Armstrong, Eddie Acuff, Hugh O'Connell, Veda Ann Borg, Ed Chandler and Ted Oliver. John Farrow directed.

Grand National also accounted for two pictures. "Something to Sing About" stars James Cagney and Evelyn Daw, Jimmy Newill, Harry Barris, Cully Richards, Bill Carey, Gene Lockhart, William Frawley, William Davidson and Phillip Ahn. Victor Schertzinger directed the Zion Myers production. "Renfrew of the Mounted," which Al Sherman produced and directed, will present James Newill, Phillis Barry, Donald Reed, William Royle, Chief Thundercloud, David Barclay, William Austin and Dennis Choldicott.

"Madame Walewska," to the production of which MGM devoted much time, finally was finished. Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer are starred.

Columbia completed "It's All Yours." The cast lists Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll, Mischa Auer, Grace Bradley, Richard Carle, J. C. Nugent, Charles Waldron, Victor Kilian and Arthur Hoyt. Elliott Nugent directed.

Shirley Temple Film Completed

At Twentieth Century-Fox, "Heidi" was finished. It features Shirley Temple with Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, Sidney Blackmer, Mary Nash,

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Stella Dallas

(U.A.-Goldwyn)

Drama

This report is written in Hollywood on the morning after Samuel Goldwyn's 1937 edition of "Stella Dallas" was previewed in the presence of the mighty and while the town, picturewise, is still echoing quick praises and spot predictions that flowed as did the tears as the heroine of the picture suffered and sacrificed. It would be on such a morning that a showman veteran in the business of selling entertainment for profit might be expected to turn back the pages of the cinema calendar to see what the "Stella Dallas" of 1925, also distributed by United Artists, accomplished in the way of pleasing audiences and, of course, making money. If his particular cinema calendar happened to be his file of this publication's pillar of exhibitor candor and confidence, "What the Picture Did For Me," he would find that the silent version, starring the then ascendant Belle Bennett and beneficiary of an extremely favorable press, was reported as follows by exhibitors in the areas indicated:

"Picture okay for the more intelligent class, while the others say not so good. Nil as drawing card in small towns." (Carrington, N. D.)

"The kind of picture that makes you glad you are in the business. While we did not do such a big business, it pleased." (Savannah, Mo.)

"As the story was widely read and liked, the title has box office value. The ladies liked it immensely. I was surprised at the large number who came up with dampened handkerchiefs and remarked, 'It sure was a good picture; I cried all through it!' " (Graham, Texas.)

"Wonderful picture, appealing to all classes. Men and women in tears. Played three nights and one repeat to full houses." (Cape May, N. J.)

"Got the surprise of my life on this one. I bought it for prestige and made real money on it." (Medicine Lodge, Kans.)

"One of the best casts of the season. This sad and pathetic story of mother love hit hard with my patrons." (Chicago, Ill.)

"Ran as a special three days. Stood up and gave good satisfaction. A little sad in places." (Hartington, Neb.)

"Drew some that never come except on specials like this." (Poynette, Wis.)

"Acting good, but the flappers panned and snickered at the 1900 to 1906 costumes." (Port Washington, Wis.)

"Splendid picture where they like mother love and sob stuff. No question about it being a special production, but I lost money." (Buchanan, Mich.)

By the time he had perused these and scores more of reports in kind, the hypothetical showman of this piece would have a pretty definite idea as to the kind of story Mr. Goldwyn commissioned his staff to produce, and perhaps an intimation of the reception their production might be expected to experience. All this, of course, providing that acting, direction and other essential considerations were up to par. He would note then that Barbara Stanwyck has the role previously played by Belle Bennett, that Anne Shirley plays her daughter, played by Lois Moran in 1925, and that John Boles, Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neil and Anne Shoemaker are others prominently cast. He would be likely to assume, in view of Mr. Goldwyn's recent record, that all money and time can do to guarantee screen results has been done.

If the story has slipped momentarily out of mind, it is the one about the unlettered mill girl who marries a gentleman of quality and, separated from him while their daughter grows to adolescence in her honest but inelegant care, sacrifices her own happiness for the child's by pretending to be an unworthy mother in order to turn her daughter's love toward the father and, naturally, the young man in the case.

Far from playing down the sentimental appeal, the screen play by Victor Heerman and Sarah Y. Mason underscores the emotional passages, and director King Vidor allows Miss Stanwyck abundant footage for thorough exercise of her talent. He has been equally generous to Alan Hale, whose assignment it is to portray the gradual and alcoholic decline of an uncouth but constant suitor and friend in need. Save for his occasional and altogether pertinent broad comedy passages, the production is undiluted melodrama pointed straight at the lachrymal gland. There is no attempt to interest the child audience and the picture is not conditioned in their behalf.

Reviewed at studio preview, Warners' Hollywood theatre. Press and profession were in majority attendance and wept heartily, applauding on more than the formally ordained occasions the acting of Miss Stanwyck, Mr. Hale and Miss Shirley.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Exclusive

(Paramount)

Comedy-Melodrama

Widely diversified entertainment elements have been woven together and all have definite commercial exploitation value, in the manner that multi-colored patterns are included in mozaic. Primarily "Exclusive" is a differently conceived newspaper story. It concentrates on its direct motivation, old time newspaper ethcs in conflict with racketeer inspired yellow journalism, and is vividly gripping. But this well prepared, acted, directed and produced film is not solely a newspaper picture. It also tells a pointed human interest story, sparkles with lively tension-easing comedy, includes an appealing love interest contrast.

Plotted to engage the attention of all patrons, whether they sit in the loges or the regular seats, it also is a showman's show. Its potentialities as a money maker appear limited only by exhibitors' ingenuity and effort. The tools necessary are available, not only in story and production content, but also in name value. The featured group are the wellknown Fred MacMurray, Charlie Ruggles, Lloyd Nolan and Frances Farmer, who rapidly is gaining favor. Although, other than Ralph Morgan, none of the supporting players reaches the status of the leads, they all give good accounts of themselves and fit into the theme and action.

MacMurray and Ruggles are cast as reporters on a respectable old line newspaper. They know all the news, but they don't print all, particularly the sensational material that might blast someone's reputation. Likewise, they are typical newspaper men as the screen prefers to picture them, yet the conception is not displeasing.

Preceded by a jury's failure to convict a racketeer, played by Lloyd Nolan, a crisis comes into the pair's lives when the daughter (Frances Farmer) of "Tod Swain" (Ruggles), with whom "Houston" (MacMurray) is in love, goes to work on a rival sheet which "Gillette" (Nolan) has purchased. His policy is dedicated to sensational journalism in which all the tactics of gangsterism are brought into play. An innocent tool "Vina Swain" (Miss Farmer) writes a story that causes a mayoralty candidate (Ralph Morgan) to commit suicide. With comedy lightening the tension, the girl becomes a bitter enemy of her father and sweetheart.

Publishing a story that elevators in a department store are unsafe turns the picture to its melodramatic conclusion. The elevators are proved safe, but when a human cargo is aboard the dirty work of "Gillette's" minions succeeds and many, including "Houston," are injured. "Swain," putting two and two together, senses what "Gillette" has been doing. Trapping his daughter and a gangster (Harlan Briggs), he scares that individual into signing a confession implicating "Gillette" in the murderous tragedy.

Like "I Met Him In Paris," "Easy Living" and other pictures in Paramount's new program, "Exclusive" is built of understandable materials that appeal to both specialized and general audiences. It caused the customers to do a little thinking painlessly but predominantly it does what any good picture is supposed to do—entertain.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles. The crowd in the gallery was especally impressed. The reactions to the different phases of the film were exactly what would be expected, and the applause at the end was legitimately enthusiastic.—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Sheik Steps Out

(Republic)

Comedy-Melodrama

Probably the element of primary exploitation value here is the return of Ramon Novarro to motion pictures after an extended and never very widely explained absence. The production chosen for his emergence from retirement is designed to recall in public mind the portrayals in which he made his silent picture reputation. It gives him, also, opportunity to do more of the singing which, in at least one previous instance, made of an inconspicuous little refrain a melodic obsession of the vast humming population.

The story, too, has certain pattern relationship to important precedents. In it Mr. Novarro has the role of a desert sheik who sets out to discipline by divers methods a visiting American girl with more money than has been good for her. There are incidents having to do with the girl's search for a fast horse with which to escape obligations incurred in a racing wager. The sheik impersonates a native guide as an expedient means of accomplishing his purpose and reveals himself, at the end, as qualified, racially, to participate in the happy ending.

Adele Buffington's story and screen play indicate complete comprehension on her part of the showman's requirements in effecting the reinstatement of the star as a box office figure. Associate producer Herman Schlom and director Irving Pichel have labored in unison to the same end. Mr. Novarro's personality and technique betray no signs of his having been away.

Reviewed at studio preview at the Warner's Beverly theatre, Beverly Hills, California. Auditorium reaction was what may be called typical, with foyer comment of the professional contingent concentrated, naturally enough, on the star's chances of regaining his former status as a box office attraction, opinion on the point varying from complete confidence to the other extreme.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Republic. Associate producer, Herman Schlom. Director, Irving Pichel. Story and screen play by Adele Buffington. Additional dialogue by Gordon Kahn. Mr. Dodd Takes the Air

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy-Romance with Music

In this combination of romance, comedy and music, Mervyn LeRoy has one of the surprise pictures of the season. The preview audience reaction to the film as a whole indicated the public at large will consider that Mr. LeRoy has a concrete and practical idea of the kind of entertainment wanted and how to provide it.

"Mr. Dodd Takes the Air" is entertainment calculated to please the most varied audience factors. It also is possessed of showmanship potentialities that should prove interesting to exhibitors who really like to sell their attraction. The exploitation possibilities are found in character of story, quality of directorial technique, development of characterizations and general worth of production detail. Most significantly, however, the production's principal showmanship value is Kenny Baker. This boyish star of Jack Benny's Jello radio program, earlier seen in "Turn Off the Moon," not only can sing well enough to satisfy, as the air record indicates, but also proves in this picture that he is an actor of no mean ability. A boy to be watched, on the strength of this picture, it can be expected that he will be entrusted with greater responsibilities.

For the story, country boy "Claude Dodd" is suddenly catapulted to fame as a radio crooner. The antics of his managing-advisor, "Sniffer," adding to the comedy content, the musical numbers provided by Harry Warren and Al Dubin provide the necessary melodic contrast. Unable to understand that nice girl "Marjorie," loves him for love alone, he is easy prey for golddigger "Jessica." He also almost becomes dominated by ancient and often-married diva "Mme. Morro," a character which, incidentally, Alice Brady portrays with skill and dexterity. All "Claude's" adventures, especially the one in which jealous "Jessica" attempts to make it appear that "Marjorie" is trying to steal a radio invention from him, convince him that there's no place in the big city for a country boy. Home he goes, later to be discovered by "Sniffer," whom "Mme. Morro" has made her fifth husband, and "Marjorie," who has patented and protected his invention. The happy ending follows.

A lively show with the kind of love interest most persons like to see, containing music that is well worked in and melodrama with a hokum tinge, it has a lot of entertainment and showmanship material.

Previewed at Warner's Hollywood theatre to a Sunday night audience which gave ample evidence that it was completely satisfied with the picture.—G. M.

The Big Shot

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

The old adage that "Money Doesn't Buy Happiness" for those to whom it comes unearned is demonstrated here. The detailing of experiences encountered by those so fortunate, however, usually makes amusing entertainment for others. Thus a few chapters in the life of "Dr. Bertrand Simms" (played by Guy Kibbee), his family and those with whom they become associated constitute the amusement quality of this picture.

Horse doctor "Simms" inherits a large fortune from a mysterious uncle. His social climber wife demands that the family proceed to the domain of its benefactor that it may assume the station in life which Fate always intended. Although the "Simms" melange never finds out until the climactic sequences, the uncle was an ace racketeer and his cohorts, headed by "Mr. Drake," are determined that the lucrative sources of income, though unethical, shall be continued. Consequently "Simms" is given quite a pushing around. But "Dr. Simms" is anxious to be a public benefactor, and what better service could he render his adopted community than to rid it of the underworld element. Not knowing that he is the man he is out to get, he embarks on a crusade to get the big shot. The accompanying action is sometimes exciting and lively comedy, sometimes it seems to be quite a lot to do about nothing. In either phase it seemed to be fairly amusing. Of course, "Dr. Simms" eventually emerges as a public hero.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale. Not widely advertised and thus unattended by the usual audience that turns up at this theatre for previews, the film was accepted by those present as a pleasant interlude. Unfortunately, as it was shown in conjunction with "New Faces of 1937," the comedy edge was blunted a bit, which suggests that it should be presented as companion piece to a more serious feature.—G. M.

It's Love I'm After

(Warner-F. N.)

Comedy

That which sometimes is called the exploitation problem would appear to be no problem at all in the case of this manifestly saleable merchandise. The marquee message practically writes itself, if the marquee is big enough, somewhat as follows: Leslie Howard—Bette Davis—Olivia de Havilland—Eric Blore—"It's Love I'm After." If that, reminding the running reader of "Of Human Bondage," "The Petrified Forest" and "Anthony Adverse," doesn't inspire the spending spirit, the logical next step might be to take down the copy and substitute "Theatre for Sale."

Along those exploitation lanes reaching out beyond the marquee range may be strewn the information that this picture is like none of those mentioned above and like few if any others. It is to be revealed that here the Leslie Howard whose Shakespearean season on the metropolitan stage was a topic of much displacement in the public prints enacts the role of just such a ham-ey "Hamlet" as the less considerate of his critics declared him, in sooth, to be. It is to be added that the Bette Davis whose temperamental rebellion against certain contractual restraints made lively and abundant newspaper copy on both sides of the Atlantic, a while back, here enacts the role of an actress more extravagantly temperamental than even her most censurious commentators ventured to suggest. Olivia de Havilland's departure from precedent is no less extreme (she plays a star-struck adolescent) and only Eric Blore confirms flash expectation as a servitor who is something more than that.

The picture is a briskly played comedy having to do with the efforts of a Shakespearean matinee-idol to disillusion a young lady, affianced to the son of an old friend and fancying herself in love with the actor, by disgracing himself in her presence. He defers a planned marriage to his co-star to accomplish this and she, in unplanned concert with the girl's fiance, the girl herself and the actor's sophisticated valet, defeats his efforts in a series of blunders, misunderstandings and deliberate counter moves.

Lines, plots and business from Shakespeare, Lincoln J. Carter and intermediate sources are sprinkled throughout the picture as integral parts of dialogue and action. From the opening, wherein Mr. Howard and Miss Davis give a stage performance of the last scene in "Romeo and Juliet" whilst exchanging bitter personalities sotto voce, to the likewise caricatured happy ending, the picture is uninterruptedly comic in character. The story is an original by Maurice Hanline, the screen play by Casey Robinson,

THANK YOU!

BECAUSE OF THE UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCES surrounding the release of "Saratoga" many theatres have graciously waived their customary clearance on Jean Harlow's last picture permitting a vociferous nationwide demand to be met quickly and expeditiously.

YOUR COOPERATION has made it possible to bring "Saratoga" in record time to millions of clamoring motion picture fans. In taking this means of thanking exhibitors, M-G-M also calls attention to a unique situation which probably has no parallel in screen history.

M-G-M GREATLY INCREASED THE NUMBER OF PRINTS from its laboratories so that hundreds of theatres were able to open "Saratoga" simultaneously with hold-overs in practically one hundred percent of these situations.

NOW BECAUSE OF A GENERAL WAIVING of clearance, it becomes possible for these prints to be booked ahead many weeks on the same solid basis.

CURRENTLY AND FOR A LONG TIME TO COME "SARATOGA" will be playing simultaneously in hundreds of theatres, one of the greatest hits in the annals of this industry. We are appreciative indeed of your cooperation which made this possible.

Hideaway

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

A minor comedy, "Hideaway" is ordinary audience material. Persons whose entertainment tastes are not limited by rigid strictures may be expected to enjoy it.

With comedy as the keynote, the story is a combination of formula standbys—a bit of romance, contrasting light melodrama, suspense, surprising twists and a thrill-action anti-climax. There are several good characterizations, and dialogue, action and situations are well blended.

Squatting in a deserted farm house, family troubles first distract "Frankie Peterson" from his life of loafing and poaching. Wife "Emma" nags him constantly. Daughter "Joan's" ambitions to go to the city and her flirtation with his nemesis, forest ranger "Bill Parker," are something "Frankie" cannot understand, and impish "Oscar" is both a pal and a pest.

In move a trio of mysterious personages, later revealed as gangsters. Their leader, "Mike Clarke," tolerates the old man. There's a lot of complicated comedy before it is ascertained that "Mike's" mob is hiding out from rival "Norris." "But "Frankie," entrusted with a peace making mission, precipitates a situation which leads to a gang battle in which all the racketeers are eliminated. Discovery of a hidden fortune permits "Frankie" to live the life of ease he desires, "Joan" to consummate her romance and "Emma," as long as there is money in the house, to be satisfied. The film provides quite a few laughs for those who care to laugh and enough amusement, even if some of it is pretty far fetched, to ease the strain on those who may be disappointed that the film isn't a masterpiece.—*G. Bulldog Drummond at Bay

(Republic)

Mystery Melodrama

The latest of the exploits of the intrepid Captain Drummond becomes one of his minor efforts. The material is there for a rousing mystery melodrama, but the finished product is uneven and lacks suspense. Unlike other mystery series, notably "Charlie Chan," where the chief character is synonymous with one person, the "Drummond" character is always portrayed by a different actor. It is said that every actor yearns to play "Hamlet," and while it may not be true that every actor is "eating his heart out" to play "Drummond," it appears that eventually all shall have a chance at it.

The material is adapted from the novel by "Sapper," and the fact that it is a "Bulldog Drummond" story would seem to be its primary selling angle. John Lodge in the main role is supported by Dorothy Mackaill, Victor Jory, Claud Allister and Hugh Miller.

Cohorts of "Kalinsky," an unscrupulous financier, kidnap "Caldwell," inventor of a secret airplane. "Caldwell" escapes and manages to get a message through to "Drummond" before he is recaptured. The next day "Doris" pays "Drummond" a visit, but he becomes suspicious. Later "Drummond" captures an intruder in his home, but learns little when the man is killed, "Drummond" being drawn away by a ruse.

The trail leads to Hartley Manor, headquarters of "Kalinsky" and his henchman, "Gregoroff." "Drummond" finds "Caldwell" being held prisoner there, but is discovered before he is able to free the inventor. "Drummond" follows the criminals to Scotland. After a quarrel "Gregoroff" kills "Kalinsky" and tries to escape in "Caldwell's" plane. "Caldwell" crashes the plane through his newly invented ray. "Doris" reveals she is a British agent.

Hollywood Cowboy

Western

Although basically the same as other western pictures, this feature manages to swerve from the path of routine by introducing metropolitan racketeering methods to the wide open spaces and then adding another touch of modernism through the use of airplanes for the climactic battle.

George O'Brien, as the hero, is placed above the status of an ordinary cowhand and is given good cause for being an expert horseman and roper by the fact he is a western motion picture star—a "Hollywood Cowboy."

The city gangsters, led by Charles Middleton, descend upon the Wyoming ranges, determined to organize a "cattlemen's protective association." With the accepted urban technique, the villains intimidate ranchers by wrecking their property, assaulting their men and then promising protection in return for membership dues.

Jeffery Carson (George O'Brien) and a screen writer, G. Gadsby Holmes, are on a vacation when they join up with a rancher who steadfastly has refused to sign a contract with the racketeers. The hero, incidentally, is attracted to the rancher's niece, Joyce Butler.

The gangsters stampede the cattle by swooping over them in an airplane. Then Carson, having been considered a roving cowhand, is discovered to be a picture star. Miss Butler, angry because she believes Carson has been making fun of her, sends him away.

Carson enlists the aid of an aviator friend, and when the gangster plane zooms down toward the cattle, the two force him to land. The gangster aviator reveals the hideout of his cohorts and they are rounded up.

You Can't Have Everything

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy

The class and quality of 20th Century-Fox musicals, as entertainment and commercial ventures, already having been established by a list of successes, there is reason to anticipate that this will prove as worthy as its predecessors. The musicals that Darryl F. Zanuck has been turning out with regularity don't seem to win any spectacular medals. Still, they do what pictures are supposed to do, prove popular entertainment and make money.

The picture is a combination of formula musical comedy elements, all of which have been ingeniously put together. The story which serves as a framework on which to hang the incidental feature characterizations and specialties is romantic comedy through which is threaded satirical melodrama. It concerns the adventures which befall an ambitious playwright, played by Alice Faye, who comes to New York determined to show experienced producers they do not know it all. There is a resultant romantic mix-up involving Miss Faye, Louise Hovick (Gypsy Rose Lee) and Don Ameche prior to Miss Faye's being acclaimed the author of the kind of show she never intended to write.

Interwoven into the plot is a full quota of the Ritz Brothers' clowning comedy. It might be reported that in several instances the audience reacted to their nonsense in a manner that stopped the show. Additionally, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, who provided the numbers for "Wake Up and Live," have contributed melodies for Alice Faye and Tony Martin to sing, for Rubinoff to play on his violin, which serve Louis Prima and his orchestra and which are the rhythmic backgrounds for the chorus singing, dancing and spectacle episodes.

The leading and support players acquit themselves credibly and there is an air of lightness and gayety about the show. Several times they don't seem to pick up where they left off, but the continuity does not suffer, as the introduction of the specialty numbers bridges the gaps.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale. The audience, which knew a 20th Century-Fox preview was scheduled, had a further interest in the film because it sensed that it would mark Gypsy Rose Lee's screen debut. If they expected to see her do any "strip teasing" they were disappointed. But they were not disappointed in her ability as a comedienne. Playing the role of the-other-woman menace, her character is distinctly comedy. Though gowned to reveal her shapely figure, her introduction has been handled with good taste and skill. She is Louise Hovick, not "Gypsy Rose Lee."—G. M.

Meet the Boy Friend

(Republic)

Comedy-Romance

A lightweight concoction of song, romance and comedy introduces the gentleman of the picture's title. The plot is traditionally styled in the "boy meets girl" formula with no plot maneuvers to make the affair different or outstanding, yet the production has its odd moments of gayety, and bits of excitement are supplied by a subplot of racketeers and a kidnaping. The music is tuneful but not memorable.

The roster of cast names includes some pleasing if not prominently known players. The romantic leads are assumed by David Carlyle, a newcomer blessed with good looks and voice, and Carol Hughes, who has been seen previously in such pictures as "Polo Joe" and "Three Men on a Horse" and is soon to appear in "Marry the Girl." Gwili Andre makes a sultry and sulky opposition to the love interest. A capable trio of funsters, Warren Hymer, Andrew Tombes and Pert Kelton, are largely responsible for many of the entertaining spots.

Carlyle is pictured as a former truck driver who has been skyrocketed to radio fame as "America's Boy Friend." The radio angle of the story may present the exhibitor some means of stirring up fan interest. Tombes, Carlyle's sponsor, realizes that the crooner's sway over his legion of feminine hearers would evaporate quickly were the singer to marry Gwili Andre. Gwili is shipped off to Hollywood and a movie contract, and Miss Hughes is given the arduous assignment of keeping young Carlyle from falling again under the spell of Cupid against whom he has been insured. From this point of the plot, the action is obvious. For, apparently love is the one thing one cannot be insured against. Miss Hughes, at first pretending interest in the singer to keep him from falling into the clutches of another designing female, falls victim to her plot. When Carlyle learns that Miss Hughes' liking for him was to be professional rather than amorous, the two go their separate ways. But a kidnaping scare meant to be a ruse but turning out to be the real thing brings them together again, to go on to bigger and better things on the radio as "America's Singing Sweethearts."

Dangerous Holiday

(Republic)

Melodrama

An only mildly diverting screen vehicle has been fashioned to carry the young Antipodean actor Ra Hould into the hallowed precincts of stardom. Master Hould is a strikingly handsome youngster who has been seen briefly of late in "Beloved Enemy" and "A Doctor's Diary." He is a bit too advanced in years to suffer from precocity but, together with a surprising resemblance to his more famous countryman, Master Freddie Bartholomew, a rather apparent camera consciousness detracts from his eager and engaging personality.

The production offers the exhibitor few selling suggestions in addition to the new personality. Star names are entirely absent. The players most prominently cast include Hedda Hopper, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Jack La Rue, Jed Prouty, Lynn Roberts and William Bakewell. Their performances are competent if not inspired. The romantic angle is practically non-existent.

Young Hould is cast as a violin virtuoso who is chief "bread and butter" winner for his hungry family. His days and night are a continuous round of concert engagements, radio appearances, recordings. Running off, he exchanges clothes with a scarecrow and in his new costume embarks upon the road of adventure and freedom. The parents believe him kidnapped. The lad has fallen into the pleasant company of "Duke," amiable but mentally retarded gangster (played by "Big Boy" Williams). When the boy's real identity is known to the thugs, they of course, avail themselves of the opportunity for a real kidnapping. "Duke's" soft heart and the arrival of the police prevent the execution of the plan. The kidnap scare brings the boy's family to a belated repentance.

The Affairs of Pierre

Very Good

Willie Howard stars in this subject and treats his audience to the sort of comedy that has made him a much sought after comedian. As a phoney professor of French, Howard relies on showmanship and platitudes to lure the students of a rival French professor across the hall. Howard finds a bag of jewels and returning them to the owner, a newspaper publisher, he refuses a large reward. The publisher plays up the story of the honest professor and publishes Howard's photograph. Any number of persons seem to think that Howard owes them money and the French police order his arrest as a spy. In a police grilling, an interpreter is called when Howard refuses to talk anything but French. The interpreter, the rival professor, causes Howard plenty of anguish. After being released Howard finds a wallet filled with money which he very quickly gets rid of. Supporting Howard are Clyde Fillmore, Helen Hawley, Walter Armin, Arthur Jarrett and Douglas Leavitt. Running time, 20 minutes.

Mississippi Moods

(RKO Radio)

Song and Comedy

Principally concerned with the dusky courtship between the phlegmatic and procrastinating Mose and the patient and perservering Hattie, the subject's most prominent point of merit lies in the splendid choral portions rendered by the Hall Johnson Choir. Singing in the manner that made it so vocally outstanding a part in the production of "The Green Pastures," the group offer in fine style such numbers as "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," "Roll Out, Heave Dat Cotton," and "Raise a Ruckus." The deep, rich and rhythmical tones of the ensemble are a pleasure for the ear to hear and treasure. Besides the musical background, the sketch has a generous deal of natural, ingenuous Negro humor. There is a bit of dancing and general excitement provided by the hectic happenings of a rent party. Willie Best and Hattie McDaniels play the courting couple in hilarious style. The entire production is excellently executed and decidedly worth screen time.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Our Gang Cutups

The customarily cute but nonetheless pleasantly entertaining juvenalia with which Our Gang youngsters have been delighting the nation's parents, for many a year, is used to relate their latest misadventures. The kids, captained by those two irrepressibles, Spanky and Alfalfa, run away from home and become involved with the pangs of hunger, a kind hearted storekeeper who is also the town sheriff, a frisky pig, a pugnacious hound and a swarm of bees. The outcome and the motto are that home, perhaps, is not the worst place after all. —Running time, 11 minutes.

The Playful Pups

Amusing

Insomnia and a rubber ball serve as the reasons for a dachshund's midnight adventures in this Oswald cartoon. Oswald presents his two dogs, Dorkin, the dachshund, and Elmer, with the ball. Elmer, however, monopolizes the toy and when bedtime arrives Dorkin has yet to have his play period. All three retire. Dorkin, unable to sleep, takes the ball off the mantle, but, in playing with it, he dives into an empty boot. He tries to get out, but only succeeds in backing into the other empty boot. Elmer, awakened by the prancing boots, rushes to Oswald. The two finally capture the boots and pull them apart. Dorkin keeps the ball. Running time, 7 1/3 minutes.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Life Begins in College

(20th Century-Fox)

Collegiate Musical Comedy

When the Ritz Brothers are in a picture, it can be expected that there will be plenty of nonsensical comedy. When 20th Century-Fox sets out to surpass its collegiate musical comedy of last year, "Pigskin Parade," it also can be expected that audiences and showmen will have an interesting picture. All "Life Begins in College" is, as far as story is concerned, the Ritz Brothers taking charge of a jerk water university's football team. Recalling "Pigskin Parade" should be all that is necessary to get the idea of what this production is likely to be.

The thematic genesis of the film is a series of stories by Darrell Ware which Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger whipped into screenplay form. Music and lyrics are by Lew Pollock and Sidney Mitchell, who provided the melodies for "Pigskin Parade" and contributed to many other 20th Century-Fox musicals. The Ritz Brothers' specialty routines were concocted by themselves, Sam Pokras, Sid Kuller and Ray Golden. The dances and rallies which give the production its glamour and spectacle content were arranged by Nick Castle and Geneva Sawyer. The football games in which the comedy trio participate were permitted to make themselves. It was William A. Seiter's job to direct the film.

For names, additional to the Ritz Brothers, the film will present Fred Stone, last in "Her American Husband," Dick Baldwin making his screen debut, Gloria Stuart, Nat Pendleton, Joan Davis, Tony Martin, Joan Marsh, Dixie Dunbar, Jed Prouty, Fred Kohler, Jr., Elisha Cook, Jr., and the Brewster twins.

Release date: Sept. 16.

Angel

(Paramount)

Melodrama and Romance

In nature this forthcoming production is sophisticated melodrama and romance. The title doesn't suggest that character, but the association of producer-director Ernest Lubitsch, Marlene Dietrich and Herbert Marshall does so emphatically. The sophisticated character is further emphasized by the fact that the motivating story is based upon a Continental stage play of which Melchior Lengyel is the author and that Samson Raphaelson, a contributing writer to such photoplays as "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," "The Gay Deception," "Accent on Youth," "Ladies Love Danger," "The Merry Widow," "Trouble in Paradise" and "One Hour with You," prepared the screen play. The fourth important personality in the production, Melvyn Douglas, although earlier in his screen career identified with sophisticated stories, has lately been seen in such comedy romances as "Theodora Goes Wild" and "I Met Him in Paris," although his role in "Captains Courageous" was serious.

Modernly timed and localed in London and Paris, as production detail will reflect, the story follows an intimate triangle theme. A woman of high character and moral standing, happy in the possession of her husband's love, wants to test his devotion. Impelled by an unconquerable urge, she makes a trip to gay Parisian spots. She meets another attractive and charming man. Though cleverly developed, the ensuing situations are familiar. The man and husband prove to be old friends. The fact becomes known to the woman. As danger menaces all, the problem is solved by the husband's tact.

Miss Dietrich, of "Desire," "Garden of Allah" and "Knight without Armour," is the woman. Marshall, recently in "Dark Angel" and "If You Could Only Cook," is the husband and Montgomery the other man. The supporting cast includes E. E. Horton, with Lubitsch in "Design for Living" and "Merry Widow," and Ernest Cossart, also with the director and Miss Dietrich in "Desire." Others featured are Laura Hope Crews, occupying a role some what similar to that which she had in "Camille," Herbert Mundin, Lionel Pape, Dennie Moore, Phillis Coghlan and Eric Walton.

The association of persons earlier with Lubitsch and Miss Dietrich is carried through in musical content. Frederick Hollander, who composed the theme song, also wrote "Falling in Love Again" and "Johnny," solo numbers in "The Blue Angel," and "Awake and Dream," sung in "Desire." The camera man, Charles Lang, photographed "Desire."

The history of the individuals associated with this production, which clearly reveals its character, should keynote the type of applicable exploitation.

Release date: October 8.

The Great Garrick

(Warner)

Comedy

In "The King and the Chorus Girl" and "They Won't Forget," producer Mervyn LeRoy concentrated on two very different kinds of entertainment. Though the themes were hardly new, the manner in which Mr. LeRoy presented them brought them satisfactory acceptance by the public, managers and press. In "The Great Garrick" he again is attempting, with the aid of capable production technicians and a cast of familiar names, the making of a picture as pleasing to all as were the initial efforts.

From a production standpoint the piece is a costume comedy, the time 1750. Based on an incident in the career of David Garrick, foremost British actor of the era, the idol of London's Drury Lane theatre although he is a supreme egoist, the theme follows the line of a dual deception. French producers have invited him to play at the Comedie Francais, but Garrick in his farewell to the British derides the French. When he arrives in France, they plan to teach him a lesson, and though shrewd Garrick quickly becomes aware of what is going on, he practices a deception of his own. All goes well until a girl becomes the innocent victim of the opposing forces' machinations. Love of her forces Garrick to Paris. He consents to go on only when he repents his insults to the French and confesses his love for the mysterious girl, who, of course, is sitting in the audience.

Based on a screen play by Ernest Vadja, a contributor to "Personal Property," and "A Woman Rebels" most recently, the film is being directed by James Whale, whose most recent assignments were the making of "Showboat" and "The Road Back" for Universal.

Brian Aherne, last in "Beloved Enemy," has been assigned to the title role. The girl is Olivia de Havilland. With Edward E. Horton and Luis Alberni occupying comedy roles, the remainder of the cast is composed of players often seen in Warner pictures. Included are Lana Turner and Linda Perry, both in "They Won't Forget"; Marie Wilson, Craig Reynolds, Dorothy Tree, Chester Clute, Henry O'Neil and Trevor Bardette. Others who will be seen are Milton Owen, Etienne Girardot, Harry Davenport, Melville Cooper, Ralph Faulkner and Fritz Leiber.

Release Date: Tentatively October 1.

Expensive Husbands

(Warner)

Comedy Romance

Although production detail embraces a good deal of Hollywood atmosphere, the basic story follows the "The Headwaiter and the Lady" idea. A declining screen actress desires to recapture her vanishing popularity. A press agent suggests that she go to Europe and seek to marry a titled nobleman. She marries a handsome waiter who, she eventually learns, has a string of titles attached to his name. Quarreling because what she believes is a deception has been practised on her, the star returns to Hollywood amid a great fanfare of publicity and she is submerged under a flood of screen offers. But the titled prince also comes to Hollyto make her life a bedlam until she agrees to return with him to Europe.

The picture is based on a story by Kyrill De Shishmareff, which Jean Negulesco and Jay Brennan transcribed to the screen. Direction is in the hands of Bobby Connolly, who, in addition to making the dance sequences in many Warner musicals, also is credited with directing "Devil's Saddle Legion."

The lady in the case is Beverly Roberts, last in "God's Country and the Woman," and the prince is Patric Knowles. Supporting players included are Allyn Joslyn, a recent recruit from the legitimate stage of whom the Warners expect much in the future, Gordon Oliver, another promising newcomer, Robert C. Fisher, Eula Guy, Fritz Feld, Vladimar Sokoloff, Ann Codee and George Humbert.

The time of the story is the present and the major locales are Hollywood and Vienna.

Release date: September 2.

Briefs Filed in Plan for RKO

Another step in the proposed plan of reorganization for RKO has been taken with the filing of briefs by all sides with George W. Alger, special master, who, after a study of the various contentions, will report to William Bondy, Federal judge, on the fairness, feasibility and equitability of the proposal.

It is generally agreed the plan is feasible but the independent committee for protection of common stockholders appealed to the special master not to "rubber stamp a plan proposed by Atlas Corporation and to suggest amendments which would improve its fairness to stockholders."

Renew Clash Over Plan

The briefs revealed settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim, conversion privileges for stockholders of the proposed new debentures and preferred stock, and the lack of a physical appraisal of assets are still the main issues.

Pointing out that "an overwhelming majority of creditors and stockholders have approved the plan," Hamilton C. Rickaby, of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, counsel for Atlas, argued the special master should not interfere with the plan. He said the fact that 78 per cent of secured claims, 82 per cent of unsecured claims, 54 per cent of the common stock, and Rockefeller Center have consented to the proposal should carry substantial weight in its favor.

Joseph Cohen, who with George L. Schein represents the independent committee, charged, however, that Atlas became involved solely for reorganization purposes. He declared Radio Corporation of America and Lehman Brothers agreed to cooperate after Atlas purchased one-half of the RCA holdings in 1935 for $5,000,000, RCA holding 1,211,462 shares of common and $9,786,655 of debentures.

An option to purchase the remaining half before 1938 for $6,000,000 also was granted.

Asks Physical Appraisal

Mr. Cohen asked for a physical appraisal of the assets because of the conflict between the Atlas estimate of $810,123 equity for stockholders and the stockholders' estimate of $8,721,881. Conversion rights to common which were granted to debentures and preferred stock could not be properly valued without an appraisal, he argued.

The settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim was characterized by stockholders as "unconscionable" because a $9,500,000 claim was being compromised for 25 per cent of the entire stock which, it is charged, is worth a minimum of $11,600,000 and a maximum of $19,140,000.

Rockefeller Center, represented by Milbank, Tweed, Hope and Webb, insisted its claims are valid and have been upheld by the special master for a total of $9,150,000, which includes the Music Hall and the Center Theatre leases and $882,000 for office space.

The attorneys pointed out their claims were substantially larger than the amount allowed and that the full amount of the claim might be received if the matter were litigated instead of settled. It also was argued the earning record of RKO for the past five years did not warrant a "too optimistic forecast" and Rockefeller Center was taking all the risk.

Mr. Rickaby, in his brief, stated the plan was "not only fair but generous to the stockholders." He placed the value of common stock at $3.38, based on the stockholders' figures, and at 33 cents based upon his own figures.

As to the feasibility of the plan, Mr. Rickaby, using the 1936 income figures, estimated the company would have $736,933 for taxes and dividends.

Life Begins With Love

(Columbia)

Comedy Romance

The story to be told in this production follows a familiar formula, the rich boy and the poor girl and an impish little god-mother who is wise beyond her years. The hero doesn't care very much for those in his own social strata, and he is not overfond of the girl who wants to marry him. So he disappears to turn up as an employee in an orphanage. There he meets a friendliness, understanding and love that he never knew existed. But his path to romance is not easy. Various complications, some of which are serious but most of them comic, ensue before the understanding little waif straightens everything out.

The principals in the story are Douglass Montgomery, Jean Parker and Edith Fellows. Feature support includes Leona Maricle, Lumsden Hare, Aubrey Matthews and James Burke. Minor roles have been assigned to Romaine Callender, Minerva Urecal, Scott Beckett, Joel Davis and Joyce Kay.

The story used is an original by Dorothy Bennett, who contributed to Paramount's "Wives Never Know" of a year ago. The screen play is credited to Thomas Mitchell and Brown Holmes, lately associated with the preparation of "Oh, Doctor," "Ever Since Eve" and "Top of the Town." Direction is by Raymond McCarey.

Denmark Tables Film Control Bill

The Danish government has postponed indefinitely hearings on a bill that would nationalize the film industry of the country.

A special commission appointed to investigate the matter recently published its recommendation that the industry be dissolved as private enterprise and made into a public monopoly. Newspapers opposed the recommendation and at a theatre owners' convention a resolution was passed spiritedly urging the government to consider the measure carefully in the face of many drawbacks believed inherent in the socialization plan.

The government, in a state of legislative indecision, has tabled the bill, pending amendments expected from the commission.

House and Senate Divided on Tax

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Refusing to accept House proposals for a two per cent "luxury" sales tax which would have applied to motion picture theatre admissions, the Senate on July 23 wrote into the new tax bill for the District of Columbia provisions for an income tax on individuals and corporations which the House had previously rejected.

As a result, each House is standing firm for a tax which the other has rejected, and the enactment of the measure this session, declared by the District Commissioners to be imperative, has been made uncertain.

The Senate rejected the sales tax on the ground that it would bear most heavily upon the low income groups least able to bear it and that experience in states having such levies has shown that there is a tendency to increase them after they are accepted by the public because it is one of the easiest taxes to collect.

The House had rejected income tax proposals simply because they would bear upon members of Congress.

With the Supreme Court fight compromised, the thoughts of members are turning toward adjournment and suggestions have been offered that Congress quit on August 7. If the increasing demand for an early adjournment is met, it is possible that the District tax bill will have to be laid over until next year.

Regardless of how long Congress remains in session, there is little chance now for any film legislation, and this will be the first session in several years in which the motion picture industry has not been under committee fire.

Cowdin Optimistic On Sales Abroad

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board, returned from Europe Monday and reported enthusiastically on the company's new foreign sales setup and the prospects for increased Continental business.

The new sales arrangement is under the direction of Gus Schaefer, who accompanied Mr. Cowdin abroad. He will remain in Europe several additional months to confer with the company's European officers and directors and with George Canty, former U. S. Department of Commerce attache, who is head of Universal's sales on the Continent. Mr. Cowdin conferred with Messrs. Schaefer and Canty on the new sales and distribution plan which will go into operation at once, giving Universal wider representation in Europe.

Mr. Cowdin denied reports of a new financial setup for Universal, saying that "he hadn't any thoughts about it." He also denied a published report that Universal had revised "The Road Back" to make it suitable for showing in Germany.

"Universal hasn't sold a picture in Germany in years," he said. "We have had no communications, official or otherwise, with Germany concerning the release of the picture in that country or elsewhere."

MOTION PICTURE STOCKS INCREASE $7,608,875 FROM JANUARY FIRST

Film Shares Participate in General Market Rally Starting Second Half of Year; General Business Level Is High

by THE ANALYST

Motion picture shares on the New York Stock Exchange went into the second half of 1937 in a general market rally after having moved irregularly with the rest of the list during the first six months of the year.

Picture stocks had a net gain of $7,608,875 in market value from January 1 to July 23, due largely to advances in stocks of four heavily capitalized companies. The majority of film shares showed losses for the period but, with elimination of some unfavorable market factors and with outlook for continued business gains unimpaired, prospects are that the picture stocks during the remainder of the year will add substantially to the valuation gain of the first half.

The general market, with motion picture stocks participating, started the year with a continuation of the 1936 upswing, aided by a good business outlook and a presidential budget message which assured the public that no new taxes were contemplated.

Interrupted by Court Issue

The rise was interrupted in February when Wall Street was unsettled by President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court. An irregular price trend followed. Trading volume tapered off, but was enlivened occasionally by rallies in individual stock groups.

Brief periods of market strength followed recognition by the giant U. S. Steel Corporation of an outside labor union and the more liberal trend of Supreme Court decisions, as reflected in the spring rulings on the Wagner Labor Relations Act and other New Deal measures. This strength was predicated on two beliefs. Big Steel's action in dealing with the CIO (Committee for Industrial Organization), coming on top of the General Motors strike settlement, would, it was expected, pave the way for general industrial peace. It was believed also that the administration would abandon or greatly modify its judiciary reorganization plan in view of the high court's gesture in the Wagner cases.

Lively Recovery

Neither belief was corroborated. Many other employers shunned the examples of the industrial giants and were adamant in their refusal to negotiate with the Lewis forces. The labor situation clouded heavily and market confidence was shaken.

Nervousness increased when the administration reiterated its determination to reorganize the Supreme Court. A dull downward movement was augmented by unsettlement abroad, notably in French finances.

Meanwhile, general business continued to maintain its high recovery level and the outlook for fall trade was excellent. This, together with the death, for this session of congress at least, of the court reorganization bill, arrested the decline and a lively recovery ensued after the turn of the second half.

The appreciation in value of motion picture stocks since the first of the year is borne out in detail in the table on page 52. Shown are the number of shares listed, the valuation at the close of 1936 and as of July 23rd, and the net changes both in points and in dollar terms.

Once on the upward path again, the market made the most striking progress upward in months. The fall business outlook buoyed the advance. Opinion was general that further irregularity would only presage resumption of the major advance.

The nation's leading economists now are of the opinion that business recovery has acquired new momentum. Indications are that employment has touched a new high since 1929. The national income for 1937, authorities say, will hit a new peak for the recovery movement.

New Recovery Peak

The Alexander Hamilton Institute reported the number of employed persons rose in May to a new recovery peak of 42,110,000, only 3,384,000 less than at the pre-depression high in September, 1929, of 45,494,000. The Institute pointed out, however, that in September, 1929, there were only 2,951,000 persons unemployed and that since that time there has been an increase of 2,934,000 in the supply of workers. Thus a total of 9,269,000 persons were unemployed in May, a new low for the recovery movement, a reduction of 2,064,000 from a year ago and a decline of 7,380,000 from the peak unemployment figure of 16,649,000 in March, 1933.

Railroad Earnings Stand Up

Railroad earnings for June continue to reflect the improved pace of general business.

Regarding the steel industry, the nation's barometer of general business, this week said:

"No apprehension exists among steelmakers in view of the slower rate of buying, compared with earlier months. The present rate is excellent for the time of year and a steady flow of business is better than the rush for tonnage that prevailed in the spring."

Retail trade is brisk and expected to be well sustained for several months. Farm income is rising.

Benefits to Film Business

The benefits to the film business of the excellent general business outlook are reflected in the latest analysis of the industry by the Fitch Service, which said:

"Supported by the growth in consumer purchasing power, the theatre business is extending its recovery. After several years of winning back lost ground, gains in box office receipts were reflected in substantial net income in 1936 and these trends are continuing in 1937, as reflected in further improvement in the first quarter earnings of theatre, picture-producing and allied companies.

"Theatre attendance is now estimated to have climbed up close to its all-time peak of 1930. In the first three months of this year, as indicated by paid admission taxes, there were moderate further gains as compared with a year earlier, the increase in March being particularly good. Theatre attendance, with a slight lag, follows rather closely the same paths as general business recovery. Thus, even though business should prove to be interrupted in its upward course, the trend in number of admissions may be expected to continue favorable for a time."

Individual Conditions

Excellent individual corporation conditions prevail in the industry. Loew's, which reported for the 40 weeks ended June 30 a net income of $11,714,722, against $7,390,495 in the 40 weeks ended June 4, 1936, jumped 15¾ points during the period surveyed, for a gain of $22,184,250 in market value.

Eastman Kodak raised the total market valuation by $11,315,000. Rochester reports to Dow, Jones and Co. said the company would be able to show $9,000,000, or about $4 a common share, for the first 24 weeks of the fiscal year, to about June 13, which would be the largest net income for a comparable period since the company began issuing semi-annual statements and would compare with $3.51 for the corresponding period of 1936.

Warner eased, dropping $11,778,125 in market value, largely on profit-taking attracted by earlier gains. The company doubled its net for the 39 weeks ended May 29, reporting $5,561,032, against $2,554,772 in the corresponding period of 1936.

Paramount made considerable progress during the first half in reducing interest charges and simplifying its corporate structure. The company reported net of $3,889,020 for the year ended Jan. 2, 1937, against $3,153,167 in the year ended Dec. 28, 1935. General market conditions caused a decline of $3,295,875 in the stock's market value during the period under survey.

Both common and preferred stocks of Twentieth Century-Fox had an excellent market record, gaining over $2,000,000 each in value.

United Artists Delays Rental of Accessories

Adoption of an accessories' rental system, originally planned by United Artists for August 1st, has been postponed because of the many details involved, according to Harry D. Buckey, vice-president in charge of exchange operations.

He is now working out a plan which will be similar to that of Paramount and Warner Brothers.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Samuel Goldwyn, quite a featist himself, is always signing up the strangest people to work for him. Only the other day he engaged William Dollar, "the only dancer in the world who can do the 'Nijinsky Leap,' for 'The Goldwyn Follies.' In explanation of the "Nijinsky Leap," Mr. Goldwyn had the United Artists New York publicity department send this notice to the press: "The 'Nijinsky Leap' is an amazing terpsichorean plunge which takes William Dollar high in the air, pauses, then takes him still further upward."

Sounds very much like the New Deal dollar.

They say that Mr. Goldwyn in Hollywood still is doing hand-springs apologizing for that widely circulated and highly exaggerated story about the wife of the President of these United States having been given a job by him to write advertising copy for Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas," whereas Mrs. Roosevelt only wrote a few words on motherhood, not mentioning any commercial aspects, for inclusion in a single "Stella Dallas" ad.

Mr. Goldwyn had better have his federal income tax accounts in good order.

MGM Breathes A Little Easier

MGM has released Jean Harlow's last picture, "Saratoga," found the public in approval to the extent of breaking some all-time box office records, and therefore Mr. Schenck's company today is a little less nervous in fear that the public might criticize the release.

But behind completion of the production lies the story of a most unusual situation.

When Miss Harlow died, the company was timid about completing the film. The decision to proceed was not made until several weeks following her death, when it appeared that the public might be receptive. The problem then was to finish the few unfinished scenes in the script in which Miss Harlow had not appeared.

Director Jack Conway's solution was to rewrite these scenes to eliminate as far as possible the character Miss Harlow played, re-editing scenes nearby that were already made, to conform with the new treatment. Fortunately for Metro, the ending of the film, with Miss Harlow and Clark Gable, already had been made.

Miss Harlow had appeared in all sequences up to the next to the last reel of the production. The final two reels were rewritten so that most of the action took place in the exterior reproduction of the race track. Much of the action is the famous New York Saratoga track. A double was used in the rewritten scenes of this reel, but her appearances were minimized. Only long shots were made, the double appearing in most cases with her back to the camera. In no instance is her face seen. Supplementary "detail" shots were made, entering doors and running across lawns, to tie in with scenes already made by Miss Harlow.

The net result at the box office was best exemplified at Broadway's Capitol theatre, where the Loew-Metro management stationed special police guards at all points of the lobby to prevent souvenir hunters from carrying away Harlow photographs or other material.

Burlesque Houses Consider Turning To Pictures Only

Burlesque, lacking its major attraction—the strip-tease—has proven such a dismal failure in New York City that serious consideration is being given to complete abandonment of the modified productions labeled "revues."

Three houses, whose openings were hailed as a "wholesome forward step," already have given up the struggle and others are reported as preparing to follow their lead. In two cases exhibitors are looking forward to the modified burlesque houses being converted into motion picture theatres.

Two Adopt Film Policy

Harry Brandt, who is associated with Joe and Dave Weinstock, announced this week that the Republic, on 42nd Street, and the Gaiety, on 46th Street, will turn to films only. The two theatres were among the seven opened under new licenses, which were issued after the operators agreed to a code of operation. The code is administered by a board, none of whose members are connected directly or indirectly with the theatre.

The Oriental, operated by Herbert and Morton Minsky, whose surname is banned from theatrical ventures by the code, opened last week, offering a performance described by the New York Post as "a gala premiere which would have knocked Minsky's old Oriental patrons cockeyed before the first curtain."

The comedy, the newspaper reported, was "clean" and "moth-eaten."

After less than a week's operation, the Oriental was closed. It may reopen in the fall. Of the four other theatres, the Apollo and Eltinge were reported on the verge of closing. The operators admitted they are running on a week-to-week basis with performers and musicians. Notices of conditional closing have been filed in both houses. This leaves two other theatres, the Werber and Fulton.

Burlesque's indicated demise will result in virtual stillbirth for the recently formed Variety Revue Theatres Association, operators' organization, and the position of Samuel S. Scribner, $10,000 a year burlesque censor. Closing of the Apollo and the Eltinge would definitely abolish the association and Mr. Scribner's position, John F. Masterson, chairman of the code administering board, said.

Clash Over Court Ruling

Coincident with the closing of the Republic, was a decision handed down in the case of Edward Goodman, who, as manager of the house, was charged with the staging of indecent performances in connection with a burlesque show last April.

Anna M. Kross, magistrate in Yorkville court, discharged Mr. Goodman with the ruling that the judiciary cannot undertake to "set up standards of taste." She further said the strip-tease acts were full of "stupidity and vulgarity," but added that she "must agree with former decision that this is not the problem of a judicial tribunal."

George A. Timone, advocate of the New York chapter of the Knights of Columbus, in an open letter to the magistrate, attacked the decision, saying that former court rulings were to the contrary.

Should the Eltinge and Apollo join the Republic in becoming film houses, there will be a total of ten grind picture houses on 42nd Street between 7th and 8th Avenues.

Warner Brothers Delay Previews

Warner Brothers, to make certain that "Varsity Show" will be included, has postponed its national previews of several new features until August 23rd and 24th. Originally the showings were to be held in key cities on August 9th and 10th. "Varsity Show" is set for release September 2nd.

Companies Meet Monopoly Charge

Six large companies responded to the request of Special Assistant Attorney General Hubert Harrington to send representatives to a meeting at Department of Justice headquarters in Newark last week for a discussion of monopoly charges in violation of anti-trust laws.

The move for the conferences arose from a complaint by the Mosque theatre, Newark, that it was unable to obtain product. The Frankoes-Robinson interests, which operate the house, charged that Warner Brothers in Newark had tied up more second and third-run houses than they require. The assertion that the Mosque was unable to obtain sufficient product was generally denied by counsel for all major companies.

No indication was given of the procedure that would follow the three and a half hour conference except the remark of Attorney General Harrington that a report would be sent to Washington.

Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox declined to attend the conference because, they said, of the secrecy, the purpose being kept dark until the gathering was assembled.

Attending the session were Louis Phillips, Paramount; Irving Morris, Columbia; O. O. Decker, MGM; I. Levinson, Warners; William Mallard, RKO, and Jack London of Fitelson and Mayer, attorneys for GB. Arthur Greenblatt, of GB, was the only exchange man present.

Answers to the anti-trust complaint brought by the Academy theatre, Newburgh, in which damages of $225,000 are being asked for alleged inability to obtain product because of conspiracy, are being prepared by attorneys for 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Paramount and United Artists.

Review of School Films Nears End

The educational committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America expects to complete by August 15th its review of 1,500 educational short subjects to be used in connection with its recently announced school program.

More than 400 subjects have been approved, wholly or in part, up to this time.

Following the review, an index will be compiled of the pictures suitable for presentation in an estimated 200,000 and more schools. The reels originate from the vaults of all the large distributors except Columbia.

Plans for the distribution and future production of educational subjects are to be taken up soon by the educational committee.

Stage in No Need Of Picture Money Dramatists Say

Discontinuance of Hollywood backing of Broadway plays has not been missed and no change will be made in the existing playwright-manager agreement for the new season, spokesmen for the Dramatists Guild said this week.

The problem facing the legitimate theatre is not one of financial aid, but a question of play-shortage, they said. Although the number of productions this past season fell behind the total for the previous year, the reason given is that established playwrights, such as Sidney Howard, Marc Connelly and Clifford Odets, are not producing enough.

On the other hand, according to the Guild, younger playwrights are appearing and money is readily obtainable for any promising scripts. Among newer dramatists who have been successfully represented on Broadway this past season are Victor Wolfson, Mark Reed and the John Murray-Allen Boretz team, but in general the efforts of the neophytes have not been considered sufficiently numerous to compensate for withdrawal of established playwrights.

No change is anticipated in the new agreement which, by altering the split between manager and dramatist to 60-40 in the authors' favor, discouraged film financing of plays some 18 months ago.

"The theatre would welcome the return of film company financing if those companies came back as theatrical managers, but not if they returned for the sole purpose of getting cheap picture rights to plays," the Guild said.

Empire to Market 36 British Films

Empire Films will distribute the product of all British producers except London Films during the new season.

British pictures to be handled number 36, in addition to 54 features and two serials from Republic, 88 Educational comedies, and 12 Canadian Cameos.

The announcement was made at the company's annual sales meeting Toronto last week which was attended by an American delegation including J. J. Milstein of Republic, Arthur A. Lee, president of GB, Herbert J. Yates of Consolidated Films, Jack Skirball of Educational Films and Harvey Day of TerryToons.

In the absence of Oscar Hanlon, president of Empire, who is recovering from an operation, the meeting was presided over by Paul Nathanson, vice-president, and A. W. Perry, sales manager. Representatives from six Canadian branches attended.

In addition to Gaumont, those distributors that will use Empire as its Canadian trade outlet include: Herbert Wilcox Productions, Associated British Pictures, Capitol Films, Jack Buchanan Productions, Associated British Film Distributors, General Film Distributors, and British Lion Products.

ENGLAND PROMISES TELEVISION FOR 500 THEATRES IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Apparatus Called Capable of Giving Flickerless Picture 5 by 4 Feet at Scophony Laboratories Test

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Transmission of television programs to 500 motion picture theatres from a single negative film is predicted for the near future by S. Sagall, managing director of Scophony, Ltd., who asserted his company has solved all the fundamental problems of transmitting large pictures.

When the theatre set is made available generally, it will entail a complete revolution in cinema technique, and extension of the broadcasts might make the present positive cinema film entirely unnecessary to the industry, Mr. Sagall said.

A demonstration of large screen television recently was given by Scophony at its laboratories at Campden Hill, London. Transmitting film scenes from another part of the same building, the apparatus was shown to be capable of giving a flickerless and clear picture 5 by 4 feet in dimensions, by means of a public hall receiver. On a home receiver, an excellent picture 2 feet by 1 foot 10 inches was obtained. The quality in this instance was equivalent to the best home cinema results; there was, in fact, nothing to suggest that it was not a film projection.

The larger picture also was singularly flickerless. In definition it was slightly inferior but no details were lost in landscape shots nor in crowd scenes. In general standard, it undoubtedly equalled that reached in many small cinemas.

Mr. Sagall explained the set used was classed as "medium." One giving a picture double the size will be ready within a few weeks, he said.

A T & T AGREES TO TELEVISION PACT

Farnsworth Television, Inc., and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company have signed an agreement whereby each grants extensive rights under its patents to the other.

Donald K. Lippincott, of San Francisco, a representative of the Farnsworth company, said the agreement "clears the path for cooperation between the Bell System, Farnsworth and certain Farnsworth licensees, helps to clarify a difficult patent situation and brings one step nearer the broad use of television and other advances in communication."

The pact was signed in New York by C. P. Cooper, vice-president of AT&T, and Philo T. Farnsworth.

Pictures 16 by 12 feet will be possible before the end of the year, he added.

Predicting establishment by the cinema industry of a television service of its own, superseding that provided by the British Broadcasting Corporation from Alexandra Palace, Mr. Sagall said there was no reason why a theatrical performance, or a Covent Garden ballet, should not be transmitted in the near future.

The two obstacles to Television progress he declared to be the small picture and the limited character of the official programs, which are transmitted from 3 to 4 and 9 to 10 p.m. each day, and, in his opinion, are dull. An entertainment program to theatres, through an industry service, combined with the large screen, would lead to enormous progress, in which, he said, England would outstride the world. He added that England already is well ahead in this field.

Scophony is a high definition optical-mechanical system, working at present on a 240 line standard, but a 400—500 system is being developed. It is claimed this will mark a big advance over the methods used at Alexandra Palace which are admittedly not up to the specifications of the Television Advisory Committee.

Split Focus, Supersonic Control

The basic Scophony inventions, making possible the large home picture (of five to six times the area of that of the cathode ray receivers) and the public hall picture, capable of being witnessed by several hundreds of people, are the split focus and the supersonic light control.

The first of these is an optical arrangement of cylindrical lenses with their axes crossed, so that a beam of light is focussed in two separate planes. This enables a great reduction in size in the scanners which are essential in mechanical-optical systems. In the case of the home receiver the reduction is one-twelfth.

The supersonic light control is a method of remedying the loss of light through scanning. A picture is scanned by a single spot and, in a 240 line picture with 320 elements along its line, goes into the picture some eighty thousand times, entailing that degree less light than in the case of a non-scanned cinema picture. The supersonic device consists of a container filled with a liquid.

How It Operates

At one end is a quartz crystal which is actuated by a modulated carrier frequency fundamentally the same as that of the quartz. Supersonic waves are set up corresponding to the velocity of sound waves in the liquid. There are lenses on either side of the container and when light is passed through the container and focussed on to a scanner, and thence to the screen, an image of the light control itself is formed on the screen, the width being that of one line of the picture and the length being determined by the length of the light control liquid column.

If the modulation is now applied to the quartz crystal, nothing will appear on the screen until the scanner, between the screen and the light control, is rotated at a speed corresponding to the speed of the liquid. Then the modulation becomes visible on the screen. A large number of scanning spots are used simultaneously. In a 450 line picture the whole line of the picture is used at once, giving a 450 times increase of light. It is claimed that on five to ten watts the supersonic control gives result which would demand several kilowatts as the driving power of a kerr cell.

New Mercury Lamp

A special high pressure mercury lamp has also been evolved by Scophony, for home use, which, operated from a direct current source at a voltage of 70 with a consumption of 3½ amperes, total consumption approximately 250 watts, is claimed to give from three to four times the light obtained from a carbon arc consuming 500 watts.

The Scophony transmitting equipment includes a main film projector embodying the split focus principle. There is one scanner, of similar size to that of the receiver scanners. The light source is a low intensity arc lamp. The film is continuously moving, giving 25 pictures a second in the case of 240 line pictures. The spot of light, passing through the film, falls on to a photo electric cell of the electron multiplier type. With a normal film, one tenth of a volt is obtained across the photo cell resistor after the electron multiplier. The vision signals are amplified by a three stage amplifier which feeds directly into a line amplifier with an output impedance of 100 ohms. This is fed to various parts of the building, including the radio transmitter, through co-axial cable.

Technical Defects Being Remedied

Scophony's home projector, embodying the 2 feet picture, will be marketed as soon as the BBC has remedied technical defects in its Alexandra Palace transmissions. At present there is admitted to be considerable irregular timing and phase shifting, which makes the signals unsuitable for receivers using scanning systems possessing inertia.

Members of the board of Scophony include Sir Maurice Bonham Carter, K.C.B., K.C.V.O. chairman; Mr. Sagall; W. S. Verrells, Oscar Deutsch, of Odeon Theatres, and Arthur Levey. It is claimed the company controls a large number of fundamental television patents.

TELEVISION STATION REOPENS AUGUST 16

The British Broadcasting Company closed its television transmitting station, at Alexandra Palace, Monday and will reopen it August 16th, with a normal program. But, starting August 25th and for the duration of Radiolympia, exhibition of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, there will be special one hour transmissions three times a day.

One of the programs, from 11:30 A.M. to 12:30, will be from film, while the others, from 4:00 to 5:00 and from 9:00 to 10:00 P.M., will be direct.

Until the station is reopened there are to be two daily transmissions for the trade, from 11 A.M. until noon and from 2 to 3 P.M.

Zanuck's Vacation Delayed

Having completed production plans for an unexpectedly heavy filming schedule, Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox production chief, was compelled this week to delay his vacation from August to January. Within two weeks, the studio will have completed some 14 features for 1937-38, and by late January, Mr. Zanuck expects to have finished all the major productions whose filming he is personally supervising.

PARAMOUNT SITUATION UP AT CHICAGO SESSION

P. J. Wood Says Exhibitor Units Represented Favor "Buyers' Strike" on Product

Headed by Peter Jules Wood, of Ohio, a number of theatre owners and leaders of Allied States Association met at Chicago's Congress hotel last Friday to discuss plans for the "National Paramount Product Strike" which they are sponsoring in a playdate "boycott" during August because of differences over product deals with the distributor. The exhibitors complain that Paramount is improperly holding over six 1936-37 features for 1937-38.

Approximately 35 exhibitor leaders were invited to the Chicago meeting, but only half that many were able to attend.

Allied's Aaron Saperstein, president of the Illinois unit, explained that his organization was not planning to take any action on the "strike" because many Illinois exhibitors had made two-year product deals with Paramount last year and this made it impractical for them to join in any protest.

In a statement issued by Mr. Wood following the meeting, he said:

"An enthusiastic meeting of the national Paramount 'strike' committee was held at the Congress Hotel on Friday, July 23rd. Representatives of the following exhibitor organizations were in attendance: Indiana, Delaware, south New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, western Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, upper Michigan, northern New Jersey, Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Minnesota, Ohio and Chicago.

"Reports from the various units indicated that exhibitors are overwhelmingly in favor of the 'strike' and are carrying out the mandates of the Washington conference, which consisted of the following:

"1. Cancellation by exhibitors of dates on all Paramount product (features, shorts and news reels) beginning August 1st and continuing during the duration of the strike.

"2. To refrain from negotiating with Paramount for 1937-1938 product.

"3. To test by suit the right of Paramount to withhold certain pictures announced as part of the 1936-37 program.

"The committee today advocated the picketing of all Paramount exchanges beginning August 1st and any theatres violating the 'strike.'

"Reports submitted at the meeting showed clearly an avalanche of cancellations by exhibitors on Paramount product in the thousands and beginning August 1st far beyond the expectations of the committee.

"The following wire was received at the meeting from the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California:

"'At mass meeting on July 20th was unanimously voted to cooperate in strike against Paramount. Exhibitors represented at meeting have already pulled dates on Paramount from August 1st to September 15th which includes "Paramount Week" and committee has been formed to contact theatre owners not present at meeting as well as provide penalty for slackers.'

"Between now and August 1st every state unit will have had another meeting for the purpose of setting up and perfecting machinery for the picketing of exchanges and theatres.

"The 'strike' against Paramount includes the discontinuance of payments under the 'weekly payment plan' on shorts.

"Among those present at today's meeting were: H. A. Calloway, Indianapolis; George Aarons and Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; M. A. Rosenberg, Pittsburgh; Lee Newberry, Asbury Park, N. J.; Arthur Howard, Boston; W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis; Louis Abrahamson and L. Sussman, Chicago; Ray Tesch, Max Krofta, Ross Baldwin and D. L. Hemmings, Milwaukee."

Second "National" Conference

The meeting was Allied's second "national" conference on the subject, the first having been held four weeks ago in Washington, as organized by Mr. Wood, who this week added that Boston, Columbus, O., New Jersey, Pittsburgh and Minneapolis exhibitors will hold group meetings this week for the carrying out of "strike" plans.

In Boston, the New England Independent Exhibitors, Inc., formally entered the campaign on Tuesday with a mass meeting at the Hotel Touraine in Boston, called at the wired instructions of Arthur K. Howard, business manager, who was attending the national Allied conference in Chicago.

Wisconsin Board To Meet

The board of directors of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan will meet on August 6th to decide whether its campaign will embrace the use of pickets, sound trucks and radio and newspaper advertising. Ray Tesch, business manager, reported the receipt of cancellations from members.

Last week, 112 exhibitors from southern California and Arizona, meeting in Los Angeles without any apparent organization sponsorship, decided to join the "boycott." The owners then marched en masse to the Paramount Los Angeles exchange to protest.

Allied in the Northwest (Minnesota and the Dakotas), presided over by W. A. (Al) Steffes, held another meeting on Monday, at the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis. Mr. Steffes, reputed to have lined up some 200 exhibitors in the drive, said: "It is with the utmost reluctance that I must condone and carry through to a satisfactory termination the unanimous mandate of Northwest Allied that all independent owners 'pull' together in the drive."

Allied States of New Jersey entered the campaign at a meeting held last Thursday at the Douglas Hotel, Newark, where the members voted that "Paramount's action in withholding six pictures from the 1936-37 program is a breach of contract with exhibitors."

New Jersey Allied issued a statement that it has "endorsed substantially the action of the Paramount protest meeting in Washington recommending that exhibitors demand delivery of the six pictures in question and that legal action be taken if necessary to enforce such contracts." The organization has been talking about having members picket Paramount's exchange in New York.

Philadelphia remains the leading protagonist, sending out daily "strike bulletins" and asserting that "there will be no settlement without full protection for each exhibitor."

George P. Aarons, secretary of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, warned that "any exhibitor violating the 'strike' will be picketed."

Mr. Aarons' organization declared "Judge Joseph Varbalow, of the District Court at Camden, N. J., has been consulted by the UMPTO on all of its moves up to date in the Paramount 'strike,' and advises that everything is perfectly legal." It is possible that Judge Varbalow will become a member of the UMPTO's legal committee, it was said.

HAYS GIVES WABASH RECORDING MACHINE

A recording machine for voice testing has been given to Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and an alumnus.

The device is to be used to reveal to students defects in their speech.

Will Hays, Jr., made the first recording.

GOLDWYN APOLOGIZES TO MRS. ROOSEVELT

Samuel Goldwyn has made public apology to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for publicity releases giving the impression that the First Lady had been hired as an advertising copywriter for "Stella Dallas." The apology was carried by both AP and UP News services, appearing two weeks before the scheduled opening of the picture at the Music Hall, August 5th.

Denying earlier reports that Mrs. Roosevelt would write the copy for "Stella Dallas," Mr. Goldwyn said:

"Mrs. Roosevelt, through her literary agent, George Bye, was told the story of 'Stella Dallas' and, as a result, wrote a beautiful editorial entitled, 'Stella Dallas Inspires a Discussion of a Mothers' Vital Problem.' Mrs. Roosevelt graciously permitted me to buy this editorial and use it in a series of advertisements in national magazines and newspapers."

New Paramount Deal with Blank On Two Circuits

A new operating contract between Paramount and A. H. Blank for the Tri-States circuit was approved by Paramount's board of directors at its meeting Tuesday.

The agreement establishes a permanent partnership in 80 theatres operated in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois by Mr. Blank. In consideration for eliminating its option to repurchase Mr. Blank's 50 per cent interest in the circuit, Paramount obtains a half interest in Mr. Blank's personally owned Central States circuit of 37 houses.

Although Mr. Blank will continue to operate both circuits they will remain as separate organizations.

Negotiations for the transaction had been under way for several months and as a result of the original operating agreement, which carried the buy-back provision, was extended several times.

Completion of the agreement brought an end to the last of the partnership pacts under which Paramount retained an option to repurchase the operating partner's interest. The transactions were made by S. A. Lynch during the complete decentralization of Paramount's theatre operations during reorganization of the company three years ago.

Mr. Blank, who visited New York to complete the terms of the agreement, has returned to Des Moines. Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount's vice-president in charge of theatre operations, plans to leave New York for Chicago and Minneapolis next week.

R. B. Wilby of the Wilby Kincey circuit returned from a month's vacation in Europe and returned immediately to Charlotte because of illness of a member of his family. He intends to return to New York within the next few weeks to discuss an extension of the operating agreement for the Wilby-Kincey circuit with Mr. Freeman.

Mr. Freeman admitted negotiations are under way for Paramount to obtain an interest in the Criterion Theatre, New York, from Harry L. Charnas and B. S. Moss. Should the transaction be completed the Criterion will show pictures after their run at the Paramount.

Blank's Theatres To Total Over 100

More than 100 theatres will be in the Tri-States and Central States circuits, Paramount partner, by the end of the year, according to a statement by A. H. Blank, head of the two chains.

Several deals for theatres, one involving six houses, are expected to be closed in the near future. The two circuits currently operate 80 theatres.

Ralph Branton and Joe Deitch, Tri-State and Central States executives, have recently been discussing product deals. The circuits have long franchises with Paramount, MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 New Pictures

Of 15 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, nine were approved for general patronage, four were found unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Big Shot," "Dangerous Adventure," "Fuerst Sepp'l," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Jubilee," "The Life of Emile Zola," "On Again Off Again," "The Shadow Strikes," "Traum von Rhein." Class A2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Exclusive," "The Lady Escapes," "Saratoga," "Topper." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Eine von Uns," "Juggernaut."

Ten-Point Drive May Be Renewed

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, is understood to be considering the calling of a special meeting of the organization's board of directors to obtain their attitude on the revival of the 10-point campaign for trade practice concessions.

The MPTOA is reported to be particularly interested in obtaining distributor support for its proposed local conciliation boards, through whose agency it hopes to achieve the major share of its entire 10-point program.

Other features of the new campaign would include a 15 to 20 per cent cancellation demand and elimination of the score charge by those distributors who still retain it, it was said.

Federal Theatre Project Merged

Consolidation of the Federal Theatre Project with four other WPA projects, arts, music, writers and historical survey, has been announced by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the WPA.

No official reason was given for the reorganization but it is known that cuts in relief appropriations and attacks against the value of many of the arts projects played a part in the decision.

Paul Edwards, recently assistant director of finance at the Washington office of the WPA, was named administrative official of the new consolidation, to be known as Federal Project 1. The reorganization is to take effect immediately but no shake-up with respect to technical directors is intended for the present.

Accusations of incompetence and laziness against the WPA writers' Project, made by Ralph M. Easley of New York, were denied by Henry G. Alsberg, chief of the project. Mr. Alsberg stated that by September 200 works totaling 20,000,000 words will have been placed in the hands of the public. He pointed to the attention given the WPA material in the columns of the New York Times and the recommendations by the Book-of-the-Month Club of WPA literature.

Connecticut Court Bans Bank Night, Rules It Lottery

The death knell for Bank Night operations in Connecticut was sounded in Hartford this week after David Magliori, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Windsor Locks, was fined $13 in superior court on charges of conducting a lottery.

Mr. Magliori operated the game with proxy cards and for this reason Bank Nite Affiliated Enterprises declined to enter the suit. The exhibitor was convicted on three charges of violating the state law prohibiting the sale of property by lottery.

In deciding the case, Carl Foster, judge, ruled:

"It cannot be reasonably disputed that the accused managed and was concerned in an association of persons for the exchange of and disposal of property (to wit: money) in which such exchange and disposal was dependent upon and connected with chance by numbers and whereby such chance was in whole or in part an inducement to such exchange and disposal of such property."

Originally Mr. Magliori was convicted in town court and was enjoined from operating bank night. At that time, Howard Pease, owner of the property, also was found guilty, but when the case was appealed Mr. Pease was discharged.

The judge summarized the case by stating:

"The sole question is whether the act of the accused constituted a violation of the statutes. The accused claims that the transaction was an advertising scheme. If so, it is not, therefore permissible under the law."

Chance games continued to be the subject of controversies in other states too.

In Omaha the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is still searching for a substitute for bank night, which has been barred by a temporary supreme court injunction.

The association, in an attempt to have the injunction dissolved, filed a brief with the supreme court. William Wright, attorney for the OMPEA, declared the situation is in dispute and the state is not entitled to the injunction until it can prove bank night is a lottery.

A revival of bank night operations is set for Miami, Florida, while in Detroit, the city council has been asked by John Kronk, councilman, to adopt ordinances which would bar all forms of chance games in theatres.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S QUOTA PLAN GIVEN HOUSE OF COMMONS

And Groups Are Busy Pouring Their Appeals Into Ears of Members of Parliament to Gain Support

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

A White Paper (official publication for Parliamentary information), setting forth the Government's plans for new film legislation, in which will be incorporated new quota specifications, was to be issued this week, according to a promise made by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons Tuesday.

Mr. Stanley had been pressed by various members of Parliament to make available a full draft of the proposed Films Act either before the house rises, or during the recess. Mr. Morrison, Labor M.P. for Tottenham, said that the measure was involved and non-party and that there was a desire on all sides for full details for study.

David Kirkwood, Independent Labor member for a Glasgow division, asked assurances that the special conditions of Scotland would be dealt with in the bill. Mr. Boothby spoke of the necessity of not "encouraging British producers to waste money to qualify for protection."

The Minister's reply was that all points brought before him were being considered. The issuance of a White Paper means that the broad outline of the Government's Bill will be open for discussion and agitation for three months or more before they are introduced in the House of Commons.

The possibility that Mr. Stanley would seek further consultations with representatives of the industry, before making his final decision, is discounted by this news. It also appears that a further meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association (exhibitors) and the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors), in the hope of ironing out their differences, is ruled out.

A very specific statement to this effect appears in a report to the CEA General Council from its Cinematograph Films Legislation Committee:

"So far as your committee is aware," the Council is told, "the Board of Trade is not inviting further views on major questions, nor are further negotiations proceeding within the trade.

"Your committee cannot anticipate the statement of the President of the Board of Trade, but it anticipates at the moment that the issue is now set for a parliamentary campaign in favor of the subject of a quality test."

This comment suggests that, in the view of the CEA, the Board of Trade proposes legislation substantially on the lines of its draft proposals, including the minimum cost clause, and that therefore the CEA, strongly opposed to such measures, must prepare itself for a fight on the floor of the House. This impression is deepened by the recommendation that those branches which have not "completed their work among Members of Parliament" shall do so before Mr. Stanley's preliminary statement is made.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS PLAN PRESS BUREAU

The General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has approved in principle the establishment of a Propaganda and Press Bureau and has authorized the legal, parliamentary and finance committee to prepare a plan for the next meeting of the Council on September 8th.

It is not strictly true that intra-trade discussions have been terminated. The Independent Producers and Distributors committee is meeting the committee of the KRS, presumably to explore the possibility of a united front on the basis of a "cash" quota, with special protection for small independent concerns. At the same time, there are very plain signs that all the trade bodies realize that the question has now got beyond the stage of negotiation and that their immediate task is to find allies in Parliament.

Several very definite steps of this sort already have been taken. The Independents arranged to put their case before a group of M. P.'s this week. Probably they will see the Members gathered by the British Films Advancement Council. The pending formation of this body, with a pro-British films policy in general and, in particular, the intention of advancing any practical measure of reciprocity, already has been recorded. It held a meeting at the House of Commons on July 12th, formally constituting itself as an organization devoted to the advancement of the "national, economic and educational importance of British films" and specifically "to secure public support for such legislative and other measures as may be necessary to assure to British films fair treatment in all countries which market film products in the United Kingdom.."

It is believed that the adhesion of nearly 100 members of the House of Commons and House of Lords has been obtained. The executive committee includes Lord Strabolgi, Lord Mottistone, Sir William Wayland, M. P., Professor J. Graham Kerr, M. P., Mr. G. Maitland, M. P., and Sir Edward Campbell, M. P.

One of the objects of this group is stated to be the reconciliation of all the interests associated with British production, but it is commonly regarded as espousing the case of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries and therefore to be in general support of the proposals which the Government is expected to make.

Over against this parliamentary group there will be another, of at present unascertained strength, supporting the recommendations of the CEA and, to a certain extent, urging the Government to follow the recommendations of its own Moyne Committee, which included the quality clause so eagerly desired by exhibitors.

These two "ginger" groups will have, it seems, one thing in common. They will be pro-British to a degree which, in practice, may make some of their activities wear an aspect of anti-Americanism. The advocates of the production interest are expected to oppose any suggestions for incorporating in the bill provisions for any great extension of the principle of footage relief to American distributors. The exhibitor spokesmen, in advocating a quality clauses will also, as a main argument, urge that the essential thing for the protection of the British independent is the maintenance of a big supply of British footage and of American "B" footage, both of which are seen as threatened by the cost clause even in its present form.

Under what has become known as "the Graham scheme," of American distributors being permitted to spend a fixed sum per year on any number of British pictures—substantially the policy officially put before the Moyne Committee by the KRS—there might be a considerable reduction in footage, compensated for by a vast improvement in quality, in the British films made by American companies. This will be challenged, from the point of view of the CEA, as establishing a monopoly position for the circuits and the production interests associated with them. It will be attacked also by the production interest on the ground that it will enable American interests to set up a commanding position in the British studio field; that films for the world market will be made by Americans and that all-British producers will be swamped.

Politics and "Cash Quota"

The logical case for a "cash quota" is strong and, unofficially, is believed to be admitted in Government circles. Unfortunately, political considerations weigh rather more heavily than business ones in this matter of film legislation, and it is permissible to be skeptical about the House of Commons' complete acceptance of the American case, strong as it seems as presented by J. C. Graham in an interview in the Cinema this week, in which he pleads for liberty for importers to be allowed to follow a policy of "intelligent spending."

"We have never denied," he said, "the right of the Government to require us to spend the money we have spent for the last 10 years on British pictures. All we have said is: let us take that money and spend it in a way that would be of most benefit to the country, to our company, and to the theatres that we supply with pictures."

Mr. Graham elaborated his suggestion by saying that an American company, deciding to make six British pictures a year (instead of the 12 to 17 demanded by the present quota) would schedule two of them for American release, with the expectation that they would "bring back enough to cover any losses which might be made on pictures produced for this country alone."

Principle Attacked

Declaring that the American distributors had agreed to a minimum cost clause only because others had desired it and that such a provision was unnecessary if importers were allowed to spend "according to business principles," Mr. Graham also attacked the principle underlying the present proposals:

"It doesn't matter," he said, "how many Governments work on this problem; they must not imagine that it would be safe to attempt to break down the quality of Hollywood pictures by forcing too much money to be spent away from that production center. Hollywood has set a standard of quality and has got to live up to that standard, and the producers there must have money if quality pictures are to continue. This is a world market proposition. If money is wasted the final effect would be to drive people away from cinemas in all parts of the world.

"How can Hollywood afford to spend elsewhere? I don't believe the producers there have ever paid a dividend of over 10 per cent and often enough they have been forced to pass a dividend altogether. The money earned by pictures goes right back into the studios to make more pictures."

Summing up his proposal, and disputing the fear of a British film shortage, Mr. Graham says:

"Instead of making 150 features, many of which are junk, about 80 pictures would be produced of very satisfactory quality. That number would quite take care of the market, and the improved quality would raise the prestige of British production and earn a far larger percentage of production costs than British production is doing at present."

"The one effect of a footage quota," is another remark of Mr. Graham, "is to reduce British pictures to the same category as the counter sandwich that one has to buy if one wants a drink after hours. Everybody knows that these sandwiches lie untouched for weeks."

Reciprocity in the Plan

It will be seen that Mr. Graham's plan, implying an American release for a substantial number of British films, appears to set up the condition of reciprocity strongly urged by many spokesmen of British production. An important feature of the reciprocity plan discussed by the Film Group with the Board of Trade was, however, that the British films bought for America, and giving the purchaser relief from quota obligations in England, had to be the product of independent British companies. That suggestion was, in effect, the subsidizing of British production. There was no guarantee that the Americans would find the British films usable in America; the one requirement was that they should pay for them. One possibility seen as a result of this plan was the creation of "Quota script" equivalent to the Kontingent purchaseable in certain Continental markets, and American companies were in opposition to it.

Mr. Graham's statement is of great importance at this moment. It epitomizes the American companies' case for Parliament and undoubtedly represents a unanimous American view. Very similar opinions have been stated by Mr. Phil Reisman, and others. It will be up against the British production interest's desire to maintain direct control of the studios and to see the floor space occupied by more rather than fewer films. It will be challenged by the exhibiting interest, fearful of a shortage of cheap films and nervous about a further extension of trustification in the industry. It will be hotly attacked on political grounds by parliamentarians who want British films as missionaries of British trade, and want those films British in the most literal sense. It may be that the extent to which it received acceptance in the House of Commons will be determined by the extent to which the Board of Trade, perhaps against its will, already has been convinced of its logic and practicability.

It has been revealed by W. R. Fuller, general secretary of the CEA, that that body is prepared to consider two forms of viewing test for British quota films.

EXHIBITORS WARNED ON STAGE VULGARITY

The Lord Chamberlain, who controls the licensing of theatres at which plays are presented, has issued a warning to British cinema managers about the character of any variety and stage shows presented at motion picture theatres. At a conference with entertainment interests of all sorts, he said there had been complaints of "vulgarity in gesture and dress" in acts presented at cinemas and said action might be taken when such halls applied for a license renewal to the London County Council, unless cine-variety were "cleaned up".

Major A. J. Gale and A. W. Jarratt, of Gaumont British, represented the CEA at the conference. When they reported to the General Council, it was suggested that the CEA, as an organization of film exhibitors, should dissociate itself from variety interests, but the ultimate decision was that the officers of the association should deal with the matter.

The CEA is advocating the quality test, as a means of qualification for quota, as an alternative to the minimum cost clause favored by producers, and has been generally understood to favor a system under which all British films would be inspected by an expert committee.

Mr. Fuller makes it plain that the association is also prepared to consider a system whereby the viewing test should operate only in regard to any picture challenged by recognized exhibitors after its trade show. Under this plan, if a given number of traders disputed the exhibition value of any film it would automatically be referred to the viewing committee.

The CEA now is collating the replies received by branches to letters to Members of Parliament, requesting support in the House of Commons for the viewing test as against the Government's suggested cost clause. It is understood a large measure of support is promised.

Scottish Theatres Plead

Demand that special provision be made in the new Films Act for the Scottish theatre field, in which British films are definitely unpopular, was made at the meeting of the Edinburgh Section of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

It was asserted by L. Dickson of Boness that British films which did well in England were "poison" in Scotland, and T. A. K. Lunn said a special viewing committee was necessary for Scotland. Fears were also expressed that a cost clause would mean the loss of cheaper American films, including westerns, which were described as "the bread and butter of many theatres."

Odeon Delays Bookings

Preparing for the policy of immediate release throughout the Odeon circuit after first display of a feature at the Odeon-Alhambra in Leicester Square, Odeon Theatres, Ltd., is holding up on bookings.

Distributors are left guessing, as their ordinary business at this time is for December and January, 1938, dates, and they have to leave the Odeon theatres out of their calculations, and are uncertain whether it will be possible to pick up Odeon dates later.

The Odeon plan, as announced, is for a West End presentation of a United Artists special to be followed immediately, instead of six months later, by release to the more important Odeon theatres in all parts of the country. The Odeon-Alhambra will open in the fall.

British Bar Nudist Film

England's censor board has refused even to look at stills from the film "Elysia," a nudist picture. The film is sponsored here by Mrs. Marian Lili, secretary of the National Sun and Air Association.

Two Exhibitors Fined

Salford Entertainments, Ltd. and J. F. Emery and R. Gradwell were each fined £15 and £5 five shillings costs at Salford Police Courts for quota default at the Dominion and Empress Theatres, Salford. The Dominion showed 17.06 per cent of features and 15.47 per cent of all films instead of 20 per cent in the year ending Sept. 30, 1936. The Empress showed 17 per cent of features and 14 per cent of all films.

Making a defense that there was a shortage of usable British films, counsel for Emery declared that bad British films were received with cat-calls, whistling "and even fireworks" and that when the manager had to put on a quickie he "held his breath and hoped for the best." The only British artists the audience would tolerate were Gracie Fields and George Formby, he said.

Clein Assets Revealed

Liabilities of £35,000 and assets consisting of the film, "The Mill on the Floss," and a small cash balance, were disclosed at a creditors' meeting in London of John Clein Pictures, Ltd. It was stated the picture, estimated to cost £30,000, actually had cost £47,464. National Film Distributors, Ltd., who handled British distribution, have gone into liquidation.

London Technicolor Gains

Production volume at the Technicolor plant in London will be at complete capacity by the close of the year, according to Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president. The plant, he said, has a capacity of 2,000,000 feet a month.

Extend Fred Allen's Contract

Fred Allen's radio contract has been renewed for two years, returning him to the air in the fall. He will go to the coast soon, with his wife, Portland Hoffa, to make a picture for Twentieth Century-Fox.

KAO paid Leo Spitz, president of the circuit, a salary of $26,025, it was disclosed in a report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Universal has extended for a year the contract of Charles Beahan, head of the story and talent department.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Important

The most important production announcement in many months was made by John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures Corporation when he revealed that ABP had invested largely in, and would distribute for, Mayflower Pictures Corporation, the company incorporated as recently as January 25th of this year by Charles Laughton and Erich Pommer, who are joint managing directors. Mr. Maxwell joins the board, the other members of which are F. M. Guedella, A. T. Clenhalls and R. Jenks. Mr. Guedalla is solicitor to the company, as he is to United Artists, and the other two are chartered accountants. Mr. Maxwell soon will become chairman of the board, a position at present filled by Mr. Guedalla.

The close past association of Charles Laughton and Erich Pommer (who produced "Fire Over England" and "Farewell Again" for London Films) with Alexander Korda led to a general expectation, when the formation of Mayflower first was announced, that it would produce at Denham and release through United Artists; the first address of the company was in fact, the Denham studios. It is now probable that the Elstree studio of ABP will be used, if space is available, as well as that company's distributing organization.

Of outstanding interest in the deal is that it associates Mr. Maxwell, a consistent advocate and exponent of economical production for the British market, with a plan for the making of £100,000 ($500,000) pictures for the world market. Speaking at the Savoy cocktail party at which the news was announced, he said he was backing the artistic genius of Laughton and the commercial and technical genius of Pommer because he thought he would make a profit by doing so. He also had something to say of the necessity of the British trade forgetting its failures, discarding its amateurs, and getting on with the job of making good pictures. Also gleaned was that no definite plans had yet been made as to an American release channel.

Pictures

Three pictures, the first to go on the floor in August, already are scheduled by Mayflower. They will all be produced by Erich Pommer, and will star Charles Laughton; in the first will also appear his wife, Elsa Lanchester. It will be a version of Somerset Maugham's "The Vessel of Wrath," and will be directed by Bartlett Cormack, author of a long series of Hollywood films, who will be acting in the more important capacity for the first time.

To follow are "St. Martin's Lane," from a Clemence Dane original, and "Jamaica Inn," by Daphne Du Maurier.

These three pictures will form the first season's output of Mayflower.

A feature of the first two is that they will provide character parts with a strong comedy element for Laughton. One of the reasons he has formed his own company is that he wishes to pick his own roles, and in his own opinion his best film was "Ruggles of Red Gap."

SAYS BARTHOLOMEW MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Miss Millicent Bartholomew, guardian of the child actor Freddie, is considering withdrawing the 13-year-old player from pictures, according to the United Press, because of disputes with MGM over salary matters, the high cost of litigating some of Freddie's legal snarls, and the division of his earnings among members of his family. Meanwhile, young Bartholomew's role in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" has been assigned to Douglas Scott.

"Everybody has been after his money," Miss Bartholomew complained. Unless his future is better assured, she sees no reason to keep him in Hollywood, preferring to take the youngster to England "where he can grow up like a normal boy."

Miss Bartholomew accused MGM of breaking an agreement to raise his salary from $1,200 to $2,500 a week. The studio offered later to pay him $2,000 but this was refused, she said. Under his present income of $44,000 a year, Freddie retains only $12,000, it is said, after deductions for income tax, agent's fees, parents' support and personal maintenance.

"Kiss Me Goodnight," on which Thornton Freeland has started at Denham, is the ninth film to go on the floor there this year. It is the first Denham picture of Gunther Krampf, ace cameraman.

Produced by Marcel Hellman, "Kiss Me Goodnight" is romantic comedy with a strong musical element, by Michael Spoliansky. Its leads are Jack Hulbert and Patricia Ellis.

British National

British National Films, inactive for some time, is going on the floor again immediately at the ABP studio at Elstree, John Corfield, managing director, having acquired film rights in a popular radio series, "Mr. Penny." For the title role, which pictures the typical British citizen, Richard Golden, star of the plays on the radio, has been signed. The title is "Mr. Penny Takes the Air." Backgrounds will contrast suburbia and Mayfair and there will be glimpses of the popular holiday resort, Margate. BN is to make a series for ABP release.

Sea Drama

For the Conway film "The Last Adventurers," for Sound City Distributors handling, all studio scenes have been completed. The last sequence, shot at night, pictured the wrecking of a trawler and the rescue of the crew by rocket apparatus. Authenticity was obtained by the engagement of Capt. C. D. Schermuly, son of the inventor of the life-saving gear.

Crowd Scenes

Crowd scenes have been the feature of work at Denham this week, with most of the extras called for a scene for "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," picturing the downfall of Robespierre in the revolutionary Convention in Paris on July 27, 1794.

Henry Oscar, in the role of the Incorruptible, had to make his speech in the midst of a mob of surging citizens, eager to end him and his regime. He used the exact words of Robespierre; other speeches also are authentic. Hans Schwartz directed the scene through loudspeakers and Mutz Greenbaum's camera worked from a station high up in the roof.

Prominent in the set is the American flag which in fact figured at the Convention as a tribute to Lafayette.

Another mass scene was made for Basil Dean's "The First and the Last." It was an exterior, on the lot, and represented a Soho street, with Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier engaged in action stuff amid the traffic. For this Galsworthy adaptation, a few days earlier, an important sequence on a Thames pleasure steamer had been obtained by chartering "The Royal Eagle," famous with London trippers, for a voyage from London to Southend, at the mouth of the Thames, and back. Incidentally, shots of the Tower Bridge lifting to allow the vessel to pass were obtained without a retake, and more London local color was obtained at Greenwich Pier.

A ball scene for Victor Saville's "South Riding" also called for a crowd. The principals were Ann Todd, doing her first day's work on the film and displaying a new "Trilby-esque" hair dressing, and Ralph Richardson. Riding sequences have taken Richardson and Edna Best to the near-by Stanmore Common, for night scenes.

Six in Colour

Before he left for New York Dr. Herbert Kalmus announced that Alexander Korda had contracted for the production of six pictures in Technicolor by London Film, to be made in eighteen months. Mrs. Natalie Kalmas remains in England to supervise these pictures, which will include starring vehicles for Merle Oberon, Binnie Barnes and "Sabu," of "Elephant Boy."

Lawrence Butler, of London Films, in conjunction with Technicolor, has achieved optical double-printing in the process, superimposing a shot of the Denham laboratories upon another shot of the river Colne.

Lawlor To Manage UA India Office

Jack Lawlor has been placed in temporary charge of United Artists' branch in India, succeeding Pat O'Connor, who recently resigned.

Norman Westwood will assume management of United Artists sales in China, effective the first of next month, relieving Alexander Krisel, who plans to retire upon his return here.

AKRON EXHIBITORS OPEN CAMPAIGN TO DISCOURAGE NEW COMPETITION

Independent Theatre Men Declare Against Any Increase in Theatre Construction As Self-Preservation Move

by ELSIE LOEB

in Cleveland

The motion picture industry in Ohio is witnessing the unusual activity of exhibitors in Akron engaging in an open campaign against new construction.

Announcement of the immediate and definite construction of two "deluxe" motion picture theatres in Akron, with the possibility of a third, adding additional thousands of seats to the present seating capacity, has stirred the members of the Akron Independent Theatre Owners to rise in protest and proclaim that Akron has enough seats at the present time without more building and that any further increase in theatre construction will seriously jeopardize the investments of present Akron theatre owners.

J. G. Deetjen, secretary-treasurer of the Akron independent exhibitors' association, speaking in behalf of Akron's 25 independently owned and operated theatres with a total seating capacity of 13,205 seats, is leader of the public campaign to discourage new theatre construction in Akron not, he says, as a selfish motive, but only as a matter of self-preservation.

Akron, with a total population of 255,040 people, has a total of 29 motion picture theatres. Of these, 25 are independents, and four are circuit owned. The four circuit houses, one each operated by Loew's, Warner, RKO and Shea, have a total of 21,172 seats. The 25 independent houses have only 13,205 seats.

"This is enough to take care of Akron's present needs," the ITO, through Mr. Deetjen, points out, "but, according to a recent survey, there will be approximately 10,000 fewer workers in Akron after December 1st of this year, when Akron rubber plants will transfer at least that many employees to other locations where they will be freer from labor troubles.

"Worrying Exhibitors"

"This situation alone is enough to worry our exhibitors who have thousands of dollars invested in theatre property without the added worry produced by increasing the seating capacity in direct ratio to the reduction of possible theatre patronage," Mr. Deetjen says in defense of the ITO campaign against more theatre building.

That the theatre owners are not the only Akronites worried by the withdrawal of Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone workers to locations of more stable labor conditions is evidenced by an editorial that appeared in the Akron Beacon Journal, in which the Akron Chamber of Commerce is called upon to take cognizance of the situation and to do something about it for exhibitors and other businessmen. Says the editorial:

"To those citizens who fail to comprehend the magnitude of the task confronting the Greater Akron association and the Chamber of Commerce, it may be startling to learn that by December 1 of this year, there will be 7,500 less people employed in Akron than there are today.

A Survey of Rubber

"A survey reveals the following facts:

"1—Goodyear is planning to lay off 2,500 workers. Their services are no longer required because of the company's new plant in Jackson, Michigan, and the stepping up of production at Gadsden, Ala., Cumberland, Md., and Los Angeles. The rubber-heel department has long since been transferred to Windsor, Vt.

"2—Probable Goodrich layoffs between now and the first of the year will approximate 2,000 employes. The reasons are the same as those applying to Goodyear. The Goodrich plant at Oaks, Pa., is now in operation and has a 5,000-a-day tire capacity. Its mechanical goods plant at Cadillac, Mich., will soon be in substantial production.

"3—It is reliably estimated that of the 10,000 Firestone workers, who were out on strike for nearly eight weeks, at least 1,000 have never gone back to work. Erection of a new plant at Memphis, Tenn., containing 400,000 square feet and capable of turning out 5,000 tires a day, makes it unlikely they ever will. Five hundred more Akron jobs could easily disappear through the stepping up of production at Los Angeles.

"4—General's mechanical goods plant at Wabash, Ind., is now employing 600 people. This is the plant General claimed it wanted to build in Akron, but could not because of unfavorable economic factors.

"5—It is estimated that when these 6,000 workers are no longer drawing Akron pay checks, another 1,500 miscellaneously-employed people will lose their jobs through loss of business or fear on the part of the smaller employers. . . .

"Since most of our industries other than rubber employ from 100 to 300 men, elimination of from 6,000 to 7,000 Akron jobs is equivalent to losing 25 to 30 of our smaller industries.

"The question arises, 'What can be done about it?' "

Up to the Chamber

The newspaper answers its own question by saying that insofar as the rubber industries are concerned, he does not think anything can be done about it, but he puts it squarely up to the Akron Chamber of Commerce to bring new industries into the town.

While the independent theatre owners and the newspapers take a gloomy view of the situation and the exhibitors advocate a shut-door policy, others are more optimistic.

Myer S. Fine, who heads the largest independent circuit of theatres in Cleveland, and is one of the best-known exhibitors in the country, is optimistic for Akron's future to the tune of some $200,000. In association with J. S. Jossey and others, he is constructing a 1,500-seat theatre on West Market Street. Work is going ahead and the building will be completed in the fall.

W. N. Skirball, associated with I. Libson, of Cincinnati, in the Elleness Theatres Company, last week announced that construction will start in about two weeks for a 600-seat house on Main Street to cost $100,000.

"There's plenty of room for good theatres in Akron," Mr. Skirball said when told of the ITO's campaign against new construction. And wherever there is an active Chamber of Commerce and high grade retail department stores such as Akron has, the economic trend of the city will always be forward, not backward. For every industry that leaves Akron it seems reasonable to predict that a new industry will come in so that Akron will continue to grow both in population and economically."

The proposed third house, still in the prospective stage, is attributed to A. J. Bianchi, who now operates the Ohio Theatre at Cuyahoga Falls.

Comerford Estate $1,312,474

The estate of M. B. Comerford, general manager of the Comerford theatres, who died intestate last November, was valued at $1,312,474, according to an inventory filed by appraisers in Scranton. Personal property was listed at over $20,000 and real estate at $6,000.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Ambassador-Conn-Melody

RACING BLOOD: Frankie Darro—A very good action picture and one that draws. It is just the thing for a Saturday and Sunday afternoon showing. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 18-19.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Columbia

COUNTERFEIT: Chester Morris, Margot Grahame—A very good program picture. Suitable for a dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND: Dolores Del Rio, Richard Dix—This is a grimly realistic drama with a sour ending to the romance, but there were no complaints from the midweek audience or the box office.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN: Walter Connolly, Irene Hervey—Passable programer. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—Very good picture. Good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO SPARE: Charles Quigley, Dorothy Wilson—Slam bang auto racing story with some startling shots of auto accidents on the track.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne—An entertaining comedy drama that did a fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—We played this late but a return to cooler weather was very helpful. We did a little better than average business. Our folks thought this extra good. Played July 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—A fair program feature. None too entertaining. Played June 5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn—We got a poor print on this. Guess we played it too old. The picture is good of its kind, but drawing power not too high.—Erma L. Raeburn. Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant—This is about the best of the Grace Moore pictures. An interesting story, music to please all classes, good fun, but no drawing power for our working class neighborhood. Of course the weather was warm, but at that the business was small considering this high class attraction.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—A fine picture that one can see over and over and appreciate more with each review.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—We believe this is the best comedy Joe ever made. If you people like Brown, this will go over 100 per cent. Played June 27-28.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—A very good picture. Hot weather and slim Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mich. Small town patronage.

GREEN LIGHT, THE: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—A wonderful picture in every way that for some reason failed to click. Errol Flynn is not very popular here. Good story and very good cast, but they do not seem to care for this class of picture. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 17-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

HER HUSBAND'S SECRETARY: Jean Muir, Warren Hull—Double-featured this one and it seemed to please. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis—A dramatic story, telling the misfortunes of a group of girls engaged by a night club racketeer. Good acting by Bette. Played June 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MEN IN EXILE: Richard Purcell, June Travis—Another not so hot program picture from Vitagraph. We've had a lot of them this year. Stories are poor, casts only ordinary and drawing power nil. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. General patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Henry Watson—This was a very good drawing card on Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Henry Watson—This one sure pleased the kids. Good acting. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British

WOMAN ALONE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, John Loder—A picture you have to see twice to understand. A woman leaving the theatre was heard to say, "Where do they get this title 'Woman Alone.' I don't understand." And such an ending! It seemed to many as an unfinished picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 3-4.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Invincible

ELLIS ISLAND: Donald Cook, Peggy Shannon—Good action melodrama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—They don't come any better than this one. An extreme heat wave ruined what promised to be better than average business. This picture will please any audience 100 per cent. Running time, 112 minutes. Played July 11-12.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—I did not see this picture. All reported it a good one, yet I lost money for some reason. Just can't get any money on Metro pictures any more. I am just wondering if others are having as poor grosses on the Metro product this year as I am. I haven't got peanuts on the MGM since "Ziegfeld" but other companies are holding up good.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor—A couple of good stars wasted on a program that bores most of the small town people. Maybe it's OK for big city, but small towns just won't swallow a piece of this sort of entertainment. Garbo is hard to understand and that adds so much more to the poor quality of the show. Pass it up, boys, if you can. Running time, 12 reels. Played July 11.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS NUMBER: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—My patrons enjoyed this one very much and it did very well on Bank Night.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

A DAY AT THE RACES: Marx Brothers, Allan Jones—All dressed up to music and just as screwy as all the rest of their pictures, but they like the screwiness and that is all that matters. I'll hand it to them, they give it to the public in large doses, and a shrewd director put on one of the most beautiful dance ensembles in sepia with a sensational toe dancer that tops anything that we have ever run. And no credit is given her in the cast. Ginger Rogers take notice. If that gal does not get solo work in the big musicals, Metro is missing a bet. Why they did not credit her I don't know, for we had inquiry as to who she was and that's something that does not happen often.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

A DAY AT THE RACES: Marx Brothers—The best Marx Brothers picture to date. Pleased everyone. You cannot go wrong on this one in any spot. Running time, 111 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker—An interesting piece of family entertainment. Played June 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—We were afraid of this one after reading several adverse comments, but it was OK both as entertainment and at the box office. Played June 11-12. Running time, 72 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—Spanky will never draw like Shirley Temple. I think it must be he is too fat. While he is funny, amusing, he has not the magnetic fascination one might expect. Just normal drawing power to this.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer, Myrna Loy—We endorse everything good said about this truly great picture. It is the tops and no foolin'. Running time, 180 minutes. Played July 4-6.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery—Lay off the darn thing, is my advice. Another of those three way pictures that have been released about two a week for the last ten years. Lost my shirt on another one of Metro's.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy, Jean Harlow—When you get a cast like this you know you've got a real show and so does the public. Business above the average and everybody satisfied. Running time. 98 minutes. Played June 6-7.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Another one hundred per cent perfect performance by Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Think this one pleased them all, although I do not think it is as good as "Naughty Marietta." However, it is plenty good. Running time, 137 minutes. Played July 9-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Another one of those darn would be big ones from Metro that lost me money. This year they have been full of 'em in this town and they have the nerve to ask me advance in rentals this new season.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Kind of goofy but it semed to please. Guy Kibbee is the whole show and he is plenty good. Double-featured this one. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—MGM knows how to make poor programs and don't the audience know it. The second night we had the poorest crowd in months.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Very good show that did well on Saturday.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

OUR RELATIONS: Laurel and Hardy—Not as good as some of the earlier pictures, but where they are liked it will get by. Drew average business and there were no squawks. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 18-19.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—High class production. Pleasing for any spot and will please all. Running time, 120 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Played this two weeks after Jean's death and expected to do the money, but it just did another big flop. Just like the hundred of other stories before it. You know the story before you see it.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

PICK A STAR: Laurel and Hardy, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley—This was a very good little picture that did well on Bank Night but was one of the higher rental pictures and should not have cost a dime more than the lowest.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

SINNER TAKE ALL: Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay—A satisfactory program picture that failed to draw. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 9-10.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

SINNER TAKE ALL: Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay—If "Sinner Had Taken All" the box office receipts he—or she—would not have taken enough to get out of town. Poor. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SWORN ENEMY: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Made the mistake of playing this one on Sunday and it did not get over. However, it is a satisfactory picture for the weekend. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 20-21.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

UNDER COVER OF NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Florence Rice—Just a program picture, not up to the MGM standard. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—Was agreeably surprised with the picture and the draw. We wanted to eliminate it but the producer talked us out of that idea. Glad now that we didn't. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—I don't believe I have ever played a western that gave as much satisfaction and got as many good comments as this one did. I went downtown next morning and every one I saw told me what a grand time they had the night before. Got the money, too. —Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

BORDERLAND: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—These Hopalong Cassidy series click 100 per cent with our audiences, doing busines on a par with many so called specials.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Good detective drama. Did just fair on a hot Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Very ordinary mystery picture that did average on Bank Night.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

CLARENCE: Roscoe Karns, Charlotte Wynters—Very good little program picture for the Saturday crowd.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudete Colbert, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas—Clever and entertaining from start to finish. Especially attractive these warm days were the scenes from Sun Valley, Idaho, used as the Switzerland locale. Don't believe the Swiss can beat those snowy slopes, etc.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck—Extra good program picture, holding the interest to the end, drawing extra business on a midweek showing. Running time, 79 minutes. Played July 14-15.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Lloyd Nolan, Claire Trevor —Was afraid of this one, but found it packed with suspense and action. Pleased. Played July 9-10.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST TRAIN FROM MADRID, THE: Lew Ayres, Dorothy Lamour—Patrons did not seem to care for this, although picture is well made and well acted. Did not seem to us that the story got anywhere. Played July 7-8.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Please, Paramount, don't make another one of these. I know this was a great picture but what of it. No one had a good word for it and it didn't get peanuts at the box office.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Satisfied the few who attended. Hot weather was largely responsible. Played July 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OUTCAST: Warren William, Karen Morley—A thrilling drama that holds your interest all the way, but I wish they would not kill a fine, lovable boy that moves through a picture that everyone learns to love, merely to build up a dramatic scene—of getting the Doctor in wrong. There are dozens of other ways that it could have been done in this picture. I never heard such a gasp of horror go up from an audience as when the ignorant mother pulled out the tube from her son's throat that would have saved his life. Business about what you would expect on a hot Sunday.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—An extra good western that did more than I expected at the box office so I'm satisfied.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby—Here is a real natural. I was surprised at how well everyone spoke of it. Bing seems to belong out-of-doors. —Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—Sure was a swell picture. I like these two anyway and it was a dandy story. Pleased very much here. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—Very ordinary picture that did poor at the box office and pleased only a few. This was one of Paramount's big ones or at least the rental was.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

THREE ON THE TRAIL: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Average western that seemed to please the action fans. Where westerns draw, this series should be popular. Running time, 67 minutes. Played July 2-3.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Right now Gene Autry is a very good attraction but they must give him much better stories or he won't last long.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CIRCUS GIRL: June Travis, Bob Livingston—A good circus picture with all the trimmings. They sure gave it a thrill finish with the villain of the piece falling into the lion's cage, but as he planned the same fate for the hero he only got what was coming to him. We can't expect much business these nice summer days with so many counter attractions. —J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN: Olsen and Johnson—A rather carelessly made comedy drama, but the midweek audience took it without any complaint.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette —A good cast wasted in a very poor story.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY: George O'Brien, Cecilia Parker—Patrons liked this out-of-door picture. Only fair recording. Played July 16-17.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF, THE: John Beal, Joan Fontaine—Very good programmer. Joan Fontaine well liked in this story of a man's rejuvenation. Played June 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MEET THE MISSUS: Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—Passable programer. Running time, 60 minutes. W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PARK AVENUE LOGGER: George O'Brien—A small edition of "God's Country and the Woman," but this type of story is usually fool proof for action lovers if done at all well, and this was well done and our patrons seemed to enjoy it. This was doubled with "Outcast," but weather was too hot to do any business to speak of.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN, THE: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—An interesting light comedy. Very slim midweek business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Anton Walbrook—Good action play, but absolutely a minus quantity at the box office. Played June 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown—Pleased the fans who enjoy Joe E. Brown's type of comedy. Business poor on account of circus opposition. Played July 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—A show so good you can't look around but keep your eyes on the screen and watch what is coming next. Everyone is good in it but the crooks keep the upper hand of the show until the final moment gets them. Thrilling through to the finish. Played July 13.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers, Robert Kent—Just fair. It's a picture that is for Jane only and she is getting beyond the cute age. Growing up is catching up with her as it does with all the juveniles. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE OPERA: Warner Oland, Boris Karloff—This series will gross about 20% to 25% more money on Saturday than any thing I can play. They always please the crowds. We sometimes can't seat them with the Chan pictures.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

CRACK-UP: Peter Lorre, Brian Donlevy—Fair Saturday picture but nothing to rave over.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

DAVID HARUM (Re-issue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—Here is a grand show that will surely please everyone you can get in. No doubt this was the best one. Did fair at the box office.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—Once again we differ with the critics. This picture is genuinely good fun and was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. The biggest percentage of movie patrons go to a show to forget their troubles with as little mental effort as possible, and pictures of this type suit them right down to the ground. If this "is a poor attempt at light comedy of the kind that has been done to death" we hope that they keep right on "doing" them wrong. Anyway, we like it! Played July 2-3.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers—In spite of the heat we had paying busines and everyone seemed to be satisfied. Played July 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Anthony Martin—They ate it up as they do all Jane Withers pictures, and it also got the money.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Loretta Young, Simone Simon—If anyone cared for this I have never found them.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

LAUGHING AT TROUBLE: Jane Darwell, Lois Wilson—An entertaining comedy drama of small town life that seemed to please.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Another one of those Fox specials that did not do so well. Fox just don't click for us. Recording only fair. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held & Son, New Strand, Griswald, Iowa. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie—Nice Sunday business and more compliments on the picture than I have had before in a year.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll—A mighty swell picture that did not pay expenses but no fault of the picture. The best Dick Powell picture for a long time, good music, good cast. Ran this one too late but it is good. Running time, 89 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin—This is swell entertainment for any audience. Good Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SECRET VALLEY: Richard Arlen, Virginia Grey —Story and acting all right but recording terrible and disgusted patrons. Had listened to another of this series on a neighbor's outfit and it was the same, so do not believe our equipment at fault. Played July 14-15.—P. G. Este, Este Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: James Stewart, Simone Simon—Pleased, but terrific heat kept people out-of-doors, so box office fell flat. Played July 11-12.—P. G. Estee, Este Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SING AND BE HAPPY: Tony Martin, Leah Ray—A delightful comedy drama with some good music and good singing by both stars. However, the picture does not belong in the high allocation where it is placed by Fox. So short we had to pad with four reels of shorts and then fell behind the usual Sunday length. Played July 18-19.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple—Fair Sunday business. Shirley's best story in a long time.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young—I can't tell much difference in the quality and the gross on the Temple pictures for the last three or four. This one is about the same.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark. General patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, Victor McLaglen—An Away Back When picture with the music and songs of long ago. Taylor, of course, was the handsome Lieutenant. The opinion of the audience was that he was miscast. His role called for more of a he-man. That is apparent in this latest matinee idol. Music good. A regular old burlesque band that knew their beats.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—This is an "It Happened One Night" type of story. This story can be made in many variations. This variation makes very pleasing entertainment. This was doubled with "Land Beyond the Law," a Dick Foran Warner western, and it was about as exciting a western as they come. It was a hot Fourth of July Sunday, so business naturally was off, but those who came enjoyed the show.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Jack Haley, Ben Bernie, Walter Winchell—This was good entertainment that failed to warrant its rental with us. Played June 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Jack Haley, Alice Faye—Another great picture from the Fox lot. Each and every patron stopped on the way out and said how much they enjoyed the show. Winchell and Bernie were fine. Jack Haley was great and deserves a star rating after this performance. Patsy Kelly and Ned Sparks were excellent as usual, as was Alice Faye. It has a million laughs, catchy tunes. If I were rating this picture from audience satisfaction I would give it the very highest. Now that we have Winchell in the movies, how about Sidney Skolsky? Played July 11-12.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

United Artists

MEN ARE NOT GODS: Miriam Hopkins, Gertrude Lawrence—This picture is not suitable for small town patronage. It is an English made picture with an American star heading the cast. The balance of the cast is English and their dialect is almost impossible to understand. Second night's business was away off. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 25-26.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MEN ARE NOT GODS: Miriam Hopkins, Gertrude Lawrence—This would have been a wonderful picture if there had not been so much English accent in the conversation. Maybe we will all get used to English dialect some time; it would be a blessing if both countries could really speak the same language, and the movies are doing much to bring about this very desirable ideal, but in the meantime we have to go carefully not to have to pay too large a share toward this eduction out of our own pockets.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

THINGS TO COME—Raymond Massey—A great disappointment. Folks came, because the trailer drew them in, and it truly had a good antibellum moral, but the English dialect, the impossible situations, the slowness and intricacy of the plot seemed to fail to hold the attention.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—Slapstick comedy and a new departure for Sam Goldwyn. It had laughs in spots and the picture was sketchily put together for that purpose. Goldwyn, from this effort, better forego comedy and stay in a line where he knows where he is going more than he did in this one. A weak sister. His "yes" men must have been working overtime.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda—This picture is tense drama with little or no comedy relief. We did an average business the first night, but it was off on the second night. The cast is good, but the story is too heavy for the country boys and girls. Played June 13-14. Running time, 86 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Operahouse, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE: Gloria Stuart, Edmund Lowe—A good comedy drama above the average. Some slapstick comedy, but not overdone. You make no mistake in booking it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 18-19.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MIGHTY TREVE, THE: Noah Beery, Jr., Barbara Read—Very good dog story. Fair Saturday business. —Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS CROSSING: James Dunn, Jean Rogers—Fairly good mystery drama that seemed to please.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

POSTAL INSPECTOR: Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis—Good program picture. Should satisfy any one. Very interesting to follow, and holds you to your seat all the way through. Cast okay. Running time, six reels. Played July 9-10.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin—A very pleasing picture. Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin—There is no question of doubt, Deanna Durbin is a coming box office knock-out. She has the goods and sure can put it over. Swell entertainment. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 9-10.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TOP OF THE TOWN: George Murphy, Doris Nolan—This takes the cake for prize disappointments. And our patrons were not loath to tell us so. They didn't care for it at all. Nor could we see anything to it. Wish we had played it Bargain Day where no one expects much and they go away satisfied with what they do see. Played June 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor—Good entertainment. Played June 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Haviland, Ian Hunter —Don't think this pleased very much, either. We liked it, but our audience did not. The cast was adequate and the action fast and furious. Maybe that was what was the matter. They couldn't keep up with it. Running time, 89 minutes. Played June 30-July 1—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. General patronage.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia DeHavilland, Ian Hunter —A critics' pet which was a terrible mistake. The English brogue and lack of action coupled with shrill voices and a light script was too much for our patrons. Half of them walked out and I hid from the rest of them. On the strength of good reviews I recommended this picture highly and is my face red! Skip it. Played July 9-10.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

FUGITIVE IN THE SKY: Jean Muir, Warren Hull—Okay melodrama and action thriller. Holds good suspense. Played June 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise, Charles Winniger—No million dollar picture here, but a million dollars worth of entertainment. As good as they come. It moves fast and is a honey all the way, with the cast getting equal credit, putting over a program picture that has a h—— of a lot more entertainment than three out of five socalled specials. You can have your "Romeos," "Midsummer Night's Dreams," "As You Like Its" and the rest of them of that ilk. I'll take this one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL, THE: Joan Blondell, Fernand Gravet, Edward Everett Horton—A good picture, but drew very poorly for us. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LOVE BEGINS AT TWENTY: Warren Hull, Patricia Ellis—This is old but a fine comedy. Pleased all, even myself. Warners seem to know how to make the down-to-earth comedies that appeal to young and old, rich and poor.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. General patronage.

MELODY FOR TWO: James Melton, Patricia Ellis—Just a nice program picture with no special drawing power and certainly did not do any business for us. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 7-8.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

READY, WILLING AND ABLE: Ruby Keeler, Ross Alexander, Lee Dixon-Ross Alexander's last performance, as seen in this, was superior to any he had previously given. Too bad his grip on life couldn't have steadied him until he realized the success that was fast approaching him. This is his picture, regardless of Warners' elimination of his name from the top billing he deserved and earned. Played June 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

READY, WILLING AND ABLE: Lee Dixon, Ruby Keeler—Fair picture but not the rave the press sheets claim. Lee Dixon means absolutely nothing here and changing the billing from Ross Alexander and then showing him in the lead did not help any. Ruby Keeler is very good and deserves a better supporting cast. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 25-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JONES, LINICK, SCHAEFER RETURNING TO POWER

Chicago Circuit, Now Operating 4 Downtown and 1 Neighborhood, Adds 2 More Expansion plans revealed this week by Jones, Linick and Schaefer, motion picture operators, indicate that within a short time this organization again will become an important factor in the Chicago field.

Last week, this veteran Chicago theatrical company, which is operated by Aaron Jones Sr. and his two sons, John J. and Aaron, Jr., celebrated the fourth anniversary of its loop vaudeville and motion picture house, the State-Lake, which it leases from Balaban and Katz.

At present the company operates five theatres, four in the downtown area and one on the near-north side. Now it announces the addition of two new and luxurious theatres to the circuit.

With the State-Lake as one of the cornerstones of the circuit, Jones, Linick and Schaefer will add to its list the Mayfair and the Homewood theatres, both now under construction. When these open in the fall, the Jones houses will include the State-Lake, McVickers (operated on a partnership basis with B & K), Woods, La Salle, Dearborn, Mayfair and Homewood theatres, with other neighborhood houses to be added.

The Mayfair, at 111th and Western Avenue, will be a beautiful and modernistic house with 1,400 seats, plus an unusual feature. There will be no balcony in the strict sense, but instead there will be a mezzanine lounge, not with the usual chairs but with 300 luxurious lounge chairs. They will be one foot wider and one foot deeper than the customary lounge chair, with deep upholstery. Well-appointed smoking rooms for both men and women will be located but a step away from the lounge.

The Mayfair will open about December 1st.

The Homewood theatre, a slightly smaller house, will open soon, about October 1st. It is in Homewood, on the south outskirts of the city, and will serve Hazelcrest, Flossmoor, Thornton, Lansing, Glenwood and other communities.

These new houses mark the return of Aaron Jones and his two sons into big-time circuit operation—a position similar to which they enjoyed until they relinquished a number of their theatres a few years ago. In the past quarter of a century Mr. Jones has leased and operated almost fifty theatres in the Chicago area.

Closing Time Edict Proposed in Argentina

by N. BRUSKI

in Buenos Aires

Suggesting it would be beneficial generally to the public if theatres were required to close earlier than at present, Augustin P. Justo, president of Argentina, has forwarded a letter to the mayor of Buenos Aires, suggesting the closing time be set at midnight. Performances usually run until 1:30 A.M.

Since the mayor cannot issue such an edict without consent of the city council, he has advised all theatre owners that the legal closing time of 12:30 A.M. will be enforced rigidly.

New regulations have been made concerning attendance of children at Buenos Aires theatres. Children under 12 years of age are prohibited from attending any night performances, but it is considered unlikely that strict enforcement can be obtained, since it would require a large increase in the staff of the department of maternity and health, under whose jurisdiction the regulation falls.

"Big" Pictures Held Double Bill Cure

The "big" productions to be released in August constitute the most effective weapon against double featuring, according to George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists. He said that a number of leading exhibitors are favorably inclined towards an increase in admission prices as a result. He added that a scarcity of star talent, coupled with intensive bidding for stories had raised production costs. Mr. Schaefer declared that David O. Selznick's "A Star Is Born" had helped prompt a public demand for color.

United Artists has 14 pictures practically ready for early distribution, Mr. Schaefer said. Following Alexander Korda's "Knight Without Armor" and its two weeks at Radio City Music Hall, deals have been made for the release of one picture a week until late November.

Samuel Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas" is booked for August 5th at the Music Hall. His "Dead End" will open at the Rivoli Theatre, and in the same week Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," at the Music Hall, August 19th. "The Prisoner of Zenda," Selznick, has a Music Hall date of September 2nd.

Following will come "The Adventures of Marco Polo" and "Hurricane," both from Goldwyn; "Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and "Nothing Sacred," Selznick; "52nd Street," "Stand-In" and "I Met My Love Again," Wanger, and three London Film productions.

"Manhunter" Rights Sold

Luis Rojas de la Torre, producer of "Manhunters of the Caribbean," has sold the Greater New York and northern New Jersey rights to a syndicate exchange for immediate release and will leave for Boston next week to sell the New England rights.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

EXPLOITATION HOLDS ITS OWN—AND MORE

About this time last year there was indication in various spots that what with the new season's product shaping up so strongly customers in large numbers could be expected to arrive early and often at the boxoffice without being urged to do so by especial exploitation. Whether or not the plan functioned as scheduled, deponent knoweth not; but, according to the numerous and interesting campaigns reported to this desk in the past year, theatremen in general still believe that a good job of exploitation pays dividends regardless.

The excellence of such reasoning becomes increasingly evident to the producing companies, to judge from the emphasis now being placed upon the subject and presented in print by their advertising departments. Not the least of this is the special exploitation section of some 16 advertising pages presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in a recent issue of Motion Picture Herald and aimed directly to aid theatremen on engagements of "The Good Earth". The material released comprised top advertisings and exploitations of all kinds arranged by Howard Dietz, Si Seadler and Bill Ferguson, and skillfully executed by the MGM field exploiteers in conjunction with local showmen.

Prepared by S. Charles Einfeld's department, the press book on "They Won't Forget" is also to be regarded as a long step forward taken by the Warnerites to make available every possible assistance to expedite the manager's efforts on the picture. In so doing, the meaty press book, labeled "first edition", is to be supplemented by a forthcoming "second edition" comprising selected theatre-tested campaigns from the field. Between covers of the two books it is expected, and reasonably, that the theatreman ambitious to do the best possible job will discover all the ammunition he needs, and more.

United Artists also lines up on the side of the forces for good with an extensive press book conceived by Monroe Greenthal in cooperation with Hal Horne for "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938". The manual is further distinguished by a two-part exploitation section, one of which is given over entirely to a score of important merchandising cooperative promotions. Significant is the fact that these were reported to have been made before the picture went into work so as to insure from these sponsors, and sufficiently in advance, the fullest exploitation benefits to the theatreman.

Further producer recognition of exploitation values is presented in the RKO Radio spiral-bound press book on "The Toast of New York", wherein the merchandising tieins effected by the S. Barret McCormick forces are featured in a special section in addition to separately packaged material for contests and other exploitations. Here, too, are ore-bearing sources the manager may profitably tap.

There can be little doubt that these instances of intensive producer cooperation are indicative of the industry's willingness today to get in there and work shoulder to shoulder with the theatreman. In supplying meaty exploitation sinews, the home office ad heads definitely determine both the presently high value of forceful exploitation and the wisdom of getting behind individual pictures for the best possible grosses.

AN OPEN INVITATION

Highly held by our readers according to the many who express themselves in favor are the Round Table layouts of newspaper advertising reproducing representative displays credited to different theatremen and also pages of ads showing the work of individual showmen. Members, we are told frequently, study the layouts with undivided attention and with profit. All of which is as it should be for the primary function of this department is to act as a clearing house for ideas that prove boxoffice worthy.

Quite often the pages include ads from other than the key city newspapers and this is noted to encourage managers in the smaller spots to forward for consideration samples of their more effective displays which they feel might be of value to brother-members.

Theatremen operating in lesser communities and ambitious to turn out ads that click are often able to overcome composing-room limitations with a high degree of ingenuity. The membership would be interested in seeing how they do it.

Recent ad in the New York papers asked for a young lady to serve as manager of a newly-opened theatre, no experience being necessary but those with a social background preferred. If this keeps up, it might pay unemployed managers to spend more time looking up their family trees.

The architecture of the theatre building itself made an unusual background for the front on "Romeo and Juliet" created by Manager Lew Chatham, at the Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., the construction design coincidentally being in Italian Renaissance, in the period of the picture. In addition, the decorative scheme also embraced special art work at ends of marquee, with entire display electrically lighted.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Radio

There being no local radio facilities in Danville, Ill., Ernie Crabtree, Publix Great States city manager, arranged with station in nearby city which had wide coverage in local territory to put on broadcast from lobby of the Fischer Theatre three times weekly, broadcast covering news about Hollywood. Crabtree interested local merchants to sponsor the broadcast which he calls "Behind the Scenes in Hollywood," material obtained from publicity department of the various studios, which allows for newsy and up-to-date programs on studio doings.

Celebrity

Local sports writer devoted his column to Irving Jaffee, former Olympic skating champion visiting in Richmond, Va., during Stewart Tucker's opening of "Shall We Dance" at the Byrd, tieup plugging the skate sequence in picture with Jaffee's comments on same.

Paper also featured a "lucky names" contest, passes to those spotting their names in classified ad section. Second contest planted by Tucker was what he termed "name the dance," prizes to folks correctly identifying dance shots illustrated in paper and the Rogers-Astaire picture in which they had been performed.

Tieins

Matt Saunders, Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., "shomanized" his "Star Is Born" date by promoting local beauty salon to feature a Hollywood permanent wave, carrying cut of Janet Gaynor, playdates, etc., in all their advertising. Department store also featured makeup kit of cosmetics reported to be kind used by the star in the picture. Scene stills and picture copy were displayed on counters.

Effective was Saunders tiein with local hotel which offered dinner for two and tickets to see "Star" to the person submitting acceptable name for their new cocktail room. Stories were run in papers and Matt reports that the first hour over 600 names were received.

Extra!

Reading "extra, extra, Kid Galahad is in town" Arthur Krolick, Regent Theatre, Rochester, overprinted in red a thousand copies of evening paper and distributed them on streets, newsies calling in the traditional manner to create attention.

PRESS BOOKS PLUG "THEY WON'T FORGET"

As part of the advance campaign the Warnerites are putting on for "They Won't Forget," three of the company's press books are carrying back page spreads for the film announcing the picture and illustrating highlights with scenes from the production. Plug has been incorporated in the press books on "Talent Scout," "Marry the Girl" and "San Quentin."

Insurance

Insurance policies made out in the amount of $100 for a term of three hours and thirty minutes against all direct loss or damage by fire at their homes while the bearer was attending the show of "Lloyds of London" at the Saenger Theatre in Hope, Ark., were handed to all patrons on tiein made by Art Swanke.

Through Postal Telegraph wires were sent opening day, copy reading "The bells of Lloyd may ring only once for disaster and twice for good news, but I am sending this warning via Postal," etc., etc. Contest was planted in paper with local insurance company officials acting as judges, cash and guest tickets going to those correctly answering list of questions pertaining to insurance.

Lobby Display

For "Road Back" dates, Joe Weil, Universal exploitation head, has arranged for exhibitor blowups of newspaper, magazine and radio comments on the picture. Weil suggests that exhibitors mount these on boards for lobby display and also to use the reviews for quotation in newspaper ads.

Fights

With the recent attendant furore over the Braddock-Louis fight, Murray Lafayette, Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., garnered some extra publicity by purchasing 1,000 newspapers and pasting stickers to front page with copy reading "Braddock will win in the first round by knockout because Joe Louis saw the picture 'Kid Galahad' and he is still weak from the excitement." Boys stationed on busy street intersections cried "extra" and one of the papers was given gratis to each man stopping.

Stage Wedding

Patrons are still keen on stage weddings as witness the report from Lee Naify who put the feature on at the Senator Theatre, Chico, Cal. Naify promoted full page co-op spread sponsored by merchants who participated and effective was printed wedding invitation mailed to each family in town which also carried a plug for the current screen attraction.

Wedding cake reported to weigh over 150 pounds was another good promotion, clicking for three column cut in local paper with story that everyone at the wedding would receive a piece of the confection.

Charge Account

San Diego's leading department store cooperated with Al Sobler, at the New Spreckles by permitting customers not only to make reservations for "Lost Horizon" through store's salesgirls, but also allowed to include ticket purchases on their regular charge accounts. Reservation blanks were furnished salesgirls, filled out according to customers' wishes and then phoned to the Spreckel's boxoffice. Store also placed large card advertising the service in all windows facing main thoroughfare.

Three girls stationed in various windows began a telephone campaign, calling all subscribers, and arrangement was made with local college to have reservations made at campus book store, center of college activity.

Four-Week Advance

Starting 27 days ahead of date at the Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., on "Romeo and Juliet," Lew Chatham worked a newspaper teaser campaign changing the number of days in the copy with each insertion. As the date neared teaser ads were increased, size of ads were increased, urge copy added.

Unique contest found effective was arranged with high school literature classes for theatres, modes of transportation and costumes on the Shakespearean period. Among entries were Elizabethan costume on French doll, early Shakespeare outdoor stage built to scale, stage coach of that period, etc. Many wood carvings of the coat of arms of famous lines were included in the contest as well as drawings of costumes and coaches and highly decorative front also was arranged.

CAMPAIGN HIGHLIGHTS OF ENTRIES VOTED "FIRSTS" IN JUNE AWARDS

Varied Angles of Exploitation Utilized by Theatremen in Canada, Maine, Ohio, Chosen for "First Mention" Honors

Carrying out a general plan to plant enough publicity in advance that "Make Way for Tomorrow" was a picture on every patron's "must see" list, Harry Botwick, for the date at the State, Portland, Me., waged a highly effective campaign using every possible medium at his command to blanket the city.

The Round Tabler started with a personal endorsement over the house p. a. system after the trailer showings and previously well in advance displayed lobby plugs calling attention to the date, the same idea brought out on the ground glass bottom slides of the main lobby displays. Also featured in these arrangements was a 40 by 60 board carrying the New York ads and reviews, candid camera shots of the cast shown leaving the preview of the picture in Hollywood, the shots obtained from local paper. After the opening, local critics' reviews were added to the poster and the display brought out front where all could see it.

For a contest idea in lobby, Botwick created a spinning wheel effect with photos of the cast bordered in stars with Victor Moore at the top. Large arrow was affixed to the center and patrons invited to spin the arrow. When it stopped at Moore's head, a guest ticket was awarded. The essay contest suggested in the press book was also arranged, Harry using five questions instead of the single one suggested.

Called the most important stunt of the campaign and original in its utilization in this form was what Botwick terms a "candid camera review" which he sold to one of the leading papers and accomplished as follows:

Following the first matinee showing, pictures were taken of patrons leaving the theatre who were asked for opinions on the picture. Made into a full-page streamer and layout, the pictures were run in the paper with the patrons' names, addresses and remarks in the caption below. According to the manager, the break was equivalent to a full page of advertising though handled strictly as news. Further, it was put over at no expense to the theatre.

Additional publicity was secured in the same sheet in the promotion of the paper's local Soap Box Derby wherein Botwick displayed one of the models in the lobby securing in exchange a three-column cut and caption which mentioned the theatre and attraction. In another daily, Harry was able to plant a classified contest using the hidden-telephone number gag, patrons discovering their numbers in any of the ads qualifying for guest tickets by bringing the ads direct to the paper. The tiein ran for six days, starting with a page-one box with daily two-column free ad on classified page. As to be expected, Botwick's newspaper ads were distinctive, one of his hand-drawn displays being reproduced on a following page.

JULY COMPETITIONS INAUGURATE LAST HALF

With the deadline for the July Awards, (August 7th) approaching, the judging for the month's honors will mark the beginning of the second half of the 1937 Quigley Awards Competitions. Six months still remain for theatremen not yet in the magic circle to make the grade which should encourage those entrants who have yet to score in the top brackets.

For street bally, tiein was made for use of a new model auto-bike which was bannered and sent all around town. Agency also supplied driver at no cost to theatre in exchange for privilege of parking machine from time to time out front. Lucky number contests were arranged with two leading food stores both displaying picture copy and winning numbers daily in windows. On opening day, carnations, promoted, were distributed to the first 200 women attending.

Other effective slants reported included bookmarks at stores and libraries, preview for heads of women's clubs, prominent clergymen, library heads. As a result Botwick had a number of blowups made of the laudatory New York Times review which with playdates and theatre added were posted on bulletin boards at headquarters of these organizations.

Cleveland Theatremen Score On "Captains Courageous" Date

That was a whale of a campaign put on by Milt Harris, Cleveland Loew Theatres publicist, with the cooperation of Manager Ev Steinbuch for the date on "Captains Courageous" at the State Theatre, some five ace contests topping a drive that covered many angles. Featured newspaper tiein made with the Press was six-day essay contest on "Who Is America's No. 1 Hero and Why?", first prize a seven-day Great Lakes cruise promoted by Harris from the C & B Line.

With the Cleveland Plain Dealer was arranged a Father's Day matinee wherein readers were invited to send in names of old fathers in the local area, the 25 oldest selected to attend the show. In addition they were guests of popular restaurant for dinner and each received a box of cigars, all promoted by Harris. Third contest had to do with age and weight of giant lobster secured from Gloucester, locale of picture, and displayed in prominent downtown food window. Best guessers were given tickets.

Fourth contest was a tiein with local branches of Eastman Kodak with contestants invited to send in best photos of sailing boats, winners receiving rolls of fresh films in addition to the theatre courtesies. Fifth competition was held with leading jeweler, who offered man's and woman's wrist watches to those guessing time a large ship's clock displayed in window would stop.

Further newspaper publicity was landed by special lunch to picture critics and other important newspaper folk main dish being live lobsters. For additional sea atmosphere, Gloucester fisheries were promoted for large cans of fish and these were given to those phoning their names and addresses during popular news commentator broadcast.

Most prominent window was one at Higbee Company displaying a giant size book which revolved and was surrounded with regular copies of the book. Large banner was displayed at entrance of the Admiral Byrd South Pole ship at Cleveland exposition. All trucks of magazine distributor were posted with copy tying in date with special Tracy article in fan magazine. Telegraph messengers wore lettered badges and jumbo telegrams displayed in windows of branch offices. Heralds were distributed at bus stations within 100 mile radius.

Bookmarks in all book stores and public libraries, heralds stuffed in magazines, imprinted blotters, four-page type "For Women Only" heralds, plus elaborate front and wide posting were other details of what proved a highly effective campaign.

Dilley Finally Cracks Daily On "Elephant Boy" Campaign

Previously unable to interest his local paper in picture tieups, Manager Charles Dilley, Colonial, Port Arthur, Ontario, Can., was able to crack the conservative sheet on "Elephant Boy" because Bob Flaherty, director of the picture, was educated and lived for many years in that community. Since the entire city was interested from the local angle, the newspaper tied in with Dilley for a drive that covered many angles including advance publicity, reviews, co-op pages, etc.

Aided by the principal school executive of the district, Dilley composed a letter calling the date to the attention of principals, women's clubs, lodges and societies, then followed up the letter with personal visits. These calls were helpful in obtaining the services of two students who spoke on the picture at the weekly school assemblies. Through the cooperation of the various principals, Dilley was also able to speak before the different schools, for 10 days ahead giving short talks to the higher grade pupils. He also arranged for permission to have students dismissed earlier on two days of the date to attend the matinees.

The City Council was also brought into the picture by the delegation of leading Aldermen to introduce the student-speakers who also spoke from the stage of the theatre, and to speak of their personal contacts with Mr. Flaherty. Letter of endorsement from the Council to the director was also obtained and publicized in the campaign.

Featured in the advertising was a four-page special newspaper section which Dilley was able to put over through the cooperation of leading merchants who placed congratulatory ads in the issue, further spotlighted with a page-one photo of the director and detailed accompanying story. Only cost to Dilley was the theatre ad. In addition, the paper ran the press book elephant weight-guessing contest in advance and

DISPLAY ANIMATION, 1937.

Edited by I. L. Cochrane. Reeder-Morton. 229 pages, cloth, illustrated, indexed. $5.00.

In a business that depends importantly upon display to attract boxoffice attention, one may wonder and with good reason why so little has been done and is presently being done by theatremen generally in the employment of animated displays for lobby, window and street exploitation. It may be that managers believe the cost of such advertisings beyond their budget limitation and a highly technical knowledge necessary to produce successful animations.

If so, then "Display Animation, 1937, the Year Book of Motion Displays" aims to dispel such beliefs. In some 225 pages of text and illustration, this handy and informative volume, edited by I. L. Cochrane, holds much of interest for theatremen who want to know more about it.

The book is divided for convenience into three principal parts: motion diagrams, (100 of them), and other electro mechanical information; mobile colored light, an introduction to its science and practice of displaymanship and, third, merchandising display ideas. Though no theatre displays are included, there are shown scores of photos reproducing representative attention-attractors created for exhibitions, department windows and interiors, quite a number worthy of adaptation by animation-minded theatremen.

Perusal of the pages discovers intriguing ideas for unusual layout and lettering design in addition to working plans including those which tend to simplify the ingenious and highly effective usages of light. Thus science in lighting as pertains to display is reduced to understandable terms in the section given to the mechanics of illumination. To be noted under this heading is a color absorption chart breakdown which shows in detail how to obtain the highest potency of color values in conjunction with specific lighting.

According to Mr. Cochrane, actual tests prove that motion display attracts from four to 10 times more attention. These figures no doubt have somewhat to do with the introduction of more simple and mechanical operating units, he feels, pointing out that an initial $10 bill will now more than cover the cost of an adequate animating device, (i.e., the motor) and the necessary accessories such as drill rod, washers, nuts and bolts.

Study of this commendably-edited volume adds weight to the opinion that animated displays may be elaborated inexpensively to do a more effective job of selling theatre tickets than the conventional lobby "eye-catcher" merely agitated by motion.—A-MIKE VOGEL.

The advertising was of course extensive, one of the standout displays being a shot of the crowds in front of the theatre on opening day. Dilley had the newspaper take a shot of the long lines out front which he incorporated in an ad apologizing for not being able to take care of all those who wanted to attend the premiere. (Ad reproduced on a following page.) Then the paper went all the way by sending special assignment reporter to review the picture, carrying the story the following day in a full column topped by a feature head.

Included in the campaign was a series of radio flashes in the news-of-the-day, ace spots on the daily program. These were promoted at no cost and as a tribute to the director. Over 20 of the leading stores displayed advertising in their windows and printed ones posted widely in and around town. Delivery trucks were bannered and special attention given to the front and lobby display. Shadow box displays, flashers on stair landings were also found effective, and Dilley also distributed heralds on the date in communities as far as 70 miles away.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Atmospheric Box Office

Front of the Fischer Theatre, Danville, Ill., created attention when it was dressed up for "Waikiki Wedding" by city manager Ed Crabtree. Four cutout Hawaiian girls were planted atop boxoffice and geared from back to do a Hulu dance while Hawaiian music was played over p.a. system through invisible speakers.

ENGLISH MEMBER SPEAKS ON PASSES

DEAR MIKE:

Perhaps that old saying "What is one man's meat is another man's poison" could not be more aptly applied than to the question of passes to the showman.

In this town, which has a population of 54,000, we have 9,850 seats of entertainment, which comprise one variety theatre, and five "first-run" cinemas. My own location is certainly the most difficult and inaccessible of the five, and with these facts in mind, it will be obvious the difficulties which confront me.

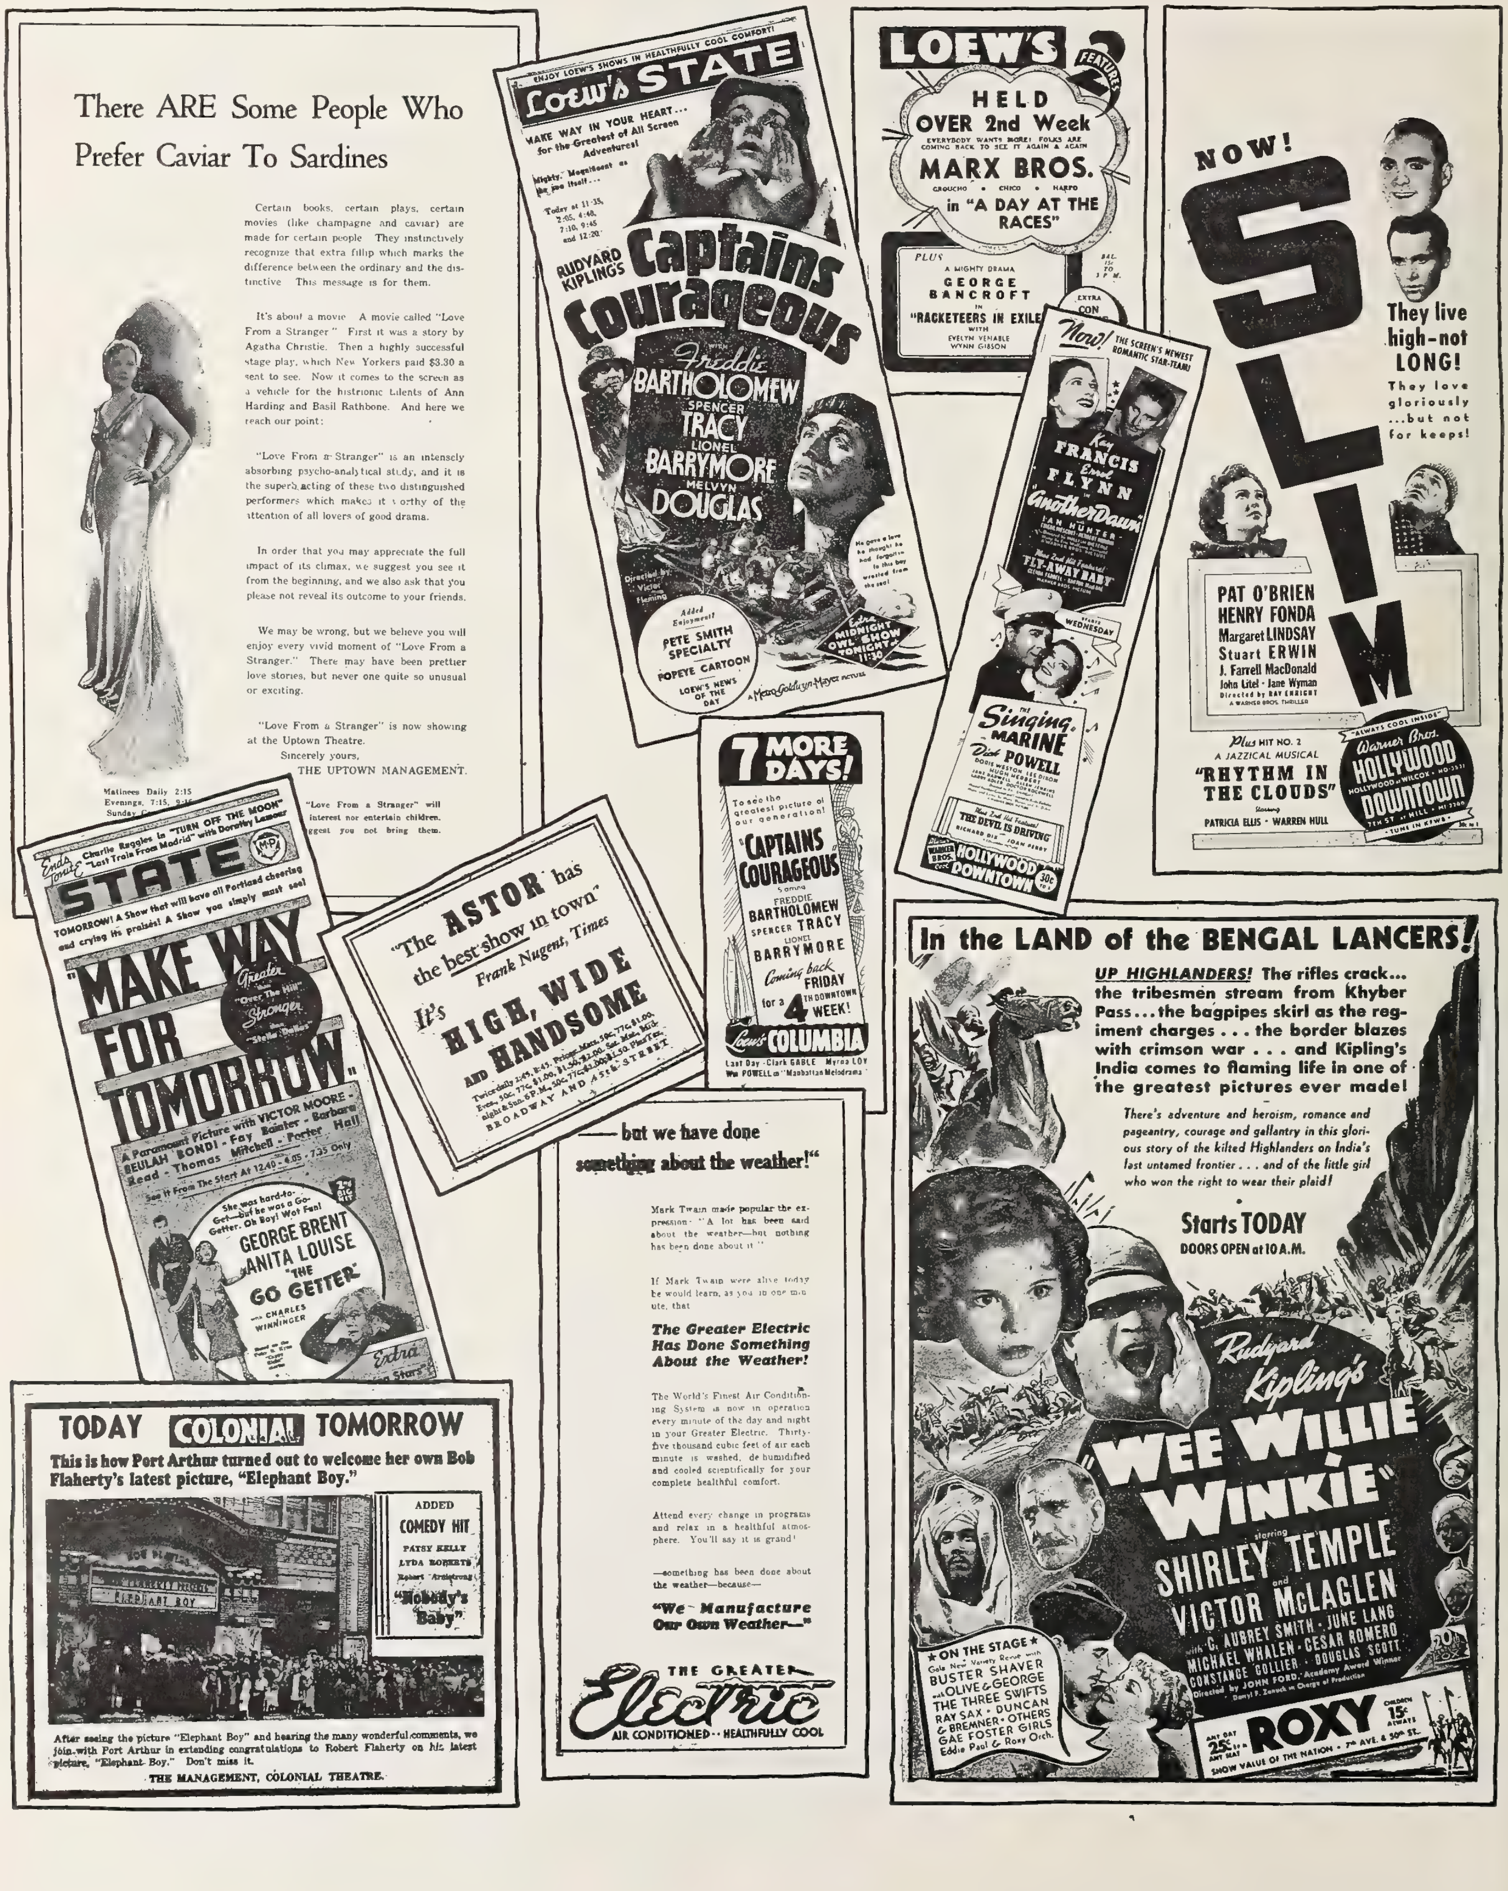
When I took over the reins of office at this cinema I found they had no mailing list or house program. In January, 1936, I decided to introduce a house magazine and also run a cinema club with it. Members joining the club, which had no entrance fee, were offered several privileges and received their magazine post free every month. I called the club the "Tudor Circle." My mailing list did not grow very rapidly, although my magazine was a magazine and not an advertising medium. By the end of the year our membership had grown to 500—enrolling at the rate of 40 to 50 each month.

Just about this time I had read a most interesting article in the Herald on a birthday scheme and I decided to introduce this novelty in my club. Each member on his or her birthday would receive a greeting card which also gave them the privilege of a free seat during the week their birthday came in. This I introduced in January, 1937 (through the magazine), and my membership has grown rapidly from that date onwards. We have shown a steady increase, and our new members now average 160 to 200 each month compared with the 40 to 50 previous to the introduction of the birthday scheme. Perhaps what is still more important, my business has shown a steadily increasing gross. Present membership of the "Circle" is just over 1,400. I only wish you, Mike, could slip over and read the appreciative letters I have received from the recipients of these birthday passes. If you could, then I am certain you would not hesitate to introduce this idea yourself right away.

My views on the other types of pass—the "bill pass"—is rather different. Two years ago the respective managers of all the houses of entertainment in this town met and decided the "bill pass" had served its day of usefulness—it was decided that in its place we would introduce a "privilege ticket." This ticket enables the holder and friend to have two seats in any but the best seats on payment of 15 cents—if the owner came along then he was still required to pay 15 cents.

This innovation was introduced without any complaint—in fact, I believe it was appreciated by those people, because it placed them on a different level at the pay box. This scheme has worked satisfactorily ever since, and I am of the opinion that it could be introduced into any community where the managers can get together and all agree on policy.—KENNETH B. PARKER, Tudor Cinema, Dewsbury, England.

SOME REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS



There ARE Some People Who Prefer Caviar To Sardines

Certain books, certain plays, certain movies (like champagne and caviar) are made for certain people. They instinctively recognize that extra fillip which marks the difference between the ordinary and the distinctive. This message is for them.

It's about a movie. A movie called "Love From a Stranger." First it was a story by Agatha Christie. Then a highly successful stage play, which New Yorkers paid $3.30 a seat to see. Now it comes to the screen as a vehicle for the histrionic talents of Ann Harding and Basil Rathbone. And here we reach our point:

"Love From a Stranger" is an intensely absorbing psycho-analytical study, and it is the superb acting of these two distinguished performers which makes it worthy of the attention of all lovers of good drama.

In order that you may appreciate the full impact of its climax, we suggest you see it from the beginning, and we also ask that you please not reveal its outcome to your friends.

We may be wrong, but we believe you will enjoy every vivid moment of "Love From a Stranger." There may have been prettier love stories, but never one quite so unusual or exciting.

"Love From a Stranger" is now showing at the Uptown Theatre.

Sincerely yours,
THE UPTOWN MANAGEMENT.

ASCAP ACTION ON AFL TIEUP IS DUE SOON

Directorate of Composers' Society Will Meet on Proposals of Mills and Weber

Ultimate entrance of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers into the labor movement was indicated this week, with a definite decision due within the next two weeks, probably earlier.

Within that time, the board of directors of the Society will meet to act upon proposals discussed last week between E. C. Mills, head of the Society's administrative committee, and Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. If the board approves the plan, as seems likely, it will then be submitted to members for general referendum.

Meanwhile, Local 802, the musicians' union, voted overwhelmingly to cease picketing of theatres in the New York area which had been in progress for over a year in an effort to force inclusion of orchestras on the theatres' programs. At the same time a series of conferences has been opened by AFM with radio, transcription and recording companies, to fight the spread of mechanized music with its resultant decreased employment for musicians. If the conferences, which are being held at ASCAP's office at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, do not result in an agreement before August 14th, Mr. Weber warned of a nation-wide strike to stop the use of recordings on the air and in motion picture theatres and restaurants.

ASCAP's admitted interest in affiliating with the labor movement is its wish for support in its drive against adverse legislation passed in five states and considered in more than 20. In the conferences between Mr. Mills and Mr. Weber, means by which the two organizations could combine forces in combating such legislation were discussed, together with a way in which the Society could return the favor for such assistance.

In an interview, Mr. Mills said that one possible method of mutual assistance discussed was a plan by which an interlocking strike would be brought against broadcast studios refusing to acknowledge certain demands of each organization. Under such a plan, a studio refusing to maintain standby orchestras would be denied licenses by ASCAP and, in return, studios with attitudes unfavorable to the Society would open themselves to the leveling of a musicians' strike.

Might Apply to Theatres

This theory of mutual exclusion might be applied on an even wider scale, embracing recording and transcription companies and, possibly, motion picture theatres. In practice, operation of the plan with respect to theatres would take the form of a denial of ASCAP licenses to theatres refusing to include orchestras in their programs.

If affiliation is approved, it will be had in one of three ways, Mr. Mills said. It may take the form of an outright charter from the AFL, a sub-charter from the Federation of Musicians, or simply an agreement between the Society and the Federation providing for joint action along the lines outlined, with the Society retaining its present autonomy. Reports that ASCAP was considering affiliation with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization were declared completely irresponsible, Mr. Mills saying, "We are not a left-wing organization."

"We have arrived at the point where we find ourselves helpless without political support," Mr. Mills added.

"Great combinations of wealth and corporations refuse to recognize lawful property rights and are able to impose their will on legislatures fearful of their power.

"Broadcasters are in the position today where, by absolutely controlling public opinion, they can also control state legislators. They can either elect or reject a politician and politicians, knowing this, are afraid to risk the hostility of the networks in any way. Legislators today have become nothing but ethereal puppets."

It is considered likely that other labor organizations having similar aims and interests will be approached for their support in the anti-legislative drive. In this event, organizations like the radio technicians' union and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees would be asked to join the campaign.

The possibility of a nation-wide strike to tie up virtually the entire music industry in the United States, in the event that AFM conferences with broadcasters and transcription companies fails, while deprecated, is causing concern. The Federation, through Mr. Weber, has warned the companies that failure to attend the conferences would be interpretated to mean that they were not "interested in further services" of musicians after August 14th.

The broadcasting companies planning to attend are: The National Broadcasting Company, the Columbia and Mutual Broadcasting Systems, the National Association of Broadcasters, the Don Lee Broadcasting Company and the Texas Quality and Colonial Networks.

The recording companies and distributors expecting to be present are: RCA Manufacturing Company, Decca Records, the Brunswick Record Company, the Victor Recording Company, Midwest Recordings, World Broadcasting Company and C. P. MacGregor. The transcription firms at the conferences will include the Atlas Radio Corporation, Gromack, Inc., Muzak, Titan Productions, Associated Music Publishers, Inc., and Standard Radio.

Favored on Coast

ASCAP members on the west coast favor the affiliation plan, having indicated "consensus without unanimity" when the proposal was discussed, informally, at the Society's Hollywood meeting last month. It is known, however, that a plain majority will not be sufficient and that unless the referendum shows approval by a "decisive" margin, the proposal will be rejected. Moreover, much will depend upon the "quality" of the ballot, the opinion of the more distinguished members, the "Jerome Kern type," carrying particular weight when and if a plebiscite is taken.

Further evidence of west coast fighting spirit is shown in the meeting scheduled by Local 47 of the Musicians' Protective Association in Los Angeles for consideration of the strike threatened by the AFM. Jack B. Tenney, vice president of the union, which has 5,000 members, said:

"Every time a musician participates in the production of canned music he is working himself out of future employment. The local musicians' craft, third largest craft organization in the world, stand ready to participate in the strike if necessary to curtail the commercial use of transcriptions and records."

ASCAP'S recent circular letter to members, outlining ways of winning public support to the cause by impressing the name of ASCAP on the public wherever possible, brought a response of 800 letters, all enthusiastic. Many of the letters offered additional suggestions, which ranged all the way from having members wear ASCAP buttons on their lapels to proposals for song writers to tour the theatres of the country, familiarizing the public with the aims and attitude of the Society.

Ira Gershwin Goes West

Ira Gershwin, whose collaboration with his brother George on the score of "The Goldwyn Follies" was halted by the death of George Gershwin, has returned to Hollywood to complete the songs with another composer. George Gershwin left a $200,000 estate, naming his mother, Mrs. Rose Gershwin, sole beneficiary.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 78

Bluebook School Question No. 78 was: (A) What is the best evidence that a commutator is in good condition? (B) If scale measurements show that the brush pull varies as the brush is lifted, what condition is indicated and how may it be remedied? (C) How may brush pressure be measured by a rubber band?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; C. Oldham; G. E. Doe; H. Edwards; T. F. Bochert; R. and K. Wells; L. Cimikoski; H. B. Smith; W. Limmroth; L. and F. L. Savlor; J. A. Zachritz; L. F. Hayes; H. Lathrope and M. Dey; W. Edmonds; O. H. Schmidt; J. R. Prater; W. and T. Turk; C. L. Loft; D. Davis and E. M. Brown; A. H. Bradley; A. D. Lonby; C. Caldwell; F. E. Dorp, H. A. Amos and R. Dennis; H. S. Burgin; W. B. Meyers; P. and L. Felt; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; H. T. Watkins, N. S. Reid and D. D. Roberts; T. L. Strobey; E. F. and M. Wentworth; W. L. Morehouse and F. D. Scanlon; T. L. Kent and B. L. Cooper; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; R. H. Carter; H. T. Plum, M. O'Connell and D. A. Shea; B. and M. Walker; S. U. Lamont and P. F. Maxwell; W. Winkler and R. R. Bobbins; R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson; C. H. Lowrie; P. L. Bunt; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacob; T. W. Redhouse; H. L. Williams; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; H. T. Randolph; W. A. Kendal; A. C. Greene; D. Hornbeck and R. Tomby; D. and W. Porter; R. D. Hicks; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; L. M. Roberts and W. C. Bant; R. S. Welch; L. F. and G. Brown; W. E. Richards; E. L. Sanford; W. V. Henderson and T. B. Brown; S. H. Billings; S. Grainger, H. S. Wolf and T. M. Daniels; M. L. Grahame; J. H. Morton; L. B. Knox; L. and W. R. Matthews; G. L. Goss; S. R. Hewitt; H. Bunker; S. N. Lockhard and F. D. Knowles; E. Exline; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; W. L. Morehouse; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; K. L. Brandt; F. W. Singer; L. R. Moore.

(A) T. F. Bochert says, "When there is little or no sparking, its surface smooth, glazed and of a dark brown color, it is conclusive evidence that the commutator is in the best possible condition. When this condition prevails it is very possible that when the commutator is rotated slowly there will be a slight squeak. However, its absence need cause no alarm or suspicion that anything is wrong."

R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson answer, "When the undercuts are of sufficient depth and wholly free from dust or deposit of any kind (brushed vigorously lengthwise once each day with a stiff brush), the surface glazed, perfectly smooth and dark or chocolate brown in color, and there is little or no sparking, it is evident the commutator is in good—in fact, the best possible condition."

Which I would say is an almost perfect answer.

(B) C. Champney says, "If scale measurements show a wide difference in brush pull it indicates that something is too tight—the brush finger or brush in its holder; either that or a good cleaning is needed."

H. B. Smith deals with the question thus: "Condition named indicates the brush is binding in its holder. Remedy, clean both brush and holder thoroughly. Possibly a solvent may be best to clean the holder, but must not be used on a brush. If a brush needs more than a dry cloth cleaning, use No. 00 sandpaper, layed on a perfectly flat board, being very careful not to grind away too much carbon."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 83

(A) Why is it now necessary to substitute the theory that current flows from negative to positive for the older positive-to-negative theory?

(B) Why is knowledge of electrical theory helpful in practical work?

(C) What are atoms? Where do they exist? Of what are they composed? Have we knowledge of anything electrical except what is termed negative?

W. Limmroth says, "Such a condition indicates that a thorough cleaning of the parts is in order. I find that carbon tetrachloride is excellent for cleaning this and all other parts of a generator, including commutator and brushes."

Be careful about brushes. Limmroth apparently has tried it on them and it may be okay. I would like to hear from others who may have used tetrachloride on generator brushes.

(C) L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd answer thus, "Brush pressure may be accurately measured by means of a rubber band in either of several ways. We believe the simplest, most easily applied and quite an accurate method is as follows:

"Secure a new rubber band, say, three or four inches in length. To one 'end' tie a stout string, attaching the other end of the cord to the brush pressure finger exactly at the point of its contact with the brush. Next, slip an ordinary lead pencil, small punch, screwdriver blade or what have you into the other end of the band, and holding the band in such position that it is in line with the brush, pull slowly outward until the finger just loosens contact with the brush, whereupon have an assistant measure the precise distance from point of contact with cord to point of contact of band with pencil, punch or whatever is used, recording the exact measurement. Try it once more to make sure there is no error.

"Next, at a 10-cent store secure some medium weight washers such as are used on bolts. Obtain a receptacle of some kind (a small cloth bag being most convenient) and into this place any weight sufficient to stretch the rubber band almost as much as the brush pull did, and add washers enough to equal the exact stretch. Having done this, it is evident that if these weights be weighed, as a whole, upon any scale of known reliability, their weight will exactly equal the pressure of the brush finger on the carbon, and therefore the carbon pressure upon the commutator. The operation must of course be repeated for each brush the machine uses. If the job be carefully done, the results will be accurate."

Of all the several plans presented this seems to be, as Dodson and Todd say, the simplest. Certainly it will be accurate, if properly done. It seems like a difficult job, but really is not, especially after the washers and bag have been stocked. I would, however, suggest a bag of small pebbles, or even sand, as being equally good or better than the weights named. This plan has the advantage over weighing brush pressure by means of the ordinary spring scale, in that such scales are not sufficiently sensitive to produce accurate results unless one be very careful indeed. A new rubber band will hold its elasticity for quite some while, and a new one is always available. Also, a small postal scale, available at low price, will provide accurate weighing. A bag of small pebbles and such a scale is a very good projection room stock item where motor generators are used, assuming them to be in charge of men who are satisfied only when the equipment is operating at maximum efficiency.

Bluebook School Over 13 Years Old

Occasionally some correspondent asks how old the "Bluebook School" is. To satisfy such inquiriers I looked the matter up, establishing the fact that the "school" was established in the March 15, 1924, issue of Moving Picture World, later absorbed by the MOTION PICTURE HERALD. It therefore reached the advanced age of 13 years last March.

The first question was, "Quote law relating to light intensity at different distances from an open light source, and explain its operation." The best answer was supplied by A. L. Fell of Collingswood, N. J.

INCOME, TAX REPORTS REFLECT UPWARD TREND

Paramount's Second Quarter Earnings Put at $1,307,000; Consolidated Profit $148,712

The week's financial news involving the motion picture and allied fields included Paramount's estimate of second quarter earnings of $1,307,000; Consolidated Film Industries' income report of $148,712 net profits for three months, Heywood-Wakefield's net income of $358,607 for six months, dividend declarations of 87½ cents and $1.40 by RCA and Loew's Boston Theatres, respectively, Internal Revenue estimates of $1,874,775 in collections from amusement taxes in June, and the withholding by the parent Loew's of financial information from the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Motion picture stocks appreciated some $7,608,875 in seven months, as reported elsewhere in this issue.

Paramount's Estimated Net

Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimated its consolidated earnings for the second quarter ended July 3, 1937, at $1,307,000, after all charges including interest, federal taxes (except undistributed profits taxes), depreciation and reserves. Such earnings do not include approximately $340,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially-owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. The combined estimated earnings and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned subsidiaries for the quarter aggregates $1,647,000. This compares with the consolidated results for the second quarter of 1936, which amounted to a loss of $477,461 after applying $800,000 of the inventory reserve provided as of December 28, 1935, and Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially-owned companies totalled $305,000.

There were outstanding as of July 3, 1937, 148,245 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value six per cent second preferred stock. 571,751 shares of cumulative convertible $10 per value six per cent second preferred stock. After deducting $308,130 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these outstanding preferred shares, the remaining $998,870 of consolidated earnings represents $.41 per share on the 2,407,505 shares of common stock outstanding on July 3, 1937. Computed on the aggregate $1,647,000 of estimated earnings and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned subsidiaries referred to above, the earnings per common share, calculated on the same basis, would be $.55.

The 1937 second quarter results include, from June 4, 1937, the earnings of the former Olympia Theatres, Inc., the assets of which were acquired by a wholly-owned subsidiary of Paramount on that date. This was the last of Paramount's major subsidiaries involved in reorganization proceedings.

Each share of first preferred stock is convertible into seven shares of common stock and each 10 shares of second preferred stock are convertible into nine shares of common stock.

Consolidated Film Industries

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and subsidiaries reported consolidated net earnings for the three months ended June 30, last, of $148,712, after deductions for depreciation and normal federal tax, but before provision for federal surtax and undistributed profits of the company and subsidiaries. The net is equal to 37 cents per share on the 400,000 shares of preferred stock outstanding.

The company reported net earnings of $378,416 for the six months to June 30, also after deductions for depreciation and normal federal tax, but before provision for federal surtax and undistributed profits, equal to 95 cents per share on the 400,000 outstanding preferred shares.

SCHENCK EXPECTS $10,000,000 NET

Twentieth Century-Fox net earnings for 1937 are expected to total $10,000,000, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the company's board, said in New York on the weekend.

In 1936 the net was $7,222,955. The company's fiscal year coincides with the calendar year.

Heywood-Wakefield

Heywood-Wakefield Company, manufacturer of theatre and other seats, reported net profit for the six months ended June 30 last, of $358,607, equal to $4.51 per share on 60,000 common shares after dividend requirements on 139,480 shares of Series B first preferred stock and 227 shares of old seven percent first preferred not exchanged under the recapitalization plan.

The net compares with a net profit of $254,948, equal to $2.78 per share on the common stock, for the first six months of 1936.

Sales of Heywood-Wakefield for the first six months of the year showed an increase as compared with the same period last year of 43 percent, and incoming business shows a gain of 31 percent.

Total current assets, including cash, accounts receivable, notes receivable, and inventories were $3,550,474 on Jan. 1, while on June 30, the total current assets were $4,448,365.

Total current liabilities June 30 were $1,430,507 as against $592,500 on January 1 of this year.

Total capital stock outstanding on June 30, was $5,009,700. On January 1 of this year there were $4,519,450 outstanding.

Radio Corporation

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, owner of NBC and Photophone and part owner of RKO, announced that quarterly dividend number six on the outstanding shares of the corporation's $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock was declared by the Board of Directors.

The dividend is 87½ cents a share, covering the period from July 1 to September 30, 1937. It is to be paid on October 1, 1937, to the holders of record of such stock on September 8, 1937.

Mr. Sarnoff added that the dividend will also be paid "as soon as practicable" after October 1, to holders to whom $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock is issued after September 8th and prior to October 1, 1937, upon the conversion of "B" preferred stock of the corporation, or upon the surrender of scrip certificates for fractional shares of $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock.

Loew's Boston Theatres

Loew's Boston Theatres Company, has declared an extra dividend of $1.25 per share, payable August 2 to stockholders of record July 27, and a quarterly dividend of 15c payable at the same time.

Internal Revenue Report

Theatrical attendance in May was at the highest point reached since last December, it was disclosed by the Internal Revenue Bureau's monthly report, which announced that collections from the admission tax in June totaled $1,874,775, an increase of more than $337,000 over the May receipts of $1,537,119 and some $342,000 over the June, 1936, total of $1,532,189.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, last, collections reached a new high at $19,740,191, an increase of $2,628,000 over the $17,112,175 reported for the fiscal year 1936, and for the first half of the current calendar year revenues totaled $9,520,014, an increase of $1,282,000 over the $8,237,304 reported for the corresponding period last year, it was said.

Collections in the third (Broadway) New York district disclosed a decided upturn in taxes on admissions, from $415,918 in May to $494,813 June out of total collections for the district of $552,841, which was an increase of some $68,000 over the May total of $484,691.

Receipts from the tax on free or reduced-rate admissions increased slightly, totaling $2,886 in June against $2,555 the preceding month, but other amusement collections declined sharply, receipts from tickets sold by brokers dropping from $13,179 to $11,101; tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price from $1,803 to $1,623; on permanent lease or use of boxes and seats from $385 to nothing, and from admissions to roof gardens and cabarets from $50,849 to $42,416,

Securities Reports

Taking advantage of the Securities and Exchange Commission's provision that the names of subsidiaries need not be reported if disclosure is "deemed detrimental to the interest of security holders," Loew's Inc., withheld the specification of 53 such units from its most recent report. Nineteen of them are domestic and 34 foreign companies, all doing business abroad.

According to a report to the SEC made public by the New York Stock Exchange, Loew's investments as of August 31, 1936, when the most recent fiscal year ended, amounted to $410,650 for the domestic companies and $1,741,637 for the foreign concerns. For the same year the former made net profits of $84,877 and the latter of $1,966,956.

Loew's, Inc., reported that the salary it paid to Nicholas M. Schenck, president and director, was $312,785 in the most recent fiscal year. David Bernstein, vice president, treasurer and director, drew $213,857, and Arthur M. Loew, vice president, $205,544.

American Seating Net Higher Than Last Year

American Seating Company has listed a net profit of $201,062 for the first half of this year, comparing with a net profit of $20,439 for the corresponding period in 1936.

This is equal to 91 cents a share on 221,062 shares of common stock.

Fox Dividend Ordered

Martin T. Manton, circuit judge of the United States district court, has authorized a three per cent dividend for creditors of Fox Theatres Corporation. The court also has instructed Milton C. Weisman, receiver, to keep enough in reserve to pay William Fox a pro rata share of dividends should his claim against Fox Theatres be held valid.

Rotus Harvey is the new president of the Independent Theatre Operators of Northern California. Mr. Harvey, president of Harvey Amusement Enterprises, which operate more than a dozen houses in the territory, replaces Morgan Walsh, of Redwood Theatres.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

This town is considered a famous health resort. People with all kinds of ailments come here to drink the water in the hope of receiving much benefit from it. Maybe they do, we don't know about that, but we do know that it is a fine place to come during the hot season, for here it's cool and nice.

There are several places of interest around here, the famous plunge bath, the Battle Mountain sanitarium for war veterans, the Wind Cave, and the Black Hills Theatre Company's theatre, which is operated by Clint and Bessie Robbins, two old troupers who are known by almost every theatreman of the middle west.

But speaking of Clint and Bessie, we had them to dinner today. Clint ate his soup with a spoon and Bess—well, she insisted that we do the same thing, which we did, while she ate two necks of a chicken. That's the first time we knew that a chicken had two necks. We have known chickens that had two legs but a double neck chicken is found only in Hot Springs. We have seen some chickens in our home town who had a long neck and we have seen some who had two legs. Well, anyhow, this is a pretty good place to come to if you want to rest, but if you want fish you better bring them with you, for Leo Peterson of the Elks Theatre at Rapid City says their fish are just learning to swim.

The most of you have no doubt heard of Wind Cave. We went through this cave yesterday and found that it has been much improved since we last visited it. The Government has taken hold of it and it has been explored and the passageways opened for several miles beneath the mountain, and it is electric lighted, with electric elevators in certain locations.

We visited this cave in 1914 and it so impressed us with its wondrous beauty that, in a moment of weakness, we wrote a crude description of it together with other spots of the Black Hills which we were induced to have printed in booklet form. We don't know as we could give you a better description of it now, so if you will pardon us we will give you our impression of it at that time.

"Located near the southern extremity of the Black Hills is found the famous Wind Cave. Here the Indian tradition speaks. The violent rushing of the wind in and out of the mouth of this monstrous cavern gives color to their belief that it is the breathing of the evil spirits that dwell therein, and as one descends for hundreds of feet below the surface of the earth, and in the death-like stillness contemplates the surroundings, there comes a feeling of awe and wonder, mingled with fear that the evil spirits might be still lurking within the unseen chambers, until the heart is cheered with the thought that here also have the hosts of Jehovah been victorious over the minions of Satan and driven them back into the bowels of the earth and have prepared the way for the coming of Man.

"Great Caverns, connected by passageways, extend for miles beneath the mountain, and hundreds of chambers, it may be, are still undiscovered. The Divine hand that shapes the destiny of Man is manifest in this wonderful creation. The walls of the chambers where it is said that the evil spirits once held high carnival, have been touched by the brush of the Divine Artist, radiant beauty shines forth from every nook and cranny, and one is lost in utter amazement as he contemplates the scene.

"The oozing of the mineralized water through the ceilings for centuries upon centuries, has crystalized into myriad stalactites and stalagmites that glisten under the calcium lights like countless diamonds.

"The delicate, box-like formations of stalactites, which hang in festoons from the ceilings, give off a musical tone, when tapped like the faroff chimes in old Trinity church.

"Yea, verily, 'In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth,' and if you, dear reader, still doubt the existence of a Divine Power, go to Wind Cave and there determine who created all of this wondrous beauty. Would you come closer to Nature? Would you feel the touch of His Divine finger upon your heart strings? Would you forget for a time the pangs of conscience, the sufferings of erring humanity, the yearnings for things unattainable, the regrets and sorrows for a misspent life? Then come with me to the chambers of this great cave and in the death-like stillness and in total darkness, join with me, as I have joined with thirty other voices, in singing 'Annie Laurie,' 'Abide with Me,' 'He Leadeth Me' and 'Blessed Be the Tie That Binds,' and there will come to you a truer conception of life, that vision of a brighter day."

At Valentine, Nebraska, we stopped and called on Harold and Hazel Dunn, who operate Valentine's favorite playhouse. It's the bright spot of the town and Harold and Hazel work early and late to keep it so. If they get plenty of rain around Valentine and the grasshoppers let the crops alone it looks like business would be good.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlson still operate the Cozy theatre at Bassett, Nebraska. Mr. Carlson was out on some telephone job and we failed to meet him, but we did have a nice visit with Mrs. Carlson.

Horn & Morgan still operate the theatre at Hay Springs, Neb. They have been doing a lot of repairing at the theatre and will soon have it fully completed, and after that is done Hay Springs will not be very far behind the best of them. Hay Springs is in the center of the potato district and Mr. Morgan told us that the largest potato cellar in the world was located there. It holds 110 carloads of potatoes, and there are several other cellars besides. Hay Springs ought to be a pretty good town for Irishmen, but we didn't see any around there.

We had a very pleasant visit with the local manager of the Pace theatre at Gordon, Neb. This house belongs to the Black Hills Amusement Company and was formerly operated by Clint and Bessie Robbins (we were just about to spell Robbins with one "b" but we remember how particular Bess is about that).

Maybe we'll tell you some more about the Black Hills if the sheriff will let us out of this town, but then he's so doggone particular that way.

4,000 SUCCESSES

OFFICIAL British governmental concern about the motion picture industry, as evidenced by the Quota Act discussions, is obviously concentrated on production, forgetting, one may fear, adequate consideration for the importance of the 4,000 screens that serve the public of the United Kingdom.

There need be no argument that the motion picture can be an important servant of the causes of nationalism, and empire. It is plain enough that all over the world—everywhere, in fact, save the United States—governments are in various fashions tending to make instruments of motion picture production.

But that is following, quite, a course of extreme obviousness, and extreme limitation. A motion picture is merely so much celluloid in a can until it reaches a screen and an audience.

In all the world picture Japan alone appears to have a definite consciousness of the importance of the exhibition mechanism and to be engaged in a program of procedure aimed not only at supporting national production but also creating and maintaining national attention for the theatre screen.

SO far as the British governmental concern over pictures is a concern for industrial prosperity, it would appear that the great exhibition investment of today should be held quite as important as a production activity to be cuddled and nursed into prosperity behind walls of nationalism. The notion is after all not at all of a pattern with the great British design of world trade, the trade that made it the great empire. It would seem that a relative minority interest, consisting of investors, present and prospective, in picture production, by reason of their influential positions and connections are getting a disproportionate attention and consideration.

It is for pictures exhibited, not pictures produced, that the public lays down its pounds, shillings and pence.

And the prosperity of four thousand theatres spread over the kingdom would appear to be an important element of a complexion of well being. Four thousand successes can help to make the scene pleasant.

"THE FEEL OF IT"

THE public prints have been dotted of late with the announcements, plots and plans of various Hollywood persons for flitting and transient returns to or appearances upon the stage.

Players famous indeed and costly to the pictures are obviously often both willing and anxious again to face audiences across the footlights, at slight remuneration, even in trivial plays and in such modest playhouses as the resort regions afford.

That manifestation is commonly enough understood as a part of the performer psychology. It is also held, ordinarily, to be a healthy and proper manifestation. It is deemed all right for the actor to seek "the feel of an audience."

But at the same time there is, in some sectors of contemplation and critical commentary, often sharp criticism of the exhibitionisms of Hollywood.

Perhaps after all the player who has "gone Hollywood" with apparently blatantly eccentric manifestations is merely under the pressures of the same impulses, or more than impulses, actual requirements.

It is just possible that the fanfares of Hollywood openings and previews with gaping throngs, the microphones that talk to the nowhere network, the searchlights, the autograph collectors, the clacques—all these, are genuinely integral parts of the creative production process.

Isolated in their golden oasis the players perchance must have this equivalent of the nightly plaudits which so long have encouraged the art of the stage.

It would be a large service if some adequate scientific institution might now engage in research into the endocrinology of applause. If the vital principle, the vitamin of approval, could be reduced to tablet or capsule there would be great economic advantage.

Meanwhile, until that alchemy is achieved, Lady Hollywood is perhaps within her rights, demanding orchids, chinchilla, champagne and pearls. Maybe they give her that "subtle something."

SEX IN MEMPHIS

THE other day Mr. Harry Martin of the Commercial Appeal of Memphis, Tennessee, took "the lady who sits at my elbow and the redhead who sits at my knee" to the movies to see a comedy and found the bill included a trailer on "Smashing the Vice Trust."

". . . Imagine our indignation at having foul glimpses into bawdy houses, pictures of unclad females executing the most vulgar of dances, and other similar and better-unmentioned subject matter slapped into the teeth of our six year old youngster, without advance notice, in the campaign to drum up trade for a slice of cinematic slime. . . ."

And continues Mr. Martin: "So sinister, so suggestive, so subversive is this type of motion picture that organized producers of Hollywood have long since outlawed its manufacture entirely. Only the independent shoe-string producer goes in for the sex pictures in this day of the enlightened film-goer. The established producing companies have learned their lesson. It is high time that the established exhibition companies hereabouts had the same experience."

It is a note of progress when the whole institution of the screen does not share in responsibility for the performance of everyone with access to a camera.

JUST when we'd forgotten about Miss Mae West for the summer, along came New York's Mayor LaGuardia, speaking to a meeting of police chiefs, in a manner of parable in which he remarked his disapproval of a certain legal decision because: "Just as an example, suppose Mae West came to town and suppose I made a date and went to one of those dimly lighted clubby places with her. I would have a tough time convincing my wife I was talking about transit unification." That would make two of us, at least.

This Week

Product Analysis

More than 50 per cent of the feature pictures released during the 1937-'38 season will be comedies and melodramas, according to a classification of 397 films announced by nine companies. There still remains a total of more than 100 films to be decided upon, but to date there is a definite trend toward, first, melodramas, and second, comedies. Musicals rank third, with about 16 per cent of the output scheduled to be of this type. Westerns are in fourth place.

Black Ink

"Black" ledgers in motion picture business became further evident this week when earnings statements for 1937 operations showed substantial profits for Twentieth Century-Fox, Pathe Film, General Theatres Equipment, B. F. Keith Corporation, Keith-Albee-Orpheum and Radio Corporation of America, the film interest of which is in RKO.

The earnings statements, together with Securities and Exchange Commission stock transfer reports for other companies, start on page 55.

Shorter Hours, Higher Costs

Production costs in France have risen as much as 45 per cent as a result of the compulsory 40-hour week, producers have estimated at the end of two months of application of the law. The Workers' Film Syndicate turned down a request of the studios for a split shift of six hours and 40 minutes a day for six consecutive days, from Monday through Saturday.

Pierre Autré's report is on page 69.

Record Grosses

Showings of "Ever Since Eve," "Saratoga," "The Road Back" and "Wee Willie Winkie" and personal appearances of Martha Raye and Duke Ellington brought Chicago record summer grosses, only slightly impaired by a concert given by Lily Pons which attracted 135,000 persons.

On the Line

Studio production, catching up with itself as seasonal schedules neared completion, struck a low ebb, 18 pictures going into work as six were finished. Among those started were several tagged as important in the new season program.

In the Hollywood Scene on page 37 titles and casts are listed and production news is paragraphed.

Taxes on the Rise

New taxation faced the motion picture field in the District of Columbia, where a gross receipts tax was levied against all income in excess of $2,000, and in New York, where the city comptroller has construed the municipal sales tax to be applicable to films produced in New York that are sold locally. New taxes are threatened in Omaha and Detroit.

The taxation situation is summarized on page 78.

Circuit Convention

Officials, managers, bookers and department heads of National Theatres, parent company of the Fox West Coast circuit and its subsidiaries, convened in Colorado Springs for a five-day meeting at which theatre management problems and plans for the year were to be discussed. A television exhibit and demonstrations of the latest in sound reproduction were planned.

The program is reported on page 78.

White Paper Read

To the surprise of many who had expected new Government proposals and to the dismay of those who opposed the new quota as outlined by the British Board of Trade, headed by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, a White Paper, read in the House of Commons as an official Government communication to the members of Parliament, followed closely the original draft for a new Films Act, made public a month ago. The minimum cost clause, object of concern by the CEA and independent exhibitors, remained and the proposal for a quality clause was rejected.

First reactions in London to the reading and plans for the Parliamentary battle expected in the fall are cited and outlined in the story from Bruce Allan on page 79.

Booths Locked

Owners of two New York theatres signed contracts with Local 306, Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union, after projectionists halted evening shows, proclaimed over an especially made sound track that they were on strike for better hours, working conditions and a union contract, and locked themselves in the booths with the announced intention of staying there until an agreement was reached. The managements capitulated at six o'clock the following morning.

The refinement of the sit-down technique is detailed on page 40.

South Sea Realism

Samuel Goldwyn is modestly silent about it, but it is reported in Hollywoodian whispers that "Hurricane" will be unique, perhaps even colossal. Approaching a silent film in its lack of dialogue and making a bid for immortality through an expensive and realistic depiction of nature in the South Seas, the picture is well into production and will be released in November.

Production stills are exhibited and available data reported in Gus McCarthy's pictorial preview on pages 16 and 17.

Comprehensive Guild

Interchangeability, freedom of actors to distribute their activities impartially to screen, stage and radio, is the most difficult problem in the path of the establishment of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, in reorganization destined to become the central control for three guilds which between them will include all entertainment talent and for an alliance of all labor in the amusement industry, an end now contemplated by union and guild leaders.

Progress of the plan is reported fully on page 18.

Wilcox Brings "Victoria"

"Victoria the Great," two hours of biography, romance and affairs of empire, was given a private showing to a group of guests representing the New York sector of the industry, by Herbert Wilcox, producer, Tuesday night. The showing was preceded by a dinner at the Hotel Astor. The picture will not be presented for review in advance of its openings in London, New York and British capitals in September. The bringing of Victoria and her life to the screen is in the nature of a world political event as well as a cinema enterprise. It was a special acquiescence and permission from Edward VIII, involving the enterprise of Charles DeGrandcourt, one of the authors of the script, that primarily made possible the production. Mr. Wilcox has been fortunate, too, in a cooperative attitude from the royal family and the government of Britain, affording extraordinary access to locations, facts and materials.

British Tie

Plans for direct association by Herbert Wilcox, London producer, with RKO Radio's British production program are under way, although preliminary discussions in New York between the producer and company executives have been confined so far to "broad principles." A budget for the project of $4,000,000 is contemplated with which from five to nine pictures will be made.

A report of the conferences and the British producer's cogent remarks on the English situation occupy a column on page 56.

Briskin Signed

No change in the coast production personnel of RKO Radio resulted from conferences in Hollywood among Leo Spitz, president; Floyd Odlum of Atlas Corporation, and Sam J. Briskin, studio executive. Formal announcement of a new three-year contract signed by Mr. Briskin confirmed a statement by Mr. Spitz that studio supervision has been "satisfactory."

Greater Union Trio

Instead of a single successor to Stuart F. Doyle, who resigned as managing director of Greater Union Theatres, the board of the Australian circuit has elected to have a committee of three administer the affairs of the company. All are executives of long standing, Roy Barmby, Arthur Gillespie, and John Evans. Norman B. Rydge, chairman, said the entire circuit is to be overhauled and modernized.

The report by Cliff Holt is on page 68.

Booking Combine

Formation of a new buying and booking combine, composed of Allied of Michigan and the American Theatre Science, is being discussed in Detroit. American Theatre Science now buys and books for some 40 state theatres. The new organization would be in opposition to Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, now booking and buying for 80 theatres, and would divide the state between two aggressive competitors with the new group having preponderant strength.

Dutch Restrictions

Members of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation are considering organization of a board to prepare a scale of theatre prices so as to prevent cut-rate admissions. The low receipts of theatres in Holland are attributed largely by exhibitors to the wave of undercutting, but, more than that, the Federation fears that the financial structure in general will be undermined unless something is done.

This and other developments in the Dutch market are discussed on page 76.

Music Ultimatum

Demands by the American Federation of Music for settlement before August 14th of existing disputes over the use of recordings and transcriptions by radio stations were withdrawn after officials of radio and recording companies agreed that the Federation had some justice on its side. A final meeting to discuss the differences was set for September 16th.

Museum Release

Two Swedish pictures, in one of which Greta Garbo played her first important role, will comprise the first program to be released by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in the fall. Others to be released during the year include "The Birth of a Nation" and "Grass."

The full program is outlined on page 86.

Face Tax Action

Immediate prosecution will be instituted against chain stores and theatres failing to file applications to operate under the new Pennsylvania chain store tax law prior to Thursday, August 5th, at midnight, Stanton J. Griffith Boardman of the state revenue department has warned. It was revealed that to date 77,000 firms eligible for the tax had failed to file. The levy ranges from $1 to $500 on each unit and provision is made for a $50 penalty for each day the taxable firms operate without a permit.

Jack Miller Returns

Jack Miller, who retired a year ago as president of the Chicago Exhibitors Association, is returning to active charge of his theatre interests. In the meantime showmen of Chicago have experienced city hall and state supreme court restrictions on their programs, municipal action barring standing room in the lobbies, rigid inspections, and finally a proposed 3 per cent tax on theatre grosses. Exhibitors are hoping that Mr. Miller will resume activities as liaison man between theatre and city hall.

Chicago news is on page 82.

Bank Night Attacked

Bank Night suffered reversals this week in a number of scattered areas, with interest focussed on Connecticut and Detroit. The decision declaring bank night illegal in the recent test case brought by the State of Connecticut against David Magliora of the Rialto theatre, Windsor Locks, has spurred authorities to prosecute any theatre featuring the promotion idea. The city council of Detroit is considering a proposed ordinance to outlaw games of chance or skill.

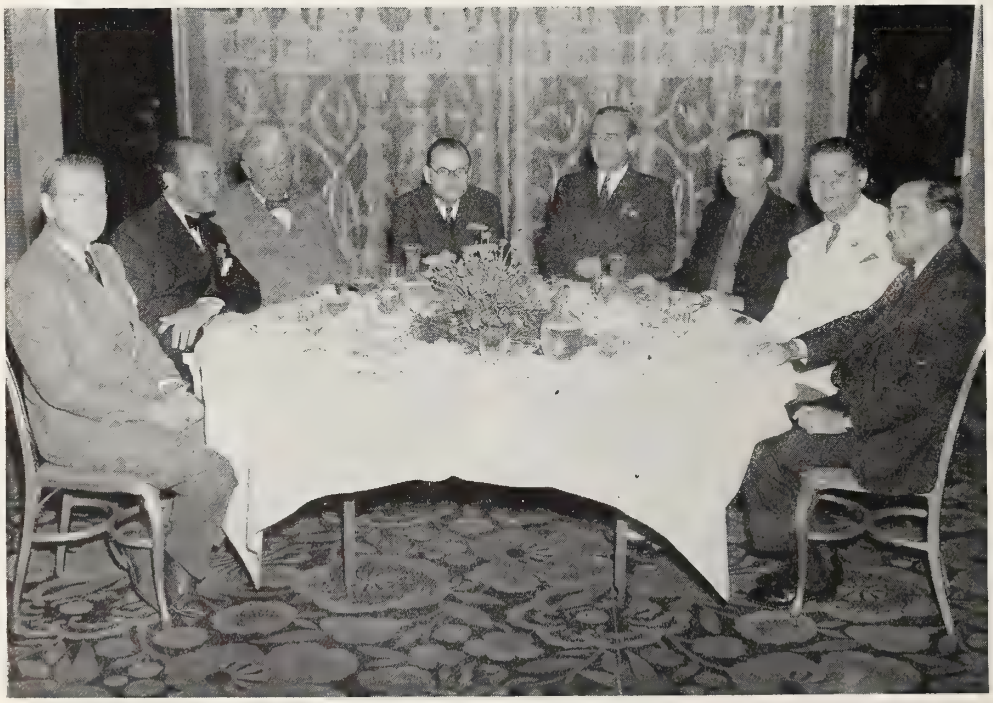
Details are on page 78.

This Week in Pictures

JOHN HAY (Jock) Whitney, right, is chairman of the board of Selznick International and has a substantial financial interest in Technicolor. On the set of the David O. Selznick Technicolor picture, "Nothing Sacred", he is shown discussing the production with William A. Wellman, director.

Freddie Bartholomew, according to his guardian, can save only $12,000 a year out of his salary of $44,000 because of income taxes, legal fees and the division of his earnings among members of his family. The 13-year-old star is here seen sampling an Irish stew, inexpensive and nourishing.

Baron H. von Zeppelin, a member of the German family prominent in the development of lighter than air craft, has been named manager in Japan by Electrical Research Products, Inc. The Baron joined the Western Electric Company in Germany in 1929 and subsequently directed sound recording in Spain, which is now otherwise engaged.



Herbert Wilcox, British producer, played host to 300 representatives of the industry and of the press at a dinner at the Hotel Astor, New York, Tuesday night as a preface to a specal screening of "Victoria the Great," the first print of which Mr. Wilcox brought with him from London and which will be released by RKO as the first of at least five 1937-38 features to be made for that company in England. In the picture from left to right are: Martin Quigley; William Hamilton, member of the board of directors of RKO; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall theatre; Mr. Wilcox; Ned E. Depinet, RKO executive; John W. Alicoate, publisher of Film Daily*; Jules Levy, RKO general sales manager, and Colvin Brown, vice-president of Quigley Publications.*

A statement by Leo Spitz, president of RKO, that the present studio management is satisfactory and that no changes are contemplated was borne out by the announcement that Sam J. Briskin, executive in charge of production who is pictured here at his desk in Hollywood, has been given a new three year contract, signed on the coast following conferences participated in by Mr. Spitz and Floyd Odlum, head of Atlas Corporation which owns a half interest in the company. Mr. Briskin, Russian-born and now 41, entered the film industry through association with the C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation. After organizing Banner Pictures, he joined Columbia and during his eight years under contract to that company he was an important factor in its attainment of major rank. Most recent of his productions under the RKO banner have been "New Faces of 1937" and "The Toast of New York".

MELODRAMA AND COMEDY LEAD NEW SEASON FILMS

Analysis of Pictures Planned by 10 Companies Shows Musicals Third and Westerns Fourth in the Percentage of Product

The public wants action and laughter in its motion pictures, if the producers are judging its preferences correctly in their preparations for the new season. Analysis of the product already announced by ten companies, including all the largest studios, shows that melodramas and comedies will comprise more than 50 per cent of the productions already planned for 1937-38. Musicals will rank third and westerns fourth in percentage of product, each accounting for 15 per cent.

Programs for the companies call for release of a total of from 507 to 525 pictures, but the stories for only 391 features and eight serials have been determined. The types, the number of films for each and the comparative percentages of output follow:

	Total Number	Percentage of Product		Total Number	Percentage of Product
Adventure	18	4.5	Juvenile	4	1.0
Biographical	6	1.5	Melodrama	108	27.2
Classical	1	0.3	Musical	66	16.5
Comedy	94	23.7	Mystery	28	7.2
Gangster	6	1.5	Western	58	14.6
Historical	8	2.0

Seventeen of the features will be in color.

Eight serials have been placed upon the production schedules to date.

While there appears to be a dearth of juvenile pictures, companies are placing child players in roles that conform to their ages, dropping the films from the classification of juvenile. Through this medium, the companies aim to retain the popularity of child actors and actresses instead of dropping them from the time they are too old to play child parts until they become old enough to take adult roles.

United Artists plans to use color in seven of its 22 pictures, but other companies are not following this procedure to any great extent. Including UA's seven productions, the total for the ten companies is only 17, or seven per cent of the total. Paramount and Warner Brothers each intend to produce four in color while RKO Radio has plans for two in addition to Walt Disney's animated feature, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

As to the source of the stories, there is an overwhelming majority of originals. Plays rank as a distant second and novels are in third place. Although 391 pictures have been decided upon, the source of only 310 of the stories could be determined. They are:

Book	25	Original	183
Magazine	30	Operetta	1
Novel	33	Play	38

In the field of musical productions, there is a marked swing toward comedies instead of romantic stories.

Grand National is planning five of the six gangster or G-man pictures included in the 391 production total.

INDUSTRY'S PROFIT SET AT $50,000,000

A 40 per cent increase in profits for the motion picture industry in 1937 as compared to last year is predicted in an article published in the Los Angeles Times.

"More than $50,000,000 will be taken in by the film industry during the current year in an unprecedented rise of revenue, according to advance estimates in Wall Street and other authentic forecast circles," the newspaper said.

Columbia Product Leans to Comedy

A breakdown of Columbia's product reveals that of 62 features, 22 will be westerns. Of the remaining 40, 24 have been decided upon and they show a decided leaning toward comedy. Eight are listed as straight comedies, while five others are to be comedy melodramas.

PRODUCTION COSTS INCREASES NOTED

Steadily mounting production costs must be answered with an increase in admission prices or a departure from the double feature practice, according to George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists. Many of the new season's product are listed with a budget of over $1,500,000, Mr. Schaefer said.

He also pointed out that virtually every company has concentrated upon speeding up production during the last several weeks with the result "the exhibitor has awaiting him more topnotch pictures for immediate playing time than he has seen during this month in recent years."

"HURRICANE" STORY OF

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

ORDINARILY not given to making optimistic predictions about his productions, Samuel Goldwyn feels that he has a truly great picture in "The Hurricane." Well, at the moment, Mr. Goldwyn, currently in the midst of his most ambitious production program, to which he has earmarked $10,000,000, doesn't have to do much talking, personally, about his $1,500,000 "The Hurricane." Others are eager and anxious to do it for him. The gentry who like to be able to say "I told you so" are doing Mr. Goldwyn's talking. Nevertheless Mr. Goldwyn told A-Mike Vogel and the writer, both of whom doubted, that "Stella Dallas" would be a sensation and that "Hurricane" would be better.

It may be well to examine the material that is being marshaled in an effort to make "The Hurricane" one of the greatest pictures of all time. In the first place, it will be the nearest approach to a silent picture, although in its most important sequences it roars with noises, that motion picture production has attempted since the advent of sound. The dialogue script is so meager as to seem impractical, yet it is likely that many will consider it award-winning Dudley Nichol's masterpiece. The story, a creation of Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, who wrote "Mutiny on the Bounty," mingles tender romance and amazing spectacle in heroic proportions. Its direction was entrusted to that master craftsman of realism, John Ford.

Dramatic vigor and pictorial appeal, from which have been stripped all cinematic non-essentials, predominates. Approximately one-third of the running time will be devoted to picturization of a devastating hurricane, staged by James Basevi, who created the earthquake in "San Francisco".

C. Aubrey Smith, late of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The Garden of Allah" and "Wee Willie Winkie," is the most familiar personality. The leads are played by Dorothy Lamour, recently featured in "Jungle Princess" and presently in "High, Wide and Handsome" and Jon Hall, once known as Charles Locher and seen in one or two Charlie Chan pictures. In other important roles are Mary Astor, seen in Goldwyn's "Dodsworth," the accomplished Raymond Massey and Jerome Cowan and Thomas Mitchell. To be seen also are Mamo Clark and Movita Castaneda, the native girls in "Mutiny On the Bounty," and Reri, the girl of F. W. Murnau's "Tabu".

This South Sea saga, unlike most of its predecessors, is devoid of the formula claptrap, broken down beachcombers, cannibal chieftains and faithless white lovers. It will be available for public inspection in November.

ACTORS LEAD DRIVE FOR SINGLE LABOR CONTROL OF AMUSEMENTS

Musicians and IATSE to Join Stage, Screen, Radio Guilds In Establishing Central Body For Cooperative Organization

Formation of one mammoth labor combine, embracing the entire amusement field and including the Associated Actors and Artists of America, the American Federation of Musicians and IATSE, the mechanical employees' union, will be the sequel to the AAAA shakeup of last week, it was indicated in an announcement that an American Federation of Labor council, made up of representatives of those groups, would be formed to undertake organizing the entire amusement field in a large cooperative membership drive.

Individual union autonomy is not to be disturbed, but the close collaboration of all unions under the plan is expected to give theatrical labor a new solidarity, making easy cooperation of all groups with each other.

George Browne, president of IATSE, is the chief organizer of the new council which is said to have been planned for months. The drive for membership would run the gamut from theatre usher to grand opera diva and would knit radio, motion pictures, stage, night clubs, opera, burlesque and vaudeville into a labor behemoth.

The chief problem in the reorganization of the AAAA, announced last week, is the question of interchangeability of membership, and that is the problem causing the greatest administrative difficulty in formulating the new setup, Kenneth Thomson, head of the Screen Actors Guild, said in New York this week.

Clarifying operation of the new consolidation, Mr. Thomson said that interchangeability implied freedom of artists to perform in various theatrical fields—radio, screen and stage. The union covering the field upon which the bulk of the artist's livelihood depends will be the one directly serving him, according to Mr. Thomson. Under the interchangeability plan, the performer will have free movement in all theatrical fields without the payment of overlapping initiation fees.

The reorganization will not result in sympathy strikes, with constituent unions of the AAAA cooperating in the possible walkout of any other member union, he said. It, however, will eliminate the ability of members of fellow-unions to break the strike of an affiliate by offering to work in place of striking union members. Thus, if members of the radio unit were called on strike, members of the Screen Actors Guild could not be cast in their place, said Mr. Thomson.

The new arrangement places the Screen Actors Guild in a position of dominance in the new labor setup, with Mr. Thomson, as head of the screen group, becoming of increased importance in the labor picture. The Screen Guild, with a membership of 9,000 as compared to Actors' Equity with an enrollment of 3,500, is in a position to control the policies of virtually all theatrical labor.

CHIEFS OBJECT TO "MOVIE COPS"

The New York Association of Police Chiefs does not like the manner in which detectives and other police officers are portrayed in motion pictures. And, what's more, the association is going to do its level best to have all "dumb cop" characters eliminated from pictures.

A resolution to the effect was adopted by the association after being introduced by John J. O'Connell, deputy chief inspector of New York police. Specifically, the organization is going to seek to have censors suppress "the portrayal of men and women detectives as ungentlemanly or unwomanly, without culture or good manners."

Although member unions of the AAAA will retain their autonomy, major policies will be formulated by the parent body and submitted to constituent groups for approval. It is in this formulation that the Screen Actors Guild will be in a position to exercise its control, if it chooses. The Screen Guild becomes not only the largest member in the new combination but also the wealthiest, its dues being higher than those required of Equity members.

Organization of the radio field already has been started by the radio unit, which selected for its title, the American Federation of Radio Actors at a meeting last week. It will receive its charter from the AAAA as soon as the latter's board of directors feels the extent of its membership merits it. The radio unit has inherited 600 members as a nucleus from Equity which pledged them in its previous attempts to organize the broadcast field.

Organization of radio will be supported financially by the Screen Actors Guild, in large part, with Equity participating. The aim of the drive is to enroll every radio performer with the exception of musicians whose status under the American Federation of Musicians is constant.

The question of overlapping jurisdictions under the new plan is a knotty one, Mr. Thomson said. The council of the AAAA is studying the problem and hopes to arrive at some solution to the many complications arising out of union province.

Free passage of actors from the various theatrical fields is the nerve-center of the plan, and the instrument for the achievement of this is the central body of the AAAA. The new setup is to cost an immediate $25,000 for establishment of administrative machinery, the brunt of this to be met by Screen Actors Guild and Equity. The salary to be paid Frank Gillmore, who gradually will relinquish his duties as head of Equity to devote his attention to leading the AAAA, will be $13,000 a year.

Musicians Prepare Bid

Outside the AAAA is the American Federation of Musicians which, together with International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, is preparing an invitation to the Screen Actors Guild to join their 25-year-old working agreement, providing for mutual support and assistance. The Screen Actors Guild is certain to accept this overture in return for past cooperation given it by the AFM in disputes with the Motion Picture Producers' Association. The combined membership of the three organizations would be over 25,000, making it a powerful labor combination in Hollywood.

Mr. Thomson, who expressed enthusiasm for such an alliance, left Wednesday for the West Coast to continue arbitration of disputes arising out of the Screen Guild's contracts with the producers. With both sides in conciliatory mood and the differences of minor importance, no rupture is anticipated in the pact between the actors and producers. One question relates to the "weather permitting" clause whose elimination by the Guild the producers feel is unjust.

Mr. Thomson arrived in New York last week to negotiate the closed shop agreement with eastern producers. The deadline for signing of the contract had been set for August 1st, but last-minute balks by the producers resulted in a concession and extension of the deadline for a short time. Paramount, Warner Brothers, Educational, the March of Time, and a half dozen commercial producers are involved.

A 35-page constitution for the American Federation of Radio Actors has been drawn up and approved by the Screen Actors Guild and Equity. It is understood that a board of 45 members will be set up to govern and administer the baby union with local boards to be established in some ten key cities in the United States. The west coast division of Radio Equity has approved the new arrangement and is 80% organized, officials claim.

One feature of the interchangeability idea is the privilege of "honorary withdrawal" from unions covering fields in which the performer is no longer active. In practice, this means that an actor who deserts the stage for the screen would not be obliged to continue payment of dues to Actors Equity, but would be permitted to withdraw without penalty of suspension.

Rumors that the Screen Actors Guild would attempt a revision of its contract with Equity, under which it makes financial commitments in return for the surrender by Equity of the motion picture field, were denied. The Guild will seek no immediate concessions from Equity on the contract and will live up to its present obligations, Mr. Thomson said.

Mr. Thomson is expected to return from the Coast to appear in a John Golden play, "Susan and God," in September. The effect of his appearance on Broadway in his official position with the Guild is not known, but it is considered unlikely that he will be able to continue, with equal prominence, in both a labor and legitimate theatre role.

Financial Autonomy for Writers

Meanwhile, financial autonomy has been granted the Screen Writers Guild by the Authors League of America, the parent body, in Hollywood. The Writers Guild requested independence to enable it to fight a rival group, Screen Playwrights, Inc., which it terms a company union.

Leaders of the Writers Guild claim majority membership of the 455 writers now working in the studios. Of this number, Dorothy Parker, chairman of the membership committee, said that 269 were associated with the Guild and 125 have no affiliation with labor at all. Under the new setup, the Guild will collect and retain dues and will have complete autonomy except in cases affecting the dramatists, authors or radio writers' guilds and other Authors League bodies.

Trailer Preview

For the first time in history a trailer has been previewed. The subject was MGM's six-and-one-half minute advance on "Broadway Melody of 1938." A pronouncedly different type of preliminary interest producer, devoid of hackneyed whoop, holler and trick stuff, the trailer gets over its selling message in a novel and entertaining way.

The departure makes use of a story idea in which there are a star, comedy, suspense, melodrama, action and surprise. As a press agent, Robert Taylor approaches a motion picture editor. Combining dialogue and action, he takes a series of stills from his brief case. As he describes the personalities, the stills become animated and, in turn, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, Judy Garland, Buddy Ebsen, Charley Taylor, eventually Taylor himself, are seen in action before the trailer concludes with a brief glimpse of the picture's big production number.

Produced by Frank Whitbeck's MGM studio advertising department, the trailer was presented to an audience in the Ritz theatre in the manner customery with feature previews. A smattering of applause followed.

Production Ebb

The production level came down the last week in July with 18 pictures completed and only 6 started.

Universal finished four. Most important is "100 Men and a Girl," in which something decidedly new in the line of music reproduction will be heard. Deanna Durbin, Leopold Stokowski and Adolphe Menjou are featured, with Mischa Auer, Alma Kruger, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Frank Jens, Clyde Cook, Christion Rub and Heine Conklin in support. The producing and directing team of Joe Pasternak and Henry Koster, who made "Three Smart Girls," were again on the job. The featured players in "Carnival Queen" are Dorothea Kent, Robert Wilox, Hobart Cavanaugh and David Oliver. Nate Watt directed. "Sudden Bill Dorn" features Buck Jones, Noel Francis, Evelyn Brent, Frank McGlynn, Sr., Harold Hodge and Ted Adams. Ray Taylor directed. In "Behind the Mike," which Sidney Salkow directed, William Gargan, Judith Barrett, Don Wilson and Sterling Holloway will be seen.

Radio Finishes Four

Four pictures also finished at RKO-Radio. Here, too, a seasonal leader, "Stage Door," is included. A Pandro Berman production, directed by Gregory LaCava, it co-stars Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers, features Adolphe Menjou, Gail Patrick, Constance Collier, Andrea Leeds, Samuel B. Hinds, Lucille Ball, Ann Miller, Pierre Watkin and Franklin Pangborn. Additionally there are a score more speaking parts. "Music for Madame," a Jesse Lasky production, will present Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine, Lee Patrick, Alan Mowbray, Erik Rhodes, Bradlev Page, Frank Conroy and Billy Gilbert. John Blystone directed. In "Forty Naughty Girls," a Stuart Palmer story, James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, Marjorie Lord, George Shelley, Joan Woodbury, Edward Marr, Frank M. Thomas, Alan Edwards, Barbara Pepper and Tom Kennedy will be seen. Edward Cline directed. "Saturday's Heroes," a football film, will present Van Heflin, Marian Marsh, Richard Lane, Frank Jenks, Minor Watson, Walter Miller and Alan Bruce. Edward Killy directed.

Paramount completed three productions. The cast of "Sophie Lang Goes West" lists Geryrude Michael, Lee Bowman, Sandra Storm, Larry Crabbe, Barlowe Borland, C. Henry Gordon, Archie Twitchell and Nick Lukats. Charles Reisner directed. The featured players in "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" are John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard, E. E. Clive and Reginald Denny. Louis King directed. "Partners in Crime," which Ralph Murphy directed, will present Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns, Muriel Hutchison, Porter Hall, Charles Wilson, Inez Courtney and Lucien Littlefield.

FROM THE RUSSIAN, SO TO SPEAK

The business of changing titles has reached flood stage. MGM labored with "Madame Walewska" for more than four months, during which time the publicity department caused that title to be published several million times. The day the picture finished it was dubbed "Conquest."

Warner Brothers was not unwilling to let the world know it had paid a pretty penny for the screen rights to "Tovarich." The piece went into production bearing the title "Tonight's Our Night."

LEO BARS THE SUN IN STAR CONTRACTS

Hollywood, the land of sunshine, is up in arms over Old Sol. Sunburn has cost the studios thousands of dollars in disorganized production schedules and now the colony is taking legal means to prevent every day from being Sunday for the stars.

The serious illness of Bette Davis, suffering from sun stroke, has led the studios to insert "no sun" clauses in stars' contracts, preventing them from smoldering on Malibu or on lawn. Warner Baxter, Madeleine Carroll and Sylvia Sidney are a few whose contracts forbid exposure to the ultraviolet rays.

Deanna Durbin, Marlene Dietrich, Pat O'Brien, Rosalind Russell and Maureen O'Sullivan are some whose blisterings have been costly to their studios. Jean Harlow's fatal illness, which had sunburn as its genesis, inspired MGM's action.

Two films came off the program at MGM. "Bad Guy" will offer Bruce Cabot, Virginia Grey, Edward Norris, Jean Chatburn, Cliff Edwards, Charley Grapewin, Warren Hymer and John Hamilton. Edward Cahn directed. In the second and more important picture, "Big City," Spencer Tracy and Luise Rainer are the stars. The support includes Victor Carconi, Oscar Shea, William Demarest, Russell Hopton, Andrew Tombes, John Arledge, Helen Troy, Janet Beecher, Ray Walker, Eadie Adams, Eddie Quillan, Guinn Williams, Alice White and Regis Toomey. Frank Borzage directed.

Monogram completed "Atlantic Flight." The cast includes Dick Merrill, John Lambie, Paula Stone, Weldon Heyburn, Milburn Stone and Ivan Lebedeff. William Nigh directed.

Grand National checked the Alexander Brothers' production, "Here's Flash Casey," off its active list. Cast names are Eric Linden, Boots Mallory, Cully Richards, Howard Lang, John Crehan and Holmes Herbert. Lynn Shores directed.

Warners concluded work on "The Great Garrick." Brian Aherne is starred, Olivia DeHavilland, E. E. Horton, Luis Alberni, Lana Turner and Marie Wilson are featured, and the support lists Linda Perry, Craig Reynolds, Dorothy Tree, Henry O'Neill, Trevor Bardette, Etienne Giredot, Harry Davenport and Fritz Leiber listed among the support. James Whale directed the Mervyn LeRoy Production.

Last of the finished pictures, "I Met My Love Again," a Walter Wanger United Artists production, will present Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Alan Marshall, May Whitty, Tim Holt, Louise Platt, Dorothy Stickney, Florence Lake, Alice Cavenna, Gene Hall and Bentley Hewitt. Arthur Ripley and Joshua Logan co-directed.

Warners Start Two

In the rush of completing pictures only Warner Brothers started two films. Cast for "One More Tomorrow" are Dick Foran, June Travis, John Litel, George Purcell, Veda Ann Borg, Tommy Bupp, Mabel Hart, Robert Homans and Jerry O'Gatty. Frank McDonald is assigned to direct. As the week closed "Without Warning" started with Boris Karloff, Jane Wyman and Eddie Cravens listed as principals. John Farrow is directing.

This is "My Wife" started at MGM. The cast names George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson, Gertrude Michael, Sidney Blackmer, Cliff Edwards, Suzanne, John Wray, Helen Jerome Eddy and Toby Wing. Errol Taggart is directing.

Columbia started "Women of the Night," with C. C. Coleman, Jr., directing. It will feature Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells, Ralph Byrd, Harry Barris, Cully Richards, Arthur Loft, John Gallaudet, Louise Stanley, Paul Fix and Thurston Hall.

With Bud Barsky producing and Charles Lamont directing, "Wallaby Jim of the Islands" was started for Grand National release. George Houston, Ruth Coleman, Namo Clark, William Von Bricken, Douglas Walton, Colin Campbell and Syd Saylor are the principals.

Supreme Pictures started "Arizona Gunfighters." Bob Steele is featured with Jean Carmen, William Farnum, Ernie Adams, Lew Meehan and John Merton. Sam Newfield is directing.

All Warner theatre managers will attend a one-day meeting in Philadelphia, August 17th, for discussion of next season's product. Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, and Joseph Bernhard, general Warner circuit manager, will be present.

"Quintuple Bill" Offered by Dakota Owner as "Cure-All" for Doubles

A bumper show, consisting of five features and lasting six hours, is to be periodically offered the patrons of the Munro theatre, Rolla, North Dakota, as a possible cure-all of the double feature problem.

By occasionally blanketing patrons with omnibus offerings, Manager R. T. Foley hopes to do away with twin bills. If the quintuple program is effective, he plans to make it a monthly feature.

The first application of the idea was made last month when the Munro showed five Columbia pictures, "Meet Nero Wolfe," "End of the Trail," "Pennies from Heaven," "Adventure in Manhattan," and "Come Closer, Folks." Three performances were given, starting at 8 a.m., 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., with one-price admissions at, respectively, twenty, thirty and forty cents.

Seats for the marathon were on sale two weeks prior to play date and issuance of tickets was regulated in a way that prevented standing room. Patrons were notified of the time each film was to be shown, enabling them to commute between office, home and theatre during tiresome stretches of the six-hour endurance contest.

Musicians Delay Call for Strike

A threatened strike by members of the American Federation of Musicians, to check what they claimed were abuses in the field of mechanical music, was averted last week when executives of radio networks and record and transcription companies acknowledged the justice of the union's claims and asked for a month's time to consider remedies. The AFM's demand for settlement by August 14th was withdrawn after the radio and federation officials agreed to meet again September 16th.

After four days of conferences in the office of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Joseph N. Weber, federation president, said the union's original demands had been "considerably modified."

A scheduled performance of "Carnival in Flanders" at the Gem, Far Rockaway, Lnog Island, was cancelled at the instigation of American League Against War and Fascism upon information that the distributor, American Tobis Corporation, is under ban of the League.

Chicago Grosses Setting Records

Chicago's loop theatres are attracting such large crowds, grosses for August are expected to near the peak figures for the various houses.

Gross for the week at the Chicago, a 4,000 seat house where Martha Raye is making a personal appearance, is expected to be about $60,000 while the average week's gross is $30,000. The picture current with the personal appearance of the Paramount Star is "Ever Since Eve."

At the United Artists, "Saratoga" finished a first week with a gross more than double the average $15,000. The film is holding up well and appears to be set for a run of four or five weeks. At the Palace, "The Road Back" with Duke Ellington on the stage will gross about $28,000. "Wee Willie Winkie" at the Roosevelt will hit near the $20,000 mark for the first week which is $10,000 above normal.

The personal appearance of Lily Pons at the free music concert in Grant Park, hurt business last wekend when it drew a crowd estimated at 135,000.

Fortington's Spot Unfilled

The Paramount board will not appoint a successor to the position recently resigned by H. A. Fortington, in an effort to achieve a small board composed primarily of management men. Future vacancies will be either unfilled or else undertaken by operating executives.

Allied Maps Luncheons

Weekly Tuesday luncheon meetings have been scheduled by Allied Theatres of Connecticut during the buying season. The legal department is analyzing the new contracts, including those on unionization.

Earthquake tremors, lasting 21 seconds, emptied theatres in a wide area in Mexico Monday. Little damage was reported and theatres were not physically affected.

Details Completed For RKO Setup

The final draft of the reorganization plan of RKO has been completed, Leo Spitz, president, announced on his return from Hollywood this week. No delay is expected in the formation of the new setup with the denial by Judge Robert P. Patterson of the motion of the Orpheum preferred stockholders for leave to appeal the Federal court decision upholding the sale of Orpheum's assets to Stadium Theatres Corporation, RKO subsidiary.

Mr. Spitz, highly enthusiastic over prospects for the coming year, said three "A" pictures for the new season are now ready for release. He added that all 48 features scheduled will be made.

The motion of the Orpheum stockholders to appeal the sale of Orpheum assets to Stadium Theatres Corporation was denied in U. S. Circuit Court. The stockholders, through their attorney, Isador J. Kresel, also sought to bring action against former RKO and Orpheum officers for alleged dissipation of Orpheum assets prior to the bankruptcy of the circuit. They also sought to have the circuit removed from bankruptcy and governed by RKO's reorganization under section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act.

The stockholders, denied in these motions, now have one alternative, application for a writ of certiorari from the U. S. Supreme Court, considered an unlikely procedure.

Metro Sets British Producing Staff

Completion of MGM's British production setup was announced by Michael Balcon prior to his sailing for England this week to supervise production there.

Margaret Booth will be supervising editor. Hal Rosson will be cameraman on British production and Joe Newman will be unit production manager. Edward O'Brien will be in charge of the story department, H. G. Bozall will be production manager and S. C. Balcon will assist his brother. Robert Ritchie will be in charge of talent for the new studio.

Studios will be established on Mr. Balcon's arrival in England and work on the first production, "A Yank at Oxford" will start September 1st. Robert Taylor and Maureen O'Sullivan, stars of the picture, and Jack Conway, director are due in New York from Hollywood in two weeks.

BOY SCOUTS THANK NEWSREELS, PRODUCERS

To the Editor of the Herald:

The first National Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America has been successfully concluded and as you know, it received a great deal of attention from the newsreel companies and motion picture producers.

I thought you, as editor of the publication that so effectively represents the industry, would convey to these people our grateful appreciation for the part they played in helping make this great gathering of boys an outstanding success.

During the period of the Jamboree we had a great number of newsreel camera crews working on the campsite as well as a number of motion picture people. While we had an unusually tight program, these men showed us the utmost courtesy and cooperation.

All of the executives had nothing but praise for the men representing your industry and it is a great source of satisfaction for me, personally, to be able to acknowledge their rich contribution to the advancement of Scouting. — LESLIE C. STRATTON, National Director of Public Relations, Boy Scouts of America, 2 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.

GB Tieup Unchanged, Robert Rubin Says

No change is contemplated in the MGM-Twentieth Century-Fox-GB setup abroad, J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of MGM, said on his return from a European story-purchase trip this week.

Mr. Rubin said that he had met Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board for Twentieth Century-Fox, on two occasions while abroad, but the situation had not come up for discussion between them. Some of the stories bought by Mr. Rubin are for the MGM production unit to be established in Britain.

Approves Pulitzer Idea

The proposal for the establishment of an annual Pulitzer Prize for motion pictures received the approval of Major Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers, in a letter to Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the graduate school of journalism at Columbia University.

Cosman, Inc., in Bankruptcy

J. T. Cosman, Inc., film sales agency, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the U. S. district court, listing liabilities of $119,332 and assets of $26. The $116,853 judgment won by the Gevaert Company against the agency last June is the chief item in the list of liabilities.

Rowland Joins Republic

Richard Rowland, who resigned as Grand National producer last week, has joined Republic as executive assistant to Moe Siegel, president. Mr. Rowland succeeds Shepard Traube, who is to devote his attention entirely to writing.

Griffis Seen Active In UA Option Deal

Possibility of participation by Humphrey, Noyes & Company, brokerage firm having a substantial interest in Paramount, in the Samuel Goldwyn-Alexander Korda option deal to acquire control of United Artists, was suggested when Stanton Griffis, partner in the brokerage firm, sailed on the Normandie with A. H. Giannini, UA president, on Wednesday.

At first describing the trip as a "vacation," Mr. Griffis later conceded that "a little business" may also enter into it. Mr. Griffis, who is also chairman of the Paramount executive committee, declined reply to a question asking whether a financing deal may be in the offing.

It was recalled that on Mr. Korda's return to New York, following his acquisition with Samuel Goldwyn of the United Artists' options, he was in long conference with Mr. Griffis, but Mr. Griffis minimized the significance of the discussions, saying that Mr. Korda is a "very old friend of mine" and that the talks were merely personal.

Recent reports that Mr. Griffis had conferred with Mr. Goldwyn during a Hollywood visit linked with the belief that Humphrey, Noyes, through Mr. Griffis, is being interested in the option deal. The options may be lifted for $6,000,000 at any time up to the end of this year.

Reduce Due Period On Carrier Bills

in Washington

Exhibitors receiving their supplies and programs by motor carrier will be given a period of seven days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, in which to pay their transportation bills, and the carriers will be given the same period to present statements, under an order issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission this week. The order is effective October 1st.

The new ruling supersedes an order put into effect last August providing for the payment of bills within 15 days from the time of delivery of the shipment.

Issuance of the order has been awaited since a hearing on June 28th, at which Edward G. Levy, general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Guy K. Stewart, of the National Film Carriers Association, submitted objections to a proposal which would require rendition of statements by motor carriers within five days and their payment within eight days thereafter.

While the Commission in its order appears to have felt that the objections to the five-day limit were justified, it ignored the argument for more than eight days for payment.

Loew's, Inc., declared a $3 special dividend Wednesday on common stock, payable August 25th, to stockholders of record August 14th.

PROJECTION BOOTHS CAPTURED IN STRIKE

Union Agreements Signed by Managements After Projectionists Halt New York Shows

A refinement of the sit-down technique was employed by projectionists in two New York theatres this week to win a 30-hour week, pay increases and union recognition.

The agreements were signed by the theatre owners with Local 306, Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, after the projectionists stopped the shows, announced over a specially made sound track that they were on strike, and locked themselves in their booths.

An audience of 350 was watching the first evening showing of "Kid Galahad" at the Greenwich theatre, a neighborhood theatre in lower Manhattan owned by the Grenvill Corporation, when the screen went blank, the house lights went up and a voice from the amplifiers said:

"Attention please ladies and gentlemen. This is the motion picture operator speaking to you from the booth. There is no trouble with the equipment and no cause for alarm. I am using this means to protest to you against the inhuman working conditions in this theatre. I work seven days a week, eleven and one-half hours a day, have no vacation and no rest.

"I eat in the booth, where the heat is sometimes unbearable. The management refused to listen. I designated Local 306 of Motion Picture Operators' Union as my bargaining agent. I ask you not to patronize this theatre until they sign up with Local 306. Please tell your friends the same thing."

The operator, Morris Silver, and his assistant, Eli Rose, told Mark Solomon, manager of the theatre, through the locked door of the booth, that they were supplied with food and drink and would remain there until an agreement was reached. To threats that the door would be broken down they replied that expensive equipment was piled around it and would be damaged.

Charles Kielburn, business agent of the union, was in the theatre, and he immediately began negotiations with the management.

Edward Pearle and Joseph Kroff, operators at the Schuyler theatre in uptown Manhattan, followed a similar procedure the same evening. They played a record announcing they were striking for higher wages, better working conditions and other concessions. As the announcement was repeated over and over the 100 patrons of the theatre filed out after receiving refunds from the manager.

The agreement signed with the union by A. J. Unger, general manager of the Grenvill Corporation, and Hyman Denmitz, representing the Schuyler Theatre Corporation, at six o'clock the following morning, were temporary contracts which called for two men to work 30 hours a week each and a third man to work 10 hours a week.

Officials at headquarters of the union refused to discuss the agreement or the possible use of the sit-down technique to force contracts in other theatres. There were no reports of any further strikes but it was intimated there might be some later.

Members of New York Local 54, Building Service Employees' Union, including porters, cleaners, matrons and other theatre workers, this week voted to give the executive board of the union authority to call a strike at its discretion. Negotiations were being carried on for wage and hour agreements with several small circuits in New York, Lou Conway, president of the local, said.

Progress is being made by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in organization of front-of-the-house employees throughout the country with negotiations for contracts to start soon, it was said this week by Lou Krouse, IATSE vice-president.

Agreements were reached last week between distributor representatives and IATSE exchange unions in Minneapolis, Atlanta, Portland, Ore., bringing the total of agreements for such exchange centers up to 22.

An echo of the recent Hollywood strike was heard when it was reported that William Bioss, assistant to George Browne, IATSE president, on Wednesday told Pat Casey, labor negotiator for the producers, that the IATSE would call a studio strike unless the Society of Motion Picture Set Designers withdrew a petition it had filed for recognition as sole bargaining agent for draftsmen in the studios. According to the report the IATSE gave the producers 48 hours to recognize its local as the draftsmen's agent.

The National Labor Relations Board has ordered an election to be held within fifteen days among the employees of the Fleischer Studios, New York, to determine whether a majority favors being represented by the Commercial Artists' and Designers' Union. The union, failing in its effort to win recognition from the company as the exclusive representative of its employees for collective bargaining, called a strike against the studio last spring.

Briskin Contract Renewed by RKO

The contract of Samuel J. Briskin, RKO vice-president in charge of production, has been renewed for three years. Mr. Briskin resigned as general manager of Columbia Pictures to become associated with RKO in the latter part of 1935.

The extension of his contract was set in Hollywood conferences with Leo Spitz, president of RKO, and Floyd B. Odlum, head of Atlas Corporation which owns a half interest in the company. Mr. Odium arrived in Hollywood to handle matters relating to the termination of RKO receivership and will return East around the middle of the month.

The second week's run of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Wee Willie Winkie," the new Shirley Temple film, opened at the Roxy, New York, with most unusual advertising. Full-page advertisements, costing about $4,500, were carried in the New York Times and Herald-Tribune on Friday, July 30th, the first day.

Surrounding a center panel of conventional advertising were compilations of favorable reviews the picture had received from New York critics, written in the form of actual news stories and with head lines similar to those of the two newspapers.

The idea was worked up by Morris Kinzler, of the Roxy, and handled through the theatre's advertising agency, Friend-Wiener. It was understood that space was taken in two morning newspapers in preference to distributing it over the morning and evening fields because of an accumulation of space on contracts with the Times and Herald-Tribune. The Roxy bore the full cost of the insertions, estimated at $4,500, Twentieth Century-Fox, the distributor, having declined the invitation to participate.

The lead "news story" in the ad was headlined, "Adults Outnumber Children 4-to-1 at 'Wee Willie Winkie'", and pointed out the picture's adult as well as juvenile appeal. The quotations from film critics followed. The copy in the Times and Herald-Tribune differed to some extent, the six column straight advertising panel varying slightly and the surrounding "news stories" being more numerous in the Herald-Tribune than in the Times, owing to the smaller type employed by the Herald-Tribune in its news columns.

The headline and type style of each newspaper was not duplicated precisely but it was close enough to produce the effect desired.

"Wee Willie Winkie" grossed $24,000 over the weekend, about 12 per cent less than the opening weekend, considered a good showing. The opening week it grossed $60,000, putting it among the five top grosses at the Roxy since the theatre came under its new policy.

Promotion of Puffed Wheat as "Shirley Temple's Own Cereal" in newspaper, magazine and radio campaigns, has increased current sales of the product 18 per cent above the level of last year, the Quaker Oats Company reported.

Philadelphia Newsreel Theatre

Construction of Philadelphia's second newsreel theatre will get underway shortly, with completion expected in ninety days. The new house is being erected by William Goldman, former Stanley-Warner head. Located on busy Market Street, the unit will be called the Time Newsreel theatre and will have a seating capacity of 500.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Vogues of 1938

(United Artists-Wanger)

Spectacle, Music, Color

The size of the showman's budget is the only exploitation limit to be reasonably imposed upon campaigning in behalf of this highly sales-conditioned production.

Exhibitors have for a running start the notable precedent established by Mr. Wanger in his Technicoloring of "Lonesome Pine," which was to this work what Rembrandt's adolescent splashings are to his "Night Watch."

Off on this foot the copy writer may dabble at will with such words as "prism," "rainbow" and "kaleidoscope" without overreaching. The production is manifestly the most thoroughgoing glorification of pigmentation yet undertaken. On and beyond this obvious first step is ranged such a variety of expansively adaptable merchandising tieups as seldom come in a single package.

The hero of the picture is a Fifth Avenue couturier, and in the course of the action is displayed every article of feminine wear in perspective, closeup and orderly profusion. The proceedings frequently are in story and fact a fashion show with the definite indication that these are next season's styles. Exhibitor enterprise is the lone measure of coverage with a cooperative campaign based on this angle.

The production offers for marquee purposes the names Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson, Mischa Auer and Alan Mowbray in top and typical roles. Also available are Georgia Tapps, of the night clubs and vaudeville; Victor Young's Orchestra, of radio; Georgia Gilbert, of the Folies Bergere; Rocco and Saulter, of Harlem, and the widely press agented Walter Wanger Models for straight publicity purposes. There are dozens of first rank trade names identified with the garments, jewels, makeup and allied impedimenta.

The story is the simple and not unfamiliar one of a Fifth Avenue couturier whose wife wants him to back her in a show, which he does, and about a society girl who loves him for himself and works as a model in his establishment to help out when the creditors press him. A Reno divorce makes the happy ending possible, after the show and shop have been fully explored by the color camera, with interpolated talent presented at intervals and not too much narrative dialogue intervening.

Director Irving Cummings has handled the subject matter with eye values uppermost in mind. The mounting and technical attributes are of the highest grade. The musical content comes to prominence in four song numbers fitted snugly into the pattern of the production. The use of colored lights in a sumptuous Negroid ballet introduces a new application of Technicolor.

The scenes are New York's Fifth Avenue, Broadway, Fifty-second Street, and the Hudson River. All have been ransacked inside and outside for night and day color shots. The time is the season when the fashions of 1938 will be available to favored customers. The treatment of both fashions and the production as a whole is that of Harper's Bazaar in its finer moments.

Previewed in Grauman's Chinese theatre Tuesday night, with Hollywood's ultra ultra in mass attendance and finery to rival that presented on the screen. The production drew round upon round of applause that seemed to come from deep down in the professional heart. The only question voiced seemed to be whether 112 minutes might be slightly more than advisable, but no one appeared to want anything omitted.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Musical Comedy

In the decade since production mechanics progressed to the point of bringing musical comedy within the province of the motion picture, producers have toiled industriously to devise a practicable technique for bringing to the screen the essentially inconsequential components of entertainment form that glorified Ziegfeld, immortalized Jolson and showered gold upon the Shuberts. For the most part, celluloid impresarios have sought to impart substance to the institution by supplying a more or less substantial story.

Emphasis in varying proportion has been shifted from the musical side to the comedy side and back again, in an attempt to strike a happy combination of sensory stimulants and deliver them in pleasantly assimilable sequence. The box office record of these experiments is not one of the art's more cherished chapters.

In this undertaking Paramount has thrown overboard most of the fetishes and traditions that have grown up around the screen musical. It has employed a story related directly enough to the title but has not permitted it to interfere with the major business in hand. It has pitched a production spectacle smack into the running time at whatever moment seemed chronologically appropriate, and has dispensed with tedious alibis for so doing.

The production opens with a frankly old-fashioned expository song behind the footlights, and progresses thence in mad succession through integrated and interpolated items from vaudeville, circus, stage, radio, screen cabaret, and, of course, script.

The story thread is wrapped around Jack Benny as the head of an advertising agency, Richard Arlen as a million dollar account, Ida Lupino as a professional model, and Gail Patrick as a blueblood. The four manage to work out romantic adjustments between and during excursions into melody and mirth by themselves and assorted others. Among these are Connie Boswell in an elaborate production number built around Andre Kostelanetz and orchestra; Martha Raye and, but not technically with, Louis Armstrong in a session of Harlem hotcha; Judy Canova and Company in a blast of hillbilly harmony; Russell Patterson's modernistic puppets in orchestral and dance numbers; artists Rube Goldberg, Peter Arno, McClelland Barclay, John LaGatta, Arthur William Brown with brush, canvas and dash of dialogue; also assorted jugglers, cyclists, swimmers, aerialists, models, the Yacht Club Boys, and a horse.

All this and more has been compiled by the director, Raoul Walsh, with evident determination to give showmen and public, under the title of "Artists and Models," exactly what that institution's stage history would prompt them to anticipate. Skipping only the risque blackouts and epidermal displays he has done just that.

The picture was submitted to the press and as many payees as could get into the Los Angeles Paramount on Monday night. The opening sequence brought a gale of applause. Jack Benny's major moments clicked like his Jello program. The mad circus scene in an office building tilted the roof dangerously, and everybody had a swell time.—W. R. W.

Dead End

(U. A.-Goldwyn)

Drama

He could have been a Des Moines dentist and she would have been his wife.

They had sat through "San Quentin," "Marry the Girl," selected shorts and a newsreel, at least once, to get at the unnamed picture billed out front as "Major Studio Feature Preview Tonight." Now they were edging their sluggish way through stymied knots of movie stars, and immobile clusters of persons who look like movie stars, toward the impassable sidewalk outside Warners' Hollywood theatre.

SHE: Wasn't it wonderful?

HE: Wonderful.

SHE: And what a wonderful name for it, "Death Road."

HE: No, dear, not "Death Road"—"The End of Death."

SHE: Well, anyway, it was wonderful.

This report is being written on the following morning and, since the newspapers make no mention of Mr. Samuel Goldwyn's abrupt and cardiac demise, it is to be assumed that the producer who paid $165,000 for "Dead End" was not within earshot. On the other hand, it is conceivable that he was, and, overhearing, counted the sum well spent for a play that would seem as wonderful by any other name to a brace of evident Iowans on leave. In either case, or neither, your eavesdropping correspondent felt that you gentlemen who will have the picture to sell to your patrons, and just possibly Mr. Goldwyn, who has it to sell to you, would want to know what the lady and gentlemen who bought a pig in a poke thought about it.

Mr. Goldwyn's picture is, to mention quickly the facts pertinent to exploitation procedure in its behalf, a direct screening of the play by Sidney Kingsley, which ran for something like 700 performances on Broadway without striking a single set, a Norman Bel Geddes production, on which all the action takes place. It is the play talked and written about in the past two years as much as any production since "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and heard of, inevitably, by everybody except the lady and gentleman discovered and reported by your operative.

Mr. Goldwyn's picture presents the seven boys who made stage history by their portrayal of juvenile delinquency and warped personality, as witnessed in and caused by the conflicting environments of Manhattan's river-edge, and they play for the millions, omitting minor indecencies, the characters they played for the thousands behind footlights. And along with these Mr. Goldwyn's picture presents Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Wendy Barrie and Claire Trevor, of the cinema, a circumstance of substantial marquee mentionability. (In addition to all of which, if a personal opinion thunderingly shared by those present at the preview may be permitted to creep in here, Mr. Goldwyn's picture presents Marjorie Main in one two-minute cameo of a broken mother that is without parallel in screen history).

The story of "Dead End" is not properly subject to synopsization. There are many stories in it. It might not be telling too much to say that a bad boy from the other side of the tracks comes home after ten years, still a bad boy, and finds the old neighborhood pretty much the same. It would be misleading to call him a gangster, although he is, and it would be insufficient to add that the good boy who used to whip him when they were kids shoots him to death as a man. This is only a thread.

As did the play, the picture utilizes a single set, but the set is a reproduction of a whole community along the East River where tenement and mansion stand edge to edge. Unlike the play, the picture takes its audience indoors now and then—not often—to show what they are doing in what, otherwise, would be their offstage moments. Among the professionals present at the premiere screening were some who mentioned "Winterset" and "Street Scene" as technical precedents, and as many more to protest the comparison. There were more who didn't notice, or care, whether one set or fifty had been used.

The picture was previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre. As is custom, a substantial representation of the production center's better brains and beauty was in attendance. The picture was late in starting but the bare set, exposed well in advance of personnel, drew spontaneous applause. First appearances of principals were acknowledged in the usual manner. Then Marjorie Main, as the homing gangster's mother, practically blew the roof off, from which point on the audience lost itself in the picture as completely as ever a spinster did in Valentino.—W. R. W.

Blonde Trouble

(Paramount)

Comedy

This is a modern and somewhat altered but basically authentic picturization of the play Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman called "June Moon." Whether a given exhibitor offering it to his public may elect to identify it as such (and it wouldn't be quite Hoyle to intimate that it's a new work by the late Mr. Lardner), it is the story of the small town boy who thinks he can write song lyrics, goes to New York to prove it and, to Tin Pan Alley's and ultimately his own amazement, does.

Johnny Downs plays the confident young man this time, and Eleanore Whitney the girl he marries in the happy fadeout. Lynne Overman, Terry Walker, Benny Baker, El Brendel and William Demarest are others prominently cast. For the song used in the original version is substituted "It Was All in Fun," by Burton Lane and Ralph Freed. George Archainbaud directed.

The picture is played briskly and in such manner as to give the dialogue humor full value. Production intent is exclusively for laughs. Eddie Davis contributes an interpolated night club number and a dog act is worked into the flow of the action.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a largely nonprofessional audience, which gave every indication of enjoying it immensely.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by George Archainbaud. Play by Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman. Screen play by Lillie Hayward. Music by Burton Lane and Ralph Freed. Reported Missing

(Universal)

Drama

"Reported Missing" relates an often told mystery melodrama against an aviation background. A few traces of love interest and comedy are included, but the plot is formula in the main. As is customary in this type of picture, exciting action, amplified by suspense, is stressed. In the absence of exceptional names, available exploitation possibilities are those to be found in a flying, crime and amateur detective feature.

Certain his invention will do much to relieve flying hazards, "Steve Browning" installs it on a plane. The ship, piloted by "Jack Clayton," crashes, killing all aboard. Berated by the press, "Steve" also loses "Jean Clayton's" affections, she accusing him of causing her brother's death. The device is sold to "Paul Wayne," "Steve's" close friend, and attached to another plane. This also crashes and circumstances surrounding both accidents indicate that a motive of robbery may have had something to do with failure of the invention to function.

Turning detective, suspicious that someone close to him is the perpetrator of the tragedies, "Steve" announces he has obtained finger prints and is flying them to Washington for identification. In an exciting climax, a masked figure appears in the plane, and following a scuffle, he reveals "Paul" as the villain. He is killed attempting to escape. The plane goes through a series of gyrations before "Steve" gets under control to land and he is re-established in "Jean's" love.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, July 31. The Saturday night audience, which was pretty much in a carnival mood, didn't seem to be affected one way or another by the film. A few of the smart customers in the gallery took delight in telling the characters what to do.—G. M.

That Certain Woman

(Warner Bros.)

Drama

With the names Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Ian Hunter, Anita Louise and Donald Crisp as working capital, the showman selling "That Certain Woman" may be said to have had his job pretty well done for him in advance. If he is an industrious type of person, who goes in for explicitness and definition as exploitation expedients, he will reveal with considerable emphasis the more or less inseparable facts that this is an altogether serious melodrama in which the star is called upon to run what has been called the gamut of emotions and that it is a picture for adults, perhaps for major adolescents, but not precisely the thing for a kiddies' matinee. Achieving this, he will have succeeded likewise, in all probability, in attracting an audience emotionally attuned to the demands made upon it by the star in her portrayal of a brave wife and mother much put upon by circumstance, the press and a stern father-in-law. It is for such an audience that the picture has been designed, directed and played.

The picture was directed by Edmund Goulding, who also wrote the story, and is strictly in the Goulding vein as to development, emphasis, tuning and tone. It is without comedy relief save as supplied incidentally by Dwane Day as the child, and makes a direct bid for tears. There is a dash of gangster interest at the start, not dwelt upon or carried forward.

The star plays Mary Donnell, reformed widow of a gangster, who marries the weak but well meaning son of a crusty capitalist and does not reveal to him the birth of a son following enforced annulment of their marriage. Her admiring employer protects her, honorably, from her gangster past, raked up periodically by the press, but dies inconveniently in her apartment with a photographer all set for a flashlight. The boy's father, now married to an invalid wife, comes to her rescue, but his father intervenes. Then the invalid wife attempts to sacrifice her husband, whereupon the mother of his child does likewise, death of the wife some years later leading ultimately to a happy ending.

Reviewed at studio preview in Warners' Hollywood theatre, July 27th. The audience applauded Miss Davis at two or three points in the picture, other principals on their initial appearances, and the picture itself at the close.—W. R. W.

Back in Circulation

(F.N.-Cosmopolitan)

Drama

About six years ago United Artists released "The Front Page." Since then, in a cycle of newspaper melodramas, practically every studio has experimented with the idea. Now Cosmopolitan Productions, using the executive, creative, player and technical facilities of Warner Brothers, has adapted the basic "Front Page" theme on which to develop a semi-mystery of its own.

To provide vigorous entertainment, the familiar formula of a dynamic newspaper picture is followed during the early reels. Editor "Bill Morgan's" policy is to get the news and no limitations are placed upon his employees' methods of getting it. He further believes in printing what is learned, no matter who is hurt. "Tommy Blake" is his star girl reporter. Later on the newspaper atmosphere is tempered by character and situation comedy and moments given over to the bickering "Morgan-Timmy" romance, after which the "Front Page" motivation, as such, is dropped and the film starts out on an individual tack.

"Morgan" orders "Timmy" to investigate a seeming murder and write the facts in a sensational manner that will boost circulation. Eagerly "Timmy" builds a case of circumstantial evidence that convicts "Arline Wade." Convinced that "Arline" has not told the whole story, and that she is protecting someone, "Timmy," aided by "Dr. Forde," forces the convicted woman to reveal facts that wreck the chain of circumstantial evidence. Suicide being established as the cause of death, the film concludes with romantic happiness for all situations.

The players featured, Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell and Margaret Lindsay, give convincing performances. Support provided by John Litel, Eddie Acuff, who is the comedy relief; Craig Reynolds, George E. Stone and Walter Byron, is high class, as are the efforts of the minor players. Ray Enright's direction, handling of players and supplementary production detail is forceful. Sometimes, however, it appeared that the audience considered his conception of newspaper people and news gathering methods quite bizarre.

Previewed at Warner Hollywood theatre July 26. The audience's appreciation of the film's high melodramatic and vigorous action and novel twists was evident. Several times it interrupted the continuity with applause. It seemed particularly appreciative of the work of Margaret Lindsay, although it was not hesitant to give O'Brien and Miss Blondell their due. General reaction indicated that the film should satisfy the desires of those who appreciate lusty entertainment.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.-First National. A Cosmopolitan production. Hal B. Wallis, executive producer. San Bischoff, associate. Directed by Ray Enright. She Had to Eat

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Melodrama

With variations in the pattern, this picture follows the general direction of recent comedies, in which the characters become embroiled in incredible situations, fantastic enough to provoke loud laughter when properly handled. Success depends mainly upon the tempo of direction and not a little upon the capabilities of the cast. In "She Had to Eat" both these items are on the menu.

Jack Haley, cast as a not so bewildered country boy in the big city, gracefully carries the burden of the story, relying for laughs more on nonchalance in trying situations than on a comedian's expected antics. Hoarse voiced Eugene Pallette as a bibulous and slightly dotty millionaire; Arthur Treacher as a typical Treacher butler, and Rochelle Hudson, a girl who ekes out a comfortable living on more or less innocent variations of confidence games, frame the circumstances surrounding the central character's adventures away from home.

Although the title supplies obvious grounds for exploitation, a deeper study should discover more effective angles. It is upon the millionaire's passionate devotion to hunting and skeet shooting that the plot hangs. The hero's resemblance to a notorious gangster provides suspense and thrills, and the girl's ingenuity in promoting meals for herself and escort introduces the love theme.

The story is without complication and comparatively unimportant. Obsessed with the idea he is a mighty hunter, the eccentric millionaire stops his private train in the Arizona desert to hunt a rabbit, which proves to be the pet of the young owner of a nearby filling station. The millionaire invites the youth and his rabbit aboard the train, gets drunk with him but disowns him the next morning. Alone and without funds in a distant city the youth falls victim to the panhandling girl, becomes friendly with her and together they live on the town for a day.

Twice the youth is picked up by police because of his resemblance to a gangster chief but his fingerprints obtain his release. Learning that the millionaire has arrived in the city, the youth and the girl go to the railroad yard to retrieve the pet rabbit which is still on board the private train. Trailing them is a gang who are attempting to kidnap the real criminal, and when their supposed prey enters the special train they commandeer it. The girl throws a message to police from the speeding train and the plot complications are subsequently dissolved.

A song each by Miss Hudson and Haley and a duet in which they both perform are sufficiently well spotted to add greatly to the mood toward which the picture is directed.

She's No Lady

(Paramount)

Comedy Drama

The second appearance of John Trent, aviator turned actor, may supply an exploitation note of some yield. Others that may be named in copy are Ann Dvorak, Harry Beresford, Guinn Williams, Aileen Pringle, Arthur Hoyt and Paul Hurst. It's a B. P. Schulberg production.

The title doesn't suggest that the story is the familiar one about crooks who steal a dowager's jewels, which thenceforth flip from pocket to pocket in what is supposed to be mystifying manner, winding up in possession of the crook, who turns out to be an insurance company detective, and the she crook, who turns out to be another one. This telling differs in no essential detail from its ancestors.

The setting is New York. The time is now.

Seen at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. The audience, made up principally of persons who had come to see "Captains Courageous" and whatever the unnamed preview features might be, yawned.—W. R. W.

"Love Takes Flight"

(Grand National - Condor)

Comedy-Drama

This is a timely airplane story involving a trans-Pacific non-stop flight from Los Angeles to Manila, recalling the ill-fated ocean flight of Amelia Earhart and Robert Noonan, her navigator. The story in part parallels the discovery of John Trent, airplane pilot, by B. P. Schulberg, and his development into starring material. It also shows some back stage scenes of Hollywood film making. It contains many scenes of flying and it marks the debut as a director of Conrad Nagel, whose name has appeared as actor for a longer time than he, probably, would like to remember.

"Love Takes Flight" tells the story of an egotistical airline pilot who deserts his pals and the plane hostess who is in love with him, to become a film star. The hostess turns to flying, and making a name for herself. Then she plans a solo flight from Los Angeles to Manila. The film star, knowing that she is incapable of navigating the ocean alone, leaves an actress who desires him for her own, and stows away on the plane to join her in the unsuccessful venture.

Heroes of the Alamo

(Sunset Productions)

Historical Melodrama

Until now relatively few persons have heard of Sunset Productions or Mr. Anthony J. Xydias, who made this picture. But everyone who ever has been to school knows about the massacre of the Alamo. That saga of heroism is a symbol of American courage and hardihood which has earned a place alongside the Battle of Bunker Hill and the assault on San Juan Hill in historical annals.

The story of the events and episodes leading up to the battle of the Alamo is followed with fair accuracy. Producing and directing technique has kept a more than particular eye on those theatrical values which make for adventure, heroism, suspense and thrill. While due attention is given to the hardships endured by American settlers in Texas under the ruthless Santa Ana, and to the events which led up to their revolt, the picture's big thrill is the siege and massacre at the Alamo.

While the film does not present potent screen names, it does introduce such historical characters as Davy Crockett, James Bowie, Stephen Austin and General Santa Ana. In line with the present trend toward outdoor action films, there is practically no comedy relief and but a minimum of love interest.

Previewed at Warners' Forum theatre, Los Angeles. Shown to a type of audience which might be considered a cross section of the patronage attending neighborhood and smaller town theatres, and with a good percentage of youngsters included, the film experienced a fair reception. That the crowd was familiar with the story was indicated by the manner in which it greeted the successive incidents and by the attention it paid to the picturization of the siege. It seemed to be the opinion that the film could be included among the better adventure features.—G. M.

It's All Yours

(Columbia)

Comedy

The orthodox billing for this, according to the literature provided, is: Madeleine Carroll and Francis Lederer in "It's All Yours" with Mischa Auer. Not to quarrel with the literature, but for the purpose of giving a clearer indication of what to expect after the ticket has been bought and tendered, the exhibitor whose prime objectives are profits and pleased patrons might well advertise: The Mischa Auer of "My Man Godfrey" and "Three Smart Girls" in finer fettle than ever with Madeleine Carroll and Francis Lederer in "It's All Yours."

Mr. Auer's is the third role, his usual one of fortune hunter, Miss Carroll's the first and Mr. Lederer's the second. The story is about the private secretary to a millionaire, and the fortune hunter who wants to marry her for the fortune which her employer leaves her, on his death, with the unspoken understanding that she will use it to effect, in such manner as she may find practicable, the boy's redemption. She accomplishes this by pretending to squander the money, over the protests of the boy, while seeming to encourage the suit of the fortune hunter. The happy ending is arrived at by unfamiliar channels after many events with humorous aspects.

The story opens in San Francisco and closes in New York. The time is the present. Save for the deftly indicated death of the millionaire, all action and dialogue are designed for comedy purposes.

Reviewed at studio preview, Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. A Saturday night crowd staying on after seeing "Captains Courageous" laughed itself into near hysterics on several occasions and went limp over Mischa Auer's demonstration of toreador technique.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Producer, William Perlberg. Directed by Elliott Nugent. Assistant director, Cliff Broughton. Story by Adelaide Heilbron. Screen play by Mary C. McCall, Jr. Photographed by Henry Freulich. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Art director, Stephen Goosson. P. C. A. certificate No. 3461. Release date, undetermined. Running time, 77 minutes. Charlie Chan on Broadway

Mystery Drama

This "Charlie Chan" is a good mystery melodrama. While built along the general lines of the earlier numbers of the series, it differs in that the story does not include as much romance. There is comedy, however. The story idea has been somewhat revised and quality of production support has been improved. Warner Oland, a fixture in the series, gives his usual capable performance, and Keye Luke, whose role as his Number One son, is being made increasingly important, is up to standard. Effective support is contributed by the featured players, Joan Marsh, J. Edward Bromberg, Douglas Fowley, Harold Huber, Donald Woods and Louise Henry.

For this adventure "Charlie" becomes involved in weird doings of those who live on the shadowy side of New York's night club, political and newspaper life. A girl and a man, whose characters have been built up to create the illusion that they are menaces to a lot of persons, are murdered, and by force of circumstances "Charlie's" son, "Lee," is implicated. Called in by the police who were welcoming him to the city, "Chan" is confronted by a maze of circumstances which apparently defy his genius. By taking advantage of the candid camera picture-taking fad, he gathers the evidence which reveals the killer.

The elements which audiences have learned to expect in a "Chan" have been included, and several new twists have been introduced. Both constitute a basis from which novel and different exploitation may be devised.

Previewed at the Ritz Theatre, Los Angeles. The typical neighborhood audience applauded when the title flashed on the screen. Although it was included in a minor sort of way, the audience seemed to appreciate that love interest had been made an integral part of the plot. That the audience was confused as to who the criminal might be was evidenced in the fact that it often hissed the wrong character.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by 20th Century-Fox. John Stone, associate producer. Directed by Eugene Forde. Screen play by Charles Belden and Jerry Cady. Warner Brothers, according to Mr. Sears, already have completed ten pictures for the new season. National trade showings will be held by the company August 23rd and 24th in 31 key cities.

Heywood-Wakefield Strike Settled

After being on strike for more than one month, employees of the Lloyd plant of the Heywood-Wakefield Company at Menominee, Michigan, returned to work this week, according to Richard N. Greenwood, president.

The company manufactures theatre chairs and the employees called the strike June 22nd, demanding a closed shop and a flat 20 per cent pay increase for all workers. Neither of these demands were met, Mr. Greenwood said, and the company has resumed operations on practically the same basis as before.

Wilcox and RKO Talk on British Production Union

Conferences between Herbert Wilcox, London producer, and RKO executives relating to possible association of Mr. Wilcox with the company's British production plans have been proceeding "favorably although discussion has been confined to exploration of broad principles," Mr. Wilcox told MOTION PICTURE HERALD in his suite at the Ritz-Carlton hotel on Monday.

The discussions, which Mr. Wilcox arrived here last week to attend, opened Monday morning with Leo Spitz, RKO president, and Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of distribution, at the company's offices in the RKO Building. Last week, Mr. Wilcox had preliminary discussions with Phil Reisman, RKO foreign sales head, prior to Mr. Reisman's departure for Europe.

Mr. Wilcox denied that his original production plans for nine pictures had been reduced to five, as had been reported. The number, however, is dependent upon the outcome of the RKO conference, he said. A successful negotiation would result in the production of five films of greater expense and magnitude than the nine now planned without affecting the present budget plan of $4,000,000.

Under the quota plan, RKO, which plans to distribute 56 pictures in Great Britain during the new season, would be obliged to produce between five and nine pictures in England, depending upon their cost; pictures having labor costs of at least $109,350 would serve double quota duty. Since it is understood that if RKO associates with Mr. Wilcox in British production the resulting pictures will be of higher cost than the $444,444 average cost for nine Wilcox pictures now planned at a budget of $4,000,000, five RKO-Wilcox pictures will just about fulfill RKO's quota requirement under the provisions of the new plan.

Mr. Wilcox said that the need for British pictures is quality. "One good English picture can work wonders for the whole British industry," he said. The producer thinks he has one of this type in "Victoria the Great," which he said is an $800,000 production starring Anna Neagle and which will open at the Music Hall, New York, late in September.

Mr. Wilcox played host to nearly 300 motion picture executives and newspapermen at a dinner and preview of "Victoria the Great" Tuesday evening at the Hotel Astor, New York. Among the guests were Ned E. Depinet, Jules Levy, W. G. Van Schmus, George W. Weeks, Martin Quigley, Colvin Brown, Red Kann, Gus Eyssel and Terry Ramsaye. It was announced the picture would open at Leicester Square Theatre, London, about September 10th, and that on September 13th, Mr. Wilcox and Miss Nagle will go to Paris, at the invitation of the French Government, to attend a showing at the Paris Exposition.

Also attending the dinner and preview was John Hicks, head of Paramount foreign department, with whom Mr. Wilcox is discussing a production deal involving a possible Wilcox-Paramount deal.

"BOYCOTT" BY EXHIBITORS REACHES COURTS AND U.S. TRADE COMMISSION

U. S. District Judge in Philadelphia Continues Temporary Injunction Against "Strike" Until Decision, August 11th

by MORRIS H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

The right of motion picture exhibitors to "strike" in concerted action against a motion picture distributor by "boycotting" its productions is to be determined August 11th by Judge Oliver B. Dickinson of the United States District Court in Philadelphia. On Monday, August 2nd, Judge Dickinson continued a temporary restraining order under which independent motion picture owners and operators in eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware were prohibited from launching on that date an active one month's boycott and "consumers' strike" against the productions of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

The United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, Inc., announced a "boycott" against Paramount on June 29th, declaring that Paramount had not supplied all the feature pictures it promised on the 1936-1937 contract and said they were dissatisfied with new exhibitors' terms laid down by the company in the 1937-1938 contract.

Charges Restraint of Trade

Characterizing the proposed "strike" and the announced elaborate picketing campaign a restraint of trade under the Sherman Act, Paramount carried its charges into the federal court at Philadelphia last Friday, on the eve of the strike commencement date. Former Attorney General of Pennsylvania William A. Schnader headed the array of legal talent representing Paramount, including Morgan S. Kaufman, Austin C. Keough and Louis Phillips. They obtained from Judge Dickinson on July 30th a temporary injunction order against the UMPTO to prevent the proposed "strike." Mr. Phillips is Paramount home office counsel and Mr. Schnader and Mr. Kaufman are Philadelphia attorneys.

Ordered to show cause why the order should not be made permanent were 15 exhibitor corporations and 23 individuals. The defendants named in Paramount's bill of complaint were Lewen Pizor, Charles Segall, Abe Sablosky, George P. Aarons, David Barrist, Luke Gring, Ben Fertel, Norman Lewis, George Resnick, Amusement Inc. of Pennsylvania, Great Northern Theatre Co. Inc., Tioga Theatre Co. Inc., Harry Fried, Rex Theatre Amusement Co. Inc., Victoria Enterprises Inc., William Spiegel, Supreme Amusement Co. Inc., Joseph S. Hebrew, Samuel Sommerson, Jenkintown Theatres Corp., Ray Jay O'Rourke, George Nandascher, William H. Wolf, Stanley Peters, Refowitch Theatre Co. Inc., J. Foreman Corbett, Sansom Amusement Co. Inc., Morris Stiefel, Avenue Theatre Co., Penn Jersey Amusement Corp., Louis Rovner, Trenton Orpheum Corp., Hunt's Gaiety Inc., Hunt's Centre Street Theatre Inc., Louis Linker Inc., Benjamin Shindler, Michael Lessy and Ben Amsterdam.

In the bill of complaint, Paramount charged that the exhibitors, meeting June 29th at the Hotel Carlton in Washington, D. C., entered into "a combination, conspiracy and agreement to restrain trade and commerce in motion picture films in the United States and to restrain the complainant (Paramount) from distributing its motion pictures for exhibition in the United States."

Pointing out that the boycott was planned on a nation-wide scale, the bill further charged that the Philadelphia UMPTO was publishing and circulating "false, libelous and malicious statements which were designed to arouse and inflame the complainant's customers and the motion picture theatre going public, generally, and to place the complainant in an unfavorable light among its customers and the theatre going public, and to induce its customers to refuse to carry out contracts entered into with it and to refrain from entering into new contracts in respect of motion pictures thereafter to be produced and released, and to induce the public to refrain from patronizing complainant's motion pictures," charges being supported by letters and other literature appended to the bill.

Cites "Strike" Promotion

Setting forth the various methods of exploitation to promote the "strike," including an airplane literature campaign, a sound truck and picketing of theatres, Paramount's bill of complaint advanced the charge that "upon information and belief, the defendants threatened exhibitors in the district of eastern Pennsylvania with physical and bodily violence and with physical damage and destruction to their theatres if they exhibited complainant's motion pictures during the period of said 'strike.'"

On the basis of these allegations, acting under Equity Rule 73 of the court, Judge Dickinson granted the temporary restraining order, which specifically enjoined the independent exhibitors from:

"(a) Picketing any motion picture theatre in which the complainant's motion pictures are or will be exhibited, or picketing the local Paramount exchange; and stationing themselves with others upon or along the streets or pavements or in or about theatres for the purpose of intercepting the employes, patrons or cus-

BOYCOTT OF PARAMOUNT TO LAST INDEFINITELY

The exhibitors' strike against Paramount opened in Minneapolis Monday with picketing against the company's exchange and a warning from Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwet that it will continue until a satisfactory settlement is made. Originally, the strike was to have been limited to the month of August.

Allied has released the names of 210 theatres in the territory which have pledged themselves against exhibition of Paramount product. Certain concessions were made to theatres, permitting them to play some Paramount films, because they had either been paid for or because no substitute could be found.

An Allied bulletin sent to exhibitors advised them to ignore letters of from Paramount exchanges warning of loss of priority rights and to refuse delivery of prints sent to theatres by the exchange.

Allied States Charges "Unfair Competition" in Product Announcement Book Advertising of Films Not Delivered

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Charging that the advertising by Paramount in its product announcement books and "work sheets" of pictures which it falied to deliver under its 1936-37 contracts constitutes unfair competition under the terms of the Federal Trade Commission Act, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors on Monday filed a formal complaint with the Trade Commission at Washington against Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc.

Allied asked the commission to issue a formal complaint against the companies "for false and misleading advertising in connection with the leasing and distribution of motion pictures in interstate commerce."

Follows Independent Attacks

The filing of the complaint by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States and onetime member of the commission, is in line with attacks by independent exhibitors against the alleged withholding by Paramount of five pictures to which exhibitors felt they were entitled under their 1936-37 contracts.

The pictures involved in the complaint are "The Count of Luxembourg," "Artists and Models," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Spawn of the North," "Souls at Sea," and a Marlene Dietrich film directed by Lubitsch.

"The practice complained against," Allied States explained to the trade commission, "is the holding out to motion picture exhibitors that certain attractive pictures will be released during a given contract period as an inducement to sign contracts with Paramount covering such period and then refusing to release such pictures during such period although the same have been completed and are ready for delivery."

Accompanying the Allied complaint was a chart of deliveries in the Detroit zone as of May 5th last, showing that Paramount had released 40 of its 65 pictures; that all of the "A" and "B" categories had been exhausted and 15 of the 24 "C" pictures delivered, but that only 13 of the 29 "low-price" pictures had been distributed.

"Admittedly," Allied declared, "the allocation of pictures has little, if any, relation to cost; pictures are valued mainly according to their box office potentialities. In the case of Paramount, the sole object is to get in the big money early in the season and to leave a deficiency in the lower brackets.

Points to Withheld Releases

"All (the films) are now being used as bait to induce exhibitors to sign Paramount contracts for 1937-1938 at higher prices than were specified in the 1936-1937 contracts."

All of the statements made in the complaint, the commission was informed, will be verified by exhibitors in various sections of the country who are familiar with the situation, including, it was said, Arthur K. Howard, Boston; S. E. Samuelson, New York; Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; H. M. Richey, Detroit, P. J. Wood, Columbus, Ohio, and W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis. All are Allied states officers.

tomers of the exhibitors or the employes of the complainant, and by intimidation, threats, force, fraud or defamatory publications inducing and procuring them to withhold their patronage of the motion picture theatres of the exhibitors, to quit the employment of the exhibitors or the complainant or from resorting to like means at any time or place or under any circumstances to prejudice, procure or compel the employes of the complainant or of the exhibitors to quit their employment or the customers of the exhibitors or complainant to withhold their patronage;

"(b) advising or requesting in such manner as to express or imply a threat, intimidation, coercion or force, whether by oral communications, by letters or by printed circulars the customers of exhibitors, licensees of the complainant or those who might become licensees of the complainant, to desist or refrain from patronizing or doing business with the complainant or with the theatres of the exhibitors, or resorting to any species of threat, intimidation, force or fraud to accomplish such purpose or permitting other persons to do so; and

"(c) inducing, coercing or compelling exhibitors to refuse to exhibit the complainant's motion pictures and inducing, coercing or compelling exhibitors not to enter into license agreements with the complainant for the exhibition of its motion pictures."

The restraint order was made returnable on Monday, August 2nd, at which time the UMPTO was legally represented by former Congressman Benjamin Golder (who carried the fight on the Perleman double bill case in Philadelphia Federal courts); his associate, Otto Krause, Jr.; and George P. Aarons, secretary of the UMPTO, who is also listed among the defendants.

New Hearing August 11th

In view of the fact that not all of the defendants had been served and that others did not appear—reportedly upon advice of counsel—Judge Dickinson continued the restraint order against the boycott of Paramount films and picketing of theatres showing Paramount films until a further hearing August 11th.

In refusing a motion by Mr. Golder, for exhibitors, to permit the exhibitors to engage in their picketing campaign until the final disposition of the order, Judge Dickinson held that the theatre operators lacked the right to pursue such tactics.

Lest a labor question be brought into the case, Judge Dickinson declared that although the use of the "strike" as an economic weapon was legal in wage disputes, it cannot be employed by one business firm against another.

"There is no such thing as a peaceful strike," Judge Dickinson declared.

Judge Dickinson, however, expressed doubts if the anti-trust Sherman and Clayton acts apply in this case, the matter of jurisdiction to be argued at the further hearing. Mr. Golder raised the question how the picketing of a local exhibitor of a picture, which is a local function, can come under the anti-trust laws which concern interstate commerce. Mr. Schnader, in that connection, referred to a Supreme Court decision that ruled retailers boycotting against a wholesaler engaged in interstate commerce was a restraint of trade under the terms of the Sherman act.

Calls Exhibit Illegal

A major point of contention to be made by Mr. Golder at the final hearing on August 11th is based on the fact that the temporary injunction was issued on the basis of an illegal contract included among the exhibits appended to Paramount's bill of complaint. Exhibit "A" of the bill of complaint is the license agreement used by Paramount in selling the year's product to the exhibitor. Mr. Golder alleged that the exhibit is an illegal contract in view of the fact that it contains a double feature clause, which the Philadelphia Federal courts have held to be illegal.

Although Judge Dickinson held fast in his refusal to permit picketing, he conceded that the UMPTO has a legal right to "induce" members not to buy Paramount products, and invited Mr. Golder to rewrite that section of the order and agreed to meet with both sides to consider the modification.

A "strike" mass meeting at Philadelphia's Broadwood Hotel, called by the UMPTO the same morning, August 2nd, was attended by more than 100 member exhibitors.

Although neither side nor Judge Dickinson made any effort to prohibit the mass meeting, Mr. Schnader later declared that the meeting was a technical violation of the letter of the injunction and that those who participated could be brought in for contempt.

In clarifying their position in the strike, Mr. Golder, for the exhibitors, advised the UMPTO to continue their fight against Paramount by not dating any pictures during August and to refrain from signing the 1937-1938 contracts.

Mr. Golder pointed out that this was the first time in the history of motion picture litigation that "the big fellow came running to the courts for help because the little fellow was hurting them."

See Similar Move Elsewhere

It has been freely predicted along Broadway that a similar policy will be followed by Paramount in other cities where similar exhibitor demonstrations have been planned, such as Minneapolis, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Boston, Los Angeles and elsewhere.

At a Philadelphia exhibitor meeting in Philadelphia, following Monday's hearing, the independents' counsel, Mr. Golder, declared that the exhibitor opposition was directed not only at Paramount, but at all "distributor aggression."

Mr. Golder questioned the advisability of the proposed picketing campaign.

The matter of possible suits against exhibitors who refuse to play Paramount product during August, for violating contracts, was discounted by Mr. Golder on the theory that it would be impracticable for Paramount to file hundreds of suits against individual exhibitors.

In "Contact," official publication of the UMPTO, the organization sums up its stand as follows:

"WHAT PARAMOUNT WANTS (1937-38 Sales Policy).

"Four at 35% with an allowance of 17½% profit and then a 50% split.

"Eight at 30% with an allowance of 15% profit and then a 50% split.

"Ten at 30% with an allowance of 7½% profit and then a 50% split.

"If any of these 10 pictures at 30% do not warrant their staying at 30% they will be reduced to 25%.

"The balance of the pictures are to be divided between 25% and flat or all flat.

WHAT THE UMPTO MEMBERS WANT (1937-38 Sales Policy).

"Instead of these higher rentals a 20% lower price over that paid for 1936-37.

"That Paramount deliver what the exhibitors bought in 1936-37 and did not get.

"Refusal to take in Paramount as a partner to profits and not to losses.

"Refusal to grant Paramount permission to examine the books of each exhibitor.

"Adjustment on product delivered on 1936-37 contracts which was inferior to that promised and that amounted to a swindle."

INSURANCE RATES CUT IN MISSOURI

For the second time in two years, exhibitors with fireproof theatre buildings will profit by an announced reduction in fire insurance rates. The latest saving will be 20 per cent.

In 1935, the state and the insurance companies settled a lengthy rate controversy with the companies agreeing to a general reduction which amounted to about 18 per cent in the case of fireproof buildings.

The reduction recently announced applies only to fireproof buildings.

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

It was coincident that on the very day, last week, when Miss Myllicent Bartholomew announced she was dissatisfied with Hollywood's financial rewards for her nephew, Freddie ($1,200-a-week) Bartholomew, and might return to England, Vivian Burnett, the original "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which brought first real success to Freddie in Hollywood, drowned in Long Island's Manhasset Bay. Miss Bartholomew complained that in Hollywood, "we have had nothing but trouble," starting right from Freddie's role in "Little Lord Fauntleroy." (She was said in the press to be demanding $2,500 a week for little Freddie.)

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" brought nothing but trouble to Vivian Burnett, too. He had spent most of his time fighting down the name of "sissy" after his mother, Frances Hodgson Burnett, some 54 years ago, made him the character of the little "Fauntleroy," with dandified velvet suit, lace collar and pancake hat, in her famous book. Last week he died a hero, trying to save four drowning persons.

Miss Galbreath countered with a proposition of her own, the like of which undoubtedly caused Mogul Selznick to fire 32 of his "Gone with the Wind" talent scouts on the spot.

Memphis Kate, never in Hollywood, replied that she wouldn't be tied up with anybody for six years, even Dave Selznick, and in the second place, "I'm not keen about a movie career anyway. The Twentieth Century-Fox publicity department is right proud of its announcement that "six saber cuts" are down on the list of properties requisitioned for a scene in Shirley Temple's new "Heidi." The scene involves a student duel at a German university, in which the performers are to receive the traditional badges of honor inflicted by each other's sabers. "Saber cuts" in Hollywood are strips of red tissue paper, applied to a player's face with adhesive tape.

GREATER UNION UNDER COMMITTEE OF THREE

Executives of Australian Theatre Company Handle Duties Doyle Relinquished

by CLIFF HOLT
in Sydney

Conjectures as to the likely successor to Stuart F. Doyle as managing director of Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., came to an end with the announcement that the board had selected a committee of management to direct the activities of the company. The board's decision was announced by Norman B. Rydge, chairman of directors, under whose control the committee will function.

The committee of three comprises Roy Barmby, Arthur Gillespie and John Evans, all of whom have been executives of the company for a number of years.

Mr. Rydge said that the selection of the committee from within the organization was of itself evidence of the board's complete confidence in the executives. In this respect, no changes in personnel were contemplated. With their wholehearted cooperation the future of Greater Union Theatres was assured, and the organization would become an increasingly powerful force in the show business, he said.

Mr. Rydge added that the board was determined to maintain the entity of Greater Union and that the future policy would be planned to place the entire organization on a solid profit-earning basis, so that shareholders would receive dividends. In order to insure progress the entire theatre circuit throughout Australia would be overhauled and modernized to achieve the highest overseas standards of comfort and efficiency.

Those present included R. B. Barmby, A. G. Gillespie, J. Evans (committee); P. W. Dive (secretary), W. Sayle (legal representative), H. G. Hayward (circuit advertising manager), C. Shannon (Melbourne representative), E. Lane (Brisbane), C. Webb (Adelaide), G. Ellis and V. Webb (British Empire Films), R. Garner (Cinesound Productions), and G. F. Todd (National Theatres Supplies).

On 25th Anniversary

Former managing director of Greater Union Theatres and its numerous associated companies, Stuart F. Doyle's retirement coincided with his 25th year of active connection with the industry. The Australian trade journal, Everyones, published a special "Stuart F. Doyle Anniversary Number," and its pages carried a large number of congratulatory messages from industry leaders in all parts of the world. On the eve of his departure from the company he was honored at numerous official dinners, the most notable of which was a press luncheon at which some of Australia's most important newspaper men presided.

In his speech Mr. Doyle had a tilt at the Federal Government for its scant encouragement of the production of films in Australia. The Quota Acts of New South Wales and Victoria, he said, were badly designed and were an absolute and abject failure. He did not intend under these conditions further to dissipate his efforts in making pictures in Australia, when England received the full encouragement of the British Government in a most effective way. Instead, he would transfer his production activities to England.

"If the Government insists on enforcing the present quota act in New South Wales," he said, "it will end up by the whole of the distributors withdrawing their supplies from Australia, because they will not tolerate a set of conditions impracticable and impossible imposed by governments. The American distributors hold the trump card because upon their supplies alone depends the livelihood of 20,000 people in Australia."

Theatre License Restrictions

Regulations governing the restriction of theatre licenses have been gazetted by the New Zealand Government. They are embodied in the Cinematograph Films Act, and provide for the following:

If in any locality there are one or more theatres functioning, and an application is lodged for a new license or for increasing the number of seats in any licensed theatre, the licensing officer may refuse the application, provided he is satisfied:

(a) That the existing theatre or theatres provide adequately for the requirements of the locality having regard to the entertainment value and date of release of the films exhibited, the seating accommodation and general amenities provided, the number of nights per week on which exhibitions are given, the prices charged for admission, and any other relevant considerations affecting the public interest; or

(b) That in view of the conditions existing in the industry or the limited number of films of reasonable exhibition value obtainable in the market, the granting of further licenses in the locality or the licensing of additional seating accommodation or of exhibition on additional nights would cause undue hardship to such existing licensed exhibitors or would result in unreasonable economic waste.

For a city license the application fee is £25. For suburban areas exceeding 10,000 in population, a fee of £15 is required, and for all other applications, the sum of £10.

FRENCH ARBITER ASKS TAX CUTS IN RETURN FOR AIDING EMPLOYEES

Mistler Gives Theatre Staffs Better Conditions But Says Owners Should Receive Aid

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The strike which affected cinemas, legitimate theatres, and music-halls last April, was one of the consequences of the establishment of the "Contrat Collectif de Travail" (Collective Work Contract).

As no agreement had been arrived at between the theatre managers and the delegates representing the General Union of Workers of the Film Industry, the Government appointed as arbitrator Jean Mistler, former Minister of the Beaux-Arts, Deputy for the Aube Department, and President of Foreign Affairs of the chamber of Deputies.

A part of the staff of the GFFA (Gaumont) circuits, protested against the arbitration decision, saying that it would impair the advantages they had acquired last June.

The next day, a delegation of workers went to the Présidence du Conseil (Prime Minister's office) and asked the Employers' delegation to meet the Employees' delegation. The employers said there was no need for them to comply with this request as they had submitted to the arbitrator's award.

On the same day, the staff of Gaumont Palace, the largest cinema of Paris (6,000 seats), head of the GFFA circuit, went on strike and occupied the theatre.

In a statement, the workers' committee gave the following reasons for their strike:

"Mr. Mistler's arbitration does not satisfy us because it does not take into consideration the wages already existing. Thus, the scene shifters, who earned 425 francs per week, will be reduced to 385 francs per week. Other wages will also be reduced. It is impossible for us to accept such conditions, so we have decided to cease work and to occupy the theatre.

"Tomorrow, Sunday, we will send a delegation to the General Meeting of the Federation du Spectacle, and we hope to be able to draw all our colleagues of the Paris theatres into a general strike.

"The Government promised us that Mr. Mistler would be called upon to carry on with his arbitration, but we cannot carry on with our work until we have formal promises concerning the maintenance of our situations."

Strike Called Regardless

At the insistence of the Prime Minister, the Employers' delegation yielded on certain points in the text of the award on condition that the award be presented by Mr. Mistler, personally. However, as Mr. Mistler was not in Paris, it was agreed that the theatres would remain open until his return on Wednesday.

On Sunday, an emergency meeting was attended by ushers, check-takers and operators who voted a general strike, at once. In the afternoon the Parisian public found a number of the most important cinemas closed, those of the GFFA Circuit, Pathé and several others. Most of the independent cinemas remained open. The strike affected a third of the so-called

Text of Collective Contract For Theatres of Paris District

Here are the highlights of the collective work contract which was agreed upon by the French Syndicate of Motion Picture Theatres and the French Syndical Chamber of Cinema Directors, on one side, and the Entertainment Federation, the Ushers' Syndicate, the Cashier and the Check-takers' Syndicate, affiliated members of the Employees Federation.

This collective contract is valid for the Paris district, that is to say, the Seine departments, Seine and Oise, and Seine and Marne, which makes a region of about 60 kms around Paris.

I. Syndical Rights

I. The Contract acknowledges the liberty of opinion of the employees and workmen, who are free to belong to the professional syndicate if they so desire. Employers promise not to take into consideration the fact of belonging or not, to a syndicate, in hiring, the allotment of work, measures of discipline, and discharge. Exercise of Syndical rights must not cause acts outside the law.

II. Staff Delegates

In each theatre employering more than 10 persons there must be delegates, the number fixed as follows:

11 to 25 employees: 1 titulary delegate and 1 deputy.

26 to 30 employees: 2 titulary delegates and 2 deputies.

50 and above employees: 3 titulary delegates and 3 deputies.

The delegates are the representatives of the staff, near the management of the theatre. They are elected for one year and are eligible for re-election. All members of the staff, of at least 18 years of age and working for at least 3 months in the theatre, are electors. Eligible only for election as delegate, are employees of French nationality, aged at least 25 years and who have been working in the theatre for a year.

III. Conditions for Work

No employee or workman may be engaged at a salary less than the salary fixed for his or her category.

Conditions for work and the minimum salary are clearly defined by appendices to the actual contract.

Exceptionally, however, and under the control of the Syndical Associations signers of the collective contract, derogations from the salary tariffs may be consented to, in small exploitation theatres, after an agreement between the management and the staff of the theatre.

IV. Weekly Holiday

The law on the weekly holiday is to be strictly applied to the entire staff of the theatre.

V. Accidents

The entire staff must be assured by the employer against accidents at work.

VI. Paid Holidays

Yearly, paid holidays are accorded the whole staff, in conjunction with the law of June 20, 1936. Their length, which must in no way be less than that fixed by the law, will be determined by the conditions for work and by the salaries established for each category.

The period for the holidays must be included between May 1st and September 30th (for motion picture theatres, between May 1st and August 30th).

VII. Engagement

Employers have the right to choose their staff as they wish, either from the workmen's syndicate or elsewhere.

VIII. Length of Work

Length of time for work is fixed at 40 hours per week, in accordance with the law of June 21st, 1936. Professional derogations will only be accorded in particular cases and in agreement with the syndicates interested.

IX. Sickness—Justified Absences

Absences justified by illness, accidents or child-birth, do not break a contract for work and the employee must be taken back on his or her return. This, on the condition that the absence does not exceed 3 months and that the employee is still able, on his or her return, to do the same work as before.

X. Periodical Revisions of the Salaries

The minimum salaries established by the annexes to the present contracts were determined, taking into consideration the economic conditions of April 15th 1937. They may be revised at the end of each term, by the habitual procedure of arbitration, at the demand of one of the two parties.

XI. Equality Committee in Case of Lawsuit

All lawsuits resulting from the application of the present collective contract and its annexes, or the interpretation of their terms, will be submitted to an examination by an equality committee, composed of three employers and three employees or workmen, members of syndical organizations, signatories of the present contract, and presided alternatively by an Employer and by an Employee. If the parity committee is unable to make the conciliation, the concerned parties will have the right to appeal to competent jurisdiction.

Appended to the present convention are particular agreements concerning musicians, machinists, safety staff, theatre managers, control service, check-takers and theatre inspectors, electricians, mechanists and stokers, and finally projection room staff.

This convention is inferred for one year with effect since April 15, 1937. It may be abrogated by both parties, by registered letter three months before its expiration date. If not, it will be renewed automatically for one other year, in the same conditions.

NITED ARTISTS

FRENCH THEATRE WORKERS AIDED

I. MANAGING AND SUPERINTENDENCE STAFF

(1) Motion Picture Theatre Managers

They are responsible to the owner of the theatre for organization and operation of the theatre. They are also responsible for the staff and its behavior, the bookkeeping, payment of wages, rehearsals and course of the programs. They are responsible for the funds confided to their care. They are in charge of advertisement of the programs and the renting of the films. They take the place of the general management in all matters.

Wages:

(a) Minimum 525 francs ($21.00) per week or 2,500 francs ($100.00) per month.

(b) An extra 50 francs wage (about $2.00) will be added to these wages for one year's service in this position in the same theatre. This extra-wage cannot exceed 500 francs a month ($20.00).

(c) In no case shall the theatre manager receive lower wages than the best paid employee in the same theatre.

(2) "Chefs de Poste"

The difference between theatre managers and the socalled "Chefs de Poste" is that "Chefs de Poste" have charge of only order and organization in the theatres. They have no trade act to perform, and nothing to do with the choice of films.

Their minimum wages are 500 francs a week ($20.00).

Theatre managers will have every year one month of paid vacation and the "Chefs de Poste" three weeks.

II. ASSISTANT MANAGERS ("CHEF DE CONTROLE")

The assistant managers and the "Chefs de Controle" have in charge the control service and order inside the theatre. Eventually they may supersede the manager in that which concerns the order and discipline in the theatre.

Theatre inspectors have charge of the order of the hall and the reception of the public, with all ushers and attendants under their orders.

Minimum Wages:

First Category Theatres: First-run and second-run theatres.

Assistant Managers and "Chefs de Controle" 450 francs a week ($18.00).

Theatre Inspectors: 375.50 francs a week ($14.00).

Second Category: Theatres giving daily afternoon and evening performances but not belonging to the first category:

Assistant Managers: 380 francs a week ($15.20).

Theatre Inspectors: 340 francs a week ($14.60).

Third Category: Theatres not giving daily afternoon performances:

Assistant managers: 27 francs ($1.08 per performance.

Theatre Inspectors: 23 francs (90 cents) per performance.

Allowances for tuxedo and dinner jackets which are considered as work uniforms will be paid as follows:

20 francs per week for purchase and upkeep, or a free supply of these suits.

III. CHECK-TAKERS AND CASHIERS

The following paragraphs concern the check-takers and cashiers, whose work is as follows:

(1) Cashiers: They are in charge of the box-office, selling admission tickets to the patrons. They are responsible for the money collected at the box-office. Minimum wages: 290 francs a week ($11.60) or 16.50 francs per performance (66 cents).

SURVEYS BRING TRAILER CUTS

Surveys conducted by motion picture companies and by National Screen Service have resulted in trailers being shortened as much as 50 per cent and in elimination of superlatives in the narration.

National's trailers are now known as "prevues," a patented word.

Another change in trailers is being tried by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The two-week advance trailer of "The Firefly" will be part black and white and part sepia tinted.

(2) Head Check-Takers ("Contrôleur principal"): Responsible for the control service. Minimum wages: 315 francs a week ($13.40) or 20 francs (87 cents) per performance.

(3) Check-Takers at doors ("Contrôleurs de portes"): Charged with verifying the tickets of patrons entering the hall.

(4) Hall Inpsectors (Contrôleurs de salle): Charged with directing the seating of patrons, and order of the hall. Minimum wages: 280 francs per week ($12.00) or 16.50 francs per performance (75 cents).

(5) "Contrôleur Aboyeur" (Barker): Charged with fulfilling, if necessary, the duties of the inspectors, or with announcing aloud at the door of the theatre the principal items on the program. Allowances of 20 francs per week (78 cents) or free supply of special uniforms—dinner jacket or tuxedo. They are allowed 8 days vacation with pay if employed at the same theatre for six months, and 15 days if employed for more than one year.

USHERS—USHERETTES

(1) Cloakroom: Employees placed in charge of the cloakroom are always paid by the management with authority to hire and discharge such employees.

(2) Ushers and Usherettes: Before, ushers and usherettes were only paid through tips and they had to give either the management or a special agency a daily sum (from 10 to 30 francs according to the theatre) to be allowed to work in the theatre. The difference between their tips and this sum became their wages. Agencies each year gave the management a certain sum for exclusive selection of ushers.

These agencies are abolished and the management cannot make the ushers pay for their jobs.

In the few theatres where ushers are paid by the management, the ushers are forbidden to accept tips.

In all theatres where the staff wears uniforms, the management has to supply them and pay for upkeep.

Minimum wages (per 40-hour week): Chief usher: 310 francs ($13.43); "Clock-in" porters: 310 francs ($13.43); Ushers, Usherettes, Liftmen, Cloakroof staff: 280.50 francs ($12.30) or 16.50 francs (75c) per performance; Grooms (opening doors of cars, and allowed to receive tips): 110 francs a week ($4.75); Lavatory attendants and nurses: 235 francs ($10).

In most theatres, where the staff is paid through tips only, this system will be maintained but the effective number of the staff will not be reduced.

SCENE SHIFTERS AND PROPMEN

This clause concerns cinemas giving variety shows on the stage between films. For this staff, work must not include more than two shows with the exception of days on which the program is changed. When they may work during three shows. The question of extra-hours, rehearsals, is also regulated by the Convention.

Minimum wages: Chief scene shifters: 500 francs ($21.75) a week; Scene Shifters: 425 and 400 francs ($18.45 and $17.35) according to work.

SECURITY STAFF (Specialized firemen)

Minimum weekly wages: 350 francs ($15.25).

For all the above named one complete day holiday per week is obligatory.

MUSICIANS

They will have one day holiday per week, on the same day if the cinema closes one day per week, or by turns, if the cinema is open every day.

Musicians are engaged by contract by the season: the winter season is from October 1st to May 31st, i.e. eight months, and the summer season from June 1st to Sept. 30th, i.e. four months.

Minimum wages are 28.75 francs per performance ($1.25).

PROJECTIONISTS

Their work is as follows:

(1) Projection, playing of the non-synchonized gramophone records, use of the microphone, projection of the lantern slides, operation of all lighting of the theatre.

(2) Upkeep of projection material as well as the cleaning of all places occupied by the apparatus. Ordinary repairs of projection material and accessories which do not necessitate the intervention of a specialist.

(3) Upkeep of batteries and current redressers, as well as the batteries feeding the sound apparatus and emergency lighting.

The projectionist cannot be held responsible for faulty reproduction caused by a defect in the material which he has mentioned beforehand to the management.

A projectionist may not be obliged to work for more than 6 consecutive hours of projection.

Minimum Wages:

Chief projectionist: 550 francs per 40-hour week ($24.00).

Projectionist: 500 francs ($21.75) per 40-hour week.

Second projectionist: He takes the place of the chief projectionist when the last named is absent. He may be alone in the projection room but is not responsible for upkeep of equipment. Minimum wages: 450 francs ($20.00).

Assistant projectionist: One cannot be an assistant projectionist before one year's apprenticeship in the projection room, and before the age of 18 years. The assistant projectionist may not, except in a case of extreme urgency, run the projection room alone. He cannot become a projectionist before two years as an assistant. Minimum wages: 275 francs ($12.00) per 40-hour week.

Substituting staff: The substituting projectionists will be paid at each show according to the rate of the weekly wages of the projectionists. Double wages will be paid for night work.

Paid vacations will be one month for the chief projectionist, and projectionists, and one week for the second projectionist and assistant projectionists.

ELECTRICIANS, MECHANICS, STOKERS

Minimum wages: from 425 francs ($18.45) to 600 francs ($26.00) according to the importance of the work.

exclusive theatres and a few in the suburbs. Numerous legitimate theatres were closed, besides music halls and circuses.

At 6 P.M. the Home Office gave the police instructions to evacuate the "sit down" strikers. Many theatres reopened that same evening, but 40 of the 298 theatres in Paris remained closed.

Ask New Contract

On Monday morning, the managers of the circuit and independent theatres received delegations of their employees. These, feeling the strike to be a failure, tried to bargain for the signature of the employers on a new collective contract, drawn up by the Unions, against their promise to return to work. The employers, on the whole, refused to give their consent. The directors pointed out to their employees that they had no reason to go on strike, but notified them that there would be no wage cuts. The workers returned to their jobs with the exception of those in the GFFA circuit, who returned on Tuesday.

Mr. Mistler, called to Paris on Monday, received delegations of the workers and employers. After a night of discussions and of meetings, the Unions gave their agreement Tuesday morning.

No fundamental changes were made in the collective contract established by Mr. Mistler. A new interpretation of obscure points, however, helped certain categories of workers. Existing wages cannot, for any reason, be cut down.

Costs Exhibitors 900,000 Francs

This strike came about without any valid reasons and against the advice of the leaders of the Unions. It cost Paris exhibitors 900,000 francs ($36,000), a loss which never will be recovered. The employees were not paid for the days on which they did not work.

The only ones to profit were the theatre firemen, who had been forgotten in the collective contract, and the ushers. A new provision protects them against any reduction of number employed.

The directors of the theatres promised not to make any reprisals.

Mr. Mistler's arbitration decision, revised following the strike, establishes a collective convention between the directors and the proprietors of the theatres and their staffs. This convention is valid only in the Paris district. The provisions of the agreement are recorded on the page of the beginning of this article.

Asks Special Taxes Be Dropped

For the industry Mr. Mistler asked that the special entertainment taxes be eliminated.

"The Pauper Tax" he told the Government, "hits the theatres, music halls and cinemas for 8.75% of their net receipts, and dance halls 21.75%.

"The State taxes vary from 2% (legitimate theatre) to 20% (motion picture theatres).

"As far as we know there is not another example of such excessive fiscal policy, and it is impossible not to realize the extremely difficult position the entertainment industry is in.

"The first to be affected by this was the legitimate theatre, to such a point that, since 1919, twenty theatres have been obliged to close down. Music halls, cinemas and dance halls are in an equally bad situation.

"We do not hesitate to declare that, to our mind, the bringing into force of new Collective Conventions ought to be accompanied by an immediate return to the common system of fiscal policy. If not, there is a great risk that employers will be ruined, employees and workmen thrown out of work, and that in an industry employing, in the Paris district alone, over 50,000 people."

Mines Bureau Films Shown To Audience of 8,809,496

Educational films of the Bureau of Mines were shown to audiences totaling 8,809,496 persons in the past year, according to tabulations revealed by M. F. Leopold, safety engineer, of the Bureau.

The films, which are all sponsored and financed by American industries, were shown on 100,342 occasions, an increase of 31 per cent over the previous year. The attendance figure is an increase of 36 per cent over 1936. Of the 100,342 showings, 95 per cent were before student bodies.

"We have at this time 3,775 reels of educational films for which the demand is so great that, although we have as high as 50 copies of numerous subjects, some are being booked a year in advance," Mr. Leopold said.

The demand for the films encourages the belief that American industry would cooperate to the fullest extent in the preparation of additional films, it was said.

Laughton and Pommer in Paris

The co-managers of the new British producing company, Mayflower Pictures, Erich Pommer and Charles Laughton have just spent a weekend in Paris. Mr. Laughton said he had come "only for gastronomic purposes" and "I leave diets to my friends of Hollywood."

Boyer Will Make Film in France

Charles Boyer, who has not played in any French film since "Mayerling," is to come to Paris in September to star for André Daven in "Le Venin" (The Venom), from the play by Henry Bernstein, which Charles Boyer played many times in France on the stage. Direction will be by Marc Allégret, one of the most successful young French directors.

Four French Films for Biennial

The French minister for fine arts has announced the French films chosen to represent the French Industry at the Venice Biennial next September. They are:

"La Grande Illusion" (The Great Illusion), directed by Jean Renoir, with Jean Gabin, Pierre Fresnay, Erich von Stroheim and Dita Parlo.

"Les Perles de la Couronne" (The Pearls of the Crown), directed by Sacha Guitry, with Sacha Guitry, Raimu, Lyn Harding and Ermeto Zacconi.

"Helène," directed by Jean-Benoit Lévy, with Madeleine Renaud and Jean-Louis Barrault.

"Un Carnet de Bal," directed by Julien Duvivier, with seven French stars.

One of the best French films of the year, "Pepe le Moko," has been rejected by the French ministry because it is a gangster story.

DUTCH ACT TO PREVENT CUT RATE ADMISSIONS

Federation Discusses Forming Board to Protect Prices; Delays MGM Theatre Approval

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

Members of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation have held a special meeting in connection with the formation of a board to prepare "price regulations," aimed to eliminate excesses such as extraordinarily low entrance fees for all performances, for permanent as well as for traveling theatres, whether by distribution of cut rate tickets, or coupon blocks.

By the fixing of economically justified minimum prices, as well as the maximum number of seats for which the minimum prices to be fixed per performance may obtain, the required progression in the entrance fees quoted over the minimum is, moreover, automatically assured.

The necessity of regulating the minimum entrance fees in the general interest of the entire Netherlands picture and theatre trade was generally accepted, because the entrance fees for the performances have been liable to such decreases that not only has profitable operation been impossible, but the financial strength of the Dutch film trade has been threatened with undermining.

The proposed regulations contain a number of elaborated definitions, and mention the procedure necessary for fixing the minimum entrance fee.

New MGM Theatre Debated

Plans for construction of a new theatre by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer also were discussed. The company's plans already are far advanced, but no request has been made of the Federation for approval and no positive reply was given at the general discussion to the question whether the Federation will give this approval.

The opinion was expressed that a new big theatre in Holland's capital certainly would not improve the position of the other theatres. Considering, however, other conflicts between representatives of leading American companies and the Federation it is not considered likely that the Federation would refuse approval, because it would be expected that other American companies would support Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the event that a boycott of Metro pictures should be ordered by the Federation.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has financial interest in a new company founded for operation of several film theatres in Amsterdam and Rotterdam, including the Capitol and City in Rotterdam, and the Alhambra, Royal and Corso in Amsterdam. The Capitol, Cinema Royal and Corso have been taken over from the former Royal circuit.

In the last year the most important Metro pictures have been released in the Amsterdam Alhambra theatre, the Tuschinski and Royal circuits getting the "leavings."

The influence of MGM on the film business in Amsterdam increases every day. By leaving the new theatres in Amsterdam and Rotterdam for five years, MGM has obtained an outlet for its films, also in the case of a boycott.

Pictures of other companies, too, American and European, will be shown in the new MGM theatres.

A conflict with the Federation therefore might arise, because, owing to the difficult situation here, there are those here who are determined to prohibit the construction of theatres without special approval of the Federation Board.

Demand Free Development

The managing board of the Federation rejected the invitation of the German "Internationale Filmkammer" to send a representative to the Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie held in Paris July 5th to 10th.

In its letter to the "Internationale Filmkammer" the Federation argued that international organization of the industry can work only when its headquarters are placed in a country in which art and trade can have free development.

Admission Receipts Drop

The total admission fees during the first three months of 1937 decreased again in comparison with the figures on the first trimester of 1936, as a review of theatre receipts in January, February and March shows.

Number of visitors, 2,398,680 (1936, first trimester, 2,333,360). Gross receipts, fl. 913,985,- (fl. 958,741,-)

ROTTERDAM (about 600,000 inhabitants)
Number of visitors, 1,427,720 (1936, first trimester, 1,468,749). Gross receipts, fl. 592,025,- (fl. 630,747,-)

THE HAGUE (amount of admission taxes only known now). 1937, fl. 123,199,-; 1936, fl. 114,-618,-

The admission tax is 20 per cent. The number of theatres exceeds that of 1936.

105 Fox Theatre Heads Talk Over 1938 Operations

by JOHN A. ROSE in Denver

A five-day convention of National Theatres Circuit (Fox West Coast and subsidiaries) officials, managers, bookers and department heads opens at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo., on Monday, through Friday.

Tuesday and Friday will be given over to talks on theatre and film problems. Subjects to be covered include film deals, corporate records, legislation, unions, purchasing department, taxation, sound and projection, insurance and employees' associations, legitimate shows and concerts, acquisitions and rehabilitation.

Wednesday will be occupied with general discussions on operation, and will be led for 15-minute periods by A. M. Bowles, H. J. Fitzgerald, John Hamrick, Al Finkelstein, C. A. Buckley, Rick Ricketson, Phil Phillips, Frank Newman, Al Gould, E. C. Rhoden, Mike Rosenberg and Charles Skouras.

A feature of the Thursday activities will be a television exhibit, to precede department meetings, with division managers meeting with S. P. Skouras; district managers and bookers with W. T. Powers, J. J. Sullivan, M. Hossfeld, A. Schenck and I. Barry; purchasing and maintenance departments with E. F. Zabel and Frank Irby; treasury department with Harry Cox, Alan May and John P. Edmondson; and publicity men will meet with district managers and bookers.

The opening day, Monday, will be given over to a golf tournament, sightseeing trips, trout fishing and other activities. Various social events and trips are scheduled for other days, and on Wednesday the group will visit the Will Rogers' Shrine of the Sun on Cheyenne Mountain. This memorial to the humorist is being built by one of his life-long friends, Spencer Penrose, a Colorado Springs millionaire, and will be dedicated on Labor Day this year.

The convention will adjourn Friday afternoon.

C. L. Stong, sales promotion manager for Electrical Research, with E. W. McClelland as engineer, will stage a demonstration of advances in sound motion pictures for the convention.

In addition to showing "Third-dimension" or Stereophonic sound, "vertical" or hill-and-dale noiseless disc recordings and the Erpi's mirrophonic sound system, Mr. Stong will address the assembly on "The 'Utility Factor' of Sound as a Box-Office Element"—in which the practical aspects of sound system operation will be discussed.

Other Erpi men attending the convention will be: H. W. Dodge, western division sales manager; L. E. Kennedy, district sales representative; H. J. Barnicoat, Los Angeles district superintendent, and S. R. Langwith, district supervisor of the Denver territory.

Trop Appointed Sherman Manager

Mr. Sherman is planning to expand production activities to include additional features besides the Cassidy westerns which are released through Paramount.

FRENCH PLAY TITLE NOW CHURCH NAME

Despite objections that "Notre Dame du Cinema"—"Our Lady of the Films"—was the title of a French play a few years ago, Jean Cardinal Verdier, Archbishop of Paris, has decided on the name for a Roman Catholic church to be built at Joinville, near Paris, according to a United Press dispatch from Paris.

Several film studios are located in Joinville. In announcing his choice, the Archbishop said it was an ancient custom of the church to honor crafts and arts.

Films Lose to New Taxation In Two Places

The motion picture business this week lost ground in its defense against new taxation, escaping a "luxury" tax but falling into a gross receipts tax in the District of Columbia and also into a new phase of the sales tax in New York, where authorities ruled the sale of prints produced in New York are taxable. New taxes are threatened in Omaha and Detroit.

District of Columbia exhibitors were saved from a two per cent luxury sales tax only to be faced with a gross receipts tax of two-fifths of one per cent on all income over $2,000. Owners of theatre properties also will be subject to to an increase from $1.50 to $1.75 per $100 of valuation, in the real estate tax provisions of the bill.

New York City's tax department is preparing to levy the two per cent municipal sales tax on distributors who have produced prints in the city for local sale. Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners are expected to feel the impost most heavily with Educational Pictures also expected to be affected.

The city comptroller's office is completing its audit of books of the local exchanges to determine the amount of the tax due the city for film rentals. Informal estimates place the amount of the interest and penalties for avoidance at $100,000 to $150,000.

The Omaha city council is drafting a new building code ordinance which would include a clause taxing theatre marquees and hanging signs.

Detroit's council is considering revision of motion picture license fees. Complaint has been made that several theatres have been offering stage shows, especially amateur nights, and paying the annual motion picture license of $25 instead of the $100 fee required for stage show presentation. The proposed bill will graduate the amount of the fee, on the basis of the size of the theatre.

Attorney General McKittrick, of Missouri, has notified State Auditor Forrest Smith that any extension by the auditor of the time for making returns under the state sales tax will relieve the taxpayer of interest payments on the tax in question and also of the three per cent commission which is levied for collection of the impost. The auditor has the power to extend for 60 days the time for making returns and paying the tax.

Meanwhile, the lower branch of the New Hampshire legislature defeated a motion to reconsider the bill allowing theatres to open at four o'clock on Sunday instead of six o'clock.

Chance Games Meet Setbacks In Several Areas

The future of bank night and kindred games of chance was darkened this week with the giveaway principle under judicial attack in Connecticut and threatened with adverse legislation in Detroit. Exhibitor interest has declined in the promotion idea with Loew's and RKO making no plans for extension of bank night in their respective circuits, although Connecticut independents are unwilling to admit defeat despite the unfavorable decision in the Windsor Locks "test case."

Roy Heffner, New England distributor of Bank Night, has announced his intention of calling a meeting of New Haven and other Connecticut exhibitors for discussion of bringing another test case. Mr. Heffner said that the decision of Judge Carl Foster of the Superior Court, Hartford, in the case of the State vs. David Magliora of the Rialto, Windsor Locks, in which the defendant was fined $13 for violation of the State Lottery Law, has no critical significance since the Rialto's system of using proxy cards and other devices varied from the prescribed Bank Night method.

State's Attorney High M. Alcorn has expressed the opinion that all such games are illegal and that he will prosecute them to the fullest.

The Detroit council is holding hearings on proposed ordinance which would forbid theatres from engaging in any games of chance or skill, directly or indirectly. Theatre lotteries have been the basis of many suits in Detroit, with a decision of state supreme court failing to reduce the litigation. The proposed measure is phrased in the most comprehensive terms, but places no restriction on churches and charitable organizations in the holding of similar games.

Dissolution of an injunction granted to the Associated Theatres Circuit, operating the Granada, in Detroit, by Circuit Judge Henry G. Nicol inspired the announcement of Nathaniel H. Gildstick, assistant corporation counsel, to prosecute any Detroit theatres featuring the giveaway idea.

Bank night in Massachusetts also received a setback this week in the decision of Attorney General Dever to refrain from holding a popular referendum on the chance games on the grounds of costliness and dubious legality of public voting on a cause already illegal under state law.

County Attorney Grace Ballard, in Omaha, has decided to permit C. N. Robinson to continue bank night at the Home theatre, pending the Nebraska Supreme Court decision on the Fox-Midwest appeal on a district court decision ruling bank night a lottery.

The common council of Menominee, Michigan, has referred the question of bank night legality to its police, license and traffic committee.

INTRODUCTION OF 'WHITE PAPER' INTENSIFIES QUOTA CONTROVERSY

CEA and Independents Prepare to Fight in Parliament Against Minimum Cost Clause; Tentative Draft Followed Closely

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Introduction in the House of Commons of a White Paper outlining the Government's plan for the new Films Act including a quota of 15 per cent for distributors and 10 per cent for exhibitors, rising to 20 per cent for distributors and 15 for exhibitors in the second year, was followed by intensified activity on the part of the various political interests already engaged in the controversy.

Even before the announcement in Commons by the Right Hon. Oliver Stanley of the provisions of the new Films Act which differed but little from the tentative draft published by the Board of Trade last month, plans had been laid for the fall both by supporters and assailants of the minimum cost clause, key feature of the proposed legislation.

The White Paper, entitled "Proposals for Legislation on Cinematograph Films," occupied 24 paragraphs and ran approximately 6,000 words. It proposed a reduction of the present quota of 20 per cent for both distributors and exhibitors to 15 per cent for both in the 1937-38 season, the last year of the present Films Act, to avoid any disturbance due to the new conditions. Provision was made for flexible operation of the new quota at the discretion of the Board of Trade within the maximum prescribed which would reach 30 per cent and 25 per cent in 10 years.

The viewing or quality test, as sponsored by the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association was rejected by the Government on the ground of uncertainty. It was said such a provision would make production financing difficult. Approving the cost test, which was espoused by the Kinematograph Renters' Society, the White Paper said:

"The cost test has the merit of certainty. Those responsible would have considerable financial incentive to produce films likely to have satisfactory box office results."

The Government accepted the minimum principle of £2 per foot and £15,000 per feature, but proposed that it be applied in a new form, basing the minimum on labor costs which are estimated at one-half the cost of the film. British features on which at least £1 per foot or £7,500 per film have been expended in labor costs would be entitled to registration under the distributor quota. A film costing in £22,500 in labor costs would rank double for quota purposes.

A reciprocity proposal provided that if a distributor buys the rights to a British film for a single foreign market at a cost of £20,000, that distributor would be exempted from the British quota in the same amount of footage. The reciprocity plan would apply only to films costing a minimum of £22,500 in labor charges.

A separate short subjects quota was proposed, beginning at 10 per cent for distributors and five per cent for exhibitors and increasing to a high in 10 years of 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors. No cost test would be imposed on shorts in the beginning.

The advance booking restrictions in force at present would be retained and a new clause was added making blind booking by a distributor an offense. On registering any film the distributor would be required to make a statutory declaration that it had not been blind booked.

SEEK NEW CAMERA UNDERWATER EFFECT

In the hope of discovering a new technique for underwater photography, Bunny Bryan, formerly of Paramount, and Captain John D. Craig, deep sea diver and photographer, soon will make depth tests of new deep sea apparatus in Atlantic City.

Equipment includes helium-inflated diving suits, 5,000-watt bulbs recently developed by General Electric, and special broadcasting facilities. If a depth of 400 feet can be reached, the two intend to film the salvage work of the Lusitania now in progress off the Irish coast.

The Government rejected proposals to deal with overbuilding and a plan for a Government Films Commission, but the suggestion of an advisory committee was retained.

Objections General

Because of widespread objection to the proposals contained in the White Paper drastic modifications seemed certain when the measure is finally presented to Parliament for a vote. The general view was that the Board of Trade had allowed studio interests to dictate a policy equally damaging to Americans and big producers here. Americans would be compelled to continue to produce footage instead of big pictures and the domestic producers would be prevented from making a real reciprocity deal with Hollywood.

Many observers believed that the Board of Trade simply adhered to the draft suggestions in the absence of a trade policy and would welcome alternatives before the bill is introduced.

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries generally favored the Government plan, but Ken Nyman of the CEA said he was bitterly disappointed that the Government had adhered to the draft.

"We will oppose it with all the forces and instruments available, politically and by propaganda and in Parliament," he said. He regarded the temporary reduction of the exhibitors' quota as a snare concealing the perils of the full act and said the labor quota provisions would aid evasions.

Most spectacular of the plans for the conduct of the campaign against the proposals was the British Film Advancement Council's scheme for a series of meetings in a House of Commons committee room, at which leaders of the various sections of the industry, and of industry opinion, should state their views to gatherings of M. P.'s and of members of the House of Lords.

At this time it is uncertain that the BFAC will obtain acceptances from all whom it asks to address them; at least it is probable that exhibitors, distributors and independents, who find much to criticize in the Government proposals, will seek additional channels of approach to Parliament.

The British Film Advancement Council is not regarded as an impartial group, but as one more or less committed to an ultra-nationalistic policy, with a particular leaning to reciprocity in the form championed by Mr. Isidore Ostrer. Its last communique stressed its desire for "measures to assure fair treatment for British films in all countries."

CEA Wins Support

The CEA has had considerable success in its appeal for support to Members of Parliament and particularly, it is believed, to members of the Labor party. The CEA campaign has been conducted with considerable thoroughness; every member of the association has been asked to write to his M. P. and, as there are a number of cinemas in all constituencies, and several hundred in most, it can be imagined that even a 50 per cent application of these tactics must have meant big publicity for the CEA policy, the keynote of which is root and branch opposition to the cost clause.

This is conceded by Lord Strabolgi, chairman of the BFAC, who has said publicly that the CEA's agitation may have "surprising results" if other sections of the industry do nothing to counter it.

The inference that the CEA will prefer to form its own Parliamentary group is fairly obvious.

Equally obvious is the identification of the Strabolgi party with an anti-CEA policy. The BFAC is, it may be assumed, also anti-American in fact, if not in theory, simply owing to its pronounced nationalistic aims. Therefore it is scarcely to be expected that the KRS will be eager to rush into its arms. It wants a cost clause, but it wants it in a very different form from that which appeals to the Film Group.

At this moment, it seems that the American interest, though it will be called upon to bear most of the financial burden of the new legislation, will alone be without its Parliamentary "group."

Rowson Article Quoted

One of the most important developments in the situation previous to Mr. Stanley's statement in the Commons was the appearance of an article on the situation, in the Times of July 22nd, by Mr. Simon Rowson. Rightly or wrongly, Mr. Rowson was regarded as having stated, in this contribution, if not the Government's own attitude to criticism of its draft proposals, at least the attitude which the Government will be found to adopt in due course. The reason is that Mr. Rowson, universally recognized in the industry as an authority in all statistical, political and organizational matters, is equally highly regarded by the Board of Trade. His "Analysis of Trade Fears" may equally well be described as an analysis of, and cure for, Government doubts.

Mr. Rowson, after a dismissal of the quality test as impracticable, physically and from the point of view of judging varying entertainment values in different districts and different theatres, concentrated largely on a defense of the cost clause from the accusation that it would imply a shortage of product.

He made an elaborate summary of the extent and finance of British production, and concluded that the 220 features made in 1936 cost, excluding 16 more or less worthless films made in British Dominions, £4,200,000. American companies made, or bought, he said, excluding 14 of these Dominion films, 86 subjects, costing £600,00. Under the new proposals of the

B. O. T., 92 British subjects would be required to cover the same foreign footage as in 1936. These would cost £1,400,000 under the minimum cost of £15,000 or £1,500,000 if advantage were taken of the £45,000 "double quota" provision.

He estimated that, in fact, if the BOT "draft" scheme had been working in 1936, 170 subjects would have been produced instead of 220. Out of the 220, however, 86 were "quickies" and, with allowance for the more or less worthless Dominion features, made the number of "effective" British pictures 118. The 170 to be expected under an Act based on the Government proposals would therefore represent an effective gain instead of a reduction in British footage. On top of this the exhibitor, under the new proposals, will have a 15/20 advantage in quota, against the current 20/20 basis.

American Argument Hit

Mr. Rowson also disputed the exhibitor argument that American companies would no longer find it commercial to import "B" pictures if they had to cover them with £15,000 British pictures. His argument was that these pictures cost the U. S. companies nothing in U. K. except duties, exploitation costs, prints and so forth.

"These need not amount to as much as £500 a subject. Nowhere is it suggested that even the worst of these American subjects will not bring in several times this sum in this country. The assumption, therefore, of any curtailment of imports by American companies seems to have little, if any, justification," he said.

As regards American "B" pictures handled by British companies he made the point that the latter have made British pictures independently of any need to cover American output, and at an average cost of £35,000, in sufficient number to cover the American imports. They are therefore well situated to meet the £15,000 minimum without any alteration of policy. He thought "independent" producers would make only 20 pictures, against 44 in 1936.

Mr. Rowson's very thorough and thoughtful summary represented, in the opinion of many traders, the case which opponents of the new bill have to face. On the point of the quality test, one answer seems already to have been made by exhibitors. The CEA has stated its willingness to consider a quality test on the basis that, instead of viewing being applied to all films, it should only be evoked if, after a trade show, a given number of responsible traders challenge its entertainment value. Such a practice would certainly answer the main objection to a quality clause, its need of elaborate organization. It might also, in practice, meet the criticism that screen values vary in different districts, since it is unlikely that a challenged film would be objected to by viewers exclusively from one area. Definitely, it would kill the "contemptuous" type of quickie, in Indian dialect or the like.

A. B. P. Quota Defaults Cited

That Associated British Pictures Corp., Ltd., "the second biggest film company in the country," had been fined five times for default under the quota provisions of the Films Act was brought to the attention of the President of the Board of Trade in a House of Commons question from Mr. J. R. Remer, M. P., on July 26th.

Mr. Remer drew attention to the fact that, in recently imposing a fine for default at the Regal, Marble Arch, London, the magistrate had stated that the profits of the American films shown would amply cover the amount. He also pointed out that Mr. John Maxwell, chairman and managing director of ABP, was a member of the Advisory Committee to the Board of Trade under the Films Act. He suggested enquiries into the matter "in the interests of public policy."

CINEMA 'TRAILER' PARKS AND SHOWS

A. L. Brown, former owner of the State theatre, Rapid City, S. D., operates what he calls the first cinema trailer.

The car is equipped with sound and is furnished with 60 upholstered seats. The show lasts two hours and Mr. Brown simply parks where there seems a chance of a sell-out.

The Government reply, from Capt. Euan Wallace, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, was that ABP's five quota "offences" had occurred during three full years, and that the company controlled some 250 theatres. "I do not think any further enquiry on my part is necessary," he stated.

G. T. C. Report Attacked

Mr. C. L. Nordon, the lawyer advising the Provisional Shareholders' Committee of the Gaumont-British Corporation, moved two amendments to the report of General Theatre Corporation at the annual meeting of that company, at Film House on July 26th. GTC is managed by G-B.

Mr. Nordon's first amendment demanded a statement of gross revenue and expenditure for each of the years 1929 to 1937, details of investments in subsidiary and associated companies and the income therefrom, and the elimination of Mr. Isidore Ostrer's name as president of the company. His second opposed the reappointment as auditors of Nicholson, Beecroft & Co., who are associated with G-B.

Both amendments were carried on a show of hands but on Mr. Mark Ostrer, in the chair, demanding a poll, they were defeated by 926,773 shares to 16,275 and by 934,833 to 1,800. It is understood the board held proxies for 864,000 shares.

Mr. Nordon argued that the shareholders' capital, now standing at £450,000, was represented entirely by investments in other companies and that they were entitled to know the details. He also asked why the re-built Capitol Theatre, in the Haymarket, had been called the Gaumont, although it belonged to GTC. Mr. Mark Ostrer's reply was that they wanted to get away from the old name and that the name Gaumont, "in spite of what Mr. Nordon has said," was as good as any in the country. Answering Mr. Nordon's suggestion that Mr. Isidore Ostrer's office might be "a means to exercise functions without incurring any responsibilities," he said: "He just happens to be president, that's all; he doesn't get any pay for it and he does a tremendous amount of work for the company."

GTC, which is managed by G-B under a ten years' agreement, made a profit of £337,041, an increase of £61,072.

A further circular appealing for help from the general body of G-B shareholders has been issued by the Shareholders' Committee, which is endeavoring to get a ten per cent support for its demand to the Board of Trade for an investigation of the company's affairs.

In this statement, signed by Mr. W. H. G. Drown as chairman, shareholders are said to have their last opportunity "of combining in protection of their mutual interests and in support of those directors who oppose the Ostrer control." Comment was made on the fact that accounts for the year ended March 31st, 1937, have not been issued by G-B, but that the directors have admitted estimated losses for the period of £780,000.

It was suggested that the accounts will not justify the payment of the half-year's preference dividend due on Sept. 29th. The Committee is therefore taking up the same attitude as led it, on the last year's figures, to take steps to challenge the legality of the preference payment in the Courts. The action failed and the present campaign for a B. O. T. investigation was a sequel. Passing of the preference dividend would give votes to holders of those shares and, in the general belief, lead to the passing of control in G-B from the Ostrers to Mr. John Maxwell, of Associated British. Mr. Maxwell has an action entered against the Ostrers in connection with the sale to his company of shares in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, controlling G-B. It is not expected to be heard until the Fall.

Stories from American sources that Mr. Louis B. Mayer and his associates were attempting to arrange, at Carlsbad, a new GB-Fox-Metro deal were regarded with some scepticism in well informed quarters in London. Admitting the possibilities of exploratory discussions, it was thought that the Maxwell-Ostrer deal for Metropolis shares, and the action arising from it, formed an effective barrier to any other effective agreements.

ABP Nets Over $4,348,000

Reunion Creditors Meet

At a meeting of creditors and shareholders of Reunion Films, Ltd., presided over by the official receiver, liabilities of £68,372 were shown, against assets of £10,766. Formed in 1934, the company had an issued capital at the date of the winding-up order of £11,071.

Denies Denham Contract

Ben Goetz, head of MGM British production, denied that a contract had been signed with Alexander Korda for lease of studio space at the Korda Denham studio from Metro English production. Mr. Goetz declared that no final decision has been made as yet, and that various propositions are under consideration.

Law on Use of Animals

The Cinematograph Films (Animals) Bill, passing its third reading in the House of Lords, is awaiting only the formality of the royal assent to become law. It prohibits the exhibition of films, of any nationality, in which cruelty to animals is shown, or in which cruelty was employed in production.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

MITCHELL LEISEN, director of several productions starring Carole Lombard, is guest at a luncheon at the Pinewood Studios on a visit to England. Left to right are David MacDonald, director of "The Last Curtain"; Mr. Leisen; Nova Pilbeam; Anthony Havelock-Allan, associate producer for British Paramount; Ronald Adams, stage impresario, and A. R. Rawlinson, scenarist. Mr. Leisen will direct "The Big Broadcast of 1938" for Paramount on his return to Hollywood.

Colour Vehicle

Merle Oberon's first picture since the car smash that led to the scrapping of "I Claudius" has gone into work at Denham. The story finally selected was "The Divorce of Lady X," one of the six all-Technicolor producttions to be made by London, Film Productions. One reason assigned is that the star's tests for her first color appearance were "sensational." With her are Laurence Olivier, Ralph Richardson and Morton Selten. Tim Whelan, who directed "Farewell Again" and "Action for Slander," is in charge.

For another Technicolor feature, the adaptation of A. E. W. Mason's "The Drum," which is to be the second vehicle of "Sabu," of "Elephant Boy," an exterior unit headed by Geoffrey Boothby, is on location on the Northwest frontier of India. The cooperation given by the Indian Government is reflected in the fact that the party is operating at the most northerly post in tribal territory, which is forbidden even to Army officers, except on duty. Imus and Challis, the Technicolor cameramen, are called the first Americans who ever set foot there. The unit reached its location by mule caravan; the average width of the mountain track traversed was three feet, with a 500 feet drop.

Background will include an Indian potentate's palace. There will also be Tiridimir, a 26,000 foot peak.

Staircase Gallop

Ann Todd, playing Muriel Carne, harum-scarum wife of an English country gentleman, had some fancy horsemanship to do for "South Riding," Victor Saville's production at Denham. She rode her horse through the front door of Maythorpe Hall, across the hall, with rugs flying and furniture falling, and up a broad staircase into the bedroom of her laggard husband,—and she did it without a double, they say. In fact, she did it ten times for the camera.

As Marie Antoinette

With costume and dress effects announced as an outstanding feature, New World's "Follow the Sun," with Annabella, is developing according to plan at Denham, where the latest sequence pictures a fancy dress ball in Paris at which Annabella appears as Marie Antoinette, and Paul Lukas as a Cossack officer. Harold Schuster, director, is well up to schedule with this feature for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Signs "Crazy Gang"

One section of the Gaumont-British production organization does not contemplate the early close-down which seemed to be foreshadowed in the original announcement of the joint enterprise with General Film Distributors. Only eight pictures were planned under that arrangement, four to be contributed by Gainsborough. Now, however, it is announced by Maurice Ostrer that he has signed the "Crazy Gang" (Nervo and Knox, Flanagan and Allen and Naughton and Gold, famous variety teams with an old association with the London Palladium) on a three year contract to make pictures for Gainsborough, and that he is looking for stories for them, to follow "Alf's Button," which will be their next vehicle. This stage comedy, previously filmed, will go on the floor before the end of the year. The "Crazy Gang" appear in "Okay for Sound," advance-reported as one of Gainsborough's best.

As a fact, the Islington unit, which was allocated the task of making relatively modest "British release" product for G-B, has made many good pictures at moderate cost and may well be the means whereby G-B production gradually reassumes something like its old importance.

Also announced by Gainsborough is that Robert Stevenson will direct "Owd Bob" for that unit before taking the year's holiday with his wife, Anna Lee, which he planned on the completion of his "King Solomon's Mines." This also is a famous story, filmed before. This particular "repeat" will give Will Fyffe, a very fine character actor, a congenial part as an old Scottish shepherd, prominent in the sheep-dog trials which are the background. Owd Bob himself is a dog.

For Jessie Matthews

In active preparation at Pinewood is the next Jessie Matthews vehicle, "Full Sail," which will be directed by her husband, Sonnie Hale, with Glenn MacWilliams at the camera.

Special music is being written by Maurice Siegler and Arthur Johnston, author of "Pennies from Heaven" (it took him nine weeks to write it). Johnston returns to Hollywood shortly to do music for pictures for Walter Wanger and Bing Crosby.

'Lie Detector' Filmed

Maurice Elvey has started shooting at the Warner-First National studio at Teddington on "The Lie Detector," a murder mystery. Nicholas Hannen, Barry Mackay, Henry Oscar, Kathleen Kelly, Daphne Raglan, Ross Landon and Edward Chapman have been signed. The cameraman is Bob Lapresle, who shot "Irish for Luck," Patric Knowles' vacation picture.

Capt. Joe Orton and John Meehan, Jr., from Hollywood, have been put under contract by Irving Asher. They have scheduled for early production an original melodrama, "Dr. Satan."

Itemized

Oriel Ross (Countess Poulett in private life) flew back from a French holiday to play the part of a murdered film star in Alfred Hitchcock's "A Shilling for Candles" (G-B) at Pinewood.

Grosvenor's "Command Performance," with Arthur Tracy, is in the cutting room.

Dave Bader arranged Erich von Stroheim's contract for "Mademoiselle Docteur," and sold screen rights of "Mr. Penny" to British National.

Robert Douglas, under a long contract with Herbert Wilcox, has been loaned to London Films for the lead in "Whymper," Alpine story which is among the six Gunther Stapenhorst productions for Alexander Korda.

CHICAGO EXHIBITORS HAIL MILLER'S RETURN

Theatremen Hope Former Leader Will Direct Fight Against 3% Gross Tax

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Jack Miller's announcement this week that he was returning to Chicago permanently, to take active interest in his theatres, may be the bright spot on the horizon for the Windy City's hard-pressed exhibitors.

With Mr. Miller returning to take part in the local exhibition activities, chances are that he may be persuaded to take over the handling of negotiations with city officials on matters which have come up since he retired as president of the Chicago Exhibitors Association, a little over a year ago. At the time he gave up the office Mr. Miller declared he would not again take active part as an exhibitor. However, he has decided that he should devote more time to his theatres, less to his other interests.

In the past year, or since Mr. Miller left, the troubles between theatremen and city hall officials have become more numerous and serious. Several situations have proved costly to the theatre owners, hence their interest in having him take over the job of contact man at the city hall.

Giveaway games such as Bank Night and Screeno were barred last fall when the Chicago Better Business Bureau asked the police to intervene. Theatre owners and managers were fined, and when they protested the arrests, the Illinois supreme court decided that the games were unlawful.

Opportunity had been given the theatremen to settle their differences with the city officials.

Fighting the police department's action through the courts didn't help matters any either, especially after city officials had made overtures and explained ways and means by which the games could be operated. It is said that a representative of a local circuit, informed as to what means should be taken for settlement, denounced those who had offered a means of agreement and this caused the fight-to-a-finish by the city.

Another problem that confronted the theatremen last winter was the rigid and unrelenting health regulations handed down from the city hall, regarding crowding in theatres. No holdout lines were allowed in the theatre lobbies, and all lounges and foyer seats were roped off to prevent patrons from waiting inside the theatre until seats were available. This regulation lasted for weeks and cost theatremen thousands of dollars in receipts, as customers refused to wait outside the theatres in zero weather when the lobbies and foyers were vacant.

Failure of certain theatre groups to participate in the mayor's Christmas Party for the poor was another cause of friction.

The latest concern of the theatremen is the plan of the city council to fix a 3 per cent tax on all theatre grosses, to help meet a $3,000,000 deficit in the city's budget. A counter offer by the theatremen, to increase city theatre license fees 25 per cent, is still being discussed.

If an increase in license fees is decided upon, it is expected that rates will be so revised as to place the heavier increases upon the larger theatres and to lessen, if anything, the rates on the smaller houses. One reason for this is said to be the double feature. Duals have proved to be somewhat helpful to the larger theatres but detrimental to the smaller houses, which with the long double bills cannot get a fast enough turnover in showings.

This rate revision, if adopted, would double or triple the license fees of the big deluxe theatres, it is reported, yet the amount of revenue the city would get is said to be even less than if a 3 per cent tax were placed upon gross receipts.

At one of the first meetings with the city finance committee one of the exhibitor representatives is said to have mentioned to the councilmen that the circuit he represented was already paying heavy fees to the city. He said that a major item was the inspection fee the city charged whereas his circuit's theatres "weren't being inspected." This comment brought the response from one of the councilmen that he needn't worry about that matter further, that from now on theatres in that circuit certainly would be inspected. Latest reports indicate that they have been, with the results of the inspections scarcely appealing to the parties concerned. Several theatre men were "out of town" at the next meeting with the councilmen.

It is this chaotic state of affairs that exhibitors want Jack Miller to settle.

The Bluebook School

F. H. RICHARDSON

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 79

Bluebook School Question No. 79 was: Do you believe the tendency to give circuit theatre managers only very limited authority is wise?

In this I think it best to publish no names. One point has been brought out very prominently. It has been touched upon in hundreds of answers, namely, that limiting the authority of theatre managers tends to bring about carelessness all along the line for the reason that employes under the manager have not that high respect for his authority that is necessary to efficient management and excellence in general results. One very excellent answer reads thus:

"First of all, Mr. Richardson, a theatre manager must have the confidence and respect of the employes under him. Unless they have it, it cannot be reasonably expected that things will run smoothly and efficiently. It is just one of those things that is not done. And to inspire confidence and respect a manager must be competent and capable. Men working under a man in whom they have less than reasonable confidence, or under a manager whose ability does not inspire respect, just will not work efficiently. That we believe is self-evident.

"And, Mr. Richardson, we ask you, will a really capable theatre manager accept a position with a highly limited authority? If he has not the authority to manage the theatre, and a circuit official located at a distance does the actual management by what may be called 'remote control,' is it not a foregone conclusion that such management will be inefficient? No matter how competent the circuit official may be, he is not 'on the job.' True, he may and probably does visit the theatre at periodic intervals, but he has little or no personal acquaintance with those who patronize the theatre. He therefore cannot know by first-hand observation their likes and dislikes.

"Then, too, if the actual manager has to consult the remote control boss before he can okay requisitions for needed supplies, the effect is in many ways bad and almost invariably there is a gradual deterioration of everything about the theatre—a slow but a very sure process. We have had personal experience of it.

"Then there is another angle to the matter. To manage even a small theatre with good results requires brains, and brains cannot be purchased too cheaply. The limited authority manager almost invariably is paid a low salary—in many cases too low to justify expectation of much ability.

"Our reaction to this matter, Mr. Richardson, is that while it may be good policy to limit circuit managers in authority where situations arise in which a considerable expenditure is necessary, otherwise it is far better policy to employ capable managers, without restriction in authority except as above indicated, and put them on the job with the understanding that the theatre and its equipment must be maintained in first-class condition and a fixed average per cent upon the stated capital investment earned, on pain of dismissal."

Another answer reads thus: "The tendency to give house managers only very limited authority is unwise. He is the one man who should know local conditions sufficiently well to be able to cope correctly with them. Otherwise he is not fitted for the position of manager.

What is your reaction with regard to importance of having inspection charts displayed on projection room wall, with specified inspections for each day?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"It stands to reason that an executive located hundreds, and in some instances even thousands of miles away, cannot possibly know the conditions and requirements of that particular locality, no matter if he does make a few trips during the year to look over the situation. Though circuit executives may not find it practicable to give local house managers unlimited authority, they should nevertheless be given sufficient to enable them to run the theatre as seems to them best, within reason of course, the only stipulation being that a reasonable percentage upon the investment be returned. [And the theatre and its equipment properly kept up.—F. H. R.]

"This may not mean they will be able to choose the pictures they must run. In fact, that will probably be quite out of the question. However, how the productions are 'put over' should be wholly at the option of the house manager. Also, the house manager should be at liberty, except possibly where costly items are concerned, to requisition needed supplies without question, unless he has been known to be extravagant, in which case, however, he is unfitted for a managerial job.

"With regard to admission prices, officials should give very serious heed to recommendations of house managers, since it is reasonable to suppose they know pretty accurately the reaction of regular patrons to, say, a raise in prices. Also in the matter of length of booking, the recommendations of house managers should be given careful consideration, since they know whether or not a certain type of picture warrants an extended time run in that locality.

"In conclusion, it must be considered that towns only 50 miles apart may and often do have very different reactions to pictures of different type. Their citizens do not see eye to eye in many things. It therefore is only reasonable to presume that only a man on the spot can correctly diagnose his patrons' likes and dislikes."

Another says, in part, "managers should have power to dictate to the projectionist within the range of his actual knowledge. Giving a man power to dictate concerning a thing he has no knowledge of is equivalent to giving a baby matches to play with."

Another says, "As a general rule employes fail to accord proper respect to a manager if they realize he is merely a 'yes man' for some distant circuit official. Every location has its own peculiar problems that cannot possibly be dealt with competently by a circuit officer in some distant city. Moreover, managers who realize they are merely a sort of rubber stamp have no keen interest in the theatre and try to keep on drawing their salary in the easiest possible way."

And yet another: "In my opinion authority should be given in accordance with the ability each individual shows or develops. Usually a manager is installed with a view of bettering existing conditions. In order to do this he must be given a reasonably free rein. If, as time passes, he shows ability, his authority should be increased. The results of his work is the yardstick by which his ability and trustworthiness must be measured. I firmly believe a manager should handle his theatre in the way that he believes will get best results, after having served sufficient apprenticeship as assistant manager. After all, he should know local conditions much better than can a general manager located at a distant point."

I noted that very many answers used the term rubber stamp as designating limited authority managers, indicating pretty accurately the manner in which they are regarded and the lack of respect accorded them. The whole question contains many and difficult problems. Possibly this discussion may be of interest in that it shows how the matter is regarded by practical theatre men.

Minnesota Circuit Expands

The Minnesota Amusement Company, operating three theatres in the city of Mankato, has added a fourth to its chain, the Urban, by arrangement with the latter's controllers, Sheldon, Nick, and Don Grenge. The last named will continue to manage the Urban, under the supervision of his brother Sheldon. Assisting them will be Harry B. French, Southern District manager for the Minnesota Amusement Company.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LEGION OF TERROR: Marguerite Churchill, Bruce Cabot—Good programer. Running time, 62 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke —Not by any means a big picture, but they seemed to like it and the box office showed a better than average result. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 9-10. —G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

GREEN LIGHT, THE: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—Just a natural for any spot. This was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Too bad we could not get more productions like this. Good cast and excellent story. Running time, nine reels. Played July 15.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent—Whether your folks will like this or not depends on how well they like to see a brute of a hill billy father abuse his children (even a grown daughter, the play's heroine). It's unsavory entertainment at best. Josephine Hutchinson plays her role splendidly, though. Played June 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Henry Watson —Good program picture. O. K. at the box office. Running time, 64 minutes.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

PRINCE AND THE PAUPER, THE: Mauch Twins, Errol Flynn—Big time stuff in any man's town. Box office all the way. Running time, 115 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Grand National

TROUBLE IN TEXAS: Tex Ritter, Rita Cansino—Good singing western. Ritter is just about as good as Autry now as a draw. Running time, 55 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

WE'RE IN THE LEGION NOW: Reginald Denny, Esther Ralston—Good action picture spoiled by poor color. It would have been better in black and white. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—There seems to be a lot of variation in the reports of exhibitors on this one. With us, it went over all right. The children just eat it up, and I have heard no evidence of dissatisfaction among adults. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MARRIED BEFORE BREAKFAST: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Fair programer. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—They seemed to really like this one. It gave us a high gross for a year past. A good house for the first night—and a better one the second. Running time, 132 minutes. Played July 16-17.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—We ran this immediately after Jean Harlow's death and were afraid this would prove bad timing, but there was no evidence of this at the box office, the picture giving us our best gross for the month of June. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 11-12. —G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore—Without doubt this is a high grade artistic production which cost plenty to produce. But it is a washout for the box office in any average small town and I believe this will be true of any movie made from a Shakespeare play. Running time, 127 minutes. Played July 23-24.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Paramount

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Good western. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This is what I would call a business builder picture. It actually makes you goofy to look at it and you like being made goofy. All any exhibitor could expect. Fine entertainment, wonderful box office. Gene Autry is made, and all classes like him. When he sings the folks sit at attention and this seems very strange. Just give them some of these opera stars' singing and watch them stir in their seats and finally get out of the theatre just like there was a fire. Opened this picture on Sunday for four days. Great business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN: Olsen and Johnson—Comedy all the way through. Ran "Three Mesquiteers" with this one as a double and had the swellest program we could arrange for. Yet business off on a cool night. Can't figure it out why we could not get them in with this dual bill. Played July 16-17.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS: Robert Livingston, Kay Hughes—A real show for the small towns where they like westerns, comedy and thrills and excitement. Very, very good as a double feature. Will please 100 per cent. That's something these days. Played July 16-17.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Anton Walbrook, Elizabeth Allan—Good action picture, well played by the leads. It should please all your audience and do fairly well at the box office, too. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie—Best show we have had for some time. Business above average Sunday, but bad Monday due to the fact that we never run Monday during the hot summer wave. We had people in the house that hardly ever show up and that's something these days in a religious town. Played July 18-19.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE RED ROBE: Conrad Veidt, Annabella—Good programer. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

United Artists

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nina Martini, Ida Lupino—This is what looks like good entertainment but we failed to sell it to our public. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 7-8.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

REMBRANDT: Charles Laughton—High grade direction, excellent photography, Laughton's fine acting and evidence of a vast amount of research make this a picture which will entirely satisfy lovers of historic and artistic photoplays, which means that it will prove a box-office flop in most communities. We have never had a British-made film from which we could get really satisfactory sound. And, in this regard, this one is no exception. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 23-24.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Universal

PAROLE: Ann Preston, Henry Hunter—A good program, somewhat short, but very interesting. Good entertainment, and it's good to run a show like this to get the people thinking, as nowadays everybody is asleep at the switch waiting for the PWA check and does not care if the school keeps or not. Played July 20.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

FLY-AWAY BABY: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Fair programer. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien—My patrons all enjoy a Pat O'Brien feature. Many good comments on this feature. Running time, eight reels. Played July 8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Hugh Herbert—About the best Powell picture as yet, but not best in box office. Herbert was enjoyed by all. As a special it was mediocre. Did more on "Another Dawn" and at one-third the price of this. Good picture for Powell fans, but only for them. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 25-26.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MAJOR GOOGLE: Barney Google—Good color cartoon with use of well known cartoon strip character. Running time, eight minutes.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Educational

CHEMIST, THE: Buster Keaton—A dandy comedy from Buster. He is still good to play in comedies. His innocent face is a pleasure to watch and what is coming next is the thrill of the spectator. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

OFF THE HORSES: Bert Lahr—Fair to good straight comedy. No slapstick. Running time, two reels.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

IN COURTS

Court Names Master To Fix "Lynton" Damages

Federal Judge Robert T. Patterson appointed Kenneth E. Walser special master to determine the damages in the infringement suit brought against the Moredall Realty Corp., owners of the Capitol theatre, by Edwin Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, playwrights.

The action is based upon the decision of the suit previously brought against MGM for alleged infringement of plaintiffs' play, "Dishonored Lady," in the company's picture, "Letty Lynton." In a ruling similar to that handed down against MGM in the "Rasputin" case, Judge Patterson ruled that a theatre which showed the picture was also guilty of infringement and named the special master to compute profits obtained from the picture and award them to the plaintiffs together with costs.

Durbin's Agents Sued

Rita Stanwood, ex-wife of H. B. Warner, filed suit in Superior court in Los Angeles against Jack Sherrill and Frederick Falkin, agents for Deanna Durbin, seeking an accounting of their commissions on Miss Durbin's earnings. The plaintiff contends that under a contract with the agents as talent scout she was to receive one-fourth the commissions collected for her discoveries, of whom Miss Durbin was one.

Hecht-MacArthur Reply Ordered

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, playwrights, have been ordered to stand pre-examination trial in the N. Y. supreme court September 20th and to file verified bills of particulars by August 15th in the $62,500 damage suit brought against them by Constance Bennett. The actress asks the return of $2,500 she claims to have paid the writers for a scenario which was never delivered and $60,000 damages allegedly incurred in refusing to accept other offers while waiting for the script.

Withdraw Kutinsky Action

Settlement has ended the action of the Jack W. Springer estate which sought to enjoin Matty Kutinsky from selling to Sam Cocalis a block of stock in the former Springer & Cocalis interests. The motion, which was filed three weeks ago, is now withdrawn. Spokesmen for Mr. Cocalis said that in the meantime sale of the Kutinsky holdings to Mr. Cocalis had been made.

Roxy Attorney Fee Approved

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey approved the $3,500 settlement of the $9,981 claim of Louis Karasik, tax attorney, against Howard S. Cullman, Roxy trustee. Mr. Karasik's claim for $9,981 had been refused by the court on first hearings and the settlement was made to eliminate the inconvenience of appeal.

Windsor Productions received $2,500 in cash and a five-year free license to use the color process of Keller-Dorian Colorfilms, under the terms of settlement of the suit brought against the color film concern.

Three Plagiarism Suits Dropped, One Settled

Three plagiarism suits were dismissed and one was settled out of court this week.

The suit of Albert Bein against Warners for alleged pirating of his play, "The Road Out of Hell," in the film "Mayor of Hell," was dismissed by Federal Judge Goddard, who ruled that the picture was based on a play "Junior Republic," for which Warners paid $2,500. The subpoena served on Columbia Pictures of California was quashed by Federal Judge John C. Knox in the plagiarism suit of Valentine Davies, who claims that the film "Alibi for Murder" was a theft from his story, "Fly from the Ointment." Judge Knox's action was not on merits of plaintiffs' contention but on fact that the company has no officers in New York. Also dismissed was the suit brought by Susan Lawrence Davies against the Macmillan company, publishers, for alleged infringement by "Gone with the Wind" on her book, "Authentic History of the KKK—1865-1877."

The $250,000 plagiarism suit of Alva S. Burke against Warners for infringement of his song, "F. D.'s the Man" in "Pop Goes Your Heart," featured in "Happiness Ahead," was settled out of court at an undisclosed sum.

Payment of Dividend to Fox Creditors Delayed

The petition of Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy for William Fox, to delay the payment of a three per cent dividend to credits of Fox Theatres Corp. until Mr. Steelman can file a bill of particulars with the court on claims which have been filed against the company on Mr. Fox's behalf was granted by Federal Judge Martin T. Manson this week.

The court ruled that Mr. Steelman could file claims against the company only for legal fees and other expenses involved in defending and prosecuting the William Fox claims. Judge Manson also directed Milton C. Weisman, trustee, to set aside a fund for the payment of creditors in the event that available cash is appreciably reduced by large allowances for Mr. Steelman.

Four Companies Disband

The title of the Alexander Korda Technicolor feature, "Hell's Belles," has been changed to "Gaiety Girls."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

POOR BUSINESS

Well, now, about this business of theatremen panning pictures in their advertising.

It's not so funny any more. In fact, we doubt that it ever was excruciating even the first time it was done and that's quite a span of years ago. Indicating to the customers in print that a picture is a turkey and further, coming out and saying, as one member did recently, that he was playing the date "because we have to" is not enhancing the boxoffice prestige of the industry and the individual theatre in the eyes of the customers.

This is our business, isn't it—a business that gives us our daily bread and keeps a roof over our heads? And, if a picture is booked in and is to be played, then why go and scramble a lot of eggs by damaging whatever chance the attraction has to get a few dollars? Why should any theatreman take it upon himself to answer for the dislikes of all his patrons by endeavoring to make up their collective minds for them in advance?

There have been exhibitors who took it upon themselves to rate the boxoffice worth of their pictures for the benefit (?) of their patrons in the hope that this "extra service" would impress the public.

But why?

Let's not kid ourselves about the position of the motion picture today as concerns entertainment. The average show at the average prices charged is to be considered a fair buy. For what the theatre gives, there can be no question of poor value in exchange for the average admission. The modern house of today offers, at least, comfort, courtesy, convenience, safety, pleasant surroundings and for the most part, a screen show that pleases. Judged by the weekly attendance at theatres nationally, patrons seem to be satisfied, so why go looking for trouble by telling the folks 'taint so.

Yes, there are regular patrons whose picture likes and dislikes are familiar to the manager and it may be in order—when asked—to indicate to these people whether or not they can look forward to enjoying the show. But there is no good reason to volunteer the information and certainly not in print. An exception can be made of course in rating a picture as adult, juvenile or family entertainment but that's a matter of judgment and not a personal opinion.

If a picture is sour, let's sweeten it with a dash of horse sense by tackling the proposition from the long view and not by attacking the source of our "bread and board" by publicly (and naively) panning the only thing we have to sell.

ON KEEPING DOWN THE NUT

Though of course he does not favor cutting such short corners the year 'round, Walt Davis, skipper of the Famous Players-Canadian Capitol, Regina, up there in the Saskatchewan country, reports progress on his designation of July as "Economy Month." During that time every member of the house staff was urged to cut down expenditures wherever practical in trying to beat the summer heat and its afterdrag.

For instance, the house artist was requested to use one color instead of three, to use both sides of one-sheet-cards; the office personnel to watch especially the outgo on stamps, stationery and telegrams. To the advertising department was suggested holding down lineage and the discontinuance of small printed matter. Cleaners cooperated by making their soaps and polishes last a little longer; the maintenance man did his share by keeping down globe voltage and checking unnecessary lighting. Projectionists saved on carbons and oils; doormen, ushers and cashiers participated by extra care in keeping their uniforms in shape.

It's a wise manager who knows when to spend. And by the same token, it's a wise manager who knows the time to save when sailing close to the wind is in order.

SHOWMANSHIP IN POTS AND PANS

From thousands of windows high up in Rockefeller Center, facing east, west and north, can be obtained a clear view of the nearby 52nd Street and its many restaurants.

There is evidence of good showmanship used by the restauranteurs in calling attention to their wares, but should we be asked at this writing to select the outstanding example our vote would go immediately to the "Maison Jacques." For Monsieur Jacques whoever he may be has had boldly inscribed across the low roofs above his establishment, his name, address, his calling and cuisine highlights in giant white letters, standing out like a pair of yellow shoes at a society wedding and easily visible to the thousands in the east, west and north offices who eat in restaurants.

Monsieur Jacques undoubtedly knows his pots and pans. It is also evident he knows his exploitation.

KENTUCKY THEATRE

Revival of the always reliable "this is no bull" bally was found effective by Manager Hal Howard for date on "Mountain Music" at the Kentucky, Henderson, Ky. Bannered cow was led about town followed by quartet playing hillbilly music at busy street corners. Howard credits his assistant, Tommy Thompson for his handling of the bally.

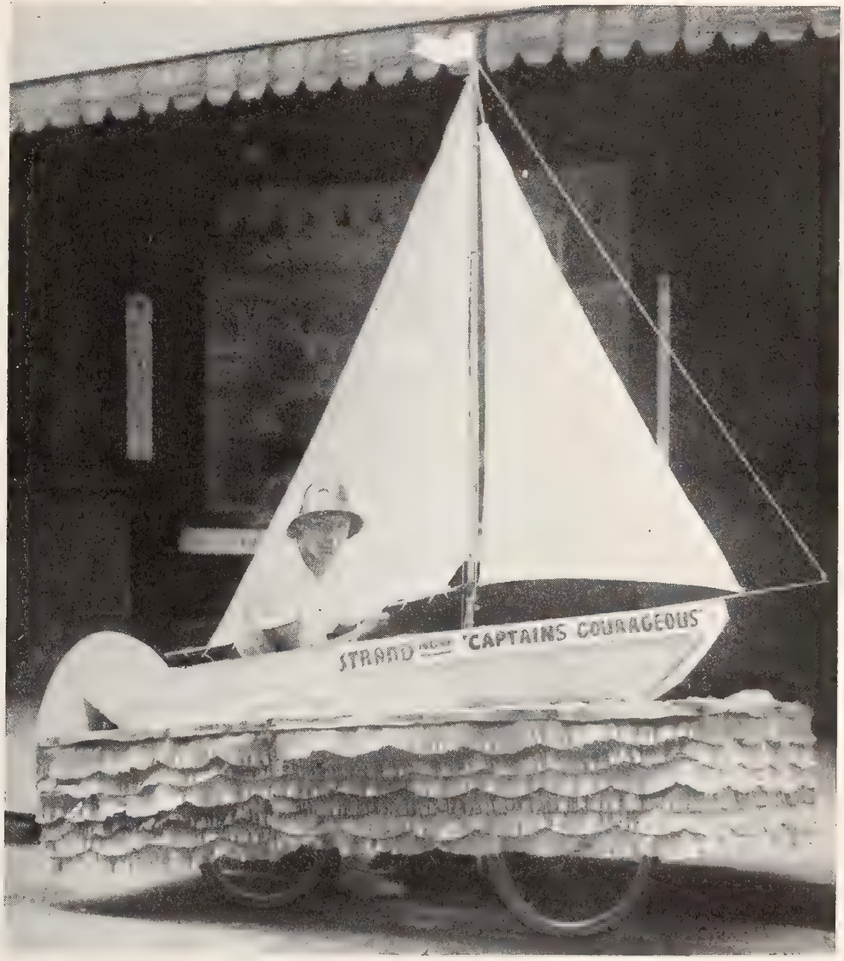
With the entire town turned out to witness veterans' parade on streets of Sheboygan, Wis., in which commercial floats were barred, Manager Fred Reeths, Jr., fixed up a comic bally for date on "Day at Races" at the Sheboygan to promote himself a lot of laughs and notice for the picture. . . . Cowboys came to Singapore when Manager Jack Baker planted stage coach and riders on the street to plug the date on "Plainsman." Stunt was found highly novel in that sector to the extent that leading daily ran story and cut of the bally.



STRAND
"CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS"

Sailboat on dry land was Manager Leo Young's idea for a traffic-stopper on "Captains Courageous" at the Strand, Portland, Me. Mounted on a bicycle with copy on sides and rear plus water effect, the bally was propelled through the downtown streets in advance and during the run of the picture.

Important event in Holdenville, Okla., is the annual Indian Beauty Pageant, conducted this year by Griffiths' City Manager David Dallas on the stage of the Grand Theatre. Much sought honor among the Indian maidens of the Southwest is the first prize awarded the winner of recently held pageant by Chief Blue Eagle, famed Indian artist.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Street Stunt

To test strength of passersby in conjunction with the sidewalk stunt on "Slim" at the Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal., Howard Ralston invited local he-men to cut through a number six weather insulated copper wire with one hand at one stroke. Ralston reports about 12 passes given in three days to men of muscle who qualified.

On "Kid Galahad" Howard put on costume, one side representing bellhop's uniform and the other fighter's outfit, boy carrying small sign reading "He's half bellhop and half prizefighter," tying this into title and date.

Hillbillies

Atmospheric signs on "Mountain Music" arranged by H. Hightower, at the Ritz, Corpus Christi, Texas, included hillbilly cabin in lobby and costumed hillbilly playing in front of cabin between shows. Ushers were also costumed and Hightower found effective curb strips he was able to snipe along main streets.

Hula, Hula

Bamboo trimmings for lobby display were used generously by Louis Charninsky for date at Rialto, Dallas, Tex., on "Waikiki Wedding." Poles were built around all outside frames decorated with Hula grass and palm trees planted for further atmosphere.

Long Distance

Under the supervision of zone publicist Sid Dannenberg, manager Ed Miller at Warner's Hippodrome, Cleveland, aided and abetted by publicist Manny Pearlstein tied in with the Great Lakes Exposition which was featuring a "Scottish Day" coincident with the opening of "Wee Willie Winkie" at the theatre. Deal was made with Lincoln Dickey, manager of the Exposition whereby at a previously announced time Shirley Temple spoke over long distance 'phone from Hollywood directly to everybody at the Exposition.

Telephone hookup was made directly to Radioland on the grounds with loud speakers carrying the conversation between Robert Bowie, head Scotsman who introduced the starlet to Manager Dickey and one of the diminutive Scotch dancers at the Expo. Needless to say the picture received a plug together with announcements of its engagement at the theatre.

U. A. OFFERS $1000 ON "STELLA DALLAS"

First of the season's exploitation prize contests offered by the producers is announced by Monroe Greenthal, United Artists director of advertising and publicity, with theatremen invited to enter campaigns on "Stella Dallas."

Contest is open to showmen in all situations, large and small with all entries given equal consideration. Competition is now open and closes October 1, with campaigns also eligible for the Quigley Awards when so labeled.

Prizes are as follows:

$500 for first; $200 for second; and $100 for third. Next three $50 each and $25 apiece for seventh and eighth winners. Interested theatremen who have not already entered may obtain blanks by writing "Stella Dallas Contest Editor" at the United Artists home office, 729 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., to whom entries should also be forwarded.

Judges are Samuel Goldwyn, Martin Quigley, George Schaefer, Monroe Greenthal and A-Mike Vogel.

Theatre Opening

The opening of the new Warner Savoia Theatre in Philadelphia in Ted Schlanger's zone included a raft of tieins as reported by Al Zimbalist, one of which was a marathon race winding up in front of the theatre and broadcast over WPEN. Address was made by Mayor Wilson from the stage, praising Warner Brothers and the South Philadelphia Businessmen's Association which cooperated with the Warnerites on the campaign. Outstanding was competition for bands of local American Legion posts put on in front of the theatre.

Baby Crib

Regulation baby crib in which was placed large sleeping doll was planted in lobby of the Jerome Theatre, Bronx, N. Y., by manager Ed Siegal for advance on "Wake Up and Live," poster with title and dates were attached to the display.

Sail Boat Race

Promotion of a "Captains Courageous" sail boat race was prominent in the campaign put on by Ed McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse. Ed put it over by presenting a cup to the winner of the race, presentation being made by one of the staff who carried chest banner lettered "Loew's Personality Girl."

McBride distributed good luck boat charms placed in numbered envelopes tied into a lucky number stunt and also put on a contest to guess weight of huge lobster in restaurant window, tying stunt to Gloucester locale where picture was screened.

Local Girl

Appearance of local girl in the Warner short "Sheik to Sheik" gave manager Charles Finesilver, Avenue U Theatre, Brooklyn, idea for circular reading "local girl makes good." Layout included photo of the player with some details of her schooling and Broadway appearances, copy including plug for rest of program.

Circus Tiein

Since MGM's touring water buffalo bally on "Good Earth" handled by Capt. Rodney Pfipher was scheduled to appear in Springfield same day as the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus opened, N. E. Berman and Tom Finin for the date at the Orpheum, Springfield, Ill., capitalized the bally by tying it in with the circus for additional exploitation. Outstanding hookup was inclusion of water buffalo in circus menagerie and appearance in opening spectacle in the circus.

At noon truck and buffalo moved over to busy corner where buffalo was "interviewed" by man-on-the-street radio program. This was tied into exploitation by Pfipher who told how the buffalo was used in the picture and gave short synopsis of the film. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

The Winners

Harry Ashton, Boulder, Colorado, walked off with top prize money in the "Spring Showmanship" drive recently completed by Fox Intermountain Theatres. Coming in second was Don Sheedy, Cheyenne, Wyo.; and Chet Miller, Missouli, Mont., and Bob Nelson, Leadville, Colo., tied for third.

Bombay Theatremen Aid Civic Activities

Exhibitors and Managers Participate in Social and Public Life

by Special Correspondence

With this article on the status of motion picture exhibition and local conditions as affect the theatre in Bombay, India, is continued the series of your Round Table's Showmen's travelogues covering key cities all over the world.

The Indian metropolis, it appears measures up well with other situations as concerns theatre comfort and convenience and also the talents of the local showmen who cooperate in community activities in addition to doing a good job of operating.

The series continues in a forthcoming issue with an article on Budapest.

The City of Bombay is essentially an industrial center and its present position as the second city in the British Empire is entirely due to the textile industry. The establishment of this industry was, however, helped by the natural phenomenon that Bombay is the principal port of entry to India. As such it has rightly been called the Gateway of India, representing almost all nationalities of the world, though the percentage of Westerners does not exceed seven per cent of the population. According to the Census of 1931, which was organized under certain drawbacks such as the repercussions of the non-co-operation movement causing industrial strife and consequent migration to the moffusil, and the refusal, as an act of patriotism, of a large number of non-co-operators to register themselves, the population of the city is officially 1,161,383 souls crowded in an area of 15,480 acres, though a figure of 13 lakhs, allowing for deccenial growth on the basis of previous reports, would be nearer the true state of affairs.

English Dialogue Predominates

Superficially, a city of this expanse and population might appear a lucrative market for the exploitation of films and indeed that was not only true until, but could have been improved upon prior to, the arrival of the talkie. The foreign talkie in India is always with English dialogue, with the American slang a necessary concomitant thereof, which at once confines the market to the educated classes, whose maximum number does not exceed 11.6 per cent of the population or 134,720 persons at the outside in all the nationalities whether Indian or foreign. This is, therefore, the maximum market which an English talkie, be it of the most superlative description that can be, but is not always secured in Bombay, and it represents those who can reasonably be taken to read and write an average letter in English, no more dignified than an application for service—the standard followed by the Census authorities—whereas the enjoyment and understanding of a talkie in English would require higher educational attainments. In considering the general market, therefore, the process of elimination has necessarily to be followed.

Maximum Market Small

Taking concrete examples of films shown in Bombay in the last six months Broadway Melody of 1936 and Mutiny on the Bounty secured the maximum market of 40,000 persons of all communities, which means that the market for a superlative talkie is slightly less than 5 per cent of the population. This cannot be immediately increased except in the case of pictures like Trader Horn or the Tarzan Series unless and until English literacy expands, but that expansion, in the absence of any legislative enactment calling for minimum education up to at least the matriculation standard, will be far slower than one can imagine.

These 40,000 include at least 20,000 who do not know English in the advanced sense so as to understand it spoken as fast, and as colloquially as on the screen but they were attracted to the pictures because of the dance numbers in Broadway Melody, and the primitive scenes on the Island of Tahiti in Mutiny on the Bounty, or for the same reasons which made a jungle picture popular even to the illiterate. This is proved once again by the fact that the highest number of persons who can speak English are 21,428, who are thus the maximum audience for highly intellectual pictures, the major portion of the attraction of which lies in philosophical or sophisticated dialogue like that in Crime and Punishment (Columbia), Petrified Forest (Warners), and others.

This number is further reduced by the seasonal attractions such as races, bathing resorts like Juhu, in the suburbs, in holidays, sporting festivities, and stage shows like revues in flesh and blood, for which there seems to be, from the shows held from time to time, a regular demand of six to eight weeks in the whole year. The public have no special preference for a particular theatre because with them the play's the thing.

A pointer of future programs, towards which the writer of this article has been striving single-handed for some time past, would be the cultivation of the cinema habit among students by taking steps to show them the educational shorts at present tacked on to feature programmes, so that the sporadic student cinegoer of today may be an endemic cinefan of the feature film tomorrow, the more so because the film in education is still in the distant Utopia of educational institutions. In this development some distributors are intensely interested; others are unconcerned, almost apathetic; but one of them made the astounding statement that the shorts were not produced as educational subjects though they may produce an educational effect, an attitude which entirely misses to appreciate the market in this country.

In this investigation Chaplin's Modern Times furnishes an example by contrast. This film is not a talkie in the accepted sense of the word. Yet when in its seventh week is grossed higher than those for the first run supers of Paramount and Fox showing elsewhere in the week, with prospects of running for two weeks more, it means that the whole of the literate population, according to the Census standard, have seen the film. Thus in the entire history of the foreign film in Bombay, it will have had the next best run to that of the Thief of Bagdad of silent days which ran for 16 weeks on end. If this difference of approximately 60,000 persons between those who have seen Modern Times and Mutiny or Broadway Melody could not be persuaded to see a talkie, it is principally because apart from the attraction provided by Chaplin, as the supreme comedy-actor, they cannot follow the dialogue in the talkie, which circumstance makes them the patrons of the indigenous film with native dialogue.

Seven First-Run Houses

The almost phenomenal success of Modern Times furnishes its most important lesson to the producers so far as the exploitation of their pictures in the non-English speaking countries of the world is concerned, and leaves a well-wisher of the foreign film in doubt whether the talkie in world markets, balked by language barriers, has come to stay, or whether it will be supplemented by films of the type of Modern Times. The literate figure of 134,720, which is the total maximum market for pictures shown in Bombay in seven first-run theatres, includes the intellectuals, white collar workers and other educated classes, and if the richer classes are excluded from this figure, the average wage of the cinegoer might be taken to be between 40 to 60 dollars a month with a monthly allowance of two to three per cent for cinemas at the average admission charge of 20 to 25 cents per show. The richer classes pay anything from half to one dollar for admission, but the average for consideration for the whole of the cine-going population detailed above is on no account more than 20/25 cents per seat, whether for matinees or night shows, or whether in first or second-run theatres, in the latter most of which the rates are actually lower by 10 per cent. In the seven first-run theatres the weekly seating accommodation is approximately 110,800, so that it may be safely concluded that the present exhibiting needs of the city have been more than covered and that any further building of cinema theatres for foreign films would mean cutthroat competition detrimental to the best interests of the industry.

MORE ON BOMBAY

The theatres are not at present dominated by a local circuit although two of them have interests in theatres in a couple of other cities in India. They are clean and comfortable, the largest the Regal, being even furnished with a cooling system, the projection and sound reproduction is perfect, they are easily accessible even to suburban residents through railways, buses and trams. Cars can be parked right outside the theatre or in the compound of the theatre, which must necessarily have minimum parking facilities, and the Regal has an underground car-park.

There can thus be no complaint about their management. The proprietors and management have played an important part in the social and public life of the city, which has its goodwill effect on the box-office. They have worked in complete co-operation with the distributors in the common interests of the industry.

With all this the theatre situation is not rosy, because all the available audience does not come to see the films, which means the publicity is either defective or mis-directed and further because the entertainment tax, the surcharge on consumption of electrical energy, and the Performing Rights Society between them devour the profits. In short the theatres are living from hand to mouth, and were it not for the bars in the theatres, which are fully patronized during the interval, the theatres would have been wiped out of existence. So acute is this the truth that an exhibitor even remarked that his bar was not an adjunct to the theatre, but the theatre to the bar, which is comment enough on the condition of the theatres, which the distributors in their individual and general interests of the foreign film must always remember while laying down their commercial policy.

Extensive Ad Campaigns

Within the limits dictated by the box-office the publicity for pictures through newspapers, street advertising through lorries, trams and buses, and wall-posters, the publicity budget of exhibitors errs on the side sometimes of extravagance in an effort to whip up every corner and nook of the city. Most of the publicity that is indulged in at present has become axiomated so that matters have come to such a pass that it is no longer an adequate guide to the public as to the features of a picture, to the publicists every picture is a super picture needing more and more expenditure on publicity so that the public is disappointed and publicity properly done for a picture is likely to be overlooked.

The newspapers ostentatiously convey that with them the motion picture is a matter of duty to their readers, but this utterance and the write-up on pictures generally copied from campaign books are strictly governed by the advertisement revenue derived, and a picture for which no advertisement is assigned will receive no consideration whatsoever from the papers irrespective of their proclaimed duty to the public.

The advantages of tieups in advertising are not understood, motion picture appreciation from critics is conspicuous by its absence, newspapers do not recognize that the motion picture is the greatest medium of social service. The entire publicity system needs to be overhauled by agreement between the interests concerned by the flotation of a publicity corporation if necessary with a presiding deity having an original conception of the motion picture, so that every picture may receive its just, but not exaggerated, attention and rationality introduced so that the public consider the publiciity as a correct guide to the pictures, thus leading to the fostering of the industry on sound, healthy and permanent lines. Otherwise, a situation may accrue through competition which will devour the entire takings in publicity expenses spelling rack and ruin to the exhibition part of the industry.

Entertainment Tax High

More than anything else the publicity budget must be drastically halved; it can be halved without in any way reflecting on the box-office, and if the theatres join together and formulate the maxima and minima, even through an incorporation for publicity purposes, it will be in their interests. Moreover, this remodification is in the hands of the industry; it does not require legislative help as in the case of the entertainment and electricity consumption taxes; and should be practiced at once.

The entertainment tax is a great stumbling block in the way of the progress of the exhibition branch of the film industry. On an average every theatre pays weekly into Government coffers Rs. 1,500 as proceeds of the entertainment tax. Nobody disputes the fact that the tax is wholesome in principle, but even wholesomeness in principle must be governed by the wholesomeness of the industry. In India the cinema habit is not a natural habit, because the great community of clerks earning between 40 and 74 dollars a month have so many family cares to look to that it is only occasionally that they can visit the cinema. The very fact that they get out for a while to forget their cares in a cinema theatre has a recreational effect on their constitution, the robustness of which can be imagined from the fact that the average expectation of life in India is only 22 years, so that it would be a national blessing and a public health measure to remove all obstacles in the way of cinematic recreations for the poor and the middle classes. The industry is anxiously looking forward to the day when the tax on seats costing 25 cents and less is abolished.

Gambling Machines Used For "Gamblers" Lobby

For the opening of "King of Gamblers" at the Apollo, Chicago, Bill Hollander promoted a display of gaming equipment from local sporting goods firm for his lobby a week ahead of opening. The county police was contacted for confiscated slot machines and wheels and these, too, were displayed along with scare-head copy posters and blowup of press book art mat.

Members Report "Cool" Activities

One of the various angles utilized by Al Reh, Warner's State, Philadelphia, to announce his cooling system was an elaborate 40 by 60 poster carrying photos of compressors, spray pond, condensers, etc., and followed up by copy further describing the equipment. So effective was the poster that Reh was able to plant cut of it in local papers. Other exploitations included wide posting of three sheets, newspaper advertising and publicity and screen trailer. Also effective was device used in answering phone calls in which cashiers were instructed to say "this is the air conditioned State Theatre" instead of making the usual replies.

Up in Syracuse, Ed McBride, Loew's State, featured the turning on of his cooling plant with tieup with Station WSYR for broadcast direct from the theatre. Program started off in compressor room, announcer giving details of the operation. Another announcer was in fan room on roof where program was picked up and included description of how the water was washed. For finale, broadcast continued to spray pond on top of roof where five girls in bathing suits were planted to say something about the system and also pose for publicity pictures.

Installation of his new Carrier cooling system was featured by full page co-op ads by Wally Allen at the Schine Athena, Athens, Ohio. In addition to merchants who had to do with the local installation, other establishments using air cooling also took space. For lobby stunt Allen froze cooling sign in block of ice.

Total of 10 co-op pages with cool suggestions plus four extra pages from local companies supplying theatre equipment was the score rolled up by various managers in the Philadelphia zone and reported by Douglas George, district publicist, who thought up the idea and had mats made up for local managers.

Among the Warnerites who sold the space were the following: Alan Rappeport, Grand, Vineland, N. J.; Paul Harvey and Jules Reisman, Capitol and Strand, York, Penna.; Tom Mangan, Warner, Westchester, Penna.; Charles Moyer, State, Hanover, Penna.; Lew Black, Aldine, Wilmington, Del.; Dwight Van Meter, Astor, Reading, Penna.; and Joe Murdock, Stanley, Camden, N. J.

Railroad Employees Invited To "Barriers" by Bishop

Vice president and executives of the Canadian Pacific Railroad were invited to the opening performance of "Silent Barriers" as guests of Harold Bishop at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg. Window cards were displayed in the ticket office windows and depots of the railroad and cooperative ad taken in the Free Press. Circular letters were also mailed to all departments of the railroad calling attention to the picture.

Bishop's art department built an attractive display of a miniature train in a scenic mountain background which was placed in leading restaurant window. Special morning matinee was held for kiddies and special advertisements were run on the comic strip pages of dailies.

CHALK PLATES FOR NEWSPAPER ADS

The displays on this page are the work of Manager R. W. ("Bob") Huffman, for the Uptown Theatre, of the J. H. Cooper Enterprises in Pueblo, Colo. Having no budget for art in his ads, Huffman has one of the newspaper artists make up chalk plates as shown, the illustrations and type set in after the plate is cast. Cost is very low, says Huffman.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Deadwood, South Dakota

Dear Herald:

No doubt many of you have heard of Deadwood, and no doubt many of you have seen the town, and no doubt many of you are more or less interested in knowing something of the place. That's why we are referring to the town. Deadwood has a population of about five thousand. It is here that gold was discovered in 1876, at least that was the date as we remember it, and it is here the Black Hills Amusement Company has the Deadwood and Isis theatres, both of which are managed by Miss Anna A. Honen, a very delightful lady with whom we had a short but very pleasant visit.

Deadwood is located in a deep canyon. Hugh mountains surround it on all sides and we know of no way better to describe it than to quote from a little booklet we had printed some years ago, in which we described Deadwood and surroundings thusly:

MOONLIGHT ON WHITE ROCKS

"The hour was twilight. The weary travelers had gained the summit and stood upon the crest of White Rocks. To the west, and far down the mountain's side, the murky shadows of night, like evil spirits, crept forth from out the canyons and marched steadily up the steep incline in deadly combat with the fast receding rays of the sinking sun until the gathered rays upon the chest of Terry's peak alone gave evidence of the dying day.

"In the canyon, far below, the city of Deadwood had ceased from her quest for gold, and lay, like a leviathan, resting from her labors. The black, foreboding smoke no longer belched from her stately stacks, the wheels of industry had ceased to turn, and all was peace and quietness within the city. Her thousands of twinkling lights sparkled in the clarified evening air like jewels on a maiden's hand. Deadwood was a beautiful sight to behold.

"Far down the mountain's side the tall marble shafts stood out like grim spectres of the night, and marked the outline of 'The city of the dead.' Here the pioneer, the miner, the merchant, the laborer, the gambler, the denizens of that underworld from which mankind shrinks, had been gathered by the grim Reaper and found a common resting place. Here, 'Wild Bill' and 'Calamity Jane,' notorious characters of pioneer days, had answered the final summons that comes to all mankind.

"The mind wanders back over the expanse of years and marks the ever changing shadows that lie along the pathway of life, and there comes to one the thought of wasted energies, of wrecked ambitions, of blasted hopes, of crushed loves, and the heart cries out, "What is man, oh Lord, that Thou art mindful of him," and there comes to mind Kate Hilliard's beautiful poem:

Sing me the song again:
The wild sweet notes that fill my heart with bliss,
Quick throbbing now with passionate disdain,
Now falling soft as evening breeze's kiss.
Sing me the song again.
Repeat the wondrous tune:
The full broad glory of the perfect moon,
The pearly glimmer of the clustering leaves,
The ghostly shadows of the night's high noon,
My listening soul perceives,
Repeat the wondrous tune.

"Is your heart filled with hatred, with envy, with remorse, with revenge? Then go, oh traveler, to any of the beauty spots of the Black Hills, but go with your heart attuned to the great heart of Nature and to Nature's God, that your soul may drink in the Infinite beauty of God's great Out-Of-Doors."

Lead, South Dakota

Lead is a city of about six thousand, and it is here that the Homestake mines are located and we understand that the output of gold from these mines amounts to about $60,000 per month. Here also is located the Homestake theatre, operated by our long-time friend, M. C. Kellog. Our first acquaintance with M. C. was when we were delegates to the first national theatremen's convention in Cleveland, Ohio. That was away back when a two-reel subject was a feature "deluxe." They bass-drummed these as the world's outstanding wonder. We wish we could describe M. C. and the Homestake theatre, the very pleasant visit we had with M. C. and the most excellent reception we received, but the best we can do is to advise you to go to Lead and visit this theatre and meet M. C. and the Homestake theatre and you will never forget them.

This is the largest town in the Black Hills country and it is here that Leo Peterson operates three theatres, all of the first class. Leo drove us up to Deadwood and Lead and back by Sturgis, where we met Douglas Nelson, the operator of the Sturgis theatre.

We didn't have time to visit much, as Leo was in a hurry to get back home, where Mrs. Peterson had a dinner prepared for us, and oh Elmer, what a dinner it was. If we could have gotten our hands on that doctor who prescribed a diet for us the coroner's jury would have brought in a verdict "He came to his death through justifiable homicide." Should you ever go to Rapid City you should go out to Leo's summer home in Rapid creek canyon; it's the beauty spot of the west. When you leave Rapid be sure to go over the "Skyline Drive" and down to the lodge where the late President Coolidge spent his vacation, then to Mount Rushmore and on over Iron mountain to the Needles and Sylvan Lake, and you will see scenery you will never forget.

We stopped at Custer to visit Mr. Gates, who operates the Custer theatre, but found he had gone to his summer home out in the mountains and we didn't get to see him, doggone the doggone luck anyhow. Then we came on down here to Hot Springs, where they are having their annual race meet and "Water Carnival" with 30 Bathing Beauties. They are stopping at this hotel, and as Martha Raye says, "OH BOY."

Here is where Clint and Bessie Robbins operate the Hot Springs theatre. We are going to get Bess to chaperone us, for there is no use depending on Clint with all these Bathing Beauties in town.

COUNTRY EDITORS

PICTURES and their subjects have become so grandiose that it is inevitably with a trifle of timidity that anything less than cosmic idea should be offered for consideration by Hollywood. However, this bland August Sunday afternoon in the Silvermine valley comes a notion that there would be handsome screen opportunity in something pertaining to the country editor. He is a decided factor and figure in the life of this big America, and for the most part he is unsung.

The screen has done the handsome by the country doctor, most especially on the inspiration of the Dionne Quintuplets. And the screen is currently doing all manner of ornamental jobs of the biographical glorification of various great personages. But someway one does not discover attention to the glamours, poignancies and dramas of the life of the great commonality of normal folks.

SO this is in nomination of the country editor, friend of the people and a pretty big important fellow in several thousand little towns.

This impulse arises from the editor's customary Sunday afternoon examination of the outgivings of the diligent and rather analytical Mr. Douglas Churchill, correspondent for the New York Times on the Hollywood front, who remarks:

"Checking over the pictures released in recent months, seventeen have painted reporters and newspapers as villains, five have treated the craft innocuously and two have made their journalists intelligent and gracious people. But the great majority have shown reporters, editors and publishers as crooked, unethical, heartless, boorish, drunken and corrupt fellows, ill-mannered and ill-tempered, with an exaggerated idea of their importance and their calling. The average columnist is always breaking up homes and romances. . . ."

MR. CHURCHILL thinks it is a wave of attitude born of "Front Page." Maybe it is merely the result of the simple fact that the ornery ones, the bad boys of journalism, are the conspicuous figures in the scene. Entirely well behaved, circumspect persons are not generally dramatic material, at least not obviously dramatic material, and that is what Hollywood and the customers of Hollywood are always seeking.

But among the heroes of America are the country editors, who have not as a class come to fame. Now and then one rises to eminence, like Ed Howe of Atchison and William Allen White of Emporia, but they are few among thousands of worthy journalistic servants of their communities.

There's another phase of the notion, too. Just at the moment a scanning of the titles and promotions that decorate the motion picture horizon makes it apparent that Hollywood is putting higher and higher emphasis on world-wide and export values. It will be appropriate to suggest that the American market might respond to some intensive American attention. It is not exactly best served as an incidental fraction of the world screen.

TYPE JOB

SINCE Emile Zola lived and won his fame by words printed on paper, it is coincidentally appropriate that the motion picture's attentions to him should include something in the order of typographical adventure.

Elements of special technical interest to all concerned with showmanship-on-paper have been presented in the display advertising heralding this week's premiere presentation of "The Life of Emile Zola" by Warner Brothers. Most significantly and interestingly the copy and typography, breaking far from the worn routines of the amusement pages, have attained distinction and attention value by the pleasant device of relating themselves precisely to the screen material. A specimen advertisement, typical, is reproduced in this issue in the pages of the Round Table department.

It will be discovered that the French locale is implied by the typographical ensemble and a certain decor, rather more implied than expressed. Within the classic line border of the initial advertisement the type is Nicholas Cochin and Typo script, save in the lines presenting the name of Mr. Paul Muni and the title, which are in Georgian initials. To those with acute typographical sensitivity, the resultant design gives a feeling that nothing else would have been quite so satisfactory. Be it known that the Georgian is so new and uncommon that only one font is available in New York and that for the purposes of this advertisement it was necessary to have electrotype duplicates of some of the letters made to set the two lines required.

In limited compass, by explicit, restrained type on paper, an impression, a pre-evaluation of the motion picture, itself a most especial sort of production outside the cliches of "show business," was conveyed to even the most unanalytical reader. That tends to be in the nature of what is called advertising.

A touch of sardonic amusement is available, too, in evidences in the lay press that Warners' advertising designation of the star as Mr. Paul Muni has had impression value. The motion picture can do with considerably more formal propriety of the same sort. Too much motion picture copy, as well as motion picture intercourse, is too damned familiar. A dash of dignity is good for the morale—and the box office. Keep them looking up when they buy.

A PLACE TO SAY IT

THERE is an implied message of decided social responsibility for the motion picture institution in the fact that its influence on public opinion in the United States is to occupy an important part of the attentions of the sessions of the 1937 Williamstown Institute of Human Relations at Williams College at the end of this month. Hollywood and the newsreels have been asked to represent themselves. The Williamstown Institute, which these several years has become a focus of expression of importance, is this season to consider the screen, the press and the radio intensively. It will be a spot of opportunity for a public relations job in behalf of the motion picture. The publicity of the occasion will reach sectors not commonly available to the industry. There is that about the national scene which suggests a job might well be done.

This Week

ERPI PLANS

The American Telegraph and Telephone—Western Electric interests are definitely considering the abandonment of theatre sound reproducing equipment sales and servicing, it was learned this week on excellent authority. (Pending is a Federal Communication Commission investigation of A. T. and T.'s activities in lines other than communications.)

Western Electric would continue to manufacture reproducers, but ERPI would merely act as a licensor, possibly selling territorial franchises both for equipment sales and servicing to exhibitors, to exhibitor groups, or to circuit interests. The major producer - distributor - circuit interests are known to have had the ambition for some time to control the tools by which their product is reproduced on their screens.

Another consideration is the turning over of the physical aspects of ERPI to the ERPI employes, a frequent practice by the Telephone Company, as in the case of A. T. & T.'s divestment of Graybar Electric. If this move is decided upon, ERPI's present executive and working staffs in all probability would become the owners, on a basis yet to be determined.

Still a third consideration is to sell franchises to the projector equipment manufacturers which, in turn, would set about making a combination film projector and sound reproducer in a single instrument, where two now exist.

Bids for ERPI now are being written by some prospective purchasers, including the major circuit interests.

The Telephone-Western Electric interests have had ERPI's disposal in mind for a long time, and is understood to have discussed the matter with Paramount circuit partners at their meeting in Florida last March.

While it is admitted that the nature of the divestment has not been decided, officials expect some development in that connection soon. ERPI's position in the studio sound recording business would remain practically unchanged, the company now acting almost solely as a licensor, with servicing done for the most part by producers' own studio technicians.

Wilcox Sails

Herbert Wilcox, London producer, sailed for England this week after conferences with RKO executives which indicate that he will produce four big pictures for the company in Britain during the coming year whose cost will aggregate around $3,000,000. RKO will release "The Rat," Wilcox film now in production in England.

The story appears on page 50.

Reciprocity in Quota

A reciprocity plan is incorporated into the British Government's proposals for the new Cinematograph Film Bill, presented to members of Parliament in the form of a "White Paper." The suggestion is made that if a distributor buys for not less than $100,000 the foreign rights for one market of a British film costing $112,500 for labour costs, he is to be credited with Quota coverage, in England, of the same footage value. This provision would likely prove to be advantageous to several companies, writes Bruce Allan in analyzing the proposals.

The analysis of the Government's proposals appears on page 78; the complete text of the "White Paper" starts on page 82.

More Earnings

The week's financial news concerning the motion picture and allied fields included earnings reports by RCA, Trans Lux and Sonotone, and dividend declarations by Columbia Pictures and Technicolor.

The financial reports are detailed on page 92.

Trade Practices

An open investigation has been launched in New York by the United States Department of Justice which is studying exhibitor complaints against distribution practices. At the same time, the fate of the exhibitors' "boycott" and "strike" against Paramount was placed in the hands of Federal Courts in Philadelphia and Minneapolis. The need of a "fair trade practice" agreement is felt by members of the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association who have resolved that should no other action be taken they will sponsor the passing of regulating legislation for the industry.

These developments and others concerning trade practices are discussed in an article starting on page 13.

Northwest Record

An all-time record for net paid admissions in the states of Washington and Oregon was reported this week for the first seven months of this year. Washington's 251 theatres sold upwards of eight million tickets, or six per cent better than the corresponding period in 1936. Oregon reports show that patrons spent more than five million dollars in the same period despite an average increase in admission prices of 25 cents.

Re-joins Co-op

The Wisper & Wetsman circuit, Detroit, rejoined Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., in one of the biggest surprises in local film circles. The circuit was expected to join in a new combine, composed of Allied and the American Theatre Science, but the new step was believed to have eliminated the formation of an opposition group. Wisper & Wetsman operate 12 theatres.

Cinecolor Expands

Planning entry into the color field this fall, Cinecolor, Inc., soon will start a $300,000 expansion program to erect a new laboratory plant in Hollywood. At present the plant is reported to be crowded to capacity with work on foreign distribution. The capacity of the new plant will be 2,000,000 feet a week as against 400,000 possible at present.

63 New Stories

Although the majority of the pictures to be released in the 1937-38 season were announced at sales conventions earlier in the summer, producers are continuing to purchase new stories to fill out their programs. A total of 63 purchases was made in June and July. The properties acquired included 49 originals, one play, two radio serials, six magazine stories, four novels and one newspaper serial.

A list of the stories bought is included in an article on page 43.

Celebrated

Australia's Stuart Doyle, having completed 25 years in the motion picture industry, commands the major attention of both editors and advertisers in the June 30th issue of Everyone's, Australian film trade journal. A quarter of a century ago, in Sydney, the late J. D. Williams wanted a young man who could double in law and finance, to assist him in his motion picture enterprises. He selected Stuart Doyle, and it was Doyle who eventually built a vast theatrical empire across the island continent. His most immediate interest today is a proposed structure housing two theatres, restaurants and many shops, in Piccadilly, London. The honor issue of Everyone's publishes congratulations from film personages throughout the English-speaking world.

Reviewers' Problems

Influences being brought to bear upon preview critics in Hollywood to pronounce favorable verdicts upon pictures reached into new channels when a manufacturer of cosmetics invited the correspondents to take special note of "makeup which permits lifelike flesh tones on faces of screen actors for the first time." Ho, hum!

The next ruse is not predicted in the item on page 35.

Production

The launching of eleven productions on the Hollywood sets and the completion of nine showed a slight increase in studio activity for the week. Among the pictures finished the Hollywood reviewers saw in David O. Selznick's "Nothing Sacred" a bidder for particular note.

Casts and credits of the week's pictures are on page 35.

Off to the Wars

The five American newsreels are again off to the warfront, this time to Northern China, marking the third consecutive summer bringing a major conflict.

The Chinese are cooperating with the cameramen, but the Japanese definitely are not, the cameramen report. The story of the American cameramen at the front is told on page 38.

For $2,000,000 Cash

A cash settlement of $2,000,000 was proposed by defendants—former officers facing the action of Paramount trustees for recovery of sums allegedly owed for mismanagement and excessive salaries during the defendants' incumbency from the years 1927 to 1931.

Details of the proposal to settle the Paramount suit are contained in a news story on page 52.

RKO Hearings End

With testimony concluded on hearings of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum reorganization plan, final decision is expected in December, following the filing of a tentative report by Special Master Alger October 14th and hearings on that report set for November before Federal Judge William Bondy. Testimony concerning the purchase by Atlas of RKO holdings from the Radio Corporation of America was denied admission on the ground that it was not pertinent.

Complete account of the final hearing on the RKO reorganization plan appears on page 42.

Klan Sues Warners

The Ku Klux Klan filed suit against Warner Brothers and Vitagraph, Inc., for $113,500 in Atlanta on Tuesday, charging infringement of its insignia and defamation in the film, "Black Legion." The Klan is asking $250 for each showing in 54 key cities and an additional $100,000, claiming depiction of the Klan emblem in the film was violation of the 14-year copyright obtained on it in 1925 and that the remark of one character, "Are we in for another reign of terror by a new Ku Klux Klan?" is libelous.

Radio Families

Statistics on the type of persons who make up the national radio audience, what time of day they tune in, and how long they listen are included in a book compiled by the Columbia Broadcasting System. It is of particular interest to the motion picture industry because it gives a clear picture, statistically, of the status today of the radio entertainment field which film exhibitors are fighting as competition.

Pertinent facts revealed in the book are included in an article on page 51.

Veteran

John A. Schwalm introduced himself to residents of Dayton, Ohio, on May 1, 1906 when he opened the Electric motion picture theatre in that city. His success in the exhibition field in the intervening years during which he built, bought and managed theatres throughout the state and in Pennsylvania has made him an outstanding representative of the industry in the territory.

Mr. Schwalm reminisces on his nickelodeon days in the story on page 49.

UA Rental Plan

The United Artists plan for rental of advertising accessories will be inaugurated August 23rd. Savings to exhibitors are claimed by the company to range from 35 to 50 per cent.

Items included in the rental program are given on page 70.

Maxwell Theatres

The Maxwell circuit in Great Britain is now 325 theatres strong, an increase of 42 houses in a year, as shown by the annual report of Associated British Pictures Corporation. Gross trading profit of the corporation was $6,329,145, which represented a gain of $1,796,735 over the previous year.

This and other news of the British field is recorded at greater length on page 68.

Tax Battles

Campaigns against theatre taxation resulted in the defeat of a revenue measure considered by the city of Chicago and threatened bitter fights against imposts levied in Pennsylvania and up for popular referendum in Maine. The Chicago bill was killed in favor of a measure that will affect 100 other lines of business. Pennsylvania theatre operators, with Warner interest most prominent, have joined forces with merchants in their court fight to test the constitutionality of the state tax law. Similar cooperation is reported in Maine.

Digest of the tax developments of the week, with fuller accounts on the above, are found on page 42.

GUMSHOEING U. S. SLEUTHS HUNT DATA FOR INQUIRIES

Scores of Secret Service Operatives Reported Watching Distribution and Exhibition Practices; Complaints Studied

Official distribution circles in New York are aware that the United States Department of Justice has "planted" scores of secret service operatives throughout the entire country to gather information for possible wholesale investigations of trade practices in distribution and exhibition.

See Several Actions Coming

The Government's "gum-shoeing," it is admitted, is expected to result in at least four or five federal court prosecutions of major circuits and distributors, by the United States Attorney-General, under the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts, by mid-October, similar to the Department's St. Louis suit of last year.

That the Department of Justice has been "unusually active" in motion picture investigation has been generally known, but, now, the distributors are finding Justice sleuths "bobbing up" in the most unexpected places in distribution and exhibition in the field—everywhere. "Never before have they been as active," admitted a distributor spokesman.

The specific inspiration for the deep investigation is not known, inasmuch as the Department and its Attorney-General maintain strict silence until the actual filing of suits. But, no secret is the fact that the independents in exhibition have been bringing strong pressure to bear, political and otherwise, for a federal movement against alleged distributor and major circuit aggressions.

Observers at Philadelphia

The usual procedure in such matters is for the Department to secretly investigate complaints from individuals or organizations, such as independent exhibitors or their organized units, and act when evidence requires. In New York, however, they have practically brought their "informal" investigation out into the open, Assistant United States District Attorney Leo Hickey, in Brooklyn, this week, calling in New York exchange managers and exhibitors for private discussions of the manner and method of distribution and exhibition in the New York territory.

Too, the Department had "unseen observers" on hand Wednesday in Federal Judge Dickinson's courtroom in Philadelphia at the hearing of arguments on Paramount's petition for a permanent injunction against the exhibitors' "boycott" and "strike" against Paramount product.

And, directly from Washington came word that motion pictures and oil may be the immediate targets of a "wholesale" "trust-busting" campaign contemplated by the government through the Justice Department, with oil already actually under fire and two federal indictments returned against a group of the larger oil companies in Wisconsin.

Both the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission, also, now are studying the formal complaints filed by Allied States Exhibitors against Paramount Pictures in both places for refusing to deliver six features under 1936-37 contracts.

The Department this week did admit that independent exhibitors and their organizations have been filing a steady flow of complaints

Trade Issues

Developments this week concerning distribution-exhibition practices and product and contractual relations between exchanges and theatres were:

1. The United States Department of Justice covers the country with secret service operatives investigating exhibitor complaints against distributor practices, starting an open investigation in New York, which is expected to be followed by four or five court prosecutions in "strategic" centers. In addition, Washington reported that the Justice Department was preparing for a "wholesale probe" of films and oil. In the same direction, Allied States held formal discussions with the Department at the Capital.

2. Federal courts in Philadelphia and Minneapolis were conducting hearings to decide the fate of the exhibitors' "boycott" and "strike" against Paramount's transferring six features from 1936-37 to 1937-38 contracts, and against the distributor's rental terms for the new season.

3. The Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association resolved, that, if distributors and exhibitors do not effect a "fair trade practice" agreement, or if the Federal Government does not presently enact a new NRA, the organization will sponsor the passing of regulatory legislation.

4. Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, sponsors of the anti-Paramount "boycott," opened a campaign for exhibitor support of the Hobbs Congressional resolution for a federal film investigation, at the same time admitting the organization had filed an "unfair trade practice" complaint with the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount.

5. The Federal Trade Commission in Washington was studying the complaint filed against Paramount by national Allied.

6. The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, informed members of the terms and class of product for 1937-38.

7. Independents in Canada were reported organizing for a governmental investigation of distributors and large circuits.

Federal Courts in Philadelphia and Minneapolis Hear "Boycott" Issues; Canadians Consider Demand for Investigation

Federal courts in Philadelphia and Minneapolis still hold the fate of the exhibitors' "boycott" and "strike" against Paramount.

Paramount Pictures and defendant Philadelphia exhibitors went into Judge Oliver B. Dickinson's United States District Court, on Wednesday, to argue over Paramount's petition that a temporary injunction, granted August 2nd, be made permanent and so restrain independent owners of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware from proceeding with the "boycott" and "consumer's strike" against the productions of Paramount, as had been planned for one month starting August 1st.

Reserves Decision

Judge Dickinson reserved decision and ordered submission of briefs from both sides next week. The temporary restraining order continues in effect.

Ordinarily in matters and injunction proceedings of this nature the courts speed as quickly as possible to a final decision, but because this appears to be a more complicated situation the court evidently feels it must have more information before passing judgment.

George Aarons, secretary and council of the defendant United Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was the only witness presented, Paramount's council directing its examination to point out that the independents' boycott was restraining the free flow of interstate commerce.

Drop Picketing Plans

Mr. Aarons testified that the exhibitors have discarded their elaborate picketing campaign and now seek only the right to lawful methods of persuasion, and to hold out on the signing of new Paramount contracts.

The entire issue was left by the court in a nebulous state, with independents still buying or refusing to buy as they please.

The only definite answer given the court by the independents was that there will be absolutely no picketing of any form.

Reportedly upon advice of counsel, only a handful of independents were present in the courtroom, so as not to create the impression that the organization was acting as a single body in a conspiracy.

Paramount was granted a second temporary injunction, against exhibitors in the Northwest, from engaging in a similar "sitdown" strike on Paramount pictures.

Official observers in distribution in New York predicted that if Paramount wins its petition for a permanent injunction in Philadelphia, and, later, in the northwest, damage suits against the defendant exhibitors will follow.

Federal Judge Dickinson, in Philadelphia, met late last week with Benjamin M. Golder, attorney for the Pennsylvania exhibitors' "strike" committee, and with William A. Schander,

OHIO INDEPENDENTS SEEK INQUIRY

Philadelphia attorney for Paramount, to interpret and clarify the language of the temporary restraining order, which had been translated to mean that while the exhibitors cannot "picket" against Paramount, they have the legal right to "induce" fellow owners not to buy Paramount products.

There were no significant alterations in the original order, however, resulting from the meeting between Judge Dickinson and Attorneys Golder and Schander, but following its clarification, both sides prepared to write their arguments for a hearing on Monday. This hearing was later postponed to Wednesday.

Started June 29th

The "strike" campaign started last June 29th, when independent exhibitors were called to Washington, D. C., by Pete Wood, of the independent exhibitors in Ohio, together with national Allied States leaders, to attend a "mass meeting" against the terms of Paramount's 1937-38 rental contracts and, particularly, against the company's withholding six pictures from 1936-37 schedules and placing them on 1937-38 contracts, as follows: "The Count of Luxembourg," "Artists and Models," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Spawn of the North," "Souls at Sea" and an unnamed Marlene Dietrich production directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

The Washington meeting decided to conduct an August "playdate" strike against Paramount by refusing to either date or play Paramount pictures. The campaign was immediately taken up by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, by Allied States Exhibitors of the Northwest—whose members are defendants in the two federal court actions instituted by Paramount—and by independent owners and/or organizations in Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, California, New England, New Jersey, and elsewhere.

Two Campaigns Launched

Pennsylvania's UMPTO and the Northwest's Allied States, however, were the only two units actually to formulate campaigns, announcing publicly that they would appeal directly to the public not to patronize theatres playing Paramount product, using theatre trailers, automobile sound trailers, newspaper advertising and even airplane throwaways. In addition, both made preparations to picket the Paramount exchanges in their respective cities and picket any theatres in their territories whose owners insisted on playing Paramount pictures during the month of the "boycott."

Paramount, on July 31st, on the eve of the date of the Philadelphia "strike," asked federal Judge Dickinson for relief, which was granted on August 2nd against 38 defendant Philadelphia owners and theatre companies. The owners were specifically restrained from picketing, intimidating, coercing or forcing owners to comply with a "consumer's strike," and from inducing, coercing or compelling owners to refuse to exhibit Paramount product. Some 300 theatres were purportedly committed to the "boycott."

Gets Order at Minneapolis

Paramount next turned to Allied's campaign in the Northwest, and, last Thursday, received a similar restraining order against the exhibitors' proposed "sit-down" strike—as the company called it—from Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye of the United States District Court for Minnesota. Judge Nordbye likewise ruled, temporarily, pending a final hearing, against any "picketing" by the exhibitors, and set Thursday, August 12th, as the date for arguments.

HOUSE LIGHTS FAIL TO STOP AD BOOERS

The sudden flashing on of house lights failed to dampen the spirit of members of the Society for Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres when they made their first attack last week on a Little Rock theatre.

The booers carried out their plan of "just a little genteel, well-modulated booing by a competent boo leader."

Announcements of the society's plan were directed towards all "weary and resentful of having commercial advertisements inflicted upon you when you have paid for entertainment."

Some 200 theatres were reputedly committed in this territory.

Paramount was represented in Minneapolis by the local law firm of Shearer, Byard and Trogner.

Meanwhile, the organizations in the other states where "strikes" were contemplated, were marking time on their campaigns, pending the outcome of the Philadelphia and Minneapolis court rulings.

It has been generally understood that Paramount will proceed similarly in the courts against any group of exhibitors engaging in open hostilities. The company cites the actions as restraint of trade under the Sherman Act against conspiracies.

Paramount told the court in both instances that the boycott was planned on "a nationwide scale." "Bodily violence" to owners refusing to engage in the campaign was feared by Paramount, likewise "physical damage and destruction to their theatres."

Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, led by W. A. (Fighting Al) Steffes, was assuring its members, via special bulletin, that there was no reason to get "panicky," because, "it is our contention you cannot breach a contract that has already been breached by the other side."

Allied, which, with some members, is a defendant in the Paramount suit, instructed exhibitors to "just continue to refuse them (playdates) and pay no attention whatever" to Paramount's letters threatening suit for breach of contract.

Ohio Independents' Appeal

The Independent Theatres Owners in Ohio informed its membership that Paramount's court moves in Philadelphia and Minneapolis were "admissions that the strike is effective."

"This battle will be won by touching Paramount's vulnerable spot—its pocketbooks," added an Ohio ITO bulletin, which urged owners: "Don't weaken."

Meanwhile, official distribution circles in New York were wondering why Paramount is finding no resistance in the Ohio territory when the "boycott" move originally started there.

While directors of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association "feel that all companies who take unfair advantage of exhibitors by sales policies such as have brought on the present (Paramount) action should discontinue such unfairness, we do not feel that similar boycott action would be proper for our association."

Meeting last Friday in Kansas City to decide on the Paramount issue, the KMTA unanimously went on record as being opposed to "strikes" and "boycotts" in the settlement of "such differences."

Both the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission in Washington were studying the Paramount situation.

Southwest Owners Ask for Trade Practice Control

Four resolutions pertaining to trade practices in distribution and exhibition were forwarded to the industry this week by the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, through Milton Moore, president; Mrs. H. T. Wood, secretary and the following exhibitors comprising the organization's resolution committee: Oscar C. Lam, chairman, Colonel Thomas E. Orr, Roy E. Martin, Hugh Manning, Colonel Sam Borisky and Nat Williams.

"Drastic means," if necessary, were ordered to be taken to accomplish "corrections of the evils" of forcing of short subjects and newsreels with feature contracts; so-called national sales policies; weekly payment plan for features and shorts; designation of play dates; arbitrary requests of the number of days pictures are to be played; sales, booking and money-collection drives; score charges; unfair methods for accessory selling; withdrawal of picture from one season's contracts to be resold the succeeding year at higher rentals, "and many other abuses too numerous to mention."

In the second resolution, the STOA protested the high rentals of sound and also protested "having to pay for two trailer services," calling upon distributors either to make all trailers or else allow National Screen Service to make trailers on all subjects.

The organization "calls upon and demands from each producer and distributor to forthwith grant cancellation right of 20 per cent on all feature contracts, to help the exhibitor to maintain a single feature policy by eliminating 'short' features from the contract."

The STOA also passed unanimously a resolution asking its legislation committee "to draw and present to this body a resolution to the effect that if a fair trade practice agreement is andnot consummated between the distributors and exhibitors or the present U. S. Administration does not put into effect a new NRA, or other fair trade practice plan at an early date and before the next Congress convenes, that this association will, through its board of directors, sponsor, aid and assist the passing of regulating legislation for this industry."

Ohio Asks for Film Investigation by U. S.

An open campaign to enlist exhibitors' support for a federal investigation of the motion picture business was launched last Thursday by the Independent Theatres Owners of Ohio, headquarters in Columbus, and original sponsor of the present Paramount "strike."

"The motion picture business today is absolutely dominated and controlled by the five large producers and distributors of motion pictures, namely—Loew's, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO and Paramount," charged the Ohio unit in a bulletin sent to members and the press.

"Their business methods with the independent exhibitors are ruthless and, as an evidence of the sales methods of one of these companies, I (P. G. Wood, ITOO secretary) refer you to a complaint filed against Paramount with the Federal Trade Commission by our national organization, under date of July 27th, from which you will learn of the gross fraud perpetrated on thousands of exhibitors throughout the country."

EXHIBITORS TOLD OF SALES TERMS

"Therefore," Mr. Wood's bulletin concluded, "on behalf of the independent exhibitors of the country, I sincerely trust that you will register with Congressman Hobbs, author of House Resolution No. 160, and with all members of the House Rules Committee, your desire that that the resolution (calling for a federal investigation of the industry) be adopted immediately."

Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio, Cite Sales Terms

With members generally engaged in studying new sales terms of distributors, the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, with headquarters in Milwaukee, and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio forwarded this week analyses of what exhibitors might be expected to get from all companies in the line of product and contractual terms.

"What You Might Get," is how the Wisconsin ITPA introduces its analysis of 1937-38 product and terms, as follows:

"From Metro—A higher film bill for the 1937-38 program because it is asking more 'A' picture prices this season than last season. Naturally, what you pay for the additional 'A's' will boost your film rental higher.

4 at 40 per cent
16 in "A" group
12 in "B" group
Balance "C's"

"From 20th Century-Fox—66 releases—four of them Will Rogers' re-issues. For the 12 top pictures, you will be asked to double the average of last year. For instance, if your average price per Fox picture last year was $50.00 this year you will be expected to pay $100.00 for each of the 12 top pictures, and $50.00 for each of the others. This, of course, spells out an increase.

"From RKO—56 features are announced. Four with Ginger Rogers, and Astaire-Rogers release, and one by Astaire as a solo-star, two by Hepburn, etc.

"From Columbia—62 pictures—asking an increase.

"From Universal—50 pictures—3 with Deanna Durbin are announced. Asking an increase.

"From Warners—60 pictures—probably no increase over last year.

"From United Artists—To release 36—reported asking for an increase.

"From Paramount—Suggest you take your stockings down. After all, they're still yours and you might want to use them in the future. The film companies do not play the role of Santa Claus."

Describes Terms

Ohio's ITO, under instructions by Mr. Wood, is publishing a bulletin in which it describes 1937-38 contract terms as follows:

MGM

"Metro is asking 40 per cent for four pictures, and has 16 "A" pictures, 12 "B's" and the balance "C's." It is asking no increase, but is putting out more "A's" than last season and less "B's." Naturally the price asked for the additional "A's" will bring an exhibitor's film bill with Metro higher than it was last year.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX

"20th Century-Fox is asking for its 12 top pictures, double the average of last year. Not double the price, understand, but double the average. It works out this way:—If an exhibitor paid $100 for each of the 12 "A's" last year and $50 each for the other 48, his total film bill would be $3,600. That means an average of $60 a picture. Thus this year, he would be expected to pay $120 for each of the 12 top pictures and $60 for each of the other 48.

COMMITTEE FAVORS PROBE OF RADIO

The Senate interstate commerce committee approved, before adjournment Wednesday, Senator Wallace White's resolution for the long agitated congressional investigation of the radio business to be conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Under the resolution, the probe would investigate the impartiality and fair practices of the Federal Communications Commission, the question of geographical distribution of broadcast facilities, consolidation of radio interests outside the public welfare, and kindred matters.

RKO

"RKO has not as yet announced its sales terms but it is expected it will ask the same deal as last year.

WARNER-FIRST NATIONAL

"Warner's are asking the same terms as last year.

UNIVERSAL

"We understand Universal will ask an increase.

COLUMBIA

"Columbia will ask a rental increase.

UNITED ARTISTS

"United Artists is asking for an increase.

PARAMOUNT

"Exhibitors generally having decided to lay-off Paramount, it is unnecessary to devote any space to this company's 1937-38 lineup."

Canadian Exhibitors Talk Of Film Investigation

Distributors in New York heard this week that the Canadian government may be asked to investigate trade practices of distributors and large circuits. The Independent Theatre Association of Ontario, in Toronto, is reported to have been asked by the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries to join in a move to force an adjudication of exhibitors' grievances, after reported efforts to iron out difficulties failed.

Divorcement Bill is Lost in Seven States

Allied's campaign against distributor-circuit trade practices, via state bills outlawing circuit operation from distribution, was temporarily halted with the adjournment of state legislatures. Measures designed to bring about such divorcement were introduced in eight states during the legislative sessions just ended and were enacted in one, North Dakota, a recapitulation completed by the M. P. P. D. A. on Saturday showed.

Managers Appear At Film Hearing

against distributors and major circuits sufficient to keep three operatives busy at all times in the Attorney General's office in their examination.

"The Department of Justice in Washington is gathering a mass of data on methods of operation in the film industry which might prove highly valuable should the determination be reached to undertake anti-trust prosecutions," reported Francis L. Burt, Motion Picture Herald correspondent at the Capital on Wednesday.

"The present drive against the oil industry, however, indicates that in that trade, at least, complaints have been sufficiently solid in basis to enable the government to bring suits without relying primarily upon the complainants for supporting testimony," added Mr. Burt.

Regardless, Allied States' Nathan Yamins, president; Abrams F. Myers, general counsel, and Max Levinson, New England exhibitor, had a "long" conference this week with Assistant Attorney-General Robert Jackson, in Washington, presumably in connection with Allied's complaint against Paramount. In addition, Mr. Myers submitted additional "exhibits" to the Federal Trade Commission to support Allied's Paramount complaint filed with that department.

The practically open Justice Department investigation in New York being conducted by Assistant Attorney-General Hickey, resulted in the appearance this week of Henry Randel, Brooklyn and Long Island exchange manager for Paramount, and Lillian Bergson, Paramount booker; Harry Decker, Brooklyn branch manager for Warners; Sam Lefkowitz, Warner exchange office manager; Arthur Greenblatt, assistant to George Weeks, general manager of sales for GB Pictures, and Roy Haines, eastern division sales manager for Warners.

Hubert Harrington, United States Assistant Attorney-General at Newark, N. J., also has held film hearings, with attorneys from Paramount, MGM, Warners, Columbia, RKO and GB. Mr. Harrington this week requested New York and New Jersey sales executives to furnish data pertaining to clearance and zoning in the Jersey territory.

The Brooklyn case is reported to involve a complaint by A. H. Schwartz' Century Circuit, with Al Hovell, of Hovell, McChesney, Clarkson and Klupt representing Century. I. Levinson is attorney for Warners in the discussions, Louis Phillips, who represented Paramount in the St. Louis case, repeating in the Brooklyn matter, while Louis Nizer this week postponed a planned vacation to Hawaii last Saturday to represent RKO.

The Skouras Circuit also is mentioned along with RKO and Loew's as the reported subjects of Century's grievances of a nature concerning clearance, zoning and product supply. In Newark, the Mosque theatre is said to be the complainant.

Manager Arraigned

Accused of violating a recently adopted Ohio law granting equal civil rights to Negroes in all public places and conveyances, Norman Linz, manager of the RKO Capitol, in Cincinnati, was arraigned in police court. Hearing was adjourned until September 1st.

HEPBURN, ROGERS HEAD

A PICTORIAL PREVIEW

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

THERE is a formula which, when properly applied, presages—or so Hollywood believes—a successful motion picture. Its principal components are: a good story, a quality cast, skillful direction and intelligent production. RKO-Radio is compounding these elements into its screen version of the Broadway stage play, "Stage Door."

Thematically the photoplay deals with the drama, romance, humor, ecstasy and tragedy of girls who hitch their wagons to the star of theatrical fame. It crystallizes the struggles of twenty girls, rich and poor, talented and otherwise, all aflame with the desire to succeed. The spotlight is focused most sharply upon two. One thinks her millions can buy stardom. The other relies upon her talents. In contrast to them are a golddigger who exchanges virtue for wealth, one doomed to failure who takes her own life, a hard boiled chorine who stops at nothing, a dancer who plays up to the right persons, and others who suffer and starve with a smile for their art. All are types found in a cheap theatrical boarding house.

The play was written by Edna Ferber, who, in addition to many other screen credits, helped adapt "Dinner at Eight," and whose novel was the basis of "Come and Get It," and by playwright George S. Kaufman, a collaborator on "Dinner at Eight" as well as an associate in the preparation of "The Royal Family of Broadway," several Marx Brothers pictures, "Riffraff" and the forthcoming "First Lady." Although screen play credits have not yet been fully determined, Anthony Veiller, Morrie Ryskind and Gregory LaCava, who also is directing, have had fingers in the pie.

Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers are co-starred. A few words may be appropriate in regard to Miss Hepburn's attitude toward her present assignment. Since "Little Women," and with the exception of "Alice Adams," she has appeared either as the suffering woman or in costume pictures. This time her role bears a marked resemblance to the one she had in "Morning Glory," which won her the 1933 Academy Award. A realization has come to Miss Hepburn that her popularity has ebbed; also has come a determination to recoup her lost prestige.

Miss Rogers has a comedy part. Except in one sequence, she does not dance.

Adolphe Menjou, in the role of a Broadway producer reminiscent of the character he played in "Morning Glory," heads the supporting cast. His latest pictures are "A Star is Born" and "Cafe Metropole." Others featured are Gail Patrick, prominent in "John Meade's Woman" and "My Man Godfrey." Constance Collier, currently in "Wee Willie Winkie," Andrea Leads, seen in "Come and Get It," Samuel B. Hinds, Lucille Ball, Franklin Pangborn, Pierre Watkin and Elizabeth Dunne. About twenty other players have speaking parts.

In this case more than ordinary importance is attached to the director. Among his many outstanding accomplishments Gregory LaCava numbers "My Man Godfrey," "The Affairs of Cellini" and "Private Worlds." A participant in preparation of the script, Mr. LaCava is noted for the liberties he takes with originals. "Stage Door" will be no exception. Little will be left of the stage play other than characters and locale. An entirely new plot has been conceived and developed in the LaCava manner.

Production backgrounds, the quality of which is reflected in the accompanying illustrations, are the Footlights Club, a night spot, a producer's office, a dancing school, a Park Avenue tea room, a Broadway theatre, and the playboy producer's pent house. Gowns worn by the stars and featured in the miniature fashion show were designed by Muriel King. Van Nest Polglase and his associate, Carroll Clark, created the settings. The musical score was composed by Rob Webb.

The release date will be approximately October 1st.

MAKEUP ARTISTS ACCUSE IATSE OF INTERFERENCE

Hollywood Local Says Union Blocked Contract Calling for 10 Per Cent Pay Raise

A working agreement among all American Federation of Labor theatre unions remained in the formative stage this week as the makeup artists' Hollywood local of the Painters' Brotherhood charged the International Alliance of Theatre Stage Employees with interfering with a contract approved by the producers.

Under the contract, the artists were to receive a 10 per cent increase in salary but when the producers temporarily rescinded the new wage scale, the makeup men called a meeting to consider adoption of one of three courses of action—a strike, the calling in of labor conciliators, or the seeking of a restraining order against activities of the IATSE. It was decided, instead, to continue negotiations with the producers. Resignation of Vernon Murdock, business agent, was refused.

George Browne, IATSE president, and the main figure behind the move for the labor combine which would take in the entire amusement field, is scheduled to resume conferences on the plan in Hollywood with Kenneth Thomson, head of the Screen Actors Guild, after the general executive board of the IATSE meets for a two weeks session in Seattle on Sunday.

Actors Contact Locations

The Screen Actors Guild, having delayed putting a closed shop into effect in the eastern studios, concentrated its activities in Hollywood by contacting all location spots outside of the 300 mile radius in which the Guild shop is mandatory. The plan was undertaken when the Guild expressed fear that producers would evade paying the Guild wage scale by making pictures outside of the 300 mile limit.

Omaha's exchange union suffered two setbacks. M. G. Rogers, head of Film Transport, flatly refused to sign a closed shop agreement for his drivers, and Paramount declined to negotiate a demand that any pay increase be made retroactive to the date negotiations started.

Members of the Oklahoma City Film Exchange Employees Union having rejected an agreement reached three weeks ago, home office representatives were to meet in New York this week with George Snodgrass, president, and Paul Kearns, vice-president.

Exchange unionization was started in New York.

Cleveland Campaign Planned

The Cleveland Exchange union is planning a campaign to add all theatre maintenance men and electrical engineers to its membership. With wage scales and working agreements with national distributors agreed upon, the union is now negotiating with independent exchanges. Wages in these cases, J. K. Johnson, president, said, will be based on the quantity of material handled.

In connection with a drive to unionize projectionists in the New York metropolitan area, officials of Local 306 predicted union operators will be employed in all theatres by September 1st. A contract establishing a 30-hour work week with a minimum salary of $51 a week was signed with the Manhattan Circuit, Inc. The terms represent more than a 50 per cent reduction in working time and a 150 per cent increase in salary, union executives said.

UNION DRIVE RAISING WAGES $2,000,000

The unionization of exchange employees will cost the industry an estimated $1,500,000 to $2,500,000, it is calculated in an informal survey by distribution executives.

The aggregated raise thus ranges from four to nine per cent, there being 10,000 exchange employees with an annual payroll of $27,500,000 prior to organization by labor.

Increases in projectionists' salaries are being asked in Tacoma, and in three houses at Alliance, Ohio.

A new contract for operators in Chicago is expected to be discussed within the next two weeks.

Janitors' Union Contracts

A scale of wages and working conditions to be submitted to all exhibitors in the Philadelphia area was approved by Local B 100, an IATSE affiliate, at a midnight session Monday. The scale is designed for all workers from assistant manager to porter.

Ray Carroll, speaking for the Detroit Theatres and Amusement Janitors Association, announced contracts have been signed with virtually all theatres in the territory.

The Committee for Industrial Organization has moved to organize theatre employes in all New Orleans houses.

The American Federation of Musicians will turn to motion picture theatres next in its drive to open employment opportunities for musicians, Joseph N. Weber, president, said Sunday at a regional conference of Pennsylvania and Delaware musicians' locals. However, he said, there will be no regimentation of musicians in studios.

In this connection, the National Association of Broadcasters forwarded letters to broadcasters charging the AFM was using "an approach that is not a fair one."

W. L. Edison Is Dead; Held Radio Patents

William Leslie Edison, 58, second son of the late Thomas Alva Edison, died Tuesday at his home near Wilmington, Del.

Mr. Edison studied for five years at his father's famous laboratory and later established an experimental radio station at Centerville, Del. He held many basic patents on radio devices, and chief of his inventions was the multiple use of radio tubes. His widow survives.

Executive Shakeup At National Seen As Convention Ends

Coincident with the opening of the second annual convention of National Theatres at the Hotel Broadmoor, Colorado Springs, on Tuesday was the suggestion that several important executive changes would be made following the conference. The moves have been contemplated for some time and are to become effective shortly, reports say.

Spyros Skouras, executive vice-president of National, opened the meeting with the demand that theatres keep pace with the "new day" which has developed in production as a result of increased production costs. Production budget of Twentieth Century-Fox has increased more than $2,500,000 in six months, he said, citing color, new equipment, higher salaries, increased numbers of stars and "bigger stories and bigger writers" as causes of greater expense.

Aubrey Schenck, in charge of roadshows for the circuit, urged a return of roadshows and concerts, the decline of which he blamed on film theatres.

Telegrams were read from Adolph Zukor, Paramount; Darryl Zanuck, Fox, and Ned Depinet, RKO. Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, arrived Wednesday to address the meeting on Thursday.

About 100 representatives from all over the country attended the three-day meeting whose chief purpose was the formal announcement to attendees of the contracts negotiated for the Skouras houses of National Theatres for the coming season. The opening session was marked by addresses and inspection of exhibits of General Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc.

All major product deals have been closed with the exception of United Artists. Negotiations for this deal have been under way for several months and are expected to be concluded with the return of Mr. Skouras, William T. Powers, Edward Zabel and Mr. Schenck to New York.

Representing the New York home office were the Messrs. Skouras, Powers, Zabel and Schenck, and J. J. Sullivan, Milton Hossfeld, Irving Barry, Jack Edmondson, Frank S. Irby, Harry Cox, Allan May and John Healy.

Reserve Ruling On Sex Picture

Judge Samuel Mandelbaum reserved decision on the motion brought by Jewel Productions, Inc., to enjoin the government from interfering with the exhibition of the film, "Mysteries of Sex," Austrian-made feature which it has imported.

The original German version of the film, which deals with rejuvenation and the ability to change sex by surgery, was passed by customs officials last December. The negative with French dialogue was seized by customs officers when it was up for admission to this country last February.

Warner Managers Meet

Managers from 39 Warner Brothers theatres in the District of Columbia territory went to Washington Tuesday morning for their annual meeting with John J. Payette, general zone manager, and other executives at the zone's offices in the Earle Building. Robert Smeltzer, mid-Atlantic district manager, outlined production plans. An outing followed on Wednesday.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Ali Baba Goes to Town

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

When a man goes very seriously about the business of making a screen comeback the chances for an exceptionally worthy piece of entertainment and commercial material are more than favorable. The occasion assumes an aspect of greater importance when it is noted that Darryl F. Zanuck has taken personal charge of the comeback venture.

The man making the comeback is Eddie Cantor, appearing for the first time in 18 months, since the termination of his one picture a year arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn. His history on the stage, air and in pictures is well known.

For story—but a story never meant very much in a Cantor picture—he simply brings the New Deal to Bagdad. It's only a peg on which to hang vivid suggestions of comedy romance, eruptive humorous melodrama and startling action; merely the front for desert backgrounds of panoramic sweep, for spectacle, feminine pageantry, exotic dances. A strong cast assists the star.

The story is a product of the combined imaginations of Gene Towne, Graham Baker and Gene Fowler. The first two recently did "History is Made at Night" and "You Only Live Once." Among Fowler's credits are participation in "Love under Fire" and "Nancy Steele is Missing." Adaptation was by the team of Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, which did "You Can't Have Everything" and "Wake Up and Live." Music and lyrics were provided by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, long contributors to the studio's better musicals. Dances were handled by Sammy Lee. "Pigskin Parade" and many Will Rogers and Shirley Temple films bespeak David Butler's ability as a director.

For supporting cast the picture will offer a long list of names. June Lang is just out of "Wee Willie Winkie." Roland Young is featured in the current "Topper." Singing Tony Martin has been featured in many pictures, "You Can't Have Everything" being the latest, and Louise Hovick made a promising screen debut in that picture. Douglass Dumbrille is in "The Firefly." Alan Dinehart scored in "This is My Affair," as did John Carradine, who also was seen in "Ramona" and "The Garden of Allah." Other important players are Virginia Field, last in "Lloyds of London" for this company, and Sidney Fields, heard on the Cantor broadcasts.

Release date: October 1st.

Park Avenue Dame

(Columbia)

Mystery, Melodrama, Romance

While the elements common to mystery, melodrama and romance films are being incorporated into this subject, certain twists and departures are expected to give the production a character all its own. Two murders are committed. The finger of circumstantial evidence points at an innocent girl. A man, who really has no business to do so, interests himself in her case. Eventually romantic conflict arises. In a surprise conclusion suspicion is removed from the girl and all menaces to her romance are removed when the killer is slain by the brother of the man he murdered.

The story told is by Robert Shannon, who adapted "Racketeers in Exile" for Columbia and was joint author of MGM's "Moonlight Murder." The screen play is by Michael Simmons, who lists among his credits "Venus Makes Trouble" and was a collaborator in adapting "Girl of the Ozarks."

Fay Wray, currently in "It Happened in Hollywood," and Richard Arlen, now in "Artists and Models," are featured. Supporting cast names are the familiar Thurston Hall, Raymond Walburn, Gene Morgan, Mary Russell and Marc Lawrence, with the newcomers Wyn Cahoon and Scott Colton.

Direction is in the hands of Albert S. Rogell, who made "Grand Jury" for Radio and "Roaming Lady" for Columbia.

Release date: September 2nd.

Western Gold

(20th Century-Fox-Principal)

Action Melodrama

This production promises to be a new type of outdoor action and adventure picture. A Harold Bell Wright story, adapted by Earle Snell and Forrest Barnes, it is a western in which historical fact and fiction are blended. Though alive with suspense laden movement, it is not a western cluttered up with landgrabbers, cattle rustlers, bewildered and bewildering tenderfoot school teachers and wild riding posses which indulge in the hackneyed cliff hanging activities.

But there is meat in the story which should develop those fundamentals of entertainment appreciated by the grown-up and juvenile followers of adventure films. Although romance and comedy are included, the yarn concentrates on melodrama. In the dark days of the Civil War the North is on the verge of panic because there is no gold to back up greenback currency. Eastern bound stages are looted daily of their loads of precious metal. President Lincoln assigns a G-man of the '60's to break up the bandit gang. He does so in a novel but approved manner. Plenty of thrills will be included and there also will be moments of musical interlude.

The star is Smith Ballew, featured in the Shell Chateau radio hour and seen once previously on the screen in "Palm Springs." It might be noted that Mr. Ballew will find his proper grove as a screen personality in this type of entertainment. Heather Angel (in "Last of the Mohicans") is featured in the feminine lead and the support is composed of experienced western actors.

Release date: August 27th.

Big City

(MGM)

Melodrama

No conventional story of a metropolitan community will be told in this production, no gaudy story of the silk and satin side of life. Rather, the theme throws the spotlight on the tenement districts to reveal the raw but human drama of simple persons.

An immigrant girl, married to a taxi driver, becomes the innocent victim of a war being waged by rival taxicab organizations. Accused of murder, she is hidden by her friends. But when she learns the efforts to protect and keep her under cover are dissipating her friends' resources she willingly gives herself up. As she is about to be deported, her husband uncovers evidence that bares the real murderers.

The theme is big and potent, and with all MGM's facilities being brought into play, it is being produced on a scale commensurate with its importance. Exploitable as is the theme, so are the cast and the creative organization assigned. The director is Frank Borzage, who is weaving into the production much of the quality which he gave "Humoresque," the first "Seventh Heaven," "Street Angel" and "Bad Girl." The story is by Norman Krasna, whose credits include "Four Hours to Kill" and "Fury."

For stars it will present Luise Rainer, of "The Great Zeigfeld" and "The Good Earth," and Spencer Tracy, whose work in "San Francisco," "Libeled Lady" and "Captains Courageous" has lifted him into the top player bracket. The featured support cast lists Charley Grapewin, Janet Beecher, Alice White, Eddie Quillan, Regis Toomey, Victor Varconi, William Demarest, Guinn Williams, Oscar O'Shea, John Arledge and Russell Hopton.

The film's climactic sequence will present a host of athletic notables who can be talked about. Listed are these prize ring stars, Jack Dempsey, Jimmy McLarin, Jackie Fields, Jim Jeffries and Maxie Rosenbloom; wrestlers Man Mountain Dean, Don Matsuda, Gus Sonnenberg and Bull Montana; Olympic stars Frank Wycoff and Jim Thorpe; football player Cotton Warburton and polo player Snowy Baker.

Release date: September 3d.

Merry-Go-Round of 1938

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

While the title might suggest this production is a topical revue, such is not the case. Although a brief musical content is included, the story basically is comedy romance.

Melodramatic in its early chapters, the story quickly turns to comedy. The theme concerns the experiences of four vaudeville actors who find themselves the foster-fathers of an orphan girl. Having two objectives, one to bring the girl's love affair to a successful conclusion, the other to obtain a moving picture contract for themselves, they succeed in both in a manner that should result in desirable entertainment and at the same time provide ticket selling materials.

The production is being made under the guidance of B. G. DeSylva, who, during his term at 20th Century-Fox, turned out "Captain January," "Poor Little Rich Girl" and "Sing, Baby, Sing." The director, Eddie Buzzell, recently did "As Good as Married" and "Luckiest Girl in the World" for Universal.

An interesting departure has been made in casting. Although Mischa Auer, Alice Brady and Louise Fazenda, all of whom have done well for themselves in current films are featured, three not unknown but nevertheless unfamiliar personalities on the screen, Jimmy Savo, Bert Lahr and Billy House, have important roles. Two comparative newcomers, John King and Joy Hodges, carry the romantic roles. Music will be provided by Dave Appolon and his orchestra.

Release date: Not determined.

MPPDA AIDS BRITISH IN TITLE REGISTERING

System in General Is Similar to American, Says Fay W. Allport, Home

After seven months in England, Fay W. Allport, head of the title registration department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, returned this week and reported the British film industry has set up a title registration organization that differs on only three points with the unit operated by MPPDA.

Mr. Allport, while assisting the English producers to model their organization after the one over which he has charge, invited them to submit proposals for a working arrangement between the two countries' title offices. However, Mr. Allport said, they were unable to agree upon any plan. Each time a proposal was advanced it was discussed and looked upon by some as detrimental to their interests.

The difficulty arose from the fact there is a wide difference in the number of titles handled by the two offices, Mr. Allport said. As matters now stand, Mr. Allport's invitation remains open and until a plan, agreeable to both offices, is put into operation, Mr. Allport and Neville M. Kearney, head of the British film producers' group, probably will act as a committee to iron out any difficulties or confusion arising from the duplication of titles.

While patterned after the MPPDA title department, the British organization differs in that:

1. Titles lapse after one year unless renewed.
2. Fees are charged for the registration of titles.
3. The organization does not exercise any moral supervision over the titles registered.

The first difference is generally considered an improvement over the United States plan, as it tends to prevent the "freezing" of titles. A similar plan is expected to be adopted by the MPPDA this fall.

The charging of fees in England is done on a graduated scale which, Mr. Allport said, averages about ten shillings for each title. The assessment tends to cut down the number of titles registered, Mr. Allport believes.

Although the new office does not pass upon the moral suitability of titles, it "of course would not register anything outrageous," Mr. Allport said. However, generally speaking, he continued, moral supervision is left up to the censor board.

Mr. Allport sailed for England last January after the Film Producers' Group of the Federation of British Industries asked for assistance in the setting up of a title organization. He returned on the Queen Mary Monday.

Promotion Project Operated

A film promotion project is being operated in small communities throughout California and Oregon by the newly organized Community Film Producers. The company makes two-reel films of the various cities. They are played at community theatres with local merchants paying the cost.

Davidson on World's Fair Staff

Sid Davidson, eight years with Warner Brothers and recently director of exploitation and advertising sales manager, has resigned to join the 1939 World's Fair in a promotional capacity. His successor has not yet been named.

It's Prof. Mickey Mouse, Ph.D., D.F.; Elected to School Film Program

Mickey Mouse soon will join the faculty of the nation's public schools. His value in pedagogy has been acknowledged by a group of educators who approved his inclusion in the school film program of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Dr. Karl W. Bigelow, professor of education at Columbia University, who is working with the committee appointed by the MPPDA to pass upon pictures suitable for showing in the country's schools, said that the educators had been impressed with the pedagogical virtues of the Disney cartoons.

"We have come to the conclusion that Disney is the Aesop and Fontaine of the twentieth century," he said. "His films present in elementary form problems of human relationship which little children can easily grasp and discuss together. We are prepared to introduce Mickey into the public schools."

OLD OKLAHOMA HOUSE BECOMES STOREROOM

Operated for more than 40 years with stock, vaudeville, and, more recently, with motion pictures, the Folly Theatre in Oklahoma City has been closed. It will be completely remodeled and then used as a storeroom for general mercantile business.

Closing of the house, which was one of the Standard Theatres, resulted in the transfer of D. L. Johnson, manager, to the Warner, which has taken over the 15-cent field formerly played to by the Folly. Paul Townsend, who managed both the Warner and the Liberty, will continue as manager of the latter house.

Interior Department Asks Bids

The Department of the Interior has invited bids on laboratory work on department pictures during the fiscal year ending June 30. The work involves printing and developing of films, making of titles and the like. Specification blanks may be obtained from W. B. Fry, purchasing officer of the department.

Lightman Buys House

M. A. Lightman, an executive of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, has purchased the Linden Circle theatre, in Memphis, for approximately $60,000. Mr. Lightman, a Paramount partner in Malco Theatres, explained the transaction was a personal purchase made by himself and associates in Malco.

Close Music Deal

Victor Schertzinger, director of "Something to Sing About," Grand National musical starring James Cagney, has made arrangements for the Schirmer Music company to publish the songs. The score was composed by Schertzinger.

"U" Signs Three Actresses

Universal has signed Margaret Sullavan, and extended the contracts of Barbara Read, who will appear in "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," Ella Logan, who will appear in "A Young Man's Fancy," and Nan Grey, who has been assigned to "Youth Marches On."

MGM Signs Writers

Four writers have been signed by MGM. They are: Henry F. Misselwitz, Arthur Calder-Marshall, John V. Baines and Frederick Stephani. The studio has also signed Shepard Strudwick, actor, and Charles D. Hall who will join the Roach lot as art director.

National Screen Opens Iowa Branch

National Screen Service will open a branch in Des Moines this week. Chick Friedman is the company's representative in that city. The Iowa territory previously had been served from Chicago.

Oscar Homolka, Austrian star, has left Hollywood for London to appear in a GB film and on the English stage.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Up

With another month underway, Hollywood started 11 productions and finished nine. Except in one case where the effort promises to be a sure fire hit, and in another where the possibilities are not entirely remote that the picture will be out of the ordinary, the activity is confined to routine picture making. On the completed side of the ledger, one of the nine definitely is in the big picture classification.

Universal launched two pictures. In "Blonde Dynamite," which Milton Carruth is directing, William Gargan, Dorothea Kent, Nan Grey, Noah Beery, Jr., and Eddie Roberts will be seen. The cast of "The Westland Case" includes Preston Foster, Carol Hughes, Barbara Pepper, Astrid Allwyn, Frank Jenks, George Meeker and Roland Drew. Christy Cabanne is directing.

Paramount Starts Two

Two pictures also started at Paramount. The second production for Fanchon, sole woman producer in the major field, and following her comparatively successful "Turn Off the Moon," is "Summer Romance." The cast will include Betty Grable, Eleanore Whitney, Larry Crabbe, Johnny Downs, Lief Erickson, Ben Blue, The Yacht Club Boys, and the Casanova trio, Judy, Ann and Zeke, which made a distinct impression in "Artists and Models." George Archainbaud is the director. The second venture, "Bulldog Drummond," employs John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard, E. E. Clive, Reginald Denny, J. Carrol Naish and Nydia Westman, who were featured in the yet unreleased "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back." Louis King is directing.

Republic supplemented its shooting schedule with three new films. "Boots and Saddles," a number in the "Three Mesquiteer," series, will present Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Max Hoffman, Judith Allen, Ra Hould, Guy Usher, John Ward and Gordon Elliott. Joe Kane is directing. Helen Mack, Richard Cromwell and Lionel Atwill head the cast of "Treasure Hunt," which further lists Joseph Crehan, Horace MacMahon, Billy Bevan, Chester Clute and Marjorie Main. James Cruze is directing. In "Trouble for Two," which Phil Rosen is handling, will be seen Gordon Oliver, Marian Marsh, Theodore von Eltz, Margaret Drummond, Peggy Shannon, Wade Boteler and Sarah Paden.

Maury Cohn started "Roaring Six Guns" with Kermit Maynard, Mary Hayes, Slim Whittaker, Sam Flint and Earl Hodges as principals.

For Columbia release, Larry Darmour began work on "River of Missing Men." Jack Holt and Wynne Gibson are starred, supported by C. Henry Gordon, Jack LaRue, William Bakewell, William Pawley and Arthur Hohl. Lewis D. Collins is directing.

James Dunn Returns

RKO Radio's "Love in a Basement" will bring James Dunn back to the screen, in company with Whitney Bourne, Chester Clute, Franklyn Panghorn, Solly Ward, Joan Woodbury and Tom Kennedy. Lew Landers, who was in charge of operations on Radio's "Flight from Glory" and "Without Orders," is directing.

Last of the newly started pictures is Warner's "Hollywood Hotel." Having overcome considerable difficulty in clearing the title, the studio's casting difficulties were partially alleviated when Dick Powell, Johnny Davis, Frances Langford, Benny Goodman and his orchestra, Ted Healy, Alan Mowbray, Hugh Herbert, Mabel Todd and Allyn Joslyn were assigned. Busby Berkeley will direct.

ONE BEST SELLER RIGHTS PURCHASED

Only one of the books listed by the Retail Bookseller, house organ of the Lord & Taylor Company, New York, as the "10 best renters" and the "10 best sellers" in July has been purchased for production as a motion picture. The lone book is Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind."

The "best renters," based on nationwide reports, are:

The "best seller," based upon a count of the Baker & Taylor Company's sales throughout the country, are:

Northwest Passage, by Kenneth Roberts.
Truth to Tell. Alice Grant Rosman.
American Dream, by Michael Foster.
The Years, by Virginia Woolf.

The Crime Wave at Blandings, by P. G. Wodehouse.
Gone with the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell.
Envoy Extraordinary, by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
The Outward Room, by Millen Brand.

Probably no one will be willing to argue that Selznick-International's "Nothing Sacred" is not the cream of the completed pictures crop. The stars in the picture are Carole Lombard and Fredric March, and David O. Selznick is producing the picture.

Another of the completed productions is Universal's "Midnight Raiders." Produced by Barney Sarecky and Ben Koenig, and directed by Ford Beebe, it will present Noah Beery, Jr., Catherine Hughes, Larry Blake and Bernadene Hayes in the principal roles.

Grand National completed the Zion Myers-produced and Victor Schertzinger-directed "Something To Sing About." It will present James Cagney, Evelyn Daw, James Newill.

For 20th Century-Fox release, Sol Lesser's Principal Productions finished "Western Gold." Smith Ballew is the star, Heather Angel the feminine lead.

Though occupied with his most pretentious effort, "The Barrier," Harry Sherman saw producer Ralph Ravenscroft bring in "Texas Trail." A "Hopalong Cassidy," it features William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden, Judith Allen and Alexander Cross. David Selman directed.

Producer Bud Barsky delivered "Wallaby Jim of the Islands" to Grand National. Cast names, which Charles Lamont directed, are George Houston, Ruth Coleman, Mamo Clark, William Von Brincken, Douglas Walton, Colin Campbell and Syd Saylor.

At Warners, "Sergeant Murphy" was finished. The principals are Ronald Regan, Mary Maguire, Donald Crisp, Edmund Cobb, David Newell, Max Hoffman, Jr., William Davidson and Henry Otho. B. Reeves Eason directed.

High Pressure

In devious ways sly influences are being brought to bear upon preview critics to render favorable verdicts upon the pictures they are invited to inspect. By train and plane they are taken to far corners of California and neighboring states, to San Francisco, Oakland, Santa Barbara, San Diego, San Bernardino, and Tucson, Arizona. They are complimented and showered with remembrances. They are the lions of the hour. Nothing is too good for them.

One producer recently had the habit of 'phoning reviewers asking them if they liked a comedy, melodrama, mystery, spectacular musical, or whatever the film might be, and saying that if they didn't like the special brand of entertainment being offered, he would prefer it if they stayed away. His purpose was to inspire reviewers to outdo themselves in proving that they liked the brand of picture he was previewing.

All critics are given preferred seats, right in the midst of the previewing studio's clacque. Unless a guest sits up in the gallery or away down front, he can't help, unless he be made of sterner stuff than most, but be impressed by the tornadoes of applause that greet even the most insignificant credits in the leader. The reviewers are wined and dined until some of them have become convinced that Hollywood is the worst place in the world to hold a preview. (The rest of them love it.)

All this is standard procedure against which the veteran cinema reporter has developed a defense, but a new technique was introduced in the instance of a recent preview. From a cosmetic manufacturer came a wire requesting that special note be taken, in a Technicolor picture, of "makeup which permits lifelike flesh tones on faces of screen actors for the first time." The sender would be "deeply appreciative" of anything favorable that might be written. The same preview provoked a wire from an agent announcing authorship of the music used in the two big sequences and saying that the sender would appreciate "keeping a weather eye open" for the efforts of his clients.

It is futile to predict what new ruse will be next attempted.

'DOC' WILLAT DEAD; PIONEER PRODUCER

Organized Independent Motion Picture Company; Helped Develop Technicolor Process

C. A. Willatowski, well known in the motion picture industry since 1905 as "Doc" Willat, died in Los Angeles this week, a victim of pneumonia, in his 58th year. Mr. Willat had had under his management at various times such celebrities as Mary Pickford, Owen Moore, Thomas H. Ince, Jack Pickford and King Baggot.

Although he achieved his greatest success in the production field, Mr. Willat began as an exhibitor in New Britain, Connecticut, in 1905. He remained there only one year, however, and then joined Vitagraph.

Three years later, in 1909, he organized the Independent Motion Picture Company for Carl Laemmle and became general manager. While the title was authentic in those days, Paul Gulick, publicity director for Universal, pointed out, the general manager's work consisted of washing floors, answering the telephone, and serving as messenger in addition to producing pictures.

It was under Mr. Willat's supervision that IMP made its first production, "Hiawatha".

Legal entanglements with the Motion Picture Patents Company developed and IMP prepared to produce its pictures elsewhere. It was for this purpose that "Doc" Willat was sent to Cuba to make all necessary arrangements for production there.

Attended Veterinary College

However, 1911 found Mr. Willat back in New York and reorganizing the New York Motion Picture Company, of which he became general manager. The company produced 101 Bison, Keystone, Kay-Bee, Broncho and Domino brands of pictures.

The title of "Doc," which clung to him throughout his career, was believed to have been given him originally after he had attended Harvard Veterinary College at Boston.

He was born in Detroit, November 22nd, 1878. His early education was obtained in public schools at Stamford, Connecticut, and DeLand, Florida. Later he attended John B. Stetson University at DeLand, and a business college at Atlanta. Then followed the course at the veterinary school.

Experience Not Required

Although "Doc" Willat's younger brother, Irvin, had had no stage or motion picture experience, the elder Willat did not consider this a requisite and while with IMP he installed Irvin as a director. Irvin Willat directed a number of pictures, including "Behind the Door," "Back to God's Country" and "Submarine." In 1930 he became a free lance director and this year, says INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC, he directed "Old Louisiana" for Crescent.

After three years of association with New York Motion Picture Company, "Doc" Willat ventured into business for himself. He built the Willat studios and laboratories at Fort Lee, New Jersey, and operated them from 1914 to 1916.

He also contributed to the development of the Technicolor process.

The Diamond Ring Episode

One of the numerous incidents told of Mr. Willat's association with the picture industry is recounted by Terry Ramsaye in "A Million and One Nights." It concerns a huge diamond ring of which Mr. Willat was the proud owner, and Mr. Ince, who was a director for Mr. Laemmle's company.

Mr. Ince, hearing that Adam Kessel was prepared to employ an able director at a good salary, borrowed Mr. Willat's prized ring. While applying for the position, Mr. Ince sat opposite Mr. Kessell and rested his chin on his hand, thus giving Mr. Kessel ample opportunity to study the dazzling diamond.

Mr. Kessel offered the $60 a week Laemmle director $100 a week, but Mr. Ince calmly refused it and ended the conference. A few days later Mr. Kessel hired Mr. Ince for $150 a week and the diamond ring was returned to its owner.

Charles Romano

Charles Romano, actor, died of a heart attack at his home in New York. Mr. Romano, who was 38, was rehearsing in "Virginia," legitimate production to open in New York shortly. Among the plays in which he had appeared are "Romance," "Seventh Heaven," "The Doctor's Dilemma" and "Berkeley Square." He is survived by his widow, appearing on the stage under the name of Mary Ricard, a daughter and sister.

Annie E. F. Horniman

Annie Elizabeth Fredericka Horniman, 76, one of the founders of the famed Abbey Theatre in Dublin, died Friday at Shere, Surrey, England. One of the greatest financial angels in the English theatre, Miss Horniman financed Shaw's first big success, "Arms and the Man," furnished the capital for the Abbey Theatre which gained world renown, and operated the Gaity theatre, Manchester, from 1908 to 1921.

William N. Tulluck

William Newton Tullock, 57, former manager of the Wanda theatre, Sanford, N. C., died last week of a heart attack at his home in that city.

Famous Players Convention

Famous Players Canadian Corporation will hold a three-day convention of all its theatre managers in Toronto, starting August 23. Distributing executives from New York will attend. J. J. Fitzgibbons and Ben Geldsaeler, chief booker and film buyer for the circuit, were in New York this week negotiating new product deals. They return to Toronto on Saturday.

Stephen K. Duros Dies; First Columbus Exhibitor

Stephen K. Duros, 43, founder of the Nickelodeon, first motion picture theatre in Columbus, Ohio, died at his home in that city after a brief illness.

In addition to the Nickelodeon, he was operator of the Pastime, Dreamland and Empress, all in Columbus, and was a founder of the local motion picture operators' union. Surviving are his widow, mother, two sisters and two brothers.

Lady Tree

Lady Tree, famous actress of the English stage for more than fifty years and more recently motion picture actress, died Saturday at the age of 72 at the University College Hospital, London. "Stella Dallas" Film Wrings Heart Strings

Barbara Stanwyck Proves Superb in Tender, Beautiful Story That Depicts Mother Love

By WILLIAM BOEHNEL.

A good cry is relished now and then by the hardest-hearted of critics, and tears are plentiful in the talking-picture version of "Stella Dallas," at the Radio City Music Hall. Lest you gather, however, from this introduction that the film is one long wail of pathos, let me put you straight at the very outset.

Having a special fondness for this famous sob promoter—he considers the silent version the best film he has ever made—Samuel Goldwyn has endowed it with a superb cast that includes Barbara Stanwyck, Anne Shirley, Barbara O'Neill, Alan Hale and John Boles, and under King Vidor's restrained and sympathetic direction, it emerges a tender, gently pathetic, curiously touching film.

William Boehnel.

A Story of Mother Love.

Frankly, "Stella Dallas" is the sort of film that could very easily have resulted in a cheap, sordid assault on the heart strings. A story of unselfish mother love, it could have been ruined by a less sensitive and understanding director than Mr. Vidor. But under his inspired handling the incidents lose none of their effectiveness and the characters become real human beings, experiencing genuine emotions.

That does not mean, however, that Mr. Vidor hasn't the courage of his sentiments. He never loses sight of the fact that the strength of "Stella Dallas" lies in its emotional appeal and that it is so constructed that tears and a lump in one's throat are always present. He puts over every poignant moment with devastating effect but never in a cheap, lachrymose manner.

Briefly, the story of "Stella Dallas" is the story of the futile efforts of a husband to convert his coarse, crude wife from a sow's ear into a silk purse and how, when he fails, he leaves her, only to learn in the end the full meaning of her great love for their daughter when she gives her up to the care of the woman with whom her husband is really in love. Her happiest moment comes when, standing in the rain, she sees her child happily married.

Her Acting Is Superb.

Having always felt that Miss Stanwyck would prove herself one of the screen's finest actress if given half a chance, this department is happy to report that in "Stella Dallas" Miss Stanwyck turns in a sensitive, beautifully shaded characterization and that there are moments of uncommon beauty in her playing.

No less superb is little Anne Shirley, until now so unappreciated by her own studio, RKO-Radio Pictures. Miss Shirley is little short of magnificent as the daughter, and for the fact that she will henceforth probably be a star in her own right she should give thanks to Mr. Goldwyn for choosing her for the role, and to Mr. Vidor for guiding her through it in such a masterful manner.

Excellent, too, are Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neill and John Boles, all of whom help to make "Stella Dallas" a film of warming satisfaction and deep, tender emotion. Few persons who see it will care to admit that it made them cry, but anyone who can truthfully say that it failed to affect him is a better man than this impressionable reviewer.

The New Talkie

Mr. Goldwyn Presents Another Winner, Beautifully Acted 'Stella Dallas.'

By EILEEN CREELMAN.

Since Samuel Goldwyn produced it, the perfection of "Stella Dallas" is not unexpected. Mr. Goldwyn produced the silent version. He has made also this talkie, a poignant drama that keeps always clear of the maudlin. The Music Hall is showing one of the year's finest pictures.

"Stella Dallas" is a drama of mother love, both comic and moving. It might easily have emerged as an effective bit of sentimentality. Mr. Goldwyn and his director, King Vidor, have been too shrewd for that. The production is always in excellent taste.

It has, for one thing, exactly the right cast. Barbara Stanwyck is one of those actresses, undoubtedly capable, pleasant to look upon, and gifted with a rare sincerity, who has never gotten quite the part she needed. She has it now, and she makes the most of it. This is an outstanding performance she gives, completely convincing, tender, amusing, without a trace of mawkishness.

Stella Dallas is a grand part anyway, the role of a mill worker's daughter who sets her cap for a gentleman and catches him on the rebound from a broken engagement. The marriage works out badly, as it must in spite of Stella's awkward efforts and Stephen's determined patience. Stella's background is too much for her. She cannot conquer her love of the flamboyant, her liking for loud humor, her tendency to alienate Stephen's friends.

Although the marriage breaks up, neither Stephen nor Stella lose their affection for Laurel. It is her deep love for that small daughter, who is just like her father, which teaches Stella that she can never be a Dallas. She tries to make the child happy. Everything she does is wrong, until that last sacrifice in which she gives up the only thing she really loves, Laurel herself. The picture ends on a note of triumph, with Stella marching proudly through the rain after watching her daughter's wedding through a window.

Miss Stanwyck's is not the only distinguished performance in the film. Ann Shirley, whose acting has never before been anything but routine, is sensationally good as the proud, gentle, honest Laurel, adoring her mother, and breaking her young heart over her mother's mistakes. Alan Hale, Stella's drunken, jolly suitor, and Barbara O'Neil, as the second Mrs. Dallas, are two more in a fine cast. Even John Boles, as Stephen, conquers his stiffness and gives a creditable performance.

"Stella Dallas," thanks to its script as well as director and cast, is one of the two or three best pictures of the past twelve months.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

QUITE VERSATILE, those WPA Federal Writers in New York. Not content with the task of compiling a bibliography of the motion picture, they turned to a survey of "Italians in New York," and, "Armenians in Massachusetts."

Now, always on the alert for something fresh, they are digging into the history of censorship—but very early censorship. Running back into the archives as far as 1457, they found one of the first formidable signs of censorship in the decree of the rulers of Scotland forbidding all citizens from playing golf. The law was enforced, and strictly, not to ease the lot of golf widows—of whom the motion picture business now has thousands—but because golf was becoming so popular that it took men away from archery practice, thereby weakening the national defense. They called it "goff" then.

The WPA writers next researched censorship to bowling in New York, where, they report, authorities banned the sport because it was stirring up a gambling fever.

Early bowlers read the law, found that it specified a prohibition of "nine pins," and jumped through a loophole by adding another pin. And that, we are told, is why ten pins are now used in bowling.

Fencing, now the sport of some of our best people in Hollywood, was outlawed in England in 1286 on the grounds that it was practiced principally by "profligates who were thereby emboldened to commit the most unheard of villainies."

That master of the subtle art of exploitation, W. P. (Prince Machiavelli) Bernfield, of United Artists in Kansas City, says he is going to put the local Loew's Midland theatre all over the map. Noted for his ingenuity in drawing strength from adversity, he has seized upon the grasshopper plague as opportunity. He is making arrangements to strap banners on local hoppers, head them outward from the city, and spread the fame of Loew's Midland to Colorado, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Illinois and Arkansas.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company, the new radio sponsor of "The Shadow" serial, is offering exhibitors booking Grand National's "Shadow" series a free ton of "Blue Coal," presumably to be given away to the public. Some enterprising exhibitor will try to make the ton last longer by giving away one piece of coal every third Tuesday when he plays a "Shadow" installment.

Lou Mills, running the Dixie theatre at Olive Hill, Kentucky, related to J. A. (Soles-on-Sound Corporation) Tanney the recent incident at his theatre when one of the pictures which he exhibited featured a scene showing Richard Dix at a murder and Dix announcing: "We will bury this martyr to the cause next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock—everybody meet me here."

And, so help Lou Mills, promptly, at two o'clock on the following Sunday afternoon, a native Kentucky hillbilly, his wife and regiment of children appeared at the Dixie theatre, took in the show, and, afterwards, complained to Mills because there was no funeral.

Insofar as Twentieth Century-Fox and Darryl Zanuck are concerned, the name of Gypsy Rose Lee passed when she affixed her name to a Zanuck contract. The 20th Century-Fox people made it very clear that in the hereafter, Gypsy Rose would be known only as Louise Hovick, her real name.

"You Can't Have Everything," first motion picture to include Gypsy Rose, opened last week at the Rivoli theatre on Broadway. And, as promised, there was nary a mention on the marquee or lobby displays of the "strip-tease" cognomen. Instead, the outfront captions called attention to, "Louise Hovick—Guess Who?"

The death last week of A. Edward Wuppermann, brother of the motion picture's Ralph and Frank Morgan (their real name is Wuppermann), resurrects the story about the Wuppermann family and Angostura Bitters.

A. Edward Wuppermann was president of the Angostura-Wuppermann Corporation which manufactures the bitters. Before him, the Wuppermanns' mother was president for a long spell. Ownership of Angostura has been in the family for years—but not a member has ever known the formula for making the bitters. That has been a secret to all save one person at a time for some 113 years.

Dr. Johann Gottlieb Benjamin Siegert, an army surgeon stationed in Angostura, Venezuela, first brewed the stuff in 1824. The formula was passed on to the Siegert family, and, every year, Dr. Alfredo Halo Siegert, grandson of the originator, visits the United States to lock himself up in the Angostura-Wuppermann plant and prepare the annual supply.

"Listen, buddy," retorted the operator, "you've either got the wrong company or the wrong year."

PURCELL, OKLAHOMA, population 2,817, sent Rene Stone to Hollywood for a film career, and neither RKO, nor any other producer is going to put his face on the cutting-room floor without hearing about it from Purcell.

Mrs. Pearl Dooley, owner of the 400-seat Dooley theatre in Purcell, has been publicizing Rene Stone around the countryside as one of the young actors who would get their first break in RKO's "New Faces of 1937." No cabin along the river was without information about Purcell's own Rene.

Then came the print of "New Faces" to the Dooley theatre; but without Rene. Mrs. Dooley, perturbed, investigated, and discovered that the face of Mr. Stone had been cut from "New Faces" and was reposing at that very instant on the cutting room floor at the Radio studio.

Mrs. Dooley took Western Union pencil in hand and wrote a long and lucid telegram to Ned Depinet, RKO chieftain, to the effect that Hollywood, Will Hays, RKO, Sam Briskin and even Joe Breen might know what kind of entertainment the country at large might want, but each and every one of them was totally ignorant of what Purcell in particular wanted, nay, demanded—Rene Stone.

Quickly came a reply telegram from Mr. Depinet, explaining that he had instructed the Hollywood studio to pick up Stone's face from the cutting room floor and send it directly to Mrs. Dooley. She received the little coil of celluloid, had it cut into "New Faces," and no one in Purcell ever knew that Rene Stone made his cinema debut by way of air express.

The "oldest living Californian" never appeared in a motion picture, never saw the inside of a motion picture studio.

Not long ago, Mrs. Griffin proudly claimed the title of the "oldest living Californian." Kit Carson himself—inspiration of many a western "thriller"—guided Mrs. Griffin's father's wagon train over the last miles from Salt Lake to Colton, California, she said.

RKO REORGANIZATION TESTIMONY CONCLUDED

Objections to Special Master's Recommendations Will Be Heard in November

Emergence of Radio-Keith-Orpheum from the long drawn out differences over reorganization was in sight this week with the conclusion of the taking of testimony on the plan before Special Master George W. Alger who will file a tentative report on the plan October 14th in federal court. Final action is expected in December, following a hearing in November before Federal Judge William Bondy at which time objections to the special master's recommendations will be heard.

Indications were that the report of the special master would recommend modifications or additions to the plan as now conceived. This was augured in the remark of Mr. Alger to H. C. Rickaby, attorney of Atlas Corporation, advocate of the plan, that he "may decide to butcher the plan" so that "nobody will be satisfied".

The special master ruled against the admission of testimony concerning the purchase in 1935 by Atlas Corp. from Radio Corporation of America of one-half of the latter's holdings of RKO securities for $5,000,000 with an option to purchase the remainder at $6,000,000 before 1938 on the ground that it was irrelevant to the proceedings.

Arthur Berenson, attorney for a group of Boston stockholders, opposed the ruling, stating that the sale involved approximately $30,000,000 worth of securities and debentures for about one-third of their value and the circumstances of the sale warranted investigation. The securities in question are said to include 1,211,463 shares of common stock and $9,786,655 in RKO debentures.

At a hearing last week, Joseph Cohen, representing the stockholders, charged fraud in purchase of RCA holdings by the Atlas Corp. and doubted the good faith of the latter company in proposing the plan. Mr. Cohen claimed that Atlas and RCA between them hold 84 per cent of the debentures and 48 per cent of the stock of RKO.

Fox - A.T.&T. Suit Is Being Settled

The $1,000,000 damage suit brought against American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products by Fox Theatres for alleged overcharges in the sale and servicing of sound equipment is in the process of settlement, Milton S. Weisman, Fox receiver, notified Judge Martin C. Manton of the U. S. circuit court of appeals.

Mr. Weisman further informed the court that the $2,184,184 claim of Adolphus M. Burroughs and Louis M. Boas for alleged breach of contract to purchase a circuit of theatres had been disallowed by special master Courtland Palmer and that the time for an appeal had expired. The $400,000 claim of Federal Theatre Building, Inc., for alleged breach of contract to erect a theatre in Newark was settled for $10,000. The alleged breach of contract charged by Nandies Realty Corp. on a theatre in Ossining, in which plaintiff asked $100,000, was settled for $15,000.

Mr. Weisman was awarded an allowance of $15,000 for his services as receiver of the Fox Theatres Corp. from January 13th to July 12th. He had requested $20,000.

Wilcox Sails, With RKO Deal Set for Signing

Herbert Wilcox, London producer, sailed for England on the Queen Mary Wednesday with the understanding that he will probably produce four "A" pictures a year in Britain for RKO, each costing $750,000, two of which will be in Technicolor. Mr. Wilcox arrived in New York two weeks ago for discussions with RKO executives Leo Spitz and Ned E. Depinet relating to a production tieup and indications are that agreement has been reached.

At the same time it was announced that RKO will release "The Rat," a Wilcox venture now in production in Denham Studios, England, which will co-star Ruth Chatterton and Anton Walbrook, male lead opposite Anna Neagle in "Victoria the Great." "The Rat," a story of an uncrowned king of the underworld, was written by Ivor Novello, English playwright and actor.

Although "meeting of the minds" had been reached on the Wilcox-RKO production plans, it is understood that formal signature will not take place until September when Mr. Wilcox will return to attend the American premiere of "Victoria the Great" at the Music Hall, New York. The picture is set for September opening.

On his return here, Mr. Wilcox is expected to resume conferences with Paramount with regard to a production deal similar to that discussed with RKO. During his stay, Mr. Wilcox was in conclave with Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, and John W. Hicks, foreign manager, but details of the subject occupying them were not disclosed.

Art Group Chosen

The Ways and means committee of Charleston's city council will recommend the Dock Street theatre be operated for two years by Carolina Art Association. The theatre is to open in November and the contract with the art group would carry a provision that it must raise $12,000.

Theatre Taxation Killed in Chicago, Fought in 2 States

Militant campaigns against taxation affecting exhibitors resulted in the defeat of a measure considered by the Chicago city council and opened a bitter fight against the Pennsylvania and Maine imposts with exhibitors in both those states joining the crusades of chain stores and others affected by the tax measures. The Pennsylvania measure, already in operation, will be tested for constitutionality and the Maine bill comes up for popular referendum August 16th.

The three per cent amusement levy proposed in Chicago was killed in favor of a revenue plan affecting 100 other lines of business. Local circuits and independent exhibitors bitterly fought the measure on the ground that small operators would be unable to survive the impost, thus placing them at the mercy of the larger chains. B. A. Cronson, alderman, led the opposition to the bill whose purpose was to raise $1,000,000 to enable restoration of city employees' wage cuts.

Theatre operators, with Warner interests predominating, joined for the first time with the 30 chain-store corporations in their court fight against the Pennsylvania law taxing theatre and store chains $1 to $500 per unit.

Amusement companies which filed injunction suits against the State Revenue Department to prevent enforcement of the Pennsylvania law are the Stanley Company of America, a Delaware concern operating approximately 100 theatres in the state; Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., of Pennsylvania, wih 50 theatres; and Warner Brothers Pictures, also of Delaware, with 150 theatres. Temporary injunctions have been granted by Judge J. Dress Pannell, immuniziing these companies from the tax until the issue is decided.

Maine exhibitors have similarly joined forces with merchant groups and Chambers of Commerce in their fight to defeat the one per cent retail sales tax which comes up for referendum August 16th. The measure, which was passed by the Maine legislature April 25th, would become effective immediately and continue until June 30th, 1939, if approved.

Forrest Smith, Missouri state auditor and collector of the state sales tax, announced that a general audit would be made of every retail establishment, including theatres, for recovery of a reported several million dollars loss from evasion of the levy.

In Washington, the Joint Congressional Tax Committee recommended legislative dikes to stem the loss on income returns resulting from the formation by actors and radio stars of personal holding companies and other evasive devices.

South Carolina Newspaper Cites Growth Of Local Theatres As Favorable Sign

Motion pictures "are the most extensive, artistic and indelible means to impress young minds with the master spirits of literature, art and history," according to the Columbia (S. C.) State, daily newspaper, which editorialized this week on the increase of Columbia's film theatres, registering "quite a number of pleasurable additions to the city's progress," as follows:

"1. It is proof positive that our population is growing.

"2. Further proof that the increase means more money to be spent for recreation, information, up-to-dateness.

"3. Therefore, a beter humored, a more intelligent, a more up-to-date citizenry.

"4. The extension not only of entertainment or amusement, but of educational, economic and scientific information.

"5. A refreshing environment inviting us during a great part of our waking hours.

"6. An added artistic embellishment to the city's interior and exterior decoration.

"So habituated have we become to the movies that we often forget the part they play in life," adds the newspaper in its lead editorial for the day. "Aforetime, when we wanted to see famous people or take a look at London, Paris, Rome and Shanghai, we had to go there or be satisfied with a diminutive print. Now in our picture palaces we sit down and have them come to us. Motion pictures are the offspring of science through some of the finest minds the world has known. They bring to us the world's best thought, the most famous events, the sublimest scenes.

"Viewing the matter still more broadly, the reasonable hope has already been expressed that the motion picture theater will be one of the ultimate factors in developing and establishing the international understanding and good will that all nations yearn for but at times such as the present seem far from attaining."

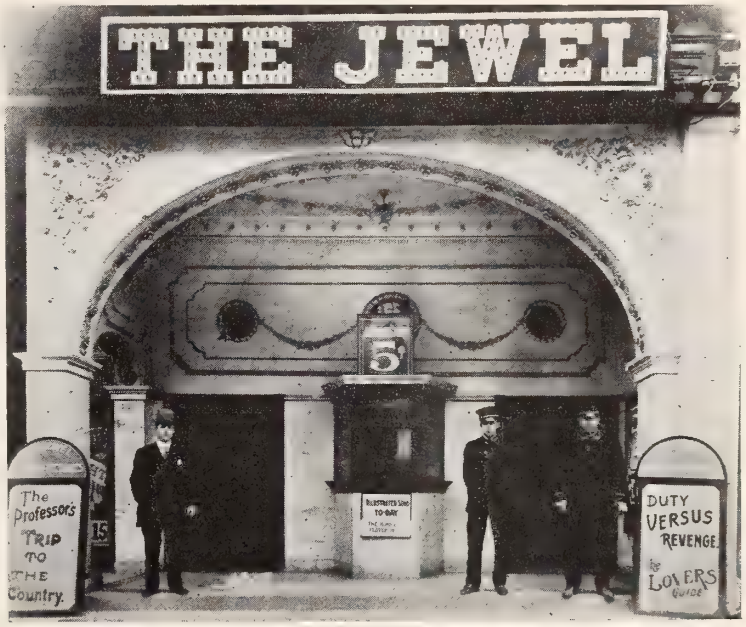
Ohio Theatre Manager Recalls Years as Nickelodeon Operator

John A. Schwalm Known to Ohioans as Exhibitor 31 Years, from Song Slide Days

by E. H. MAYER

To Ohioans who recall with nostalgia the early years of the century the name of John A. Schwalm is identified intimately with what to them were the screen's first manifestations just as the same name and the same man represents to their minds today the motion picture in its most modern dress.

Not a native of the state, having been born and having spent his youth in Pittsburgh, Mr. Schwalm gave Dayton its first motion picture theatre, the 96-seat Electric, in 1906. Since the flowering of that first venture he has remained continuously and successfully in the exhibition field as an independent and circuit operator, and he is now the manager of the Rialto, leading house in Hamilton.



Mr. Schwalm, at left, wearing the bowler, posed proudly in front of his theatre in Easton, Pa., in 1909, two years after the house was opened as the fifth of his theatrical ventures. Note the elaborate marquee and the double feature bill advertised in quiet taste.

The veteran showman's story of the acquisition and operation of his first theatre and the industry's subsequent growth which encouraged him to continue the career he had chosen constitutes an interesting cross section of the history of exhibition through the early years. Born in Pittsburgh 64 years ago last April 15th, Mr. Schwalm began his business life as a window glass worker and his flair for organization and executive work was given early scope through his election as an officer of a Knights of Labor union and through activity in municipal politics.

Persuaded to reminisce the exhibitor continued in his own way: "It was during noon hours that I quite frequently stopped at a picture show which had been opened by Harry Davis on Smithfield Street, between Diamond and Fifth Avenue. It was the only one in Pittsburgh. The place had the unheard of number of 300 seats, showed pictures continuously and charged five cents. The show, I well remember, lasted 12 minutes. It intrigued me. I noted the business was growing, and I felt it had possibilities. That's when it was that the bug bit me.

"One day while I was standing in front of this 'mammoth' theatre, a schoolmate, C. S. Rothleder, happened along. We discussed this amusement novelty. That discussion was the turning point of my life. We both agreed that if Davis could put it over so could we, but where to start was something else again. We considered locating in Pittsburgh, but decided another location without competition would be better.

$1,900 for Remodeling

"After considerable thought we decided on Dayton, Ohio, where we had heard no regular show of this kind existed. So in March of 1906 we leased a building at 40 East Third Street in Dayton which we remodeled into a 96-seat theatre with an area of 20 by 64 feet, at an expense of $1,900, and named it the Electric. This was the only 'straight' theatre in the town.

"We opened the Electric May 1, 1906, showing the same film for a week at a five-cent admission, our product being purchased from the Pittsburgh Calcium Light Company, of which Richard Rowland, now a producer, was president. Our film rental was $35 a week but we never knew what we were to get until the film arrived. Then we could have signs and banners painted which constituted the bulk of our advertising. Occasionally a traveling promoter would happen along with an 'outstanding' attraction such as 'White Slave Traffic,' 'The James Boys' and similar spectacles."

The Electric possessed the first Powers projection machine in Dayton and operated on a grind policy from 8:30 A. M. to 11 P. M. The operator was paid $15 a week, the cashier $7, the doorman $10, and the janitor $7. As for music, "there just wasn't any. All we gave them was pictures, although we occasionally did spread ourselves by booking in a song slide."

Saturday Gross $178

Mr. Schwalm explained the venture ran about $50 a week in the red during the first summer. "But when the parks closed, that was a different story," he added. "Business began to pick up in September and by early December we were making a profit of $200 weekly. I remember one Saturday in particular we took in $178. That was one of our really big days."

Early in 1907 Mr. Schwalm opened the Victor with 350 seats in Reading, Pa., the first five cent theatre there. This house was later sold to Carr and Schad, who subsequently became big operators in Reading and later sold out to Wilmer and Vincent for nearly $1,000,000. In the same year he opened the 300-seat Dreamland and the Bijou with 550 seats in South Bethlehem, Pa., and the Jewel, an upstairs house, in Easton, Pa., for which the first floor was used as a lobby. In all these houses the admission was five cents.

Color Feature Shown

Resuming his story the exhibitor said: "Disposing of our interests, we went back to our first love, Dayton, where we leased the old Beckel Hall, a second floor location which we remodeled into the Jewel. Here we really went to town. Adding two acts of vaudeville, we raised our admission to five and ten cents. We found we could get by with this and later we advanced it to ten and 20 cents. However, we gave the city its first honest-to-goodness amateur shows and, what's more, we inaugurated talking pictures. We had a company of four men and three women who stood behind the screen and 'talked' the pictures from their own scripts, which were prepared at previews."

In 1908 Mr. Schwalm bought a hand-colored print of the "Passion Play" from Richard Rowland for $400. This was rented throughout eastern Pennsylvania for $20 a day over a long period after which it was sold back to the distributor for the original purchase price.

The showman's next venture, after disposing of his Dayton house, was to form a partnership with John H. Broomhall of Indiana. They built the Theatretorium in Richmond, Ind., in 1908, a 300-seat house. The following year they built the Jewel in Hamilton, O., the beginning of the Jewel Photoplay Company. In 1914 the Jefferson, in Hamilton, was acquired. In 1918 they bought the Regent in the same city and in 1920 they converted the St. Charles Hotel into the present Rialto. On the death of Mr. Broomhall some years ago Mr. Schwalm took over his share of the company.

The Jewel and the Regent have since been converted into business properties. The Jefferson was destroyed by fire. Mr. Schwalm operated the Rialto as an independent house until it was taken over by Public and later by the present lessees, Southio, a Paramount subsidiary.

Although he attends to every detail of the Rialto in a supervisory capacity, Mr. Schwalm is a city councilman, leader of the Butler County Democratic Committee, a director of the Chamber of Commerce, of a building and loan company and of the Anthony Wayne Hotel, and, until the Rialto became part of a theatre circuit, he was a director of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. He is the owner of a summer hotel in New England and of the bus terminal property in Hamilton. Known by his first name to nearly every resident of the city and popular because of his personality and character, he is a golf enthusiast, a baseball fan, and the father of two boys, both college graduates, and a daughter whose graduation from college he will attend next year.

CHICAGO EXHIBITORS FACE THREE ISSUES

There's Double Feature Problem, Increased License Fees and Projectionists' Demands

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

The advent of fall will see three sizeable battles being fought on the Chicagoland film front. The issues coming up for debate and decision are the following:

Double features.

Increased license fees for theatres.

Increased wages for motion picture operators.

The matter of double features probably will be decided by the theatre patrons of Chicago. Four years ago the public voiced such protests through newspapers, clubs, associations and other media that theatremen returned to the single feature. At that time Balaban & Katz advocated the single feature.

This year the B&K circuit is on the other side of the fence. Having started duals last fall when all other circuits and most independents hoped to maintain single features, B&K continues to emphasize the double feature and is arranging to continue using that policy.

Admission Tax Tabled

The many conferences between theatre owners and city officials over license fees and other matters of ordinance eased up this week as theatre executives and city aldermen sought vacation lands. Last week an ordinance drafted and ready to be voted upon was tabled abruptly and referred to a subcommittee of the city finance committee. This ordinance was an amusement tax proposal which called for a tax of one cent on all theatre admissions of 16c to 32c, two cents on tickets from 30c to 75c, three cents on tickets from 75c to $1, and over that amount four cents a ticket.

Alderman B. A. Cronson moved to eliminate the tax on tickets less than 30 cents, saying that the children of the city would be the most affected. Alderman John F. Healy commented that the small theatre owner would be the hardest hit by any tax of this type and that it would lead to the bigger theatres driving out the small fellows. The proposal thereupon was set aside. Other plans for the raising of more than one million dollars in the amusement industry will be formed later, Alderman Jacob M. Arvey, chairman of the finance committee, said.

Would Double License Fee

Latest advices indicate that the city will raise the theatre license fees to at least twice the present amount and this will bring a revenue from theatres close to the million dollar mark. Present rates for license fees will be adjusted in many cases, it is learned, so that the small theatre owner will not be too hard hit.

Having granted city employees a ten per cent wage increase starting October 1st, the city council finds it necessary to raise more than $3,000,000 to meet the budget deficit this wage increase will cause. Hence the proposed raise in theatre license fees.

The third major problem to greet the theatre owner this fall will be an expected demand for higher salaries for projectionists. Last year the Chicago operators union asked for a 20 per cent increase. This was not granted, however, and it is thought likely that the operators again will seek a pay raise, feeling that this year thev may have a better chance of getting it.

The current contract expires August 31st, and negotiations for a new agreement are expected to get underway this week. Just what demands the union will make at the first meeting have not been disclosed but it is learned from an authoritative source that a wage increase will be sought. The average wage for operators in Chicago is said to approximate $97 a week, exclusive of overtime.

Last year theatremen refused to give the union a pay increase because operators' salaries had remained at a high level during the depression and because many of the men drawing the paychecks had hired substitutes to work for them most of the time and thus had lowered the standard of operation. Theatre executives say that conditions have improved but little.

Contrasted with these issues are prospects of the biggest corn crop in years, with increased attendance and construction of additional theatres indicated.

CAPA Honorary Members

Joe E. Brown and Rubinoff were elected to honorary membership in the Chicago Amusement Publicists association (CAPA) at a meeting last week in the CAPA clubrooms in the Sherman Hotel. Both men are here for personal appearances. Brown is broadcasting baseball games over WJJD and Rubinoff appeared on the Grant Park musical program last Friday.

B & K Twin Fiesta

Balaban and Katz will hold a dual celebration next month for the Will Rogers theatre, its newest house in Chicago, and the Central Park, its oldest Loop house.

Fathers and Sons Day

The fourth annual Motion Pictures Fathers and Sons Day will be held August 29th at the Uplifters Club, Hollywood. Arthur Lewis has been elected chairman of the Sons' Executive Committee and has named Richard Landau, David Weisbart, F. Maury Grossman, Gerald Brandt and Burton Lewis as his co-workers. A baseball game is the feature of the affair, which last year was won by the fathers' team, made up of Groucho Marx, Sam Briskin, Joe E. Brown, the Ritz Brothers, Charles R. Rogers and Eddie Cantor.

Negotiations for the acquisition of seven houses in the New York area are underway by Harry Brandt who plans to add the theatres to his circuit by next week.

O'NEILL SCORES HIS SECOND HOLE-IN-ONE

C. B. O'Neill, Chicago manager of Quigley Publications, scored his second hole-in-one Sunday, August 8th, on the seventh hole of the Westgate Valley Country Club, in Chicago.

Mr. O'Neill made his first record shot on the 175-yard fourteenth hole of the Dixmoor Country Club on October 14, 1923. His encore was for 85 yards.

New Dubbing Plan To Void Subtitles

A synchronized dubbing process designed to eliminate the use of superimposed titles, by substituting a foreign-language sound track to correspond with the lip-movements of the original tongue, is claimed by Language Synchronizing Patents Company, of New York, and is being demonstrated to export managers of large distribution companies and heads of local circuits.

Under the process, a new sound track is said to be dubbed in such a way that the translated dialogue may be synchronized with the lip-motions of the original, thereby permitting use of the original print and eliminating the need for re-make, it is claimed. Choice of words in phrasing the translation so that they match the "appearance" of the original is called the key to the idea. Timing is measured by running the dialogue across a screen in the manner of a "galloping" electric sign and matching foreign syllables with the speed and outline of the language which is to be translated.

The fact that most countries require that dubbing be done within their own boundaries makes the process of greater interest to export managers in Spanish-language areas, where such restrictions are less stringent.

Local circuits having theatres in neighborhoods with a high foreign population are also expected to be interested in the idea. At the same time, if the idea measures up to the claims of its sponsors, it is expected to increase the market for foreign films in this country with English dialogue supplied by American actors supplanting the title system.

The cost of the new sound track ranges from $3,000 to $5,000 per feature.

The process was developed by Michael Hoffman, a former orchestra leader and theatre operator.

CBS ANSWERS EXHIBITOR FIGHT WITH OPTIMISTIC ANALYSIS OF RADIO'S USE

Three Out of Four Families in Largest Cities Hear Programs on the Air Daily, Says Columbia Digest

Almost three out of every four families in the largest cities of the United States are listening to their radios every day and in smaller communities the percentage is even higher, according to "Radio in 1937," a book published by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Although the book was not compiled for the purpose, it provides for motion picture exhibitors, now fighting radio's inroads and radio broadcasting by film stars, a clearer picture of the construction, statistically, of radio in United States. The data include all communities of 2,500 population or over.

"No single city in the world, however big, is as rich in entertainment, culture and news, as the living room—or automobile—of any radio owner," it is stated.

During the day, before 6 p.m., 57.6 per cent of all radios are in use, the book reveals, and after 6 p.m.—the peak hours for attendance at motion picture theatres—the radio audience increases to the extent that 64 per cent of all radios are in use.

The statistics, gathered from all parts of the United States, also reveal that 90 per cent of all homes are equipped with radios. The percentage of radios in homes located in communities of various population sizes are:

Over 250,000	92.4%
25,000 to 250,000	90.8%
10,000 to 25,000	91.8%
2,500 to 10,000	88.8%

In commenting on the ownership of radios by income levels the book points out:

"Today, in communities of 2,500 population and over, nine out of ten of all families in all income groups open their homes wide to radio. . . . Radio scales all fences; gets into all homes. . . ."

And to prove this, ownership of radios by income levels is listed. The statistics show the income levels and the percentage of homes owning radios as follows:

"Over, $5,000, 98.6 per cent; $2,000 to $5,000, 96.3 per cent; and $2,000 and under, 85.1 per cent."

While theatres draw their audiences from all income levels, radio, the book states, "all but completely wipes out distinction between mass and class circulation."

The percentage of homes owning radios in the four time zones, eastern, middle, mountain and Pacific, also is listed. The greatest percentage, 91.3 per cent, is in the Pacific zone which also is where the production center of the motion picture industry is located. Ranking second with 90.7 per cent is the eastern zone which is the most thickly populated and thus has more motion picture theatres than any of the other sections. The mountain zone is third with 89.7 per cent and the central has 88.8 per cent.

For all zones there is an average of 5.1 hours of daily listening among radio owners. The eastern leads with 5.2 hours while the other average hours are, 5.1, Pacific; 5.0, central, and 4.9, mountain.

As for the age and sex of the radio audience, the statisticians drafted a chart giving percentages for morning, afternoon and evening programs.

	Morning		Afternoon
Male	Winter	Summer	Winter	Summer
Over 18	25	21.7	24.0	27.2
Under 18	12.5	13.0	12.0	13.6
Feminine
Over 18	50.0	47.9	48.0	45.6
Under 18	12.5	17.4	16.0	13.6

	Evening
Male	Winter	Summer
Over 18	34.4	37.9
Under 18	12.5	10.3
Feminine
Over 18	43.7	41.5
Under 18	9.4	10.3

"It is interesting to note," the book states as comment on the chart, "the large percentage of men who listen morning and afternoons (as well as evenings). In millions of homes, radio continues as a family medium throughout the day."

The greatest number of average hours of daily listening by the size of cities is 5.7 hours and is recorded from cities with 10,000 to 25,000 population. Other average daily listening hours and the population of the cities in which they occur are 4.5, 250,000 and over; 5.5, 25,000 to 250,000; and 5.1, 2,500 to 10,000.

Newsreels Rush Crews to China; 2 Reported Jailed

The American motion picture newsreels have gone to war again. For the third consecutive year, the summer has brought a war, and with it newsreel editors are recalling their staff cameramen from vacations half way 'round the world, rushing them to the front on 24 hours' notice. Last year it was the outbreak of war in Spain between Rebels and Reds; the year before, Mussolini and Italy set out to conquer Haile Selassie and his Abyssinia. This year it is the unofficial war between Japan and China, expected to be the most difficult from a coverage point that the American newsreels have yet encountered.

Paramount has at the front Henry Kotani, manager of the Paramount Japanese reel; A. T. Steele, of its Chinese staff, and Earl Nelson, of the Seattle office, en route.

Charles E. Ford, editor of Universal News, dispatched Howard Winner, cameraman, to China, last week, aboard the S. S. President McKinley, sailing from Seattle. He will work at the front with George Krainukov, Universal's cameraman in China.

Bonnie Powell, Far East supervisor for Fox Movietone News, reported arrested by the Japanese with "Newsreel" Wong, has been handling the coverage for his company with a reciprocal arrangement with the Japanese News agency, Afhai Shinbun, whereby a staff of its cameramen work under Mr. Powell.

Other companies reported preparations underway.

Censorship Is Eased

At the beginning the Chinese censors were particularly strict. After constant complaint, Mrs. Chiang Kai-Shek, wife of the Chinese war leader, and a Wellesley college graduate, interceded for them.

As the Japanese obtain tighter control of the situation the newsreels report they are meeting a growing obstacle in Japanese censorship. Generally approximately one-third of all footage shot is confiscated by the Japanese military authorities, and working conditions for the cameramen are very strict. By using a Japanese cameraman to head their corps with the Japanese army, Paramount reduced its problem.

Paramount has established large stocks of negative in Shanghai. The company also has located in Shanghai and Tokyo complete duplicate camera outfits for replacement of destroyed or confiscated equipment. The cameramen travel with an outfit weighing four hundred pounds and includes an Akeley camera with complete long lens equipment, a hand camera, 5,000 feet of negative, a gas mask, a steel helmet, a few cans of emergency food, a blanket, and an American flag.

To date the United States Government has refused to issue any special credentials to news men going over to cover the Chinese situation.

Newspaper still photographers and American and other motion picture newsreel cameramen were described in a New York Times wireless from Tientsin as laboring under extreme difficulties. Japanese authorities, said the dispatch, have succeeded in cornering the handling of all official news and news photos of the North China war as an exclusive monopoly for their own nationals.

Cameramen on Both Sides

When Paramount News got the first actual fighting pictures of the war into this country the other day, sending them out as "specials" to theatres, A. J. Richard, editor, explained:

"We always make it a point to attach cameramen to both sides. In this case Henry Kotani, manager of our Tokyo newsreel office, flew into Northern China and joined up with the first Japanese offensive column. At the same time, A. T. Steele, of our Chinese staff, had hurried North and managed to get into Peiping before the fighting actually started. Working with the Chinese forces, he managed to secure some early material, including shots of what was left of a Japanese column of 70 motor trucks, after it had been ambushed.

"As the situation develops, the newsreels are augmenting their coverage as quickly as possible. On ten hours notice, Paramount managed to get Earl Nelson, of the Seattle office, off on a boat for Shanghai. The State Department and the Dollar Line cooperated in making this possible.

"Paramount has also arranged with Central Motion Picture Bureau of China for first call on all material."

Officials of Fox Movietone News said they had asked the State Department at Washington to make inquiries concerning the reported arrest of Bonnie Powell, Far East director for Fox, by Japanese in Peiping.

Mr. Powell, 35 years old, has operated in China for Fox many years. His wife and child live with him in China.

Paramount Adds 400 Houses to Its Circuit Since '35

Four hundred theatres have been added to the Paramount circuit since the company's reorganization in 1935.

Total theatre affiliations for Paramount now number about 1,400. At the time of the reorganization the circuit listed 1,035 theatres owned or controlled by it or subsidiaries, in a report filed with the Federal court.

Paramount's present theatre holdings are about 400 fewer than the peak year, 1931, when it operated 1,790 houses. During the reorganization, about 800 theatres had been dropped by sale, lease, cancellation or lapses of operating agreements.

The bulk of the expansion since 1935 is laid to management of the larger circuits by operating agreements with Paramount. Following are estimated totals of theatres added to these circuits: Interstate Circuit, Hoblitzelle, 40 theatres; E. I. Sparks, 20; A. H. Blank, 35; M. & P.. New England Theatres, 30; B. & K., 25; Wilby-Kincey, 30; Lucas & Jenkins, 15; Saenger, 40; Minnesota Amusements, 20; Malco, 20; Comerford, 12; miscellaneous, 100.

MGM Hires Cartoonists

Cartoonists are being signed at a rapid rate for the new MGM cartoon unit, now being built at a cost of $200,000 and scheduled to open on August 16. Fred C. Quinby, in charge of short subjects for the company, is interviewing and signing artists and technical talent.

Projection Book Issued

Kinematograph Publications, Ltd., of London, has published a revised edition of "The Complete Projectionist," by R. Howard Cricks, F.R.P.S. The volume explains projection theory and practice in detail and discusses repair problems.

Two Millions Offered to End Paramount Suits

A proposal for a $2,000,000 cash settlement of the recovery actions brought by the Paramount trusteees against former officers of the company has been made to Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount.

Mr. Griffis will submit the proposal to Arthur Ballentine, counsel to the Paramount trustees, in London this week with the possibility that it may be acted upon within the next few days.

The actions were brought by the Paramount trustees in 1934 and seek recovery of salaries paid former officers "in excess of a reasonable amount" and also the return of sums alleged to have been lost through the redemption by the company of guaranteed stock repurchase agreements granted during the years 1927-31 for purposes of expansion.

The proposal for a settlement by the 24 defendants would aggregate payments of about $2,000,000. It is likely that even if the plan is approved in principle by the trustees, discussions would have to be held as the trustees are said to insist upon one lump payment while some defendants favor staggering payments over a number of years. In addition, the trustees may object to the settlement on the ground that it is inadequate.

Under the tentative agreement, associates of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are to pay $600,000 while other defendants, including Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, Sam Katz, Jules E. Brulatour, Frank A. Bailey, and the estate of Emil Schauer, would pay proportionate sums totaling over $1,200,000, it is reported.

Selznick Men Shifted

Selznick International has promoted Mason Litson from location manager to unit manager of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." Harvey Foster has been made first assistant to Director William A. Wellman on the Selznick production, "Nothing Sacred," and Richard Van Enger has joined the company to become assistant film editor on the same production. Hal C. Kern, film editor-in-chief for Selznick, is forming the largest Technicolor stock library in the world with 65,000 feet already assembled.

Texas Circuit Adds Four

Interstate Circuit, largest group in Texas, has acquired four additional theatres, giving the circuit a total of 122 houses. The Texas and Aggie, both in Arlington, were purchased outright recently. The Palace and Plaza, in San Marcos, were taken over under a partnership arrangement with its former owner, F. W. Zimmerman, who will continue as manager.

F & M Adds Script Department

Fanchon and Marco has added a department to its New York agency for the handling of radio and film scripts. The move was the result of insistence by advertising agencies that radio scripts will not be considered unless direct rights have been assured.

ROBERT TAYLOR

"THE PRESS AGENT"

This is a montage of a little of everything that goes into the daily life of a press agent. The montage closes with a stock shot of a big city room . . . over which is superimposed the floor dial of an elevator showing the elevator's rise from ground level to the eighteenth floor. Just as the montage ends we dissolve to the doors of the elevator and ROBERT TAYLOR exits and walks across the office building hall to a door.

(He approaches the door on which is lettered: "EDITORIAL ROOMS")

Taylor goes through the door into a reception room where we find HELEN TROY at a switchboard:

TAYLOR:

> I'd like to see the motion picture editor . . . if you don't mind . . .

The girl is all a'twitter—she has an idea . . . and yet . .

TROY:

> Why certainly, mister . . . Gee . . . Why . . . Right through that door . . . Gee . . . But you look like Robert Taylor . . .

TAYLOR:

> I am Robert Taylor.

(He starts through the door on which is lettered "MOTION PICTURE EDITOR") Beyond Taylor we see the editor at his desk. This is an ultra modern office—class written all over it . . . Smartly-framed pictures of film stars adorn the walls.

EDITOR:

> Bob Taylor! Well . . . This is something . . . Usually we fellows have to chase the stars . . . Now . . . You turn Press agent!

TAYLOR:

> Bill . . . It's like this . . . I'm so enthusiastic about "Broadway Melody of 1938". . . It's so chock-full of entertainment...It has so many great players... That I've asked permission to tell theatre-goers . . . Through your newspaper . . . That it's the greatest musical M-G-M ever made . . .

BILL:

> That's fine . . . But . . . Show me!

TAYLOR: (Opening a brief case . . takes a picture from it . . . and tosses it atop the Editor's desk.)

(As Taylor tosses the still . . . we cut to a close insert . . . in action . . of Taylor's hand completing the toss . . . and the still in full view hitting the Editor's desk. This still is an actual blown-up frame of the scene we are going to reveal. The camera trucks down on the still until it fills the screen.)

(Over this still we hear Taylor off-screen:)

> Here she is! The Queen o' Taps . . . ELEANOR POWELL . . . And with her George Murphy . . . My rival for Eleanor's affections . . . I'm not doing so well in my pursuit of Eleanor . . . But . . . George is "feelin like a million"!

(Here the still comes to life . and Eleanor and George do a bit from "Feelin' Like A Million".)

TAYLOR:

(Now he tosses another still upon the desk . and off-screen we hear Taylor:)

> Ever hear of Judy Garland? . . . You'll be hearing plenty about her from now on. And that grand trouper who needs no introduction . . . Sophie Tucker. The man with the lolly-pop is Barnett Parker . . . among the funniest! Sing, Judy, Sing!

(Still comes to life and the three sing a bit from "EVERYBODY SING")

TAYLOR: (Excitedly)

> That's enough, Judy, we have other pictures to show.

(Taylor picks up the picture . . . and tosses another still on the desk . . . . . this time he places the still upright against a desk lamp . . . and we truck up on the insert from the eyes of the Editor)

TAYLOR: (Over still truck-up)

> Three guesses—but you'll only need one of them! It's lanky, loose-jointed Buddy Ebsen . . . dancier than ever—

(After Ebsen does part of the routine . . we "freeze" the action . . . and Taylor picks up still . . . puts it away . . . and removes four or five stills from the brief case one at a time tossing them on the desk . .)

TAYLOR:

> You'll never forget Robert Wildhack . . . The "Snorer" of last year's "Broadway Melody"! Here's Charley Grapewin—he's always good for a laugh—Billy Gilbert "stops the show" every time he's on . . . And here now . . . I've got so many pictures I almost forgot Robert Benchley. Hold on there "Snorer" I'm going to give you all a chance!

(Continuing the Scenario of the Short-Subject-Trailer ROBERT TAYLOR as "THE PRESS AGENT")

(Now we utilize a four-way split screen . . . giving each of these four players about five or six feet of pantomime action . . . the stills have been so placed on the editor's desk as to place the four in exact screen proportions to allow this trick)

(Taylor scoops up the four stills. In the shuffle of pictures . . . Bob drops one . . . the Editor picks it up . . . Bob reaches for it . . . Editor holds it away—)

EDITOR:
What's this?

(It is the picture of Bob and Eleanor in the swing on the roof.)

TAYLOR:
I didn't mean to show you that one . . .

(And this picture comes to life . . . Bob and Eleanor sing—)

(at the end of the song . . .)

EDITOR:
So . . . you sing a song of romance . . .

(Bob lets the line go by . . .)

TAYLOR:
Here's another picture . . . Hold on Bill . . . I seem to be in that one too . . . You see it's like this . . . I've just finished telling off Binnie Barnes . . . who is Raymond Walburn's quick-tempered horse-racing wife . . . But she had it coming to her . . . And now big butter-and-egg-man Walburn is about to tell me off!

(Still comes to life for telling-off scene)

EDITOR:
Okay, Bob! What about Charles Igor Gorin—I understand M-G-M has a great new singing find in this young man!

TAYLOR:
Right you are! Take a look!

(Still comes to life for a bit of the song in the Barber Shop)

EDITOR:
And isn't Willie Howard in it?

TAYLOR:
I'll say he is . . . But who's the press agent . . . You or me?

EDITOR:
Okay . . . I'm back in character. But you've got me talking about "Broadway Melody"

TAYLOR:
And now just a peek and that's all . . . The big number . . . "Your Broadway and Mine". Eleanor Powell tapping . . . George Murphy dancing . . . Sophie Tucker torching . . . Charles Igor Gorin and Judy Garland singing . . . Buddy Ebsen shuffling . . . and the Whiteway Beauties in Cellophane—well—see for yourself.

(Big number)

EDITOR:
What a show . . . I'd call it next year's biggest musical . . . Today!

TAYLOR:
And you're not wrong . . . That's what everybody's going to say about "Broadway Melody of 1938". See you opening night!

EDITOR
Thanks, Bob! I've got enough material for eighteen front page banner lines.

TAYLOR: (As he exits from the door . . . with editor slipping paper into typewriter . . .)
What do you mean eighteen banner lines . . . I'd say a hundred and eighteen!

(As Taylor exits he bumps bang into Sophie Tucker . . . dressed in the smart suit she wears in the "EVERYBODY SING" number. She . . . too . . . is carrying a brief case . . . just about to enter the Editor's office!)

TAYLOR:
What . . . You, too!

TUCKER: (With a big take . . .)
Scooped . . . again!

(Fade out)

At the end . . . to sock home the title and the cast—

HEAR BILL TO OPEN AIR TO ALL VIEWS

Three measures designed to insure greater freedom of speech on the air have been introduced in Congress, under the sponsorship of the American Civil Liberties Union, by Senator Lewis Schwellenbach, of Washington.

According to the Liberties Union, "the bill would, in principle, extend to controversial public issues the same guarantees of fair treatment as the law now requires for political candidates." Specifically, the measures would obligate radio stations to set aside regular periods for uncensored discussion of controversial issues on a non-profit basis and would give equal time to the various exponents of such issues.

A campaign is being undertaken to urge civic, educational and religious support of the bill which is expected to be given a public hearing at this session of Congress.

Skouras Theatres are expected to assume management of seven of the late Jack Springer's theatres on upper Broadway, on Labor Day, with indications that RKO may acquire a partnership in the deal. Included in the group are the Symphony, Beacon, 77th Street, Stoddard and Thalia.

FIFTH FILM EXPOSITION IS OPENED IN VENICE

Dozen Prizes Posted, with Cup of Nations as Grand Award; Annual Event Started in 1932

by VITTORI MALPASSUTI
in Rome

The Fifth International Cinematographic Exposition of Venice opened on Tuesday of this week, offering the public 20 evening performances of selected motion pictures and the same number of daytime showings.

In selection of the product for exhibition, the committee took its cue from the introduction to the rules and regulations of the Exposition, as follows:

"The aim of the Exhibition is publicly to recognize and award prizes to those cinematographic works which aspire to true expressions of art, without any prejudice of nationality or of doctrine. The hospitality of the exhibition, as respects cinematographic art of every school and of every country, is such as to exclude from its manifestations any political interference."

The Prizes

The following prizes are being vied for:

Mussolini Cup for the best foreign film.

Mussolini Cup for the best Italian film.

Cup of the "Ministero Della Cultura Popolare" for the best foreign director.

Cup of the "Ministero Della Cultura Popolare" for the best Italian director.

Volpi Cup for the best actor.

Volpi Cup for the best actress.

Cup of the "Direzione Generale per la Cinematografia" for the best staged subject.

Cup of the "Istituto Nazionale Luce" for the best operator.

Cup of the "Partito Nazionale Fascista" for the best documentary film.

Cup of the "Istituo Internazionale per la Cinematografia Educetiva" for the best scientific film.

Cup of the "Direzione General per il Teatro" for the best cartoons.

The Cup of the Nations may be given to a film which already has taken some other prize.

These prizes will be awarded by an international jury composed of four members designated by the International Film Chamber and by the Delegates of the Nations not belonging to the Chamber, of four Italian members and three independent experts, under the chairmanship of the president of the exhibition.

Nobody may be a member of the jury who is in any way, directly or indirectly, interested in industrial or commercial cinematographic concerns.

The exhibition also will have this year a new theatre for the daytime shows, which in this way will be placed upon the same level as the night performances, which again will take place in the Gardens of the Luminous Fountains, by the sea.

In 1932 it first was decided to entrust to the Venice Biennial International Exhibition of Arts the task of selecting and presenting to an international public the manifold aspects of the complex art called cinematography.

The idea, fostered by the Biennial, was to show a series of films, chosen from an artistic standpoint and by the most prominent producers and the best directors in the world, and to present the pictures in the original form and language in which they came out of the studio.

The first exhibition of Cinematographical Art took place in August, 1932; about 40 films of eight countries were presented. The projections took place at night on a vast terrace on the sea. The Biennial then decided to make the exhibition a permanent institution.

The second exhibition was held in August, 1934, and added some daytime shows, including sub-standard films. Fifteen nations and 46 producers were represented; 26 representations were given, and 80 films were presented, among them two world premieres. Two cups were offered by Il Duce, one for the best Italian film and one for the best foreign film.

In 1935 the exhibition was changed from biennial to annual, and the participation of the different countries began to take an official form. Eighteen world premieres were shown out of 84 films sent by 12 nations, and these were distributed in 43 representations. The exhibition lasted 22 days.

With the fourth exhibition, held in 1936, official participation of the producing countries was defined in the following form: with a previous selection of the films made by the governments of the participating countries; with the institution of a committee for acceptation of the films, composed of official representatives of the nations, official representatives of the International Film Chamber and of the presidency of the exhibition itself; with the institution of "national soirés attended by representatives of the respective governments or by a member of the same, as in the case of Germany, represented by Dr. Goebbels.

The exposition's publicity committee quoted Jack Warner, production executive of Warner Bros., from an interview by a reporter of the Corriere della Sera as follows:

"I don't know what is most admirable, the organization of this exhibition, which is the most interesting cinematographic competition in the world, or the enthusiasm of the spectators."

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is not participating in the Venice Exposition as an association.

Drama

The more or less obvious first thing for a showman to do toward selling his picture to his public is to list in large and far flung letters the names Gary Cooper, George Raft, Henry Wilcoxon, Frances Dee, Harry Carey and such other members of the cast as are what may be called "hot" in the given locality. Important next steps are to describe the production as big, long in preparation, maritime in subject and setting, historically predicated and, above all, as a melodrama, since the big scene to which all others lead up is strong stuff, deliberately and directly, if adroitly, delivered.

The story is an original by Ted Lesser based on a century-old incident wherein a supposed slave trader riding a passenger liner, which is wrecked, takes charge of an overcrowded lifeboat and saves some of the panic stricken survivors by doing away, by drowning and pistol fire, with the remainder.

Henry Hathaway, director, has counterbalanced the sombre sacrifice which is the picture's distinguishing content, by dwelling intermittently on humorous incidents and developing individual characterizations. The screen play by Grover Jones and Dale Van Every capitalizes nineteenth century behavior consistently. There is a brief sequence early in the picture showing brutality practiced by slave traders, but the subject is dealt with only conversationally thereafter. Production is on a lavish scale.

Seen at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, The audience was visibly impressed during the screening, and had more than the usual amount of things to say about it, both ways, afterward.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Flight from Glory

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Last October RKO-Radio released "Without Orders," an aviation melodrama. Though listed in the Class B division, "Without Orders" proved a better attraction in many theatres, especially the smaller houses, than many Class A films. In the case of "Flight from Glory," which, following its preview, RKO-Radio attaches proudly are announcing as one of its B group, there is a distinct possibility that history will repeat itself.

Directed by the same man, Lew Landers, an interesting story surrounds "Flight from Glory." Allotted a minimum budget, with for the most part only stock company players assigned to the cast, the film, over the objections and much to the amazement of several departments closely akin to production, was made in twelve days. For a large studio this record of minimum hours spent is practically a miracle. Much as Landers' speed perturbed others, his insistence that the story could be told in two sets, an exterior and an interior, bothered them more.

But it has been done, and the best jury that anyone can get to pass a verdict, a preview audience in which the high bracket executives and stars were conspicuous by their absence, considered the film worthy entertainment.

With all the players delivering commendable characterizations, the motivation is a non-formula aviation story. Ellis runs a flying freight service in the Andes Mountains. The planes he uses are obsolete crates. His crew of pilots, Smith, Hanson, Jones, Hilton and Old Timer, realize that only by death may they expect to escape from serfdom under Ellis. To barren Delgardo come grounded flyer Wilson and his wife, Lee, to have their illusions of "orchids and moonlight" quickly shattered. As, one by one, several of the pilots fly to their death, the romantic side of the story, involving Lee, Smith and Hilton, settles into a concerted effort to get a woman out of a place where no woman should be. Hilton's sacrifice of his life galvanizes Wilson into action. Luring Ellis into a plane, he gives him a taste of the terror known by every pilot who has flown his planes. Committing suicide, he leaves Ellis to his own fate. The ending has Smith and Lee starting back to the United States.

As the preview audience considered it, the entertainment provided in this picture was right where it belonged—upon the screen. Cognizant that inconsequentials had been ignored, the audience at times was noticeably bored by the excessive dialogue, but the sensational flying more than made up for this shortcoming.

Sea Racketeers

(Republic)

Action Melodrama

The United States Coast Guard's constant war on smugglers provides the background of "Sea Racketeers," which Republic apparently has made an effort to lift above the ordinary classification of action melodramas, by virtue of new story angles. The picture has plenty of action to satisfy those fans who crave blood and thunder, yet it is designed to draw, also, those who like comedy and music with their screen gore and fights.

Marquee names are lacking, although the top players, Weldon Heyburn and Jeanne Madden, are supported by Warren Hymer, Dorothy McNulty, J. Carroll Naish, Syd Saylor, Lane Chandler and Bryant Washburn, all well known to theatregoers for previous appearances.

Weldon Heyburn and Warren Hymer are seen as "Jim" and "Spud," members of the Coast Guard, who room together. They are confronted with the problem of finding out who is smuggling furs into the United States. Jeanne Madden, as "Pat," of whom "Jim" becomes enamored, gets a job through "Toots," played by Dorothy McNulty, song-dance girl on the gambling boat, as a dancer-singer in the boat's revue. "Pat" is used as a dupe in the smuggling racket by "Durant," head of the smugglers, and in a series of rapid-fire events, the Coast Guard wins out, smashes the ring, "Jim" gets "Pat" and "Spud" gets "Toots."

Previewed at the Forum theatre, Los Angeles. A crowded house greeted this one loudly. Throughout the picture, the comedy went over so well that succeeding lines were lost in the laughter.—VANCE KING.

Love Under Fire

Comedy-Romance

In adapting this British stage play the Twentieth Century-Fox production crew again has followed that peculiar formula which, when previously used, has resulted in acceptable entertainment. Those who hew to the line and letter when they look at their screen entertainment undoubtedly will notice many faults and incongruities. Those, however, who go to theatres merely to be amused will very likely find "Love Under Fire" amusing.

One phase, in which the love interest is bound up, concerns a British miss who flees London to evade capture for a crime which she mistakenly believes she committed and a Scotland Yard officer instructed to track her down. The second concerns a young revolutionary officer, who, hard put to discover who stole a lot of jewels when a bank was looted, endeavors to pin the guilt upon the English girl. Interluding bits of comedy and musical specialties are contributed by a vaudeville troupe manager and his band of harmonica players. But as all are set down in an atmosphere of adventure, intrigue and danger, the whole blends into satisfactory, if complicated, screen material.

For personnel exploitation purposes, the picture features Loretta Young and Don Ameche, seen together in "Ramona" and "Love Is News." Other names whose localized importance individual exhibitors know are Borrah Minevitch and his harmonica band, Frances Drake, Walter Catlett, John Carradine, Harold Huber, Sig Rumann, Katherine DeMille and E. E. Clive. Clive delivers a choice comedy characterization and Huber is as important in the narration as are the leads.

On the production side, the substantiating detail which amplifies the comedy and melodrama as well as romance is set against a situation which all will identify as the Spanish revolution. Wisely, however, preparation and direction have elected to concentrate on comedy, and though there is realism and adventure their impact serves to intensify the humorous motivation.

Previewed in the Twentieth Century-Fox Studio projection room, Hollywood. The audience was composed exclusively of trade press and fan magazine reporters. Folk who like to consider themselves hard boiled and difficult to please all seemed to be so impressed with the film, despite its discrepancies and departures from the Hoyle of picture making.—G. M.

It Can't Last Forever

(Columbia)

Comedy

Columbia, in the present offering, has followed what recently has amounted to a Hollywood trend by introducing Ralph Bellamy, known to audiences as a sober and dependable hero, in his first comedy role, but has failed to give him a vehicle fast moving enough to serve as a fair test of his capabilities.

The somewhat forced and apparently unwarranted introduction of vaudeville and radio performers whenever the moment in the plot development seems auspicious retards the action to a degree not quite balanced by the compensatory utility of the device as exploitation.

Melodrama, suspense and love interest we present in their proper amounts, according to formula, in the story, which is otherwise without complication. A vaudeville booking agent, with the reluctant aid of his partner and through a publicity hoax which is the picture's only departure from credibility, builds for himself a reputation as a psychic, the Master Mind, and as such quickly acquires a following of millions of credulous radio listeners to whom he gives honeyed personal advice.

A powerful gangster sees in this following a fertile field for swindle and obtains access to part of the psychic's fan mail, to the writers of which he sells stock with the supposed recommendation of the Master Mind. The booking agent-psychic, learning of the misuse of his name, attempts to destroy his reputation as a soothsayer by making an incorrect prediction. He fails when his guess on a prizefight proves correct in every detail. Warned by the gangster, gun in pocket, that he cannot escape, the Master Mind uses the radio and his disciples in a simple solution of his difficulties which earns him the respect and, it is to be supposed, the love of the newspaper girl in the case.

Depending as it does on cast and treatment rather than on story or situations for comedy values, the action is benefited by the supporting work of Raymond Walburn and Robert Armstrong, both experienced in exciting risibilities, and names of exploitational value with those of Bellamy and Betty Furness. For emphasis there are also the singing and dancing acts and even a prizefight.

The first day audience at the Rialto theatre, New York, was receptive and laughed sufficiently to justify the comedy classification.—J. D. I.

Marry The Girl

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy

Making no pretense to be anything but wild comedy and performed by a group of top notchers, "Marry the Girl" provides plenty of names for the exhibitor. The picture has moments of great fun, but much of the comedy "misses the boat." Hugh Herbert, however, is consistently funny.

The story sets out to record the daffy doings of Herbert as the half-witted head of a newspaper syndicate, Mary Boland as his not too brilliant sister; Hugh O'Connell, comic strip artist; Mischa Auer, egomaniacal Russian; Allen Jenkins, gang leader; Alan Mowbray, eccentric psychiatrist; Frank McHugh, slow witted assistant to Herbert; Carol Hughes, Herbert's flighty niece, and sundry other characters.

When McHugh, secretary to Herbert, is made general manager of the syndicate, he becomes a pawn in the schemes of his associates. Mary Boland enlists his aid in quashing the romance between her niece, Miss Hughes, and Auer. The slow witted McHugh invariably brings the two together, so Miss Boland bundles Miss Hughes off to Mowbray's sanitarium on the pretext that Herbert is ill.

Miss Hughes is closely guarded to prevent any escape. In his usual muddling way McHugh brings Auer to her. Auer, however, transfers his affections to Miss Boland, who is flattered by his attention. Probably the funniest sequence of the picture comes at the sanitarium when O'Connell, recovering from a state of inebriation, draws cartoons on window shades, lamps and a nurse's uniform, while Herbert follows, collecting the cartoons to make a deadline. McHugh helps Miss Hughes escape and eventually they fall into the clutches of a gang. In the end Auer marries Miss Boland and McHugh and Miss Hughes plan a bridal march.

Reviewed at the Criterion Theatre, New York. A large early afternoon audience apparently enjoyed the picture. There was frequent laughter when Herbert was on the screen and occasionally when Auer was emoting.—P. M.

The Edge of the World

(Rock-British)

Realistic Melodrama

This is quite unusual screen material. It is akin to "Man of Aran" and to that other very sincere British picture, "The Turn of the Tide," in the fact that it aims to give a true picture or ordinary men and women, and a realistic presentation of man's struggle in the face of nature. Like "Man of Aran," it is magnificent in its settings and general pictorial values, and like "The Turn of the Tide" it avoids all the obvious appeals in its portrayal of a love interest which is seen in proper focus as an incident in a play in which the actors are not people, but a People.

Produced on the remote Scottish island of Foula, the picture is in essence the saga of a small community which, by fishing, farming and sheep-raising, has wrung a living out of a bare rock, lashed by the Atlantic and in rare touch with the outside world. A tribe in its customs, which include a "parliament" meeting on the cliff-top, this small group of hardy men and women see their existence threatened by the steam-trawlers which poach on their fishing grounds, by the failure of their crops, and by the call of the outside world to their younger members. In the end the gallant battle fails. The last scene of all is the evacuation of the island by the whole community, which seeks a new home on the mainland.

Individual melodrama plays its part in the picture. The son of the Elder wants to leave the island. His friend, who loves his sister, persuades him to let the matter be decided by a cliff-climbing contest. The would-be emigrant loses his life. His father refuses to allow the victor to marry his daughter, and the young man leaves the island. The girl bears a son in his absence. Sick with diphtheria, the child is carried through a raging sea to the nearest port and an operation in the cabin saves his life. The reunion of the young couple wins over the Elder to give his consent to evacuation of the island, but while the community, with its gear and animals, are loading the relief ship, the Elder, in search of a rare bird's egg, is dashed to death from the cliff.

It is impossible to overpraise the grandeur of the natural settings of "The Edge of the World." The cliffs are awe-inspiring in their bleakness; the reality of their danger is very obvious in the finely staged scenes of the climbing contest. Storms at sea, gale on land, mist that blots out the landscape; all these are finely shown, and are a very important part of the picture. Fascinating also is the authentic picture of primitive life; the small "kirk," the cliff-top discussion of community problems, the roped descent of those cliffs in search of strayed sheep, the small boats battling with mountainous seas. Rich character study also is there; few more impressive scenes have been filmed than the Elder's round of the island, "bidding" neighbors to his son's funeral. John Laurie as the Elder, Finlay Currie as the landlord's agent, Belle Chrystall and Niall Macginnis, all act well.

It is less a photoplay than a social document, but, wherever there is a welcome for the serious presentation of real life, in its more elemental aspects, "The Edge of the World" can, by special handling, probably be made an attraction of a very uncommon kind. It is emphatically a picture the exhibitor should view for himself, for it falls into no recognized categories.

Viewed at a trade show at the London Hippodrome. The reaction varied, but it was significant that applause was loud for some of the outstanding pictorial effects. All recognized the picture to be an achievement—and a problem.—BRUCE ALLAN, London.

Armored Car

(Universal)

Melodrama

From the usual depiction of police or G-men as the fighters for law and order, Universal here has turned to the drivers of money laden trucks.

The production's chief aim appears to be a presentation of proof that armored cars and their drivers are not easy prey for gangsters. Several attempts are made; all fail despite the use of dynamite, acetylene torches, and guns.

After a crew is killed in an explosion, officials of the armored car organization openly discharge one of their employees, Larry Wills, but secretly he is kept on the payroll as a private detective. Through his efforts the gang is taken into custody. The climax comes when Wills shoots the tires of a truck, preventing it from driving over a bridge under which dynamite has been placed.

Reviewed at the Globe Theatre, New York, where a late afternoon audience displayed keen interest by heaving audible sighs of relief when the hero saves his friends and is revealed as a detective rather than a gangster.—RAY BARNETT.

Paradise Isle

South Sea Romance

An authentic South Sea setting and a cast composed principally of natives lend charm to this story of the romance of a native girl and a white man. In tempo the picture is slow and possible plot developments are discarded in favor of what is practically a straight story of a simple romance, but the picture has a certain strength in the telling of it and it is greatly enhanced by its picturesque setting. It is an unassuming production that merits favor in many situations.

Based on the magazine story "The Belled Palm," by Allan Vaughan Ellston, the picture stars for the first time the native girl, Movita, who is remembered for her performance in "Mutiny on the Bounty." Warren Hull plays the blind white man who falls in love with Movita. William Davidson figures prominently in the proceedings, as does George Pilitz, a native, as a suitor of Movita.

"Kennedy," a painter who has lost his sight and is en route to Java to see a specialist, is shipwrecked. Washed ashore on the island of Samoa, he is discovered by "Ila," a native girl. The girl nurses him back to health. "Kennedy" is resentful of her attention, preferring to brood in solitude, but gradually he comes to depend on her and in time he realizes he loves her. "Ila" meanwhile has found a pearl with which she hopes to pay for an operation on his eyes.

"Hoener," a trader, inveigles a beachcomber to pose as the specialist and obtain the pearl. The beachcomber tries to double-cross "Hoener." They are both slain in a fight. "Tono," in love with "Ila," hoping that once "Kennedy" sees again he will leave the island, sets out for the specialist. The operation is successful. "Kennedy" finds his love for "Ila" is all-important and he returns to her.

Gobsek

(Amkino)

Melodrama

A program note for this dramatization of Honore de Balzac's novel of the early 19th century Parisian money-lender, whose single obsession was the power over human souls which he derived from gold, refers to a stray quotation from Karl Marx in which the author of "Das Kapital" used the French writer's character, Papa Gobsek, as a symbol of predatory usury. From this the note infers that the story is a history of the origins of "what is now known as the banking industry."

Beyond this, however, the picture itself is less a case against the capitalists than a competent and realistic psychological study of a warped mind. The author's mood of futility and irony for the most part is carried out faithfully in acting and direction by the Moscow Art Theatre cast headed by Leonid Leonidov, but the photography, lighting and makeup frequently fail to reach the standard of technical progress evidenced in other Soviet productions.

The starkly realistic and unrelieved melodrama unfolds the story of how the money-lender by dark and devious methods gathers into his hands the strings through which he controls the lives of half of Paris, rich and poor. A young law clerk whom he befriends becomes obligated to handle his legal business for life, and a countess, yielding to the demands of her lover, forges her husband's signature to notes. Contradictory facets in the money-lender's character are emphasized by his friendly advice to the count as to how to rid himself of his unfaithful wife before she ruins him. At length the miser dies miserably, a tiny shaft of sunlight in his room seeming, in his delirium, living gold which he tries to grasp. The young lawyer as executor of the estate sees his opportunity to administer justice.

Fury Over Spain

(Modern Films)

War Scenes

A propaganda picture, produced under the supervision of the propaganda offices of the Confederacion Nacional de Trabajo (National Confederation of Labor) and the Federacion Anarquista Iberica (Spanish Anarchist Federation) government, this subject consists of a series of scenes depicting the horror and destruction of war, with sound of machine gun, rifle and cannon fire. A narrator describes the happenings from a Loyalist standpoint.

Scenes of the Loyalist army firing upon the Rebels are preceded by others depicting the abdication of Alphonse and mass meetings in squares. After the outbreak of war, the mobilization of the Loyalist forces is shown.

Buenaventura Durruti, Loyalist general, is the one central figure of the picture. He is shown repeatedly as he prepares his followers for battle. Numerous shots of the fighters leaving by truck and on foot are included, along with innumerable scenes of bullet-riddled houses, shattered buildings and slain soldiers stretched out in the streets and fields.

"Fury over Spain" cannot be classified as entertainment for a motion picture theatre.

Previewed in a New York projection room before its opening at the World Theatre. The small group that witnessed the pre-showing accepted the film without comment.—R. A.

Action for Slander

(London Films-United Artists)

Problem Melodrama

Suspense value is to be found in this story of a man, unjustly accused of cheating at cards, who is driven into hiding and finally brought to a decision to end his own life by a "whispering campaign." The action which he finally takes to rehabilitate himself leads to one of those court climaxes popular with producers and theatrically effective. Characterization is on a high level and the humorous relief is excellent in a technically first class British effort.

There are considerable exploitation values, in the theme of a life ruined by innuendo, in the fact that a poker game is replayed in court in order to demonstrate that cheating was technically impossible in the circumstances, and in the situation that the action for slander is really a life and death matter, the plaintiff having decided to shoot himself if he loses.

Major George Daviot's wife Ann leaves him, owing to signs of a liaison between him and Josie, wife of his fellow-officer Captain Bradford. At a country-house party Daviot is accused of cheating at poker by a drunken fellow-guest. The charge is supported by Bradford in revenge. Daviot is asked to resign from his club and his rank. He is about to shoot himself when his wife persuades him, for her sake, to take action for slander. In court Bradford is challenged to show exactly how Daviot cheated. When it is proved that he could not have been manipulating the cards, Daviot wins his case.

Tim Whalen has directed with skill. The court scene, despite the fact that the judge is brilliantly played by Morton Selden as as eccentric, is not completely convincing, but the atmosphere of suspense has been admirably maintained up to that point.

The principals are Clive Brook, Ann Todd, Margaretta Scott, Francis Sullivan, Arthur Mergetson, Ronald Squire and Anthony Holles.

It was an audience success at the trade show at the Adelphi theatre, its story values obviously gripping.—BRUCE ALLAN.

Porky's Railroad

(Vitaphone)

Very Good

A very entertaining "Looney Tune" cartoon, this subject has Porky the pig as the old and faithful engineer on the railroad. Advised by the superintendent that his services are no longer required and chagrined by the sneering remarks of the engineer of a streamlined train, Porky challenges him to a race. The junk heap that Porky uses as an engine is no match for the streamlined engine but an enraged bull is of service and Porgy wins the race, is reinstated and becomes engineer of the streamliner.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Narrated by Howard Claney.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Interesting

As the title suggests, this picture is a behind-the-scenes exposition of the steps taken in preparation for a screen test. A test director (Charles Brokow) sees a stage performance in which Kay Hughes is playing. He invites her to try out for motion pictures. Miss Hughes is coached in motion picture technique, rehearses a scene from a picture she has seen, and is assisted in her general preparations by a hairdresser, a wardrobe mistress and a make-up man. The test is made with Cesar Romero playing opposite Miss Hughes. Of course, after it is screened in the projection room, Miss Hughes signs a contract. Running time, 20⅔ minutes.

Everything is going smoothly when two kittens decide to have a little fun. In a short time the house is a mess and when Mrs. Cat returns she throws out the pig and his helpers while the kittens innocently look on. Running time, 6 minutes.

A Crime-Doesn't-Pay Number

A virulent expose of the racket of rustling stolen and spoiled meat into city butcher shops serves as exciting material for the latest "Crime Doesn't Pay" number. Production, direction and acting are of the first order. J. Carrol Naish plays the chief mobster whose business results in citywide ptomaine poisoning. The material makes excellent screen entertainment for the adult audience but not for the kiddie matinee show—Running time, 21 minutes.

In honor of Roscoe Ates, who is mistaken for "Simon Simon," champion mountain climber, a series of musical acts is presented in a mountain inn. Fox and Lui do a Swiss folk dance; Ginger Dulo sings, imitating Martha Raye; the Paul Florenz Girls dance; Campbell's Beaux and Belles harmonize, and Margaret Fetty keeps the supposed mountain climber entertained by sitting on his lap. But when the innkeeper announces that "Simon Simon" is to climb the highest mountain in the Swiss Alps the next day, Roscoe Ates unbuttons his fur coat and reveals he is "California's best life guard." Running time, 10 minutes.

Wayward Pups

(MGM)

Splendid Cartoon

Some decidedly comic and clever cartoon business has been drawn to picture the events that befall the two playful pups when they venture beyond the protecting walls of their kennels. Their encounter with a rapacious dog catcher is the customary cartoon animation but it is done breezily and attractively. The sequences wherein the doggies carry off a giant sized bone from under the protecting nose of a big mongrel make delightful footage to watch. A "mamma" cat whose feline heart becomes softened by the plight of the pups adds much to the fun. The many laughs should be appreciated particularly by all pooch owners.—Running time, eight minutes.

Wife Insurance

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

A well intentioned but not generally successful comic effort has been manufactured to show the woes and worries Leon Errol suffers under the menace of an insurance policy. Offering but a thin line of resistance to the cloying persuasions of his wife (Kitty McHugh) and the "battle-ax" bullyings of his mother-in-law (Dot Farley), Leon allows himself to be examined as a candidate for a policy. Unknown to himself, he is flunked in his physical test and, when he spies his spouse putting some nerve drops into his coffee, he very gallantly suspects the little woman of plotting to do away with him for his high premium. The customary bit of misunderstanding, general confusion and gun play complicate the remaining business. Somehow or other, the plot unravels satisfactorily for all those concerned but not, it is feared, for the audience.—Running time, 16 minutes.

Montague The Magnificent

Good

The adherents of the Bert Lahr school of humor need have no fear that the master is letting them down. The latest of the comedian's efforts is typical. Lahr is employed by a department store in the complaint office. When a customer complains the manager calls in Lahr and fires him, which appeases the customer. Adopting the name of "Montague," Lahr enters a phoney screen contest and wins it, paying a sum of money to the sponsors. Sent out to a Long Island studio Lahr barges into a set while the camera is turning. Fate takes a hand and Lahr becomes the leading man. But fate is fickle and Lahr ruins every scene, with the result he returns to the department store to be fired as many times as there are complaining customers. Running time, 18 minutes.

Bunker; P. and L. Felt; V. F. Nutan and W. A. Kendal; S. S. Brant. (The first page of an answer filed among acceptable replies has been lost; it was from San Francisco.)

H. B. Smith replies to Section A as follows: "Open circuiting or burn-out of speech coil renders speaker inoperative. Open circuiting may be caused by vibration opening one or both of the flexible leads to the coil, usually at the point where solder connection is made, in which case resoldering will effect remedy. Open circuiting may also be due to a coil being off center and by vibration gradually wearing away the insulation. This is rare however, as such a defect would ordinarily make itself evident at once in the form of a rattle, hence would be located and remedied before serious damage was inflicted. A speech coil may be burned out because of moderate but long continued overload, particularly where low frequencies abound. Also, it is not impossible that heat emanating from the field coil might aid in burning out a speech coil, or in loosening the cement fastening of speech coil to the diaphragm.

"The diaphragm is the most delicate part of a loudspeaker. Subject to continuous strain, it may become bent or warped, or it may lose its elasticity, whereupon rattles and raspy sound may result at certain frequencies."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 85

(A) What part does cool headedness and expert knowledge play when unexpected trouble bobs up during a show?

(B) How would you compare the probability of rapid clearing up of such trouble, as between the man who has studied his profession (said study based upon textbooks, projection literature, manufacturers' instruction books) and the man who does not believe in that sort of thing, but depends wholly upon "practical experience".

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

W. H. Edmonds answers Section B thus: "Speaker and transmission lines must be of sufficiently heavy wire to carry current without appreciable loss in the case of the field supply line. The voice coil line must offer low resistance and be adequately shielded. If the voice coil line be incased in BX, it (the BX) must be bonded to ground every two or at most three feet in order to insure against induction of 60 cycle hum in the speech circuit. Conduit, preferably grounded at both ends, is far the best protection for the speech circuit. Necessary cables connecting terminal box to speakers should be as short and direct as circumstances will permit. If they can be shielded, so much the better."

S. Evans and C. Rau say, "In connecting speakers into transmission lines, it is highly important that their impedances be properly matched, since any mis-match will cause production of poor quality sound. Precautions therefore should be taken in replacing speakers (especially if one of different make or type is to be introduced) that their impedance be adjusted to exactly match those already in use."

J. R. Prater says, "Speaker transmission lines must have exact impedance match or both volume and quality of sound will be impaired. Impedance matching taps, switches, transformers, or whatever equipments employed, must be selected with regard to this phase of the matter, and must be properly connected. Speakers of one make and type must not be replaced by those of different make or type without properly and very carefully matching them with the amplifier and other speakers they are to work with. Such matching may be done by employing either a separate matching transformer or by adjusting of the tap connections, if the equipment is provided with them.

"In houses using a stage, and therefore requiring speaker lines to be moved about, great care must be used to avoid physical injury to them, or to making improper conenctions during scenery change. Flying the cables along with the speakers is a wise precaution."

(C) Leo Cimikoski says, "Poling" speakers really means connecting their diaphragms in phase with each other so that their motion will all be in one direction at any instant of time, or when any given current alternation is impressed upon them. Any competent projectionist should be able to replace old cones with new ones, or when connecting speakers of different make or type, to know whether or no they are in correct phase.

"The best, most accurate method employed in phasing speaker units is by means of a battery. Suppose five speaker units are employed. Each may be tested as follows: A 4.5 volt battery similar to those employed in old Western Electric sound equipment is ideal for speakers that are connected in parallel. Disconnect either of the two wires leading to the voice coils and connect it to one battery terminal. Contact the opposite terminal with the amplifier lead.

"Warning: Do not hold this connection except just long enough to determine which direction the cone is shoved. Should three cones move in one direction and two in another, just reverse the voice coil connections of the two and all will be well. Should the speakers be connected in series, a larger dry battery will be necessary."

MAXWELL CIRCUIT NOW 325 STRONG; ABP GROSS PROFIT UP $1,796,735

MGM Loses Fight Against Fine for Default of Quota; Dinner Shows Subject to Entertainment Tax

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

OHIO CENSORS CUT ONE OUT OF 125

A censorial low was chalked up for the Ohio state board when only one deletion was ordered out of 125 reels reviewed in the week of July 23rd.

Associated British Pictures Corporation's trading profit of £1,265,829 ($6,329,145) in 1936-1937, its year's dividend on ordinary shares of 18 per cent, and the number of theatres controlled by the company, all register new highs in the annual report and balance sheet, submitted at the annual meeting Tuesday.

The previous year the gross profit was £926,482, the dividend for the year 12½ per cent, and the number of theatres owned or controlled 283, contrasted with 325 shown in the current report. Thus the 1936-'37 gross was $1,796,735 higher than for 1935-'36.

During the year covered, which ended on March 31st, 1937, the report states, 300,000 ordinary shares of 5 shillings value, were issued at a premium of £175,000, transferred to general reserve. It is understood, but not stated, that these are the shares issued to the Ostrer brothers in connection with ABP's deal for shares in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, the holding company controlling Gaumont-British. No reference is made in the report or accounts to the M&B investment. There is an item of £1,062,856 for "sundry trade investments" in the consolidated statement and in the balance sheet the item of "sundry investments—shares and debentures at or under cost" is £841,375 against £17,148 in the previous year.

The outstanding features of the figures are:

The gross trading profit shows an increase of £339,346.

Valuation of theatres has grown from £7,945,227 to £12,284,719, partly representing transfers from subsidiaries.

Sixteen features were produced at Elstree in the year and films in progress or completed are valued at £347,263, against £545,973.

Cash in hand or at bank is £425,533.

Investments in subsidiaries, including the share capital of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., and British Instructional Films, Inc., are £931,839 against £2,428,457. Associated British Cinemas, Ltd., British International Pictures, Ltd., and Wardour Films, Ltd., no longer figure in the accounts as subsidiaries, having been absorbed in the parent company.

The issued capital is £3,625,000 in 2,000,000 6 per cent first cumulative £1 preferred shares and 6,500 ordinary shares of 5 shillings value. Outstanding 5 per cent first mortgage debenture stock is, with interest accrued, valued at £3,465,897.

During the year £2,000,000 of 4½ per cent first mortgage debenture stock of Associated British Properties, Ltd., was issued at par "for the purpose of funding temporary finance employed in the expansion of the corporation's cinema activities." It figures as a liability of £1,984,300,

From the gross trading profit, after deduction of interests on loans and on mortgage stock, and allowance for income tax, a net profit of £869,644 is reached. The available total, with £88,998 brought in, was £958,643. Preference dividend took £91,500 and interim ordinary dividend of 7 per cent £86,734. From the final balance of £780,408, there is £175,000 allocated to reserve for depreciation and £375,000 to general reserve. Payment of a final dividend of 11 per cent on ordinary shares takes £134,062 and the amount carried forward is £96,346.

The corporation's general reserve now stands £1,750,000 and the reserve for depreciation £275,000.

Fined for Quota Default

New Empire, Ltd., the MGM owning company of the Empire, Leicester Square, shopwindow for MGM in London, was fined £15 and £10:10s costs at Bow Street police court for quota default in the year ended with September, 1936. Evidence was that 16.67 per cent of British films was shown in place of the statutory 20 per cent.

The defense was that the only British films available at certain times were of inferior quality and that they would have had a hostile reception. Cross-examining Walter Craddock, the Board of Trade representative, H. Sydney Wright, attorney for MGM, suggested that it was reasonable to assume, from the number of British production companies which had failed, that British films did not appeal to the public. He also suggested that West End audiences in particular were "very hostile" to British films.

Evidence to this effect was given by Charles Raymond, manager of the Empire, who quoted losses of £500 and £150 when British pictures were shown and said that, due to producers being tied to other West End theatres, only 70 or 80 out of 215 British films were available to the Empire. The magistrate ruled that the defendants had failed to prove that the default was beyond their control.

Recently, the Regal, Marble Arch was fined for default. It is an ABP house. At the same theatre a British picture was recently "laughed off" by a weekend audience. Complaints that West End audiences attack British films are common. It has been variously asserted that the hostility is shown only by Sunday audiences, from the East End, and that "claques" are employed by the American companies to discredit British films. The accusation regarding claques is not taken too seriously, but considerable point was made before the Moyne Committee of an assertion that some West End theatres in American control ran British films when only the cleaners were in the building, or that they chose them for derisory reasons. These assertions were warmly disputed by Sam Eckman, Jr., of MGM.

Tax on Dinner-Show

A high court decision last week ruled that the London Casino, the old Prince Edward theatre, now a dinner-revue house, must pay the entertainment tax. Charging a minimum 15/6 for a dinner, and providing a first class stage show without extra charge, the Casino claimed that it was exempt because it made no charge for admission. The Revenue authorities apportioned 8 shillings of the dinner charge for the entertainment and claimed tax on it, and the judge upheld the claim. The ruling establishes a precedent and there is panic among the various hotels running cabarets and all other establishments which offer a meal and amusement for an inclusive charge, though at present it is not thought they are involved. The Casino is talking of an appeal.

Averts Theatre Strike

The threatened strike of employees of Union Cinemas, Ltd., at the instance of the National Association of Cinema Employees, has been averted by the intervention of the industrial relations department of the ministry of labour. Following a conference called by the department it was stated that Union would consent to negotiate with the association about labour conditions.

The strike, of which seven days warning had been given by the Association, would have involved 178 theatres.

Against "Animals" Bill

Capt. Edmund Mac Michael, honorary director of the Performing and Captive Animals League, has petitioned the King against the Cinematograph Films (Animals) Bill, on the ground that it is a "fraud."

The bill, which is on the point of formally becoming law, prohibits the exhibition of films showing cruelty or employing cruelty in production. Capt. Mac Michael said it would leave the real evil untouched.

The Association represents all types of amusement enterprise but is, in general, the mouthpiece of the socalled legitimate shows.

Pleads Quality Clause

A deputation from the Manchester branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association was received at the House of Commons by a score of Members of Parliament for Lancashire constituences.

The meeting was arranged by J. F. Emery, M. P., who is a circuit proprietor in Lancashire. The case for the quality clause was given by Ken Nyman, vice-president of the CEA and others, and promises of support for the association's case were made by the members.

National Theatre Site

For three decades a national British theatre has been dreamed. This week the idea was brought a stage nearer fact with the purchase of a building site in South Kensington, London. The purchase has been made by trustees of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre Committee. The site cost £75,000 ($375,000), and the committee is now proceeding to raise an additional sum to build and endow a theatre.

Broadway Sees Two Premieres In One Week

Broadway this week witnessed two full-fledged arc-lighted motion picture "premieres," unusual even during the height of the mid-winter show season. Paramount introduced "Souls at Sea," at the Globe, on Monday evening, and Warners followed on Wednesday with "The Life of Emile Zola," at the Hollywood theatre. Both are two-a-day, reserved seat, advanced-scale roadshow performances.

While S. Charles Einfeld's advertising, publicity and exploitation departments at the Warner home office in New York were ballyhooing the opening of "Zola," special crews were working in the field to set the Warner "National Trade Exhibit," which will be held simultaneously in 31 key cities on August 23rd and 24th. The features to be shown at the exhibit, to press, church, civic and women's club leaders, are: "The Life of Emile Zola" starring Paul Muni; "Back in Circulation" with Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, and Margaret Lindsay; "It's Love I'm After" starring Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland; "Varsity Show" starring Dick Powell and Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians; "That Certain Woman" starring Bette Davis and Henry Fonda; and "Confession" starring Kay Francis, Basil Rathbone and Ian Hunter.

Warner Brothers to date have selected 24 theatres throughout the country for their exhibit, announced Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager. The theatres are:

Madison, Albany; Majestic, Boston; Court Street, Buffalo; Forest, Cincinnati; Lake, Cleveland; Cass, Detroit; Lawrence, Detroit; New Amsterdam Roof, New York; Aldine, Philadelphia; Schenley, Pittsburgh; Ambassador, Washington; Village, Toronto; Ponce de Leon, Atlanta; Melrose, Dallas; Dearborn, Chicago; Forest, Des Moines; Apollo, Kansas City; Fox West Coast Boulevard, Los Angeles; Lamar, Memphis; Bell, New Orleans; Ritz, Oklahoma City; Muse, Omaha; Oriental, Portland; and Ritz, Indianapolis.

The opening this week of "Souls at Sea" and "Emile Zola" gives Broadway the high number of three road showings on hand at the same time, with a fourth coming shortly. Paramount now has its "High, Wide and Handsome," at the Astor theatre, and MGM will bring in "The Firefly" in a few weeks.

Stars of stage, screen and radio as well as many prominent persons in other fields, attended the world premiere of Paramount's maritime film, "Souls at Sea," Monday evening at the Globe. There was quite some confusion, however, what with 100 pickets marching from the Horn and Hardart Automat restaurant next door. Negotiating the lobby, however, after much difficulty, were Barney Balaban, John W. Hicks, Neil Agnew, Abe Montague, Herbert Wilcox, Mrs. Adolph Zukor, Leah Walker, Charles Moskowitz, Alec Moss, Harry Charnas, W. G. Van Schmus, and others.

Unlike the Paramount opening, Warner Brothers went in heavily for city and state government names for their "Emile Zola" showing on Wednesday evening, with Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and his official city-hall staff, and Mrs. Herbert Lehman, wife of New York's Governor, accepting the elaborately engraved gold-scripted invitations of Warners to be on hand for the $5.50 opening.

Too, there were many more stiff shirts and summer evening dresses at "Zola," due to the company's insistence on formal attire.

"Dignified" was the observation of the trade on the elaborate advance campaign conducted by Warners for the production, with concentration placed on subdued typographical displays introducing the noted author and crusader for justice to those who had forgotten his story. In some of the advertisements appearing in the Metropolitan press, Warners even omitted cast and production credits.

A special broadcast was conducted at the opening by Martin Starr for Station WMCA, from 8:30 to 9:00 P. M. On Thursday, March of Time dramatized the opening over a Columbia Broadcasting System network.

In all, the company advertised "Zola" in the New York area more heavily than any picture since "Midsummer Night's Dream," but Mr. Einfeld discounted the $50,000 sum mentioned by the New York Sun as the budget total.

Films' Influence Is 'Clinic' Topic

The influence of the motion picture on public opinion in the United States, particularly as it relates to the ethics and spirit of America, will be the subject of extended discussion at the 1937 Williamstown Institute of Human Relations at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., from August 29th to September 3rd. The Institute is being held, as in 1935, under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, of which Dr. Everett R. Clinchy is director.

Edgar Dale, professor of research at Ohio State University, will speak on "The Motion Picture and Inter-Group Relations." At the second day's session the topic, "The Motion Picture and Its Responsibilities" will be discussed by Gerald B. Donnelly, associate editor of America, Fred Eastman, of Chicago Theological Seminary, and Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of Baltimore.

Hollywood has been asked to send speakers representing the producer, actor and writer grousp and is expected to comply, with Carey Wilson, of MGM, probably representing the writers. Newsreel companies have also been invited to participate to present their views on the effect of their product on public opinion.

UA Rental Plan Starts August 23

United Artists will inaugurate on August 23rd the advertising accessories rental plan announced by D. H. Buckley, vice-president, at the annual convention of the company last June.

Included in the rental plan are one sheets, three sheets, six sheets, 11 x 14 lobbies, 22 x 28 lobbies, 14 x 36 insert cards, 8 x 10 black and white stills, 8 x 10 color gloss stills. Accessories not included in the rental plan but purchasable outright as formerly are 24 sheets, window cards, heralds, slides and mats.

Savings range from 35 to 50 per cent over the old outright purchase system, the company claims.

"One distinct advantage of the plan," said Mr. Buckley, "is that it definitely eliminates the necessity for using substitute or makeshift advertising because it makes available the finest advertising accessories both as to quality and design at rental prices that are actually lower than cost."

49 Spend 19% More for Ads In Three Media

The 49 leading advertisers in the radio, magazine and farm publication fields laid out 18.8 per cent more for advertising during the first half of 1937 than they did for the corresponding period last year—a total of $60,643,680, Printers' Ink reports. These 49 companies, each of whom spent over $500,000 each, increased 36 per cent in radio, nearly 10 per cent in national magazines and 12 per cent in farm journals.

General Motors heads the list by a wide margin with a total of $5,851,459 in the three media. The next four are Procter & Gamble, $3,414,945; Standard Brands, $2,405,675; Ford, $2,326,919, and Chrysler Motors, $2,302,260.

MGM is preparing extensive campaigns for "The Firefly," which opened in Los Angeles last week and comes to New York early in September. The company also is preparing its fall and winter schedules with magazines, newspapers and billboards for promotion of thirty of the fifty or more pictures on its new season program.

Bartholomew's Career Halted

The film career of Freddie Bartholomew has been halted as a result of a court order obtained by MGM preventing the boy actor from performing for any other studio. Young Bartholomew's salary was stopped July 15th for "non-performance," his aunt and guardian, Millicent Bartholomew, refusing to permit him to perform unless the studio raised his weekly salary from the $2,000 it has offered to $2,500 demanded.

Miss Bartholomew contends that Freddie is unable to meet his obligations—income taxes, lawyers' and agents fees, contributions to the support of his family and his own personal maintenance—and still insure his future on less than $2,500 a week.

Judge Emmet H. Wilson granted the studio a temporary restraining order and directed Miss Bartholomew and the Union Bank and Trust Co., guardian of the boy's estate, to show cause August 13th why the order should not be made permanent.

In its petition, the studio charged that it had contracted for the actor's services at $350 a week and had voluntarily raised him to $1,100 weekly after his value was established in "David Copperfield."

Loew's and RKO In Expansion Moves

Negotiations are underway by Loew's for acquisition of four theatres in the New York area. In addition, two sites are being considered for construction of new theatres.

Three units will be added to the RKO circuit before the fall. They are the Roosevelt, acquired from Leo Brecher, the Central, in Yonkers, from H. Sussman, and the Republic, Brooklyn, will be transferred by Randforce September 3rd.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT PROPOSES RECIPROCITY IN ITS QUOTA PLAN

Footage Credit for Buying Foreign Rights of British Films Called Advantage to Several of the American Companies

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

A "reciprocity" plan features the British Government's thoughts on the new Cinematograph Films Bill, as evidenced in the Board of Trade's "White Paper," presented to Parliament for consideration in connection with the Bill, which is to be introduced in October or November.

The "White Paper" officially is titled "Proposals for Legislation on Cinematograph Films." It contains 24 paragraphs and a summary in 12 octavo pages and is sold at 2d (four cents).

Highlight provisions of the document, which with one important difference follows very closely the Draft Proposals previously issued by the Board of Trade, are as follows:

The Board of Trade accepts the principle that British films shall qualify for registration for distributor's quota on the basis that they have cost a certain minimum sum.

It rejects the principle that they shall qualify by means of a viewing test, but provision is made that low-cost films of "special entertainment value" may be viewed and passed for quota.

A new cost basis is established. Instead of total cost, labour costs (estimated to be half total cost) will be the standard.

A quota scale starting at 15 per cent for distributors and 10 per cent for exhibitors, in the first year of the new Act, will rise to 30 per cent distributors and 25 per cent exhibitors in ten years.

The "Reciprocity" principle is recognized, on a voluntary basis, and in the ratio of one British film purchased for abroad ranking for British quota, of the same footage.

A separate quota for short subjects is to be established, starting at 10 per cent for distributors and 5 per cent for exhibitors and rising to 20 and 15 per cent respectively.

Blind booking is made a statutory offence on the part of distributors only, and the penalties are increased. Exhibitors are freed of liability under this head.

Restrictions on advance booking will be continued.

The Board of Trade will have certain rights to vary quota scales, and the minimum cost scale, according to the trade situation.

Films costing three times the minimum will rank double for quota.

An examination of the new proposals clause by clause shows the practical application of the Government's plans. The references are to paragraphs in the summary of the white paper, published in full elsewhere in this issue.

A preliminary relief for exhibitors in the Quota Year 1937-38 is announced in (1). For this last year of the old (1927) Act, the exhibitor's quota is to be reduced from 20 per cent to 15 per cent, in order to meet the fact that "some disturbance in the supply of British films" is expected to follow the institution of the new form of registration, on a minimum cost basis.

Exhibitors, through their association, are vigorously in opposition to the Government proposals, and this temporary relief is not looked upon as an unmixed blessing, the view of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association being that it may obscure the ultimate effects, on exhibitors, of the new legislation.

The complete text of the British Board of Trade's "Proposals for Legislation on Cinematographic Films," embodied in the socalled "White Paper" presented to Parliament, begins on page 82.

The new Quota scales are set out in paragraphs (2) and (3) as 15 per cent distributors and 10 exhibitors in the first (1938-39) year of the new Act, 20-15 in the second year and "by stages over the ten years period," rising to 30-25 per cent.

The practical application of these provisions is as follows:

In the Distributor's Year April 1, 1938-March 31, 1939, distributors will have to handle:

15 British films for every 85 foreign films. In footage, 15,000 feet British for 85,000 feet foreign.

In the Exhibitor's Year Oct. 1, 1938-Sept. 30, 1939, exhibitors must show:

10 British films for each 90 foreign films. In footage, 10,000 British feet for each 90,000 foreign.

In the Distributor's Year April 1, 1939-March 31, 1940, distributors must handle:

20 British films for every 80 foreign films. In footage, 20,000 British against 80,000 foreign.

In the Exhibitor's Year, October 1, 1939-Sept. 30, 1940, exhibitors must show:

15 British films for every 85 foreign. In footage, 15,000 feet against 85,000 feet.

In the Distributor's Year April 1, 1940-March 31, 1941, and the Exhibitor's Year October 1, 1940, Sept. 30, 1941, the first of the "increases by stages" in both distrbutor's and exhibitor's quotas will begin to operate. The exact schedule of these increases is not stated in the White Paper, but their ultimate result will be that:

In the Distributor's Year 1947-1948 and the Exhibitor's Year for the same date (the Distributor's year ending in March, and the Exhibitor's in September) the position will be that:

Distributors will have to show 30 British films for every 70 foreign and exhibitors to show 25 British films for 75 foreign. The footage proportions will be 30,000/70,000 and 25,000/75,000.

These calculations may serve a useful purpose in emphasizing the fact that the statement of Quota as a percentage of total films handled or exhibited understates the obligation which lies upon the distributor in terms of British films to be acquired in percentage of foreign films handled.

The actual obligations upon the distributor of American films are, in relation to his own product:

YEAR	A	B
1938-9	15.00	17.64
1939-40	20.00	25.00
1947-48	30.00	42.85

A—Official quota.
B—Percentage of British films to America.

Similarly, the obligation on the exhibitors, expressed as a percentage of British films to foreign films, increases from 11.11 to 33.33, as against the official "percentage of all films" which increases from 10 per cent to 25 per cent. The differences revealed by a restatement of the Quota in this new form are important if it is remembered that the danger of a shortage of American product is one of the main reasons for the exhibitors' opposition to the minimum cost clause.

The minimum cost provision is stated in paragraph (4), which specifies that, to be entitled to registration for distributor's quota, a British feature film must have cost £1 a foot and a minimum of £7,500 "expended in labour costs."

An entirely new basis of computing film costs is here added to the principle, itself new in legislation, that cost shall be the deciding factor in conferring the right to registration as a British film.

The White Paper states that the Government "accepts the principle" of a minmum cost of £2 a foot and £15,000 (which were embodied in that form in the Draft Proposals) and adds that "labour costs approximate on the average to half the total cost of a film." It selects the new method of computing cost because "The Board of Trade have had considerable experience of administration" of the provision that 75 per cent of all labour costs must, under the 1927 Act, go to British subjects. This provision it intends to continue.

Major Controversy Seen

The institution of a minimum cost and the rejection of a viewing test (with the proviso that viewing may be claimed for inexpensive films of special entertainment value) is the feature of the White Paper about which major controversy will rage in the industry and in Parliament.

The principle of a minimum cost is opposed without qualification by the CEA, which asserts that it will lead to the withdrawal of American "B" product, a reduction in the number of British films and absorption of what films are made by the circuits. An impetus to "Americanization" also is seen both by the CEA and by the smaller independent producers and distributors, who object to the "£15,000" basis and ask that special provision be made for small distributors.

Accepting the principle of the cost clause, most American distributors object to its imposition in conjunction with a footage quota rising to as high a figure as 30 per cent. The Kinematograph Renters Society, speaking for these companies, wants the quota translated into cash terms and liberty given to any company to spend the money on a few big pictures.

Aim to Prevent Evasion

In basing its minimum on labour costs, the Board of Trade undoubtedly has in mind to make evasion more difficult. The governing clause of the old Act, which it is intended to repeat, lays it down that:

"Not less than seventy-five per cent of the salaries, wages and payments specifically paid for labour and services in the making of the film (exclusive of payments in respect of copyright and of the salary or payments to one foreign actor or actress or producer, but inclusive of payments to the author of the scenario) shall have been paid to British subjects or persons domiciled in the British Empire."

In operating this clause the Board of Trade has compiled a very complete schedule of payments which are permissible and it has the experience to conduct a very complete check of "labour costs." In concentrating on these, it rules out the possibility of inflated charges being made for story rights, location expenses, costume, research, publicity and the score or more other items which may find a place in a production budget.

On the other hand, it is plain that the £15,000 minimum accepted in principle by the B.O.T. is imposed by the clause as suggested only if in fact labour costs are exactly half of total costs. If cast costs are heavy in proportion to other items, a certificate may be obtained for a film costing in all £10,000 to £12,000, of which £7,500 are labour costs. If location expenses or sets run away with most of the money, a film costing £16,000-£20,000 may be denied registration because "labour" took less than £7,500.

Effect on Americans

Another effect of this clause is that American companies importing more than one Hollywood celebrity to make a big British picture may find it necessary to increase labour costs all around in order to maintain the "75 per cent British" proportion. It is easily conceivable that American companies, planning super production in England, should have desired to make pictures in which a major part of the cost would have gone in stars, director, story and setting, and that they hoped for relief from the "British labour percentage" rather than more stringent charges.

That all British films rank for Exhibitor's Quota, whatever their cost, is stated in paragraph (5). For many reasons this condition is regarded as more or less valueless by exhibitors. It is generally accepted that, unless a film is guaranteed distribution, it will not be made; distributors have little use, with few exceptions, for a film which does not obtain distributor's quota rights.

Cost and Quota Value

In paragraph (6) there is partial acceptance of the American argument that the quota value of a film should be governed by its cost. It is laid down that a film costing £3 a foot and a total of £22,500 for labour costs shall rank for twice its length as distributor's quota. The Double Quota principle is new, and regarded as very important.

Criticism of this concession, on the part of distributors, will be that it does not go far enough. Spending £45,000 on three "minimum" British pictures, the distributor gets a three-picture coverage. Spending it on one, he gets only a two-picture coverage and, to obtain his three British certificates, he must spend at least another £15,000, making his three-picture cost £60,000 instead of £45,000. If he spends £60,000-£100,000 on a British picture he gets no corresponding Quota coverage.

Exhibitors criticize the proposal on the ground that it represents a reduction of effective exhibition footage. They urge that a "double Quota" film for the distributor should be a double Quota film for the exhibitor.

Clash with British Studios

Concessions in the House of Commons on this clause, making the increase of quota value proportionate, or approximately proportionate, to the cost of a film, up to a total of £100,000, would go far to meet the fundamental objection of American companies to the proposals of the White Paper, but in meeting this quite logical claim the Board of Trade would be up against the British studio interest, which wants its space to be used for a large footage, and the British exhibitor, who would argue that he could not comply with his Quota in face of a large reduction of output, however balanced by improved quality.

FILM EDITOR STARTS COLOR STOCK LIBRARY

Hal C. Kern, film editor of Selznick International, has started compiling a library of stock shots in Technicolor gathered from all parts of the world.

He already has about 65,000 feet, representing atmospheric and action shots. He is increasing the library at the rate of about 2,000 feet per week and plans to make it the largest in the world.

It is a general anticipation that the vital debates in the Commons will center upon this clause and the minimum cost proposals in general.

The Reciprocity Principle

The principle generally described as Reciprocity is dealt with in clause (7). It is provided that if a distributor buys, for not less than £20,000, foreign rights for one market of a British film costing £22,500 for labor costs, he is credited with quota coverage, in England, of the same footage value.

Several points in this provision call for comment. In the first place, although the type of British film to which the concession is limited is the "Double Quota" feature, the distributor who buys foreign rights only, it seems, acquires British Quota value up to the real footage.

This means that an American company buying a British "£45,000" film for U. S. release gets only half the value, in Quota, that it would get if it bought it for British release.

If the company buys it both for U. S. and for U. K., it gains nothing that it would not get by buying for either singly, since it is specifically stated that where a film has been used for the "export" Quota it cannot be used, by any distributor, for British Quota.

That no distributor will be allowed to meet more than half his Quota obligations by means of the "Reciprocity" provision appears to be intended, in conjunction with the fact that only single Quota value is given to a double Quota film, to maintain the supply of British pictures, in England, from American companies.

Sees Advantage for Americans

The probable workings of this clause are still somewhat obscure, but it would appear likely to operate to the advantage of such companies as United Artists, which already releases British pictures in the U. S. on a large scale, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has an ambitious British production program, Twentieth Century-Fox, which has similar plans, and various other U. S. companies which have found place for occasional British pictures in America and which in future can reduce their British Quota obligation by continuing the practice. Although an objection to "export Quotas" on principle has been voiced by several American executives, the voluntary basis of this proviso seems to make it unlikely that it will be protested either by the industry or through official channels. Various Americans in London see the best hope of a practicable solution of the whole Quota problem in reciprocal arrangements between major British producers and major American distributors.

Flexibility in the provisions both as regards the Quota scale and the figure of minimum cost is promised in paragraph (8), which states that the Board of Trade shall have powers to modify each, "at certain defined intervals" and within fixed minimum and maxima. The Board of Trade will operate by order, "subject to confirmation by Parliament." It is given similar powers in regard to short films.

Short Subjects Quota

The Shorts Quota (9) is to be 10/5, rising to 20/15, and there is to be neither a cost clause nor a viewing test at the start, but the Board of Trade is to have powers to institute either if it thinks necessary. The separate quota for shorts is new.

The remaining features of the White Paper may, with one exception, be shortly summarized as follows:

All films except newsreels and "commercial advertisements" are to be eligible for Quota.

The Advisory Committee of the Board of Trade is to be retained, the official Films Commission suggested in the Moyne Report to be rejected, as it was in the Draft Proposals.

All films, long and short, will be trade shown.

Ten per cent of foreign film, or twenty per cent of studio scenes, will be allowed in a British film.

The scenario writer need no longer be British.

Booking Restrictions

The important new regulation has to do with the booking restrictions section of the old Act (13) which are retained with an alteration which makes blind booking an offense on the part of a distributor only (instead of both distributor and exhibitor as at present) increases the penalties by an unstated amount and imposes the obligation on the distributor, on registering a film (whether British or foreign) of making a statutory declaration that it has not been blind booked.

This suggestion will be resented by American distributors. The Moyne Report suggested such a clause, putting forward a penalty figure of £250 and a proviso that on a second offense the distributor's license should be liable to cancellation.

The KRS objected very strongly to this and a further "Moyne" suggestion that similar penalties should be applied to block booking. This has not been adopted.

The effect of the clause will be that any exhibitor who alleges that he has been forced to book pictures "blind" in order to obtain any special feature or features will be enabled to put his facts before the Board of Trade without himself incurring penalties.

Continuing the existing limitation of advance booking to six months, and rejecting the exhibitor plea for inclusion of provision against redundancy (overbuilding), the White Paper confirms intentions already announced in the Draft proposals, or in discussions with trade interests.

20th-Fox, Cocalis Settle

The action of Twentieth Century-Fox against Sam Cocalis for accumulated overages on four pictures ended amicably in an out of court settlement effected between William Sussman, eastern division sales for the distributor, and Mr. Cocalis.

Prizes totaling $5,000 have been awarded winners of Republic's sales contests, recently closed. Checks were presented last week by J. J. Milstein, vice-president in charge of sales.

THE QUOTA "WHITE PAPER"

Following is the complete text of the socalled "White Paper," presented to Parliament by the president of the Board of Trade and enumerating the Board's "Proposals for Legislation on Cinematographic Films":

1. The Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, aimed at stimulating the production of British films by imposing an obligation on the renters* of films to acquire and distribute and on the exhibitors to show a proportion ("the quota") of British films during each year of the currency of the Act.

2. The last year of the renters' quota under the Act expires on 31st March, 1938, and on the exhibitors' quota on the 30th September, 1938. The Board of Trade accordingly in March, 1936, appointed a Departmental Committee under the Chairmanship of Lord Moyne to advise on any measures that might still be required to promote the production, renting and exhibition of British films. That Committee in its report (Cmd. 5320) made in November, 1936, referred to the "absolute necessity for legislative action to maintain and establish the industry" and added that "the evidence has been virtually unanimous in favor of a continuance of the legislation of the Act of 1927 as the most suitable method of protection." They recommended that the requirement of quotas on the renting and exhibition of British films should continue for a further period of ten years.

3. Parliament was informed on 22nd April that His Majesty's Government had accepted the recommendation to continue the quotas and would propose legislation for that purpose. It was at the same time stated that His Majesty's Government proposed to consult further with the trade before deciding on the details of their proposals. Since then, further discussions have taken place, and the trade have been encouraged to hold a series of joint meetings in the hope that they could arrive at agreement, at least on fundamental principles. They have not found it possible, however, to reconcile their divergent views and His Majesty's Government have now formulated proposals for legislation which are outlined in the succeeding paragraphs. It is their intention to submit to Parliament a Bill based on these proposals in the next session of Parliament.

Cost and Viewing Test

4. A quality test for British films.—The most widely expressed criticism of the existing legislation has been directed to the poor quality of some of the British films produced to comply with the requirements of the renters' quota. The Departmental Committee to these films—commonly known in the trade as "quota quickies"—said (para. 54):

> "In order to obtain the requisite length of British film to satisfy the renters' quota, the majority of foreign-controlled renters appear to have made arrangements for the production of British films at the minimum of expense, regardless of quality. . . . Far from aiding in the training of satisfactory personnel, as is sometimes suggested, it appears to us that production of films in which nobody has a real interest and in which any standard of quality and attainment is lacking must necessarily undermine the morale of the technicians and actors taking part."

Two suggestions were made to the Committee for improving the position. One was the application of a cost test for each film. The other, which was the one favored by the Committee, was a test based directly on the viewing of each film.

QUOTA OBJECTIONS PRINTED BY CEA

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has printed and is distributing to its members and to members of Parliament a pamphlet summarizing its objections to the quota provisions of the proposed new Films Act. The booklet entitled "Quality Not Cost Is the Test of a Good British Film" emphasizes the association's argument that pictures submitted for quota registration should be subjected to a viewing test and not classified on a cost basis, a standard which, it is contended, places a premium on extravagance, gives no guarantee of quality, and leaves wide loopholes for evasion.

Thet CEA in the booklet, which is being used as one of the publicity weapons in the fight being waged against the quota proposals, cites its membership of 4,242 cinemas as basis for its claim that it represents 100 per cent of the cinemas of Great Britain "for all practical purposes."

5. The advantages of the viewing test are obvious, but it has one grave disadvantage. Whether or not a film is registered for quota would depend on the personal judgment of the viewing authority, given only after the film has been produced. Opinion differs in so many respects as to the merits of any film that no producer when he started production could be certain that the film would eventually qualify for registration. The producers contend that in view of this uncertainty it would in many cases be difficult, if not impossible, to arrange the necessary finance. The cost test, on the other hand, has the merit of certainty. A producer would know before production commenced that if he spent a certain amount his film would qualify for renters' quota and he could arrange his finance on that basis. But it has the obvious disadvantage that cost in itself is not necessarily any guarantee of quality. On the other hand the charge against the "quota quickie" is not only that it is bad, but that there is no real attempt to make it good. Cheapness is the sole aim, and the money expended has largely to be written off. The introduction of a minimum cost test would at least ensure that those responsible for the production of a film necessary to comply with their quota obligations would have a considerable financial incentive to produce a film that was likely to have satisfactory box-office results. Again, a film may be good although its cost has not reached a certain minimum and in such a case a cost test may act as an incentive to extravagance. It is clear that neither test, taken by itself, is wholly satisfactory. His Majesty's Government will therefore propose that for the purposes of the long-film quota the two tests should be combined. If a certain minimum sum has been expended on the production of a film, it will be eligible for registration for renters' quota without further enquiry. If that minimum sum has not been reached, it will remain open to the producer or renter to make application for registration for renters' quota on the ground that the film is of special entertainment value. Films costing less than the minimum will, in any event, be permitted to count for exhibitors' quota.

6. Amount of cost test.—The Departmental Committee considered a proposal that the minimum total cost should be £2 per foot of film. A minimum total cost of £15,000 a film was suggested in the trade discussions referred to in paragraph 3. His Majesty's Government accept the principle of both these suggestions and propose to adapt them for the purposes of the cost test in the following manner:

7. Section 27 (3) (iv) of the Act of 1927 (which His Majesty's Government propose should be continued in the new legislation) provides that 75 per cent. of the salaries, wages and payments specifically paid for labor and services in the making of a British film must, with certain exceptions, have been paid to British subjects or persons domiciled in the British Empire. The Board of Trade have had considerable experience of adminstration of this provision and it is accordingly proposed to provide in the new legislation that the new cost test should be on the basis of these labor costs." It is generally agreed that these labor costs approximate on the average to half the total cost of a film. The actual test to be applied will therefore be that at least £1 per foot, with a minimum of £7,500 per film, shall have been expended in labor costs (exclusive of payments in respect of copyright). His Majesty's Government will ask Parliament for powers to ensure that any particulars supplied in this connection can be properly checked and verified.

Quality Productions

8. Further encouragement of the production of long films of higher quality.—The amount of revenue which a producer can expect to obtain from the exhibition of a film acts as an automatic limit on his expenditure when he is mainly catering for the home market. If he wishes to increase his expenditure in an attempt to produce a more ambitious film he can only do so on an assurance of an adequate return from his overseas markets. Although there are exceptions, up to the present the British producer has had no such assurance and has had to assume a risk which may or may not have been justified in the event.

It is clear that British film production cannot be fully developed until producers can rely with some certainty upon entry into overseas markets. His Majesty's Government have therefore carefully considered how best they can create conditions which will encourage British producers to make a proportion of higher quality films to compete with those of other producers in a world market.

9. One method by which it is suggested that progress can be made in this direction is by allowing films costing considerably more than the minimum already laid down to count more than once for renters' quota. The foreign-controlled renters in this country have expressed the opinion that individually they should be allowed to meet their quota obligations, should they so desire, by producing a smaller number of films of higher quality. His Majesty's Government have accepted this view to the extent that they will suggest to Parliament that a film costing three times the minimum, i. e., at least £3 per foot with a total of not less than £22,500 (in labor costs), should be allowed to count twice its length for the purposes of the renters' quota. It is hoped that by this arrangement a number of films will be produced which are not only a credit to British film production but which moreover will be shown successfully in overseas markets. In such a way new markets may be opened for British films generally.

* A renter of films acquires a film from the producer who makes it, and distributes copies of the film to exhibitors for exhibition in cinemas.

COST BASIS SUBJECT TO REVISION

10. His Majesty's Government will also propose that if a renter acquires at a substantial cost the exhibition rights for a foreign country of a British long film made in Great Britain he shall be relieved from his obligation to acquire British films for distribution in the United Kingdom to the extent of one film of equal length. It is hoped that this proposal will lead to cooperation between British producers and those renters who are in a position to arrange adequate channels of distribution overseas. This cooperation can, however, only achieve satisfactory results if it takes place in connection with films which are likely to enhance the reputation of British production. His Majesty's Government intend therefore that the proposal shall only apply to films costing at least £3 a foot with a total of not less than £22,500 in labor costs where the rights for one foreign country have been acquired at a price of not less than £20,000. No renter, however, will be permitted to meet more than one-half of his quota obligations by this method. It should be explained that where the foreign rights of a film are sold under these conditions the renter who acquires the distribution rights for the United Kingdom of such a film will not be allowed himself to count the film for renters' quota.

11. The cost basis of the proposals above is necessarily experimental and may require revision in the light of experience or of changes in film technique. It is accordingly proposed that provision should be made to enable the Board of Trade by order, subject to confirmation by Parliament, to vary within certain limits the minimum costs for renters' quota films and also the cost and payment conditions attaching to films of which the acquisition of the foreign rights is permitted to count for quota.

Initial Quota

12. Quotas for long films. The initial quota.—Under the existing act the quotas are at the present time the same both for renters and exhibitors, and stand at 20 per cent. No serious difficulty has been encountered in meeting these requirements; indeed, during the year ending September 30, 1936, exhibitors on the average showed as high a proportion as 29 per cent of British long films. The Departmental Committee recommended that for the first year the exhibitors' quota should be fixed at a lower figure than that of the renters' quota, and suggested initial quotas of 20 per cent for renters and 15 per cent for exhibitors. His Majesty's Government accept this recommendation in principle. They feel, however, that in order to meet any temporary difficulties in the production of British films which may be created by the new requirements, some special arrangement should be made to cover the first year under the new conditions. They accordingly propose that for the renters' year beginning April 1, 1938, and for the exhibitors' year beginning October 1, 1937, the quotas for renters and exhibitors should be fixed at 15 per cent and 10 per cent, respectively, rising to 20 per cent and 15 per cent in the second year.

13. It will be necessary for the new legislation to prescribe the conditions under which films should be registered for renters' quota from April 1, 1938, and the tests referred to in paragraph 5 will, it is proposed, apply from that date. The existing legislation, however, prescribes a quota of 20 per cent for exhibitors for the year ending September 30, 1938, but as the new conditions for the registration of British films, despite the normal lag between registration and general release, may result in some disturbance in the supply of British films during that exhibitors' quota year, it is proposed that the new legislation shall reduce the exhibitors' quota for that year to 15 per cent.

Subsequent Quotas

14. Quotas for subsequent years.—The Departmental Committee, while indicating that in their view there was no reason why quotas should not reach 50 per cent by the end of the 10-years period, did not propose any scale of quotas. They recommended that in future years the quotas should be determined at the beginning of each calendar year, and in regard to the circumstances of the time. His Majesty's Government recognize the necessity for flexibility in the arrangements. In the course of so long a period as 10 years, changed conditions may demand a variation of the amount of the quotas on renters or exhibitors. In their view, however, yearly reassessments of the quota would be unsettling to the industry as a whole, and in particular would make the long-term planning of future production extremely difficult. An expansion of British film production within the next 10 years sufficient to support quotas of 50 per cent is generally regarded as impracticable. Moreover, the proposals made by the producers themselves in their evidence before the Departmental Committee was that the quota should rise to 35 per cent for renters and 33⅓ per cent for exhibitors. His Majesty's Government accordingly propose to provide that the renters' quota should rise from 20 per cent in the second year by stages to 30 per cent in the latest years of the new act. The exhibitors' quota would rise from 15 per cent in the second year by stages to a final figure of 25 per cent. A measure of flexibility would be obtained by providing that by Order of the Board of Trade, to be confirmed by Parliament, either of these quotas could be varied upwards or downwards at fixed intervals always provided that the renters' quota should not be reduced below 20 per cent or increased above 30 per cent and the exhibitors' quota below 15 per cent or above 25 per cent. Any wider variation which the circumstances of the time might demand could, in the view of His Majesty's Government, only properly be obtained by fresh legislation.

15. Some fears have been expressed that the effect of the cost test, together with the operation of the proposals referred to in paragraphs 9 and 10 for encouraging the production of higher quality films, may reduce the total number of films available for exhibition and therefore prejudice the position of exhibitors. In the view of His Majesty's Government the position of exhibitors is amply safeguarded. They see no reason to suppose that the supply of imported films will be materially reduced by their proposals. Moreover, so far as exhibitors' quota is concerned, all British films will be available whether they pass the cost or viewing test for renters' quota or not. Both renters' and exhibitors' quotas for the first year of the new system have been set at a low figure. No legislation, however, can deal with all the circumstances which might possibly arise in the case of any particular exhibitor. The 1927 act provides that when an exhibitor has not shown the required proportion of British films, he should be protected from prosecution if he can satisfy the Board of Trade that the reasons for his default were reasons beyond his control and in such cases he is given a certificate of exemption. Representations from any exhibitor regarding the reasons for his default have always received sympathetic consideration from the statutory Advisory Committee and from the Board of Trade. His Majesty's Government will propose that these provisions of the 1927 act should be continued.

Short Films Quota

16. A separate quota for short films.—The 1927 act distinguishes between short films (of less than 3,000 feet) and long films. In addition to the requirement that of all the films a renter acquires and distributes or an exhibitor shows a definite proportion should be British films, there is a requirement that the same proportion should hold as a minimum in regard to the long films that are distributed or shown. There is no separate requirement regarding the showing of British short films and in the past many renters and exhibitors have offset foreign short films by British long films; the Departmental Committee record that the proportion of British short films shown in the year ended September 30, 1935, was as low as 4.21 per cent. In their report (paragraph 42) the committee refer to the many representations made to them on the subject of the short film industry, and the advantages which could be secured by the institution of a separate quota for short films.

17. His Majesty's Government accept the views expressed by the committee as to the value of a short film industry, and will therefore propose that a separate quota for short films should be instituted. As there has in the past been no such separate quota, they will suggest that the new separate quota for short films should start at 10 per cent for renters and five per cent for exhibitors, rising to 20 per cent and 15 per cent, respectively, during the 10-year period. They will also ask for power, subject to the approval of Parliament, to vary the quotas on the same lines as those set out in paragraph 14 relating to long films.

18. His Majesty's Government do not think it necessary to suggest the imposition of any cost or viewing test for short films at the outset. They will, however, ask for powers to enable such tests to be imposed and varied, subject to the approval of Parliament, should conditions later make it desirable.

19. Revision of the excepted classes.—Under the 1927 act certain classes of films are not required to be registered* and British films in these classes cannot be counted for renters' quota, though, excepting in the case of (a) and (c), they can count for exhibitors' quota. Much of the subject matter of short films falls within the present excepted classes and in order to give producers of films, both long and short, more freedom in their choice of subjects, His Majesty's Government have decided to adopt the recommendation of the Departmental Committee that the new legislation should apply to all classes of films, except newsreels and commercial advertisements.

Advance Booking

20. Blind and advance booking.—The practice of the trade is that a film should be shown to the trade before it is exhibited. Blind booking is the booking of films before they are so shown to the trade. The Departmental Committee (paragraphs 83-4) found that the restrictions on this practice in the 1927 act had been of considerable value, but that evasion was taking place. They made certain recommendations for improving the position and these His Majesty's Government propose to adopt to the extent of making blind booking an offense on the part of the renter only (instead of the renter and the exhibitor as at present), of increasing the penalty and of requiring a statutory declaration on application for registration that blind booking has not taken place.

21. The 1927 act provided that booking of films for exhibition at a date more than six months distant should be an offense. The Departmental Committee (paragraph 85) took the view that in the light of other recommendations they had made these restrictions should prove unnecessary. The trade, however, take the unanimous view that their removal would be unwise. His Majesty's Government therefore propose to retain the restrictions, but to revise the present legislation on the lines indicated in the preceding paragraph for blind booking.

22. Other recommendations of the Departmental Committee.—His Majesty's Government propose to accept a number of recommendations made by the Departmental Committee on certain other matters. These relate to the trade showing of all registered films (recommendation xii), provision for specialized foreign films (recommendation xv), the inclusion of a certain proportion of foreign negative in a British film (recommendation xviii), the withdrawal of the requirement that the scenario writer should be a British subject (recommendation xix) and the allowance of a restricted number of "tryout" exhibitions before trade show (recommendation xxv).

23. The question of redundant cinemas.—Suggestions have been made by the exhibitors that in any legislation powers should be taken to deal with the question of the hardship caused to existing cinemas by the opening of new cinemas in areas where there is already a sufficient number of such houses. Such legislation would have to take the form of prohibiting, except under license, the entry of new exhibitors into the trade, or the expansion of existing businesses. His Majesty's Government feel that such proposals would not be acceptable to Parliament.

Films Commission

24. The proposed Films Commission.—The Departmental Committee were surprised by the measure of disagreement which exists between the three branches of the cinematograph films industry over the various questions which face them, and by the inevitable breakdown of voluntary schemes for the improvement of the industry in face of their conflicting interests. With a view to bringing the varying interests closer together and of finding some measure of agreement between them, they recommended the establishment of a Films Commission, to which there would also be entrusted the administration of the new legislation. The committee considered it essential that this commission should be composed exclusively of persons absolutely independent of professional or any other pecuniary connection with the film industry. It does not appear, however, that the Departmental Committee contemplated that the commission should be armed with compulsory powers or that it could proceed except on the lines of persuasion. The possibility of its success would therefore depend on the support and good-will it would be likely to receive from those whom it is expected to conciliate or persuade. It has, however, become clear during the discussions which followed the committee's report that no branch of the industry is prepared to accept a commission on the lines recommended by the committee. Some are opposed to the appointment of a commission at all, some to any commission unless it is composed of, or at least includes, members of the trade, while others object to the establishment of a commission in any form unless it is endowed with compulsory powers to deal with such questions as are discussed in paragraph 23 of this paper. His Majesty's Government feel that the basis of the committee's recommendation was that such a commission would be acceptable to the industry and that in the circumstances which have arisen much, if not all, of the value attached by the Departmental Committee to its appointment would be lost. Moreover, the combination of a cost test with a viewing test referred to in paragraph 5 and the substitution of a fixed scale of quotas for the annual reassessment suggested by the Department Committee will reduce to a very large extent the administrative functions suggested for the commission. In these circumstances, His Majesty's Government do not propose to adopt the recommendation for a Films Commission, and they will suggest to Parliament that the administration of any future act should remain in the hands of the Board of Trade, assisted by an Advisory Committee constituted on lines similar to those on which the present Advisory Committee is constituted, of both independent and trade members.

BOOK REVIEW

AMATEUR MOVIES AND HOW TO MAKE THEM, by Alex Strasser. London: The Studio, Ltd. 80 pp. 27⅛ x 9⅝. Price $3.50.

Another volume in the publisher's "How to Do It" series, this member of the group aims, to quote the author, "at making clear the points which must be known before a successful film can be made." Confining himself strictly to that purpose, the author (a jacket note identifies him only as one who "has been all through the mill") makes himself a friend indeed to those persons who would like to achieve something more with a substandard camera than a sentimental record of family doings.

He begins at the very beginning, assuming that this reader knows nothing of the available types of substandard film, of the motion picture camera or of photographic lighting. From this opening chapter on elementary technology, he proceeds to discussions of the organization of material, of pictorial composition, "trick" shots, the selection and development of subjects (including amateur photoplay making), and finally of editing and titling.

All major considerations and steps in the processes are exemplified either in drawings or in actual scenes from films made by the author and others. These scenes are not reproduced in halftone engravings, but are "blown up" paper positives, pasted in. The discussion is always practical and well informed concerning the problems necessarily confronting the amateur cinematographer at all times.—G. S.

Buchanan Starts Two

Jack Buchanan Productions has its second and third features on the floor at Pinewood, hard on the completion of its first, "Smash and Grab." Jack Buchanan is star and co-director (with Lee Garmes) of "The Sky's the Limit," and Bobby Howes and Jean Gillie are in "Sweet Devil," which is being directed by Rene Guissart, onetime ace cameraman.

Appearing with Buchanan in "The Sky's the Limit" are Mara Losseff, Russian singer; David Hutcheson, William Kendall, H. F. Maltby, C. M. Hallard, Athene Seyler, Sara Allgood, Morris Harvey, Charles Stone, Antony Holles and David Burns, with the added special attractions of Rawicz and Landauer, piano duetists, and the Four New Yorkers. A new dance number, the "Montreal," has been written for Buchanan, who also has a song number, "Swing, Madam," from Sherman and Silver. Three Rawicz and Landauer numbers for Mara Losseff are "Too Lovely to be True," "Without You" and "Venice in the Moonlight."

Henry Harris is cameraman on the Buchanan vehicle and Bernard Browne on "Sweet Devil." Browne came into the headlines by his work on "Wharves and Strays," a short subject that caused talk two years ago, and incidentally presented British production with the dog star, "Scruffy."

Van Phillips is musical director for Buchanan, and Tom Morahan and D. W. Daniels are the art directors.

Film Matterhorn

For the production originally known as "Whymper," but now called "The Challenge," London Film has sent a camera unit of 12 to the higher slopes of the Matterhorn.

"The Challenge," one of the series of six to be produced for London by Guenther Stapenhorst, once of USA, is concerned, in its climax, to vindicate the claims of Edward Whymper, the famous English mountaineer, to have conquered the Matterhorn. Hence the Alpine sequences, which were directed by Luis Trenker. The story proper will be directed by Milton Rosmer at Denham.

Begins in Paris

Ruth Chatterton played her first scenes for a British picture this week—in Paris.

"The Rat" unit, under Director Jack Raymond, has been there for some time, and still has about 10 days of location work to complete before starting studio sequences, at Denham.

Anton Walbrook, co-starring with Miss Chatterton, is in France with other principals of "The Rat," who include Rene Ray, Beatrix Lehmann, Mary Clare, Nadire March and Gordon McLeod.

For this Herbert Wilcox Production, actual backgrounds of Montmartre, and of the fashionable quarter centering on the Place de L'Opera, will be extensively used.

145 Feet to 4 Inches

Alfred Hitchcock, noted for his employment of effective technical devices, has sprung a new one for "A Shilling for Candles," with the aid of cameraman Bernard Knowles, a special lens, and a particularly mobile traveling crane.

SOPHIE STEWART is Lady Blakeney in London Films' "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel." Here she is shown in the gown in which she was presented to King George and Queen Elizabeth at their Scottish court at Holyrood Castle, Edinburgh.

The camera is swept, from a general view of a crowded dance floor, down to the dancers' level and through them until it finishes on a closeup, from four inches, of the eye of the drummer of the jazz orchestra. The opening shot is from a distance of 145 feet and it is said that progress to the closeup was filmed without a break and without loss of focus, by means of a special lens and mount.

"A Shilling for Candles" is a Gaumont-British production, in making at Pinewood, and Nova Pilbeam is the star.

In preparation at Pinewood is G-B's Jessie Matthews vehicle, "Full Sail." At the G-B subsidiary's Gainsborough studio, at Islington, in production are "Dr. Syn," George Arliss, John Loder and Margaret Lockwood, directed by Roy Neil, and "Oh! Mr. Porter!", Will Hay directed by Marcel Varnel. In preparation there is "Owd Bob," the sheep-dog romance, Robert Stevenson directing Will Fyffe and Margaret Lockwood.

"Non-Stop New York" and "Gangway" (Jessie Matthews) are completed G-B pictures awaiting trade show.

Spy Play

John Loder and Dita Parlo are co-starring in the Max Schach production of "Mademoiselle Docteur," for Trafalgar, United Artists release. It's a more or less true to life story of the spy Anne Marie Lesser, which Edmond Greville is directing, with a comeback opportunity for Erich von Stroheim. Also in the cast is Gyles Isham, who was opposite Greta Garbo in "Anna Karenina," and now plays a spy, with Von Stroheim as his chief. Concurrently he is rehearsing for a West End stage production.

18th Century Brighton

The still standing Royal Pavilion at Brighton, erected by an eighteenth century Prince of Wales as a rococo center of fashionable relaxation, has been re-created at Denham as a setting for "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel." A Royal Ball is the background for a battle of wits between Sir Percy Blakeney ("The Scarlet Pimpernel"), his French wife, and a Parisian actress who has been sent over to lure him back to France and the guillotine.

Rene Hubert designed special period costumes for this scene, and the musical atmosphere was provided by an orchestra playing eighteenth century music on instruments of the period.

Barry K. Barnes is the "Pimpernel," and Sophie Stewart is Lady Blakeney, with Margaretta Scott as the French actress and Francis Lister as the French revolutionary leader, Chauvelin. Hans Schwartz is directing.

Third for Annabella

Annabella is to make a third picture for New World at Denham before she sails for Hollywood, and her engagement to co-star with William Powell in "Jean" for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Robert T. Kane announces the title of the new film, to go on the floor after "Follow the Sun" is finished, as "Let's Go to Paris," and says that backgrounds of the current exhibition will be used, probably in late August. He is casting at once.

Harold Schuster, now directing "Follow the Sun," also will make the new picture.

Itemized

Rene Houston has been given a long-term contract by Gainsborough Pictures. It's the first picture with the Crazy Gang.

Cinesound Productions of Australia is shooting London backgrounds for "Lovers and Luggers." Sydney Studios production with Lloyd Hughes and Shirley Anne Richards.

Victor Taylor formed Bushey Film Corporation to take over the old Herkomer studios at Bushey, Herts. Will make documentaries, quota films, advertising specials.

Home State Newsreel Got Start on Gridiron

by MAGDALON GRAHL

in Des Moines

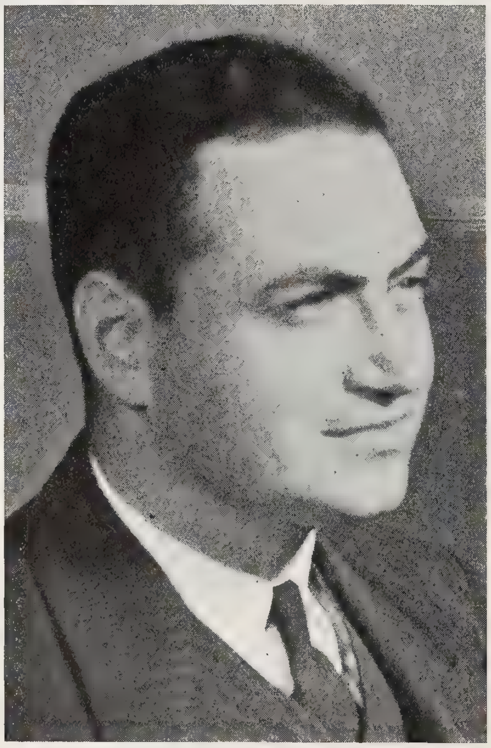
BURTON JERREL was only one of thousands of spectators who witnessed an Ames versus Iowa football game a few years ago but it was his attendance at the contest that resulted in Iowa News Flashes, a three-minute newsreel that is now used in 190 theatres throughout the state.

Mr. Jerrel, while greatly interested in the game, was attracted especially to the national newsreel photographers. Each time one of them prepared to "shoot" a scene, Mr. Jerrel explained, he noticed that scores of spectators crowded their way into focus, apparently hoping pictures of them would appear in the newsreel.

That was when the idea evolved. Mr. Jerrel believed a home state newsreel would help to advertise Iowa, besides satisfying the average person's curiosity to see himself on the screen.

The plan had to remain dormant for several years. Mr. Jerrel completed his course at the University of Iowa, where he served on the staff of the school's publication. He then attended Harvard Law School and it was after completing his studies there that he put the newsreel plan to work. He was in California the next winter and made inquiries about the equipment needed. Two years ago he returned to Iowa and started issuing News Flashes.

Three subjects are shown each week. Mr. Jerrel does the editing and Norman Ross and other National Broadcasting Company announcers of Chicago do the narrating.



BURTON JERREL

Iowa News Flashes now has 60,000 negatives filed in its library. Persons who are pictured may obtain a copy of the film for $5. The newsreel has been indorsed by the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Greater Iowa Commission has supported the project by writing to all exhibitors, requesting them to show the home state pictures.

Three Seek to Quash Gary Trust Action

Warner Brothers, Universal and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America have filed motions in federal court, Indianapolis, to quash and set aside service of summons in the Gary Theatre Company suit against a group of producers and Balaban and Katz of Chicago. The suit asks a restraining order against enforcement of clearances and charges conspiracy and violation of the federal anti-trust laws.

The three companies filing the motions claim they are not incorporated in Indiana and do not transact business as Indiana organizations.

MGM Adds Theatres Abroad

MGM is erecting a 1,500-seat theatre in Milan, Italy, with negotiations under way for the construction of two more theatres in Europe, Morton Spring, assistant to Arthur Loew, MGM head, announced on his return from a four-month trip abroad this week.

Yorke Named Head Of Council Office

G. S. "Gabe" Yorke, former publicity and advertising director for Paramount studios, has been named head of the Hollywood office of the Advertising Advisory Council, succeeding John McGrail, resigned.

Mr. Yorke also was formerly manager of the publicity department of Fox Theatres and Fox West Coast Theatres. He was once public relations counsel for the Yucatan government and also was trade commissioner in Europe for the Mexican government.

Novarro to Do 4 Films

Ramon Novarro, who just has completed "The Sheik Steps Out" for Republic, will do four more pictures for the company, Herbert J. Yates, president, announced this week. The former MGM star was given a cocktail party at the Plaza Hotel, New York, and will return to the coast in about a month, following personal appearances and broadcasts.

Mr. Yates will leave for Hollywood August 15th for a month's visit at the studio.

4 MGM Contest Winners Sail

The four winners of MGM's screen talent and essay contests, held in conjunction with the Paris Exposition, have sailed for Paris, Normandie-bound, on their prize-winning trips abroad. Writers of the best essays on "What Paris Means to Me" are Helen Jean Coleman, Jamaica Plain, and John B. Moran, Marlboro, Mass., while winners of the talent competition are two Virginians, Gillett Epps, 20, and Betty Ridgwell, 19.

Jeff Lazarus Signs with Paramount

Jeff Lazarus, head of Paramount's editorial board and story department, has signed a new four-year contract which will enlarge his duties to the production field without affecting his supervision of the editorial and story departments.

Mr. Lazarus will start production duties with two assignments, "Men with Wings", to be filmed in Technicolor, and "Midnight", Marlene Dietrich's next starring vehicle.

COMFORT: THE GREATEST STAR OF THEM ALL

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Richard Dix, Joan Perry—Another for a double bill on the weekend. Dix is passe. No one to head a cast and expect business. He has ceased to be of value as a draw name and that tells the story of "The Devil Is Driving."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Richard Dix, Joan Perry—An excellent picture that all should see. Our audience liked it very much.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

First National

CAPTAIN'S KID, THE: Guy Kibbee, May Robson, Sybil Jason—Played with second feature but did only very moderate business. The stars are not very popular in this town. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 12.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Super Cinema, Dewsbury, Yorks, England. General patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—This was a percentage picture, but did not do as well as we had hoped. A swell picture, nevertheless, one you can see over and over and always find something interesting.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran, Patricia Walthall—A very good western with Dick Foran.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart—Another very vivid and enthralling story, well played, and surely was engaging till the very end. The end was a little unpleasant, but how else could it end? Running time, 96 minutes. Played July 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRINCE AND THE PAUPER, THE: Mauch Twins, Errol Flynn—The best costume picture we have played in years. As a general rule these do not go, but this, while it did not do any extra business, held the patrons without any undue restlessness till the very end. Running time, 115 minutes. Played July 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TALENT SCOUT: Donald Woods, Jeanne Madden—Too weak for even double feature. No stars, no story, no direction. Photography O. K. Sound fine. The exchange told us how good this was and put it in a higher allocation in order to deliver the pictures in that allocation. Leave it in the can.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Spencer Tracy, Freddie Bartholomew, Lionel Barrymore—Very, very good. The direction has done credit to Kipling's story and Spencer Tracy has never had a better role than this or done better work. He really reaches greatness as the Portuguese fisherman. There were some wet eyes in the audience as he was lost at sea. He has a touch of mysticism in his role that is very effective. His soliloquy of the fishermen of Galilee was a beautiful touch.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Spencer Tracy, Freddie Bartholomew, Lionel Barrymore—Excellent production in any spot. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DANGEROUS NUMBER: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—A waste of film. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Selmer Jackson—Another of those down-to-earth features of a typical American family that is better entertainment than many of the socalled specials. Lionel Barrymore is tops in this one while Mickey Rooney is a close second. That boy will go places. Glad to see Selmer Jackson in movies as I saw him in stock a number of years ago and consider him very good. Leo can well afford to crow—or growl—over this one. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

GOOD OLD SOAK, THE: Wallace Beery, Una Merkel, Eric Linden—This was easily up to standard of the late Beery pictures, all of which have been box office attractions for us. This is the type of story that goes in this community. Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Not up to the usual MGM standard. My patrons were puzzled when they left the show, as they were when they came in. Fortunately I had a second feature which helped the show out. Business below average. Running time, 50 minutes. Played July 19.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Super Cinema, Dewsbury, Yorks, England. General patronage.

NIGHT MUST FALL: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Certainly not a drawing card, but what a picture! Think it pleased about 50-50 with our patrons. We thought it a grand picture with a most unusual story and two or three unsurpassable characterizations. Don't give us any more, though, as it certainly was not box office. Running time, 115 minutes. Played July 23-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

NOBODY'S BABY: Patsy Kelly, Robert Armstrong—Here is a little picture that we sold strong and boosted box office above the average. It is a real picture for a small town. Had more good comments on it than all the other Hal Roach features we ever played. Patsy will be tops for comedy from now on in my town.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

PICK A STAR: Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly—Good programmer. Running time, 78 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SARATOGA: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—A splendid picture. Great entertainment. A real story and picture. A fitting finale to Jean. Running time, 94 minutes. Played July 25-27.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SINNER TAKE ALL: Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay, Joseph Calleia—Fine program picture. Did well above average business despite hot spell of weather experienced while running this show. All patrons left in good spirits and all remarking on how well they had enjoyed the program. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 15.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Super Cinema, Dewsbury, Yorks, England. General patronage.

THIRTEENTH CHAIR, THE: Madge Evans, Dame May Whitty—Passable programmer. Running time, 62 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA MAHONEY: Joe Cook, Larry Crabbe—We played this to the smallest group of patrons the Strand has ever seen. They didn't like it, so I guess it is for the best that more of our good patrons didn't turn out to see it. We can't understand why Paramount makes pictures like these. Oh, well.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—A good picture of its kind. Should please 100 per cent. Some lines not so good, but in the excitement they'll pass without being noticed much. Running time, nine reels. Played July 25.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Victor Moore, Beulah Bondi—Couldn't get 'em in for this, but those who came remarked about how good it was. Several of the older people in town came for the first time to see this. A very good picture and full of truth. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 27.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Victor Moore, Beulah Bondi—Passable programmer. Use action picture with it. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern, Fred Stone—Here is a picture that will please them all if you can get them in. Good Friday and Saturday picture. Francis Lederer is one great actor and he proves his ability in this picture. The photos don't give the picture a chance because of the Duke's dress suit in military style and pomp. It's more western than anything else, but good story. Running time, eight reels. Played July 27-28.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Francis Farmer—Here is a very good drawing picture. Did better than "Texas Ranger" to my surprise. I only wish we could have more like this.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—We played this kinda late, but it broke all house records for us. Martha Raye will fill my house any day in the week. Played on a Thursday and Friday.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Shirley Ross—Did an excellent box office gross for us, but many of our patrons said it was not as good as they had expected. We thought the music was swell and Bing didn't take up too much of the footage. Why not try Burns in one of those Rogers type of pictures? Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 25-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

QUALITY STREET: Katharine Hepburn, Franchot Tone—Well, the great Hepburn has been here and gone and may she never return. Except for the hoi polloi, who were few, the rest of my lowbrow crowd wondered why I inflicted this picture on them and me. I could not apologize for I had to run it or pay it. I know now that I had better have paid the score or washed it out.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL: Will Rogers, Marguerite Churchill—Just a typical Rogers picture. Lots of laughs and some good acting by Bill. Too bad he is gone, but the reissues don't get them in so hot for us. Our small community won't stand for any reissue and rerun picture regardless of quality. Running time, eight reels. Played July 23-24.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers, Robert Kent—This clever little girl is growing up. The picture is the usual kind. The lead all to Jane. The kids go for her, but we note a slacking on the adult business done, except for those that have families to bring. Some action to the picture and rather a "hokum" story.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CALIFORNIAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Marjorie

Weaver—Wasn't at all what we expected. Didn't please us or patrons. Double featured it with a good comedy the second night, so got by. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 30-31.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—Here is a fine picture that drew almost as well as a Shirley Temple. Young and old came to see it and from the hilarious laughing I heard from the box office, I think they all enjoyed it.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith—Good story, good cast and beautiful scenery make this one very satisfactory feature. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OFF TO THE RACES: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Slim Summerville—Take our advice and don't play this unless you have to. Nothing to it. No one liked it. Slim Summerville must have been sick when he made this one. We were sure sick after we played it.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Did above average business. No regrets, as Fox gave us a break on this, for which we were very grateful.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SING AND BE HAPPY: Anthony Martin, Dixie Dunbar, Leah Ray—Good programmer. Running time, 64 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SLAVE SHIP: Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery—Good at box office and good from the point of our patrons. Picture was enjoyed by all. Running time, 92 minutes. Played August 1-2.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Patsy Kelly, Alice Faye—Here is one that is good in any spot. It outgrossed "Waikiki Wedding," setting a new record for my Sunday and Monday. It sure did draw them in. We would like to see Fox give us more like this one for the bad ones they have given us in the past. Come on, Fox—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Jack Haley, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly—Very good for its kind. Splendid entertainment. Pleased all.—Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 16-17.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Joel McCrea—Played July 4-5th with Louis-Braddock fight picture. Practically played to an empty house on the 4th and a full house on the 5th, but "Come and Get It" is not a Sunday picture. However, it is better than some of the big pictures that United Artists has made in the last year. We think that United Artists is kinda slipping. Take our advice and pay no more than five bucks for the Louis-Braddock fight. It won't draw in Texas.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—We were afraid this would be too high-class for our people, but they seemed to get out in normal numbers and appreciate the picture to the extent that there were no walkouts, even from the hard-boiled western lovers.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—If you have a small town that likes westerns with singing and comedy don't fail to play this one. If you have Mexicans in your town, get out a special handbill on this in Mexican and you will fill your house. Good comedy and singing all the way through. Try it.—Jack Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorkton, Texas. Small town patronage.

I STAND CONDEMNED: Harry Baur, Laurence Olivier—Here is a sleeper. Tried this one on a single bill to my deepest regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEN ARE NOT GODS: Miriam Hopkins, Gertrude Lawrence—This is a fine picture, well acted and well produced, but did not draw well enough for us and there was an opening long speech in English dialect, some English critic dictating to his stenographer, Miriam Hopkins, that we westerners could not get head nor tails to, and it resulted in many walking out on the picture from the very start and having considerable to say derogatory to the kind of pictures we play.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Color very fine. Story very ordinary. Acting good. On the whole, not up to expectations. Running time, 108 minutes. Played July 18-22.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

PICTURE RUNS TOO FAST, PATRON SAYS

After years of research and experiments, the speed at which pictures are projected onto a screen has been standardized by the industry but C. M. Sanders of Stratford, North Carolina, has risen to enter a protest. The speed, he contends, should be reduced at least one-third.

The objection and suggestion were contained in a letter to Ben G. Reeves, manager of the Spartan Theatre, Sparta, North Carolina.

"Please pardon me," Mr. Sanders wrote, "but it seems to me that I owe you and the public a duty. I was at your theatre last night. The picture would have been O.K. but you ran it so fast that no normal person could keep up with the drift. In my opinion you will do the public and yourself a favor to cut down the speed of your machine at least one-third.

"I might have thought I was just too slow, but talked to some young people about the speed of your machines and each of them told me they would go more if it were not for that —the speed."

Universal

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones, Louise Brooks—The same old story, S. R. O. Everybody happy. We are sorry Buck Jones is only making four westerns this year. He's been a natural in our situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANOTHER DAWN: Kay Francis, Errol Flynn—When I get a cast headed by Kay Francis and a star of the calibre of Flynn, maybe I expect too much, but for some reason the picture failed to draw. It was slow in tempo and perhaps too much of love angle in the picture for any except sophisticated clientele.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BOULDER DAM: Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis—Here is another fine picture for a small town. I saw a number of criticisms of the picture and put it off, put it off till actually forced to play it. Then was most agreeably surprised to find it drew and pleased.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

FLY-AWAY BABY: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Good story, good people, but it did not click. Think it was poor direction.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I MARRIED A DOCTOR: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson—So old that we put it in on a bank night, but it pleased everyone. I consider it a fine picture of real people in an ordinary small town like ours, comedy, pathos and everything mixed up just as it is in real life.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL, THE: Fernard Gravet, Joan Blondell—Very good. Fernard Gravet gives an excellent performance and, something very unusual for a foreign star, speaks very distinctly. This is Joan Blondell's best picture. A very satisfactory production. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—Played this one in front of the local holidays and did above average business. Joe is not very popular here, but still they come to see him. His comedy is clean and wholesome, which may account for the business we did, but this is definitely not up to his usual standard. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 22.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Super Cinema, Dewsbury, Yorks, England. General patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda, Margaret Lindsay, Stuart Erwin—Right down the alley for a weekend date. The kind that keeps 'em right on the edge of their seats and brings them back for more. The irony is that these socalled program pictures that have action and some degree of intelligent direction, with a definite story to go, will outgross the big specials, and I think that all small town exhibitors will bear out this. I am willing to run some prestige pictures, but there have been too many of them this season and with the high rentals there is less money in the till at the close of the engagement.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TINTING NAMED "METRO COLOR"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has named its new tinting process "Metro Color" and is planning to equip a laboratory to handle the stock. While, according to present plans, none of the films to be released in the 1937-'38 season are to be done in color, several will be tinted. In this group is "The Firefly." The tinting will be in the finished prints and not the negatives.

In connection with tinting, Hunt Stromberg, production executive, said that in about a year a majority of MGM's films will be made with tinting and toning. Comparing the process with color, Mr. Stromberg said tints and tones afford softer effects which seem to suit audiences.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

TOMORROW, IT IS

The Big Day for you, for you, for you and for you. That's tomorrow.

Yes, folks, no matter what happened yesterday and regardless of what occurred today, the sun is going to shine again and Fortune will smile her sweetest—tomorrow.

Tomorrow's the day for that long expected promotion, that salary rise, that certain something you've been nursing to bring you out of the red and into the clear.

For were there no tomorrows, if there was nothing shining ahead to keep folks pecking away at the job in anticipation of bigger and brighter days to come, then we'd all say to hell with it and go fishin'.

But there is and that's why alarm clock manufacturers still pay dividends.

Today may be the tomorrow you worried about yesterday. But for the man who keeps his chin up and a deep abiding faith in his ability to be ready when it comes, tomorrow marks the spot from which he takes off to wherever his goal might be.

QUITE RIGHT, MR. KELLEY

From time to time, we have indicated on this page the box-office advantages to be had by sending theatremen to Hollywood for a closeup inspection of studio operation and study of coming product. Among others who also think so may be listed the able Andrew R. Kelley, Washington Times drama critic who writes as follows in his widely-read "Kellegrams" column:

"If I were running a chain of theatres I think I would insist that those who were directing the local sales campaigns for motion pictures, should know more about the product they're selling to the public. There is no better way of knowing than by personal inspection and publicity executives should also have a look at the general setup for national propaganda at Hollywood headquarters."

Isn't it sensible to suppose that the man responsible for the profitable retail merchandising of a product will do a better job if he is allowed to learn as much as he can in advance about its manufacture?

THEY GO TOGETHER

It happens rather frequently. A manager comes to a new spot, gets himself together, begins to take hold. You find the showman at lunch club meetings, cooperating in civic drives, prominent in every worthy movement to the extent that when he leaves for another situation, the press invariably breaks out with wide editorial encomiums on his going. It happened to Walt Jancke on his transfer from Golden, Colo., to Brighton, in the same state, the local paper indicating the Round Tabler's position in the community by bidding him flattering editorial farewell.

In any analysis of theatremen's accomplishments, the majority of instances will show that the manager who is doing his part in the promotion of civic activities is also doing a successful job of promoting his theatre's interests.

AMONG THE PIONEERS

The smart campaigning being done by theatremen in various parts on the heftier Univesal releases, most recently on "Road Back," marks up another score to emphasize the earnestness of the home office advertising departments in seeking to cooperate with the exhibitor for the betterment of his grosses.

Among the earliest of the exploitation pioneers, the Universalites, headed by P. D. Cochrane, are to be ranked with those who over a long span of years have been on the firing line in the presentation of box-office pressbook material and in making available the services of exploiteers to work with the man in the field.

Notes Here and There: In a newspaper coloring contest put over for the date on "Wee Willie Winkie" at the Hippodrome, in Cleveland, by Warnerites Dannenberg, Pearlstein and Miller, first prize of a Temple doll was won by a nine-year-old boy. And in Atlanta, according to Earle Holden, there is an ordinance still on the books making the manager liable if women patrons fail to remove their hats. The law calls for a fine of $100 or 30 hard days in the clink.

Promotion also included theatre panel on damaged car in downtown parking space. . . Living easy in this furniture window arranged by Milt Harris for date on "Easy Living" Loew's State, Cleveland, two attractive girls attired in lounging pajamas relaxed while partaking of luncheon, all of which was promoted by the Loew zone publicist.

Working model of oil rig similar to those used in that sector was promoted by Manager B. K. Brown, for his date on "The Wildcatter" at the Dickinson, Great Bend, Kans. Famed for its annual Stampede, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, plays to thousands of visitors which allows Pete Egan at the Palace to tiein in on the big event for a lot of good publicity for his house. Egan goes strong for fronts at this time and for this year worked out an arrangement of wood slabs. In addition, he also put on a daily performance each morning in front of the house with the participation of 100 competing cowboys and girls.

The beaches of Atlantic City prove one of Sid Blumenstock's best publicity and exploitation bets during the summer which is indicated by the crowds of bathers on hand to witness presentation put on for "New Faces" at the Warner. Girls wearing lettered swim suits danced, played ball, and with the aid of a mechanical man doing a "Joe Penner," duck and all, Blumenstock reports quite a bit of traffic congestion as a direct result.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Displays

On "Cafe Metropole," Harry Kreigsman, Oasis Theatre, Brooklyn, constructed an atmospheric shadowbox in lobby measuring 10 by 10 feet, suggesting front and interior of a cafe. Background consisted of six sheet cutout figures of the stars to the right of which was set up a miniature bar with bartender serving drinks to woman seated in front. Cutout figures of girls were also seated at table on which were cigarettes, drinks, etc, all of which was promoted from local merchant. Compo doorman figure was placed on step leading to display holding playdate card, title was transparent in flickers on an overhanging awning and entire setpiece was decorated with plants, shrubs, etc.

Stunts

Publicist Ray Bell of Loew's Washington Theatres drafted a special "Award of Excellence," which he persuaded officers of the Washington Advertising Club to present to MGM for the "creativeness, inspiration and high standard of Captains Courageous." Scroll was presented by Club's president and received many photographic and news breaks.

Also effective was another novelty Ray planted—a "recording laboratory" in the theatre lobby consisting of a microphone and a recording outfit over which an expert presided. Patrons were asked to have their voices recorded, with attendant asking leading questions about "Courageous." Recordings were broadcast over WRC.

Contest

Newspaper aided Dick Brown, Rowland Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., running a coloring contest, tickets going to the ten best coloring jobs of scenes from "God's Country and the Woman." Bookmarks were inserted in all books leaving public library and special display was planted in all branches.

Fireworks

Playing "Slave Ship" over the Fourth of July week-end, Tom Reilly, Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., distributed cards on streets with cut of Beery and Mickey Rooney reading "warning, not for the scary or nervous but for stark, roaring drama see," etc., etc. Small firecracker was attached to the warning copy.

NEWS BROADCAST PUT ON BY MOSS

For the convenience of patrons attending the earlier performances and who have not had time to read or hear the late news announcements, Dick Moss, Fox Boulevard Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., has arranged a nightly news broadcast. The program is featured just before the evening show and projected over the house p.a. system.

Tieups

Large shadow box entirely surrounding ticket vending weighing machine at nearby five-and-ten was planted by Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo for "Maytime," store offering guest tickets to those weighing the same as either star in the picture. Tieup remained throughout two week engagement of the date. MacDonald fashion window was promoted from leading department store, mounted star stills with title, playdates, etc., were planted in various stores. Cards were sent to mailing list from New York advising locals that sender had just witnessed the film at the Capitol and not to miss it when it hit Toledo. Newspaper coverage included six candid shots of "Maytime" in the making.

Window Artist

The fact that one of Guy Martin's ushers at the Colfax, South Bend, Ind., is studying art was sufficient for Guy to plant the boy in window of local store three days ahead painting lobby display for "Shall We Dance." Artist completed his work opening day and drew large crowds to the window which was properly bannered.

Dance remembrance contest was sponsored by local daily, prizes going to those correctly identifying Rogers-Astaire pictures in which various dance sequences originated. Candid cameraman was at work on streets, shots on display in photographer's window and tickets given to those recognizing themselves.

Theatre Party

Additional interest on "Libeled Lady" was built up by Harland Rankin, Plaza, Tilbury, Ontario, with a theatre party given by leading tailoring establishment, which also sponsored a fashion show in conjunction.

Resemblance

Recommended by Dick Wright, Warner's Cleveland theatres is the resemblance contest recently put on to tie in with Shirley Temple. Children were requested to register in advance and given card to admit them to stage on day of contest. Hundreds of entrants are reported.

Candy, ice cream, star photos and buttons were found to offer the most attraction. Wright also recommends contacting magazine distributors for supply of back numbers of movie or kid magazines for giveaway.

Wedding

Congratulations signed by Martha Raye and Bob Burns were mailed to all newlyweds of Hobart, Okla., as part of Joe Stribling's "Waikiki Wedding" date at the Kiowa Theatre. Mailing list was covered with announcement cards calling attention to the wedding of mirth and romance and urging that recipient see the show. Postcards were also mailed attached to which were small feathers, copy reading "If you think this feather will tickle you, wait till you see," etc., etc.

For street bally boy and girl dressed as bride and groom drove an old model T Ford painted with picture title, playdates, trick copy, etc. Tin cans and shoes were attached to the car and couple stopped around town distributing the feather cards. For his front, Joe used prairie hay to simulate a grass hut, and center piece was cut out of animated hula hula dance.

Model Planes

Model plane contest was the topper in Bill Hendrick's campaign on "Wings Over Honolulu" at the Granada, Santa Barbara, Cal. Featured was personal appearance of Reginald Denny who came up from Hollywood to judge the entries. Winning youngsters were given air trip to Hollywood, visit to the Universal Studios and other entertainments.

Fights

Facsimile fight tickets were distributed on "Kid Galahad" by Irving Dashkin, Savoy, Jamaica, L. I., at local fight arena. Complimentary tickets were also presented to all contestants while in the ring at the finish of each fight, theatre receiving a plug at each presentation.

Early Bird Matinee For "Saratoga"

Sacrificing an extra hour's sleep in the morning, girls of Omaha flocked to accept Eddie Forrester's invitation to attend a seven A. M. matinee of "Saratoga" at the Omaha Theatre. Breakfast consisting of orange juice, coffee and toast was served gratis and papers came through with a five-column cut showing the crowds gathered at the theatre.

Ace Campaign Given "Road Back" Dates

Much activity is evidenced in recent campaigns reported on dates for Universal's "Road Back." For advance at the Pantages in Hollywood and the RKO Hillstreet, Los Angeles, supervised by Rodney Pantages and Jack Gross was inaugurated with Goodyear blimp flying giant banner over the metropolitan area and beaches before opening. Also utilized was illuminated 48-sheet truck with giant letters, window displays in prominent spots and radio broadcasts were numerous. Heavy newspaper campaign was used in 10 foreign weeklies in addition to the local dailies, illustrated on following page. Foreign display cards and heralds were also distributed. Ads were placed in local American Legion weekly and multigraphed copies of the letters in Universal's pressbook were sent to post commanders and county council executives.

In Louisville, Ky., for the date at the Strand, A. L. Kalberer reported to be the first local theatremen able to arrange special cut rate tickets through military channels for use of soldiers in nearby Ft. Knox Barracks.

San Francisco in the hands of Hal Neides at the Orpheum was also featured by a strong newspaper campaign highlighting reviews of leading radio commentators, columnists and picture critics. Neides also took space in the foreign language newspapers.

Gooch Sells "Cloistered" On Class Campaign

Selling his date on "Cloistered" to special groups, Francis Gooch at the Columbia, Bath, Maine was able to secure a page one story day before and an editorial emphasizing the unique quality of the attraction. On the day ahead, Gooch arranged screening for Sisters of Mercy from local convent who secured special permission to attend and praised the picture to the students.

Personal contacts were made by the Round Tabler with the priest at the local Catholic Church and letters on the picture from Gooch were read by clergymen before their congregations before the opening of the production at the Columbia.

Sounds like Hollywood's who's who and that's exactly what you'll find in M-G-M's mighty musicale. It's so big and new that it's easily a year ahead. It has everything

"WEE WILLIE WINKIE" stars Shirley Temple in the thrilling pictorization of Kipling's great adventure on India's untamed frontier. Set against this land of the Bengal Lancers you'll see one of the greatest pictures ever made starring Victor McLaglen, June Lang, C. Aubrey Smith, Michael Whalen, and Douglas Scott (Shirley's new boy friend)

"THE FIREFLY" . . . M-G-M has produced many great musical productions but never one as completely captivating as "The Firefly." This compelling story of a beautiful cafe singer and Napoleon's soldier-spy mounts to a thrilling unforeseen climax after a series of adventures. And the songs of beautiful Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones

Now — Again On The Subject of GHOSTS
It is our belief that there are two distinct types—
VISIBLE and INVISIBLE

The Invisible, you read about—they are dull, morose, seldom seen, and in general a stupid lot——

THE VISIBLE GHOST—is the direct opposite—Here we have something really enchanting — not the least bit scary, in fact noted for its fine sense of humor, — its happy faculty of keeping one in CONTINUOUS LAUGHTER.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

A lot of you no doubt have heard of the Bad Lands, but a lot of you never have seen them and therefore can't appreciate just what a wonderful sight they are. In extent the Bad Lands cover something like ten thousand acres of land that have been correctly named.

When you go there don't think you will get to the "movies," for there isn't a theatre within a hundred miles. You won't even see a grasshopper, for there is no life in the Bad Lands. When you go there take along some drinking water, and it might be well to notify your folks where you are going. Nevertheless, the Bad Lands are one of the scenic spots of South Dakota. You ought to see them.

Lead is where the Homestake mining company gets enough gold out of the mountains to pay a whole lot of the national debt, but it is our thought that we of the common herd are required to liquidate the most of it.

The Homestake company erected a very fine recreation building for its employees and this building is managed by our old college chum, M. C. Kellogg. It has as fine a theatre as there is west of some place east and east as some place west, and this theatre shows the cream of the Hollywood product besides bringing in some of the best road attractions, all for the entertainment of the Homestake employees. Besides the theatre in the recreation building there are a large library, writing desks, pool and billiard tables, bowling alleys and a large swimming pool in the basement. (Note: We were told that M. C. takes a bath there every once-in-a-while.) If you ever go to Lead, and you should go there, be sure to go to this recreation building and meet M. C. and have him show you this theatre. It's worth a trip through the Bad Lands on foot.

We have just received a letter from the manager of the Strand theatre at Mumford, Maine, enclosing a theatre pass for Miss Gertrude Merriam of the Herald, and he winds up his letter by saying, "I would not miss reading your Colyum on a bet." It beats all how these theatre boys will waste time that way instead of pulling weeds out of the onion patch.

Then we also received a pass for Miss Merriam from Miss Margaret Vandenburg, of the Crescent theatre at Grand Haven, Michigan. We have never been in Mumford, but we have been in Grand Haven, and, as we remember it, it is a mighty good town. Anvway, we desire to thank these managers for these passes for Miss Merriam.

Then there were Leo Peterson of the Elks theatre at Rapid City and Clint and Bessie Robbins of the Hot Springs theatre at Hot Springs (Bess insists that we spell Robbins with two B's), but we have told you about them before. And now comes one from R. R. Johnson of the Orpheum at Nipawin, Saskatchewan.

We wish that boy Klein of the Pace theatre at Chadron, Nebraska, would stay at home when we call. Both times he was off billing the show and we didn't get to see him.

We stayed over night at Valentine, Nebraska, and went to call on Harold and Hazel Dunn of the Valentine theatre and were told that they had gone to Grand Island, Nebraska. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

The other night we saw a trailer purporting to show some of the scenes of a coming attraction. This is said to be a states right picture and "very educational." Well, maybe it is; we never saw it.

We may be classed as "an old fogy" and maybe we are; in fact we will admit it to save any argument, but we are one who still believes that decency and morality are not entirely dead virtues in this country yet despite the many happenings that would make a cynic shout otherwise.

St. Francis, Sioux Reservation

Maybe a lot of you don't know where the Sioux Reservation is. Some call it Sioux Reservation and some call it The Rosebud Reservation.

They haven't found any oil on the Sioux Reservation yet, but they have founded a Catholic school and mission at St. Francis and the Rev. Father Connell is in charge of the various activities.

In addition to the church and school, Father Connell established a moving picture theatre for the entertainment of the people of St. Francis. The Indians like moving pictures, especially the "cowboy" and "shoot-'em-up" kind, and he doesn't fall for the sophisticated stuff. Father Connell is doing a great work among the Sioux.

We have received letters from the boys in Nova Scotia, Australia and England, and we surmise they are not much different from the boys here in the States, except that some of 'em down here are entirely too negligent about reporting to the department "What the Picture Did For Me." But then maybe some of 'em were too busy fishing and some were busy killing grasshoppers.

As man to man and as woman to woman, we'd like to ask you a plain question. If you had been prostrated with the heat last summer, and if you were trying to fill this page with something worth while and it was 102 in the shade and hardly a breath of air stirring, would you stop or would you ramble on? You'd stop, would you? Well, so would we, and your judgment being pretty good, we are going to accept it without question. Auf wiedersehen.

Says Poll Favors Anti-Hitler Film

Production of "Never to Be Forgotten", an anti-Hitler film, will start in September by New Era Productions, on the strength of the first returns of a nation-wide poll which is attempting to seek public reaction to the idea, according to Al Rosen, producer of the picture. Of the 82,000 cards mailed, 27,000 were returned and of these 82 per cent favored the project. A total of 300,000 cards will be dispatched before the survey is completed.

Names are selected at random from the telephone directories in key cities, providing a mailing list, and several Catholic papers are cooperating in the conduct of the poll. Enclosed with the cards is a synopsis of the script, written by Herman Mankiewicz, Lynn Root and Mr. Rosen.

Auditorium Design With Function the Determining Factor

With the form supplying reflective breaks in the surface, and with sound-absorbing material entering into the decorative scheme, the Savoia theatre in Philadelphia has an auditorium interestingly exemplifying colorfulness plus function in treatment. The Savoia, a new Warner theatre, has 954 seats, 192 of which are in a balcony. The ceiling and wainscot of the auditorium are plastered with three coats of gypsum plaster, and U. S. Gypsum Acoustone-D has been applied on the side walls above the wainscot, on the rear and side walls of the balcony, and across the fascia of the balcony. The series of diagonal breaks forward toward the screen, and upward to the flat ceiling, has been emphasized by the color treatment. The wainscot is painted a deep burgundy, wall surfaces successively in lighter shades of burgundy, employing a non-bridging paint over the Acoustone; and the ceiling is ornamented by a pattern of green, cobalt and silver stripes against a background of successive shades of ochre. The striping incorporates, decoratively, air diffusers 4 feet wide extending down either side of the auditorium, painted in shades identified with green chair back-plates and blue carpeting. Chairs, by the Ideal Seating Company, have sage green modern standards and are upholstered in rust-colored mohair. Illumination is supplied by two large wall brackets, which constitute the main ornamentation of the side walls, and by 5-foot fluted glass exit fixtures. House lighting is white and amber; running illumination is blue and green. The Savoia is completely air-conditioned, with the auditorium supplied by a downward system. Conditioned air is also drawn over the standee area by means of return grilles over lobby doors. Air is introduced at the rate of 30 cubic feet per minute per person, and room condition is maintained at 80° drybulb, 67° wetbulb, and 50% relative humidity, or at an effective temperature of 74°. In summer the air is pre-cooled by well water (37% of cooling load at design conditions supplied by well water), with mechanical refrigeration for maintenance of proper temperature at outlets. Heating is by blast coils located in the air-conditioning room. Architects were Fleisher & Stephens.

VOLUME 128 AUGUST 21, 1937 NUMBER EIGHT

1937 New Theatre Cost Thus Far $16,480,000

A TOTAL investment in new motion picture theatres of $16,480,000 is represented in projects reported between January 1 and August 1 of this year, according to an analysis of data compiled by BETTER THEATRES' Projects Bulletin Service. This amount, covering 206 projects, is for the usual erection contracts, including heating, plumbing, wiring, decoration, etc., but not equipment.

The average cost per theatre is therefore calculated to be $80,000, making the average cost per seat (average capacity for these projects is 700, about 60 higher than the national average at the end of 1936) approximately $114.

Modernization in St. Louis Area Totals $1,300,000

THERE HAS BEEN a real transformation of theatres during the past two years in eastern Missouri and southern Illinois and other sections served by the St. Louis film exchanges, including the southeastern fringe of Iowa, the northeastern part of Arkansas and the northwestern portion of Kentucky. Comparatively few of the 90 motion picture theatres of St. Louis have escaped the movement toward modernization. The best available records indicate that no less than 75 houses have been variously remodeled or reconditioned since June 1, 1935, and today there is a distinct shortage of certain types of skilled mechanics, notably sheet metal workers and electrical engineers.

The structural changes involved in the modernization work in St. Louis alone amount, in cost, to about $500,000, while new equipment, such as seating, projection equipment, screens and ventilating and air-conditioning systems, raise the total expenditures on St. Louis theatres to at least $1,000,000.

These figures do not include new theatres, of which there have been several in St. Louis alone and about 30 in the entire territory. New theatres, it is estimated, would raise the total expenditures to more than $3,000,000.

Swinging away from St. Louis, the ratio of remodeling is slightly less than in the metropolitan area, but nevertheless about 250 of the 400 houses in the territory have been toned up more or less, with the total expenditures approximating $300,000, according to the best available estimates. This figure includes both structural changes as well as redecorating, repairs and new equipment.

The most notable trend in remodeling is the installation of new fronts of the modern straight-line type with colorful treatments in such materials as structural glass and synthetic substances, with enameled metal tiles being used for the less expensive jobs. Both interior and exterior lighting have been extensively modernized and account for a large part of the changed appearance of theatres in this area.—David F. Barrett, St. Louis.

Code Changes Confined To Costly Site Problem

NEW YORK'S new building code, which became law last month, will go into effect January 1, 1938. The portion of the code dealing with the erection of motion picture theatres is essentially the same as in the existing code, with the exception that certain restrictions have been removed, now enabling theatre construction in combination with other types of occupancy within the same structure.

With the new code, it will be possible to have a commercial structure directly over a theatre. In the old code, this was permissible only for theatres with less than 600 seats.

It is also possible, according to the new code, to construct a theatre with the level of the space immediately behind the orchestra standee rail at a maximum of 10 feet above, or 4½ feet below, the exterior street grade. This provision, and the one previously mentioned, were incorporated in the new code to make it possible to construct theatres on high cost land where it is essential to derive more income than that which a theatre alone could produce.

Commenting on the code's provisions for theatres, Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect and chairman of the SMPE subcommittee on theatre structures, said:

"They are unfortunate, since the New York code is widely taken as a model for regulatory laws in many cities and towns. Future theatre construction in smaller towns and cities should have the benefit of a more scientifically planned code which would improve theatre planning from the standpoint of the problems of proper presentation of the performance, and therefore care should be taken by the various local authorities not to follow blindly the new code of New York, the provisions of which are tuned to the needs of expensive city property."

Mr. Schlanger pointed to the possibility of bringing about changes in the code on the basis of the findings of his subcommittee, which is now making studies for the standardization of practices, under the direction of the SMPE Projection Practice Committee, headed by Harry Rubin.

Small Towns Lead in Wisconsin Modernizing

MORE THAN 50 Wisconsin theatres have been modernized during the past year at an estimated cost of $500,000. While exhibitors in the larger cities have contributed substantially, the lion's share of renovation has been carried on by the small town theatre operator, in a drive to retain local business as well as to capture summer vacation traffic, to promote which the State is spending upwards of $50,000 annually.

The bulk of the remodeling money spent has gone for new fronts, marquees and seats, with cooling and air-conditioning systems and new sound equipment a close second.

Wisconsin's advertising campaign has increased tourist business greatly, especially in the northern lake region.—William Scollard, Milwaukee.

How to Avoid Personal Liability In Signing Employer's Contracts

● Be sure your own property is not jeopardized when acting for one you work for. Discussed here is procedure to be carefully observed

By LEO T. PARKER

MOST THEATRE owners, officials and managers believe that only the employer is liable on contracts primarily and originally made for the benefit of the employer.

Notwithstanding this popular belief, the cold fact remains that recently in many instances the higher courts have held theatre officials, executives, managers and other employes personally liable on contracts made for their employers and with no thought or intention of being held personally responsible. In some instances homes and personal property have been sold to satisfy court judgments rendered against them. Obviously, one's life savings might be jeopardized by the mere scratch of a pen.

THE CREATION OF PERSONAL LIABILITY

FIRST, IT IS important to know that a theatre manager or other employe may be personally liable on a contract, although the body of the contract contains his employer's name, if the signature indicates that the employe intended to be personally bound.

For illustration, in a leading case (129 F. 350) a contract was litigated which contained the employer's name, and was intended to bind the employer; however, an employe named Gill signed his own name to the contract. Suit was filed against Gill to recover for the employer's breach of the contract, although the body of the contract indicated that it was intended to bind the employer.

In view of the fact that the employe signed his name without specifying that he was an employe and acting as an agent for the employer, the court held him personally responsible. This court explained that the contract, when read with the signature, was ambiguous and did not disclose that the obligation was solely the employer's.

EXCEEDING AUTHORITY

In another leading higher court case (101 Pa. 311) it was disclosed that a theatre official exceeded the authority given by his employer and signed for his employer a contract which did not bind his employer. The court promptly held the employe personally liable, and said:

"The reason why an agent is liable in damages to the person with whom he contracts when he exceeds his authority, is that the party dealing with him is deprived of any remedy upon the contract against the principal."

Various courts have held that a theatre corporation president may be personally liable on a contract made outside the scope of his authority, or where his signature does not indicate that the contract is being made for the corporation. And although the contract contains the corporation's name, yet if the president or other official signs the contract without clearly indicating that he signs it for the corporation, he may be liable on the contract.

For example, in Strauss v. Berman (147 Atl. 85) it was shown that a contractor consulted with the president of a theatre corporation regarding constructional improvements for a theatre building. Later the contractor submitted to the president a written offer to perform certain repairs for a stated price. The president signed the offer opposite the word "Approved," affixing his name "Louis Berman" after the words "Independent Theatre Corporation," without including the word "President" in connection with his signature.

● In signing an agreement on behalf of the person or company employing you, be sure that:

1. The name of your employer appears in the body of the contract or on the letterhead.

2. The word "by" or "per" precedes your signature.

3. The word "agent" or "manager" or other official title follows your signature.

4. The employer's name precedes your signature.

The contractor completed the repairs, and when he did not receive payment from the corporation, he sued the president personally for the value of the services rendered. Since the president's signature signed to the contract did not specifically indicate that he was acting as an official for the theatre corporation, the court held Berman personally liable, stating the following important law:

"The written acceptance on the face of the contract was that of the defendant (Berman) rather than that of the corporation. His individual signature personally and not as president or for the corporation was written opposite and to the right of the word 'Accepted,' while the words 'Independent Theatre Corporation' were written one line above. . . . Had the written offer been made to the corporation, Berman, being in fact its president, the names as written above might perhaps be construed as an obligation of the corporation. But, being addressed to Berman personally and so accepted by him, the corporate name written above did not release him from personal liability, in the absence of an agreement to deal with the corporation."

Therefore, in view of this statement the president may have avoided liability by writing the word for before the name of the theatre corporation and the word President at the end of the corporation's name at the time he signed it.

EMPLOYER UNNAMED

In another leading case (17 O. S. 215) it was shown that an official was authorized to sign valid contracts for his employer. In one contract the official failed to include his employer's name in the contract, although he signed it as "agent" for the employer. The employer refused to fulfill the obligations of the contract and the other party filed suit against the official.

It is interesting to know that this higher court held the employe personally liable and explained that any official or employe is personally responsible on a contract which is written and signed in a manner which indicates to the other contracting party that the employe intended to be bound, instead of the employer, especially if the employer's name is not in the body of the contract.

AVOIDANCE OF PERSONAL LIABILITY

Correcting Errors of Poor Planning

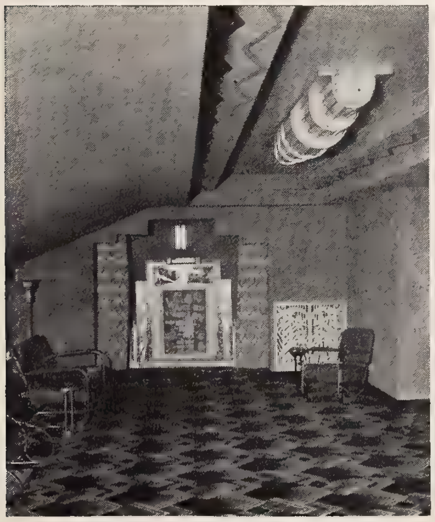
Auditorium, before and after.

ALTHOUGH THE Kansas City area has emerged from the depression more slowly than some other sections of the country, due principally to a succession of droughts, the physical condition and appearance of theatres in Western Missouri and Kansas are comparable to those of theatres in other territories. During the past two years many exhibitors took an extra notch in their belts, piled together their "pennies," and by carefully and wisely spending their money, went ahead to do a much needed job.

Among such theatre men is Tom Edwards, who, with a few thousand dollars, transformed just another antiquated small town house into a modern theatre. Remodeling of the Ozark at Eldon, Mo., was completed just before the summer tourist trade, which makes up an appreciable part of Mr. Edwards's summer business, began arriving from Missouri and the Middle West at the Lake of the Ozarks, which is only a few miles from Eldon. The house now seats approximately 600.



Foyer-lounge under stadium.

Mr. Edwards selected R. J. Crowley, Kansas City architect (who, incidentally, has been connected with showbusiness for nearly ten years, staging and projecting shows for many Kansas and Missouri exhibitors). In general, Crowley's problem was one of accomplishing the most with the least amount of money possible. The theatre was poorly arranged. Apparently the original builder was unfamiliar with the everyday problems of getting patrons in and out of a theatre easily.

A theatre office was located on one side of the lobby, the theatre storage room on the other. Both opened on to the street, and each had a street window. This arrangement would have been desirable had they been rentable store rooms. Under the circumstances, they unnecessarily squeezed the lobby and entrance, and there was no room for adequate furnishings in either lobby or foyer. In addition, the box office crowded its 5x6 feet out into the lobby. To purchase tickets, patrons had to walk up a lobby floor that was uncomfortably and unsafely steep, even when covered by a rubber mat.

The front doors provided only 6 feet of opening. On each side were glass panels taking up 3 feet of entrance width.

Starting with the entrance, the doors were widened to an opening of 10 feet. The old doors were employed, but instead of the full glass panel, they now present a face of masonite with snap-on chrome moulds, aluminum kick plates and all chrome hardware.

The storage room and office doors opening on the street, together with the window with which each room had been fitted, were eliminated. The windows were remodeled, and there are now two 40x60-inch poster frames on each side. The doors were remodeled into one-sheet frames. In this way the architect brought what had been a front spotted with frames into a harmonious unit without basically altering the structure of the facade. Because it no longer was possible to obtain the same type of brick with which the building was constructed, the bricks were removed from the columns under each end of the marquee to brick up a part of the doorways.

The box office was brought forward to the building line, which placed it on the sidewalk. It now divides the lobby into two passages, one on each side and 6 feet deep from street to foyer. The box office was rebuilt of Carrara structural glass with a 6-inch base of black surmounted by structural red glass up to the money ledge. The upper portion is of plate glass with a sand-blasted modern design and metal corners and trim. The lobby floor was lowered to the sidewalk level.

Shifting of office and storage space also permitted widening of the 15x15-foot foyer to 15x33 feet and relocation of the rest

A 600-Seat Plan for a Narrow Site

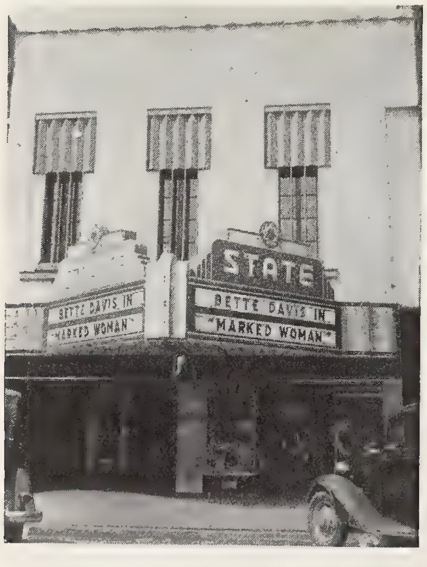
FLOOR PLAN AND LONGITUDINAL SECTION

State Theatre, Beloit, Wis. A. Reyner Eastman, Architect

THE STATE is a new small theatre with "deluxe" appointments and equipment, erected by the Wisconsin Theatres Enterprise at Beloit, Wis. This firm also operates two other theatres in Beloit—the Rex and the Majestic.

Beloit has a population of 23,000 people, and is located in the heart of a rich industrial and agricultural region. During the summer the territory benefits considerably from a heavy tourist trade. There are a number of lakes and summer resorts in this district, which gives Beloit a large summer population.

The State theatre has a most vivid color scheme. For example, the walls of the lobby are a robin's egg blue, while the foyer walls are rose. The long auditorium has light blue walls 5 feet up, with the remainder of the walls decorated in cream and tan panels with red striping. This type of decoration is also employed on the ceiling.



The front, finished in plaster over concrete.

The State, which cost approximately $50,000, including furnishings and equipment, seats 624. The acoustical problem fact that the auditorium is long and nar- has been worked out very well, due to the row, instead of wide with "dead corners," as found in some houses.

The building is constructed of concrete blocks. Plaster was applied directly over waterproof plaster bond. Celotex was applied over approximately 75 per cent of the wall surface. The rear wall has Celotex and 4 inches of rock wool directly behind.

Structural glass is used at the front, with metal horizontal bands for division bars. The marquee is a triangular model extending across both the theatre vestibule and an adjoining store. Signs and marquee are lighted in neon, except for the marquee soffit, which is lamped. Attraction boards carry Adler silhouette letters in front of opal glass.

The floor in the lobby and foyer have a cement base and are carpeted in a geometric design in blue, brown and tan. Lobby poster cases are built in flush with the wall.

The walls of the auditorium are done (to an extent of 75 per cent of the area) in Celotex with painted battens. Auditorium illumination is entirely by pylon lights along the walls, the fixtures being of flashed opal glass supported by chromium-plated metal. They are lamped in three colors.

Lobby, looking into auditorium.

The slope of the auditorium floor is 5 feet, 9 inches (see longitudinal section).

The projection room walls are painted a cream color overall; both floor and ceiling are of reinforced cement. Equipment includes two Simplex projectors, RCA Photophone sound system, Brenkert Enarc lamps and a Century motor-generator.

The State is completely air-conditioned with automatic control. Auditorium air distribution is downward, from two visible ducts extending along the cornices.

Officers of the Wisconsin Theatres Enterprise are T. M. Ellis, Jr., G. A. Turner and C. J. Goetz.—William Scollard.

An Interview with
E. L. PATTON
Public Relations Director
Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.

Other Industries Teach Theatres Uses for Glass

IT WAS NOT very long ago that one might have wondered why a theatre publication should regard the glass industry of interest to its readers. Even today many theatre people may not be aware of the new applications of glass to theatres. But E. L. Patton, whose task it is to see that the world knows the story and the usefulness of glass, disposes of any wonderment the minute he starts to speak.

Interviewed in his office at the headquarters of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, he readily told the history of glass in decorative plans that began 'way back in the Rennaissance. And, as he traced the story of glass down through the centuries, he showed that the development of glass for varied purposes is really no new thing, that there was painstaking and logical preparation for the modern uses of glass, which is making this once fragile material so popular in theatre architecture and decoration.

"People are encouraged to take a step by what they see before they part with their money," Mr. Patton said. "Theatres in my home city of Pittsburgh and in many other centers of population are definitely behind other businesses in bringing to their aid, in this respect, the many modern uses of glass. For the purposes of creating the illusion of a vast space in a really restricted one, glass is the one medium upon which architects can rely. And if you take into consideration its long life, the ease with which it is kept clean, and the impression of cleanliness which it imparts to almost everyone, it is easy to see the advantages of it."

In some of the newer theatres, glass in various hues and shades has been used most successfully by architects, Mr. Patton said. He pointed out that the trend to glass, in the theatre, has been really directed that way by other business. Modern department stores, he said, were the first to use glass extensively in their interior design, and the results were quickly reflected in other lines of trade in which an appeal to beauty in the customer's approach was desired.

"Of course," he smiled, "It is my job to advertise glass and to create conditions which will sell it, but really, now, isn't it sensible to look to some object of inherent natural beauty, to obtain the beautiful in final result?

"I have seen the marvelous changes wrought in the interior of old buildings by the use of glass. I know that every theatre owner spends stupenduous sums to make his place of business attractive to the eye and I know too, that if he knew that glass could do for him, what it can do, he would insist upon its use in his lobby.

"And another thought," he added: "Glass in the theatre will stay modern longer and will retain its beauty indefinitely with practically no upkeep.

"Picture producers use vast quantities of glass in those extravaganza pictures. Choruses spin dizzily over it's ever-shining surface. Producers have found that opaques and black glass are unexcelled to give the results they want to obtain in making the films beautiful. And I'm certain that decorators, designers, and architects will find that glass is the medium for which they have been seeking to impart to theatre patrons the feeling that one is really in the presence of beauty when glass is decoratively employed.—C. W. Leith.

Would It Be Wise for You To Install an Electric Power Plant?

● Presenting, not arguments, but cost data on actual theatres to guide you in deciding what to do in your own case concerning electric power costs

THIS ARTICLE presents no argument either for or against privately owned power plants for providing power for theatre operation. It is an effort to present factual data in order to clarify the situation. All figures used in this article are based upon calculations of specific theatres now in operation.

Generally the discussion is divided into three sections—Section 1, a certain theatre in a neighborhood of a large district without air-conditioning; Section 2, the same theatre with air-conditioning; and Section 3, a theatre in the downtown district of the same city, with air-conditioning installed now. These comparisons are made from the standpoint of fuel, natural gas, and Diesel engines.

1. NEIGHBORHOOD THEATRE WITHOUT AIR-CONDITIONING

This theatre is a neighborhood house seating about 1,000, equipped with ventilating equipment only. On weekdays it operates two evening shows, opening at about 7:00 p.m. and closing about 11:45 p.m. Sundays it opens at 1:45 p.m. and runs continuously until about 11:45 p.m.

A typical summer load chart, with ventilating fans running, indicates an operating peak electrical load of 40 kilowatts at about 8:00 p.m. on week days. Of course, one engine and generator could be installed to handle such a load very satisfactorily, but to provide the necessary flexibility and protection against complete shut-down we would select, as minimum engine and generator equipment, two 25-kw. engine generating units. This arrangement might be criticized as not providing sufficient standby capacity, but from a cost standpoint this would be the minimum.

Now to determine the annual plant capacity factor: Annual capacity factor equals kilowatt hours per year divided by the plant size in kilowatts multiplied by the running hours per year.

Summer conditions: Sundays—1 engine-generator on 4.5 hours equals 60.3 kwh. times 26 days equals 1570 kwh.; 2 engine-generators on 5.5 hours equals 174.9 kwh. times 26 days equals 4550 kwh. Weekdays—2 engine-generators on 4.7 hours equals 137.0 kwh. times 156 days equals 21,400 kwh.

Winter conditions: Sundays—1 engine-generator on 5.0 hours equals 36.8 kwh. times 26 days equals 960 kwh.; 2 engine-generators on 6.0 hours equals 120.3 kwh. times 26 days equals 3130 kwh. Weekdays —1 engine-generator on 3.3 hours equals 16.0 kwh. times 156 days equals 2500 kwh.; 2 engine-generators on 4.4 hours equals 89.0 kwh. times 156 days equals 13,900 kwh.

Total estimated as above—48,010 kwh. Actual on this theatre—46,173 kwh. Therefore the correction factor (46,173 divided by 48,010) is .962.

For one engine-generator:

4.5 hrs. × 26 days =	117 hrs.	1570 Kwh.
5.0 hrs. × 26 days =	130 hrs.	960 Kwh.
3.3 hrs. × 156 days =	515 hrs.	2500 Kwh.
Total.	762 hrs.	5030 Kwh.

Capacity factor

$$= \frac{5030 \times .962}{25 \text{ kw} \times 762 \text{ hrs.}} \times 100 = 25.4\%$$

For two engine-generators:

5.0 hrs. × 26 days =	143 hrs.	4550 Kwh.
4.7 hrs. × 156 days =	733 hrs.	21400 Kwh.
6.0 hrs. × 26 days =	159 hrs.	2130 Kwh.
4.4 hrs. × 156 days =	686 hrs.	13900 Kwh.
	1721 hrs.	42980 Kwh.

Capacity factor

$$= \frac{42980 \times .962 \times 100}{2 \times 25 \text{ kw} \times 1721} = 47.9\%$$

NATURAL GAS ENGINES

The first consideration will be natural gas driven engines. The particular type of engine selected for this study is manufactured by a nationally known concern and may be accepted as standard for the type.

The equipment: Two 25-kw. alternating current, 3-phase, 60-cycle, 4-wire, 120/208-volt generators driven by blank type industrial engine at 1800 r.p.m. Units to operate in synchronism, with one as a base load machine, and the other to cut on or off automatically as the load requires.

The manufacturer rates the above engines at 17 cubic feet of 1000 B.T.U. gas per kilowatt-hour generated.

The following consumption has been taken from a typical test consumption curve compiled by the manufacturer:

Unit consumption at 100% load—100%
Unit consumption at 75% load—112%
Unit consumption at 50% load—139%
Unit consumption at 25% load—222%

Please note how the consumption of fuel increases as the engine-generator operates at less than 100% load.

We have just determined that the average capacity factor for this plant is 45.6%, and by interpolation of the table above it can be determined that this capacity factor represents fuel consumption at 147%, or 17 cubic feet of gas times 1.47 equals 25 cubic feet of gas per kwh. output.

Now 46,173 kwh. times 25 cubic feet of gas per kwh. equals 1,154,325 cubic feet of gas per year. (1000 cubic feet is expressed mcf), or 1154 mcf of gas per year, or 96.2 mcf of gas per month.

Using the following rate for gas:

$0.50 × 5 mcf = 2.50	$2.50
0.40 × 10 mcf = 4.00	4.00
0.30 × 81.2 mcf = 24.36	24.36
Demand charge on gas = $34.00	34.00
Total monthly gas charge.	$ 64.86
Total yearly cost	$778.32

Lubricating oil costs: The manufacturer bases the consumption of lubricating oil at 1 gallon per 2000 kwh., or 46,173 kwh. divided by 2000 equals 23 gallons. At 50c per gallon, the yearly cost of lubricating oil (23 times 50c) is $11.50.

Installation costs:

Two engine-generator units as described above	$4,000.00
Building alterations to create engine room	330.00
Cooling water system	300.00
Freight, 10,000 lbs. @ $4.50 per cwt.	450.00
Hauling	20.00
Foundations	100.00
Installation costs	100.00
Exhaust system	100.00
Piping and fittings	60.00
Synchronizing panel	200.00
Wiring	150.00
	$5,810.00
Commissions and fees at 5%	290.00
Total installation cost	$6,100.00

Before reading further, please go back over these items and read them carefully. Though they are all estimated in round figures, they are extremely low, therefore conservative in this comparison of costs.

Interest Cost (assume a rate of 6% per annum): $6,100.00 times 0.06 equals $366.00.

Horsepower Tax: In many states there is a tax on horsepower generated by power plants. In this particular state where these studies were made, there is such a tax. This tax is computed on the basis of 50c per h.p. of plant capacity. One h.p. equals 0.746 kw.

$$\frac{2\text{ units}\times 25\text{ KW}\times $0.50}{.746} = $33.50\text{ tax per year}$$

Insurance and Miscellaneous Taxes (assume an average rate of 2%): $6,100.00 times .02 equals $122.00 insurance cost per year;

Depreciation of equipment: Assume 5 years depreciation of mechanical equipment, or 20% annually. Assume a 20-year depreciation of electrical and miscellaneous equipment, or 5% annually.

Approximate divisions—
Mechanical	$2,000.00
Electrical and Misc.	4,100.00
Total	$6,100.00

$2,000 × .20 = $400.00
4,100 × .05 = 205.00

Total annual depreciation........ $605.00

Summary of the above annual costs:

Fuel (natural gas)	$778.32
Lubricating oil	11.50
Replacement of engine parts	150.00
Bi-weekly inspections @ $1 per visit	104.00
Normal maintenance	80.00
Miscellaneous	60.00
Horsepower tax	33.50
Insurance and miscellaneous taxes	122.00
Interest on investment	366.00
Depreciation—mechanical	400.00
Depreciation — electrical and miscellaneous	205.00
Total Annual Costs	$2,310.32
Purchased power in this theatre cost	1,971.43
Net Loss	$ 338.89

Now for argument sake let's omit the depreciation charges on the grounds that proper and adequate maintenance offsets the depreciation:

Purchased power	$1971.43
Annual plant costs	1705.32
Apparent net saving	$266.11

On the basis of this net saving figure of $266.11, it would require 23 years and four months for the plant to save its cost.

Let's consider a second possible argument. We will omit the depreciation charges for the reasons given above, and we will also omit the interest charges because we would pay cash for the plant:

Total annual cost	$1339.32
Purchased power cost	1971.43
	$632.11

Even at this saving it would require nine years and nine months for the plant to pay for itself.

The above has all been calculated on using natural gas as a fuel. I have gone into a great many figures, I know, but I still have not burdened you with all of the detailed considerations that were necessary to arrive at these results. And now I shall give you the summary of a Diesel plant for this same theatre:

DIESEL POWER PLANT

For a Diesel power plant, the total installation cost may be placed at $7,697.00. Summary of annual costs is as follows:

Fuel	$323.20
Lubricating oil	11.50
Three inspections per week @ $1	156.00
Normal maintenance	170.00
Miscellaneous costs	60.00
Horsepower tax	33.50
Insurance and miscellaneous taxes	153.94
Interest	461.82
Depreciation—mechanical	300.00
Depreciation — electrical and misc. laneous	234.85
Total annual costs	$1,904.81
Purchased power cost	1,971.43
Annual net saving	$ 66.62

Lamp Efficiency 24% Higher Than in 1927

The efficiency of incandescent lamps has been increased 24% since the introduction of the present type of gas-filled, coiled-filament lamp ten years ago. During the decade, according to data given in a statement issued by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, the initial light output of the 60-watt mazda lamp has rizen from 666 to 828 lumens.

To illustrate the value of this increase in dollars and cents, an example is given of the use of 1927 type 60-watt lamp together with a 15-watt lamp, making a total of 75 watts. The light output from the two lamps is less than that from a 60-watt lamp of today's construction, inasmuch as the 15-watt lamp gives 141 lumens. But the 15-watt lamp during its normal life burns 70c. worth of current, which represents the loss when burning the 1927 type lamp, the gain when burning the 1937 lamp.

This compares with a net loss of $338.89 for gas engines.

By omitting the depreciation charges, this saving would be increased to $601.47 per year, or it would require, on this basis, twelve years and 10 months for the plant to pay for itself.

By omitting the depreciation and the interest charges from the annual costs, the saving would become $1,063.29; and it would require seven years and three months to repay the investment.

The final conclusion in this consideration in Section 1 is (a) that the natural gas is more expensive than the Diesel plant from the standpoint of operating costs, but (b) that the gas plant is less expensive initially to install. In neither case does it appear that a power plant is justified.

2. NEIGHBORHOOD THEATRE WITH AIR-CONDITIONING

This section refers to the same theatre as that mentioned above, but in addition we are including refrigerated air-conditioning. As this particular theatre would require 65 tons of refrigeration, and as the foregoing considerations in Section 1 would seem to indicate that a private power plant would be impractical, we plan as follows:

The main compressor is 65 tons capacity and is assumed to be belt driven by an electric motor for consideration of purchased power. For private power plant the compressor would be driven by a high-speed Diesel engine. Auxiliary equipment, pumps, and blower, in either case will be driven by electric motors. Such blower and pump electrical load would be somewhat less than the existing load on the ventilating equipment, and for practical purposes we can consider that the two would balance. Therefore the total load on the engine generating equipment would remain about as computed in Section 1, and the findings of Section 1 should be considered in conjunction with the facts that follow:

Air-conditioning costs will be the same in either case; therefore we are only concerned with a comparison of costs based on the cost of the driver power installed—that is, an electric motor, controls and wiring in one case, and an engine, foundation, fuel system, etc., in the other case.

Cost of purchased power drive:

Total annual purchased power cost	$3,231.96

Diesel drive costs (this includes costs shown in Diesel breakdown in Section 1 for plant now that will carry whole theatre, but air-conditioning compressor will be directly driven by its own 80-h.p. engine):

Fuel	$637.00
Lubricating oil	22.20

Maintenance of compressor engine	106.50
Horsepower tax on compressor engine	40.00

Interest on cost compressor engine	61.52
Depreciation compressor engine	307.60
Total annual cost Diesel plant, including air-conditioning	$2,799.68
Purchased power costs	3,231.96
Annual net savings	$ 432.28

The Diesel engine generating units involve an investment of $7,697.00. The cost of engine for the compressor is $3,076.00. Therefore the total investment for power equipment is $10,773.00. (This does not include cost of air-conditioning equipment). With such an investment and the net saving shown above, it would require 45 years to get the investment back.

The conclusion that I would draw from Section 2 is that it is best to install air-conditioning in this theatre and remain on the power company's service. The adding of the air-conditioning load did not make the idea of private plant operation sufficiently attractive.

3. DOWNTOWN THEATRE WITH AIR-CONDITIONING

This is an analysis of an actual theatre located in a downtown section. It seats almost 1300 and is now equipped with air-conditioning. The question is: Shall we install a power plant?

Data was collected on this theatre in much the same way as on the other two theatres, and every bit as much care was taken to analyze the situation as was devoted to these theatres. However, to save time and space and your patience, we will only outline the findings.

With a maximum demand, while operating air-conditioning, of 183 kilowatts, and a demand in winter months (without air-conditioning) of 65 kw., at least two engine generators will have to be provided However, safe practice would require three machines as protection against breakdowns and to take care of occasions when repairs are required. Therefore, three 90-kw. engine generators were decided upon for this study. Because of much longer operating hours in this theatre as against the other theatre, it was decided that these engine-generator units should be low-speed units of a somewhat better type of equipment than was selected for the situations covered in Sections 1 and 2.

By the same method as outlined in Section 1, it was determined that this proposed setup would have the following general data:

Average plant capacity factor—64.5%
Total kwh. per year—419,477
Purchased power cost—$7,537.93
Hours of operation—4400

Installation costs Diesel generation equipment:

Three units as briefly described, f.o.b. factory	$27,000.00
Improvements to site	50.00
Cooling water system	750.00
Freight	1,500.00
Hauling and handling	300.00
Foundations	1,000.00
Installation costs	1,000.00
Lubricating oil equipment	300.00
Air handling equipment	350.00
Piping and fittings	600.00
Instruments	150.00
Electrical equipment and wiring	1,200.00
Hoisting	150.00
	$34,350.00
Contingencies, 5%	1,717.00
Total cost installed	$36,067.00

Summary of annual costs:

Fuel	$2,080.00
Lubricating oil	105.00
Maintenance	587.27
Miscellaneous costs	144.00
Horsepower tax	181.00
Insurance and miscellaneous taxes	721.34
Labor	864.00
Interest	2,164.02
Depreciation—mechanical	1,340.00
Depreciation—electrical and miscellaneous	803.35
Total annual plant cost	$2,989.98
Purchased power cost	7,537.93
Net loss	$1,452.05

Now should we omit depreciation charges from the above annual cost figures, the result becomes an annual net saving of $691.30. On this basis it would require 52 years and 2 months to repay the investment.

In an effort to make the picture look more attractive, let us omit the depreciation charges and the interest charges. In this case the result is an apparent net saving of $2,855.32. If this were a real instead of an apparent saving, we could get our investment back in twelve years and seven months, which sounds fine—but is it a fact?

A great many persons who have privately owned power plants will quote very glibly a per-kilowatt cost at their distribution board of, say, six, seven or eight mils. Then you think of last month's power bill and you know that you pay between one and two, or as high as three cents per kilowatt-hour. It may look discouraging, but before you jump from the frying pan into the fire, get the whole story, and don't rely on the figures quoted you either by engine salesmen or the off-hand statement of per-kilowatt-hour costs—J. T. K.

Data on Actual Air-Conditioning Installations

[The following description of two types of air-conditioning systems recently installed in motion picture theatres, is one of a group to be presented from time to time in Better Theatres on actual installations of air-conditioning equipment, selected for special interest which they derive from the conditions which had to be met. The two installations discussed here were made by the air-conditioning division of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Mansfield, Ohio.—THE EDITOR.]

SEVERE limitations of space had to be met in arranging for the air-conditioning of the Center theatre in Atlanta, Ga. This house is one of the group of theatres operated by Louis S. Bach in that city. It was remodeled in 1934, at which time a washed-air system was installed. Local conditions were such that this proved inadequate, and although the Center seats only 500, and plays subsequent-run pictures at 10c and 15c admissions, complete air-conditioning was provided for last May.

The installation consists of two Westinghouse C. L. S. 518 compressors, two Westinghouse E. V. 550 evaporative condensers, one Westinghouse A. H. 154 air-conditioning unit with a 30 M-2 steam coil and W. E. 154 evaporator coil.

Because of the space limitations, it was necessary to excavate under the stage, and the air-conditioning unit is mounted against the lower side of the stage floor on an angle-iron rack. Directly beneath the air-conditioning unit are located the two compressors, and directly in front of these are the two evaporative condensers.

The control system (Barbar-Coleman type) is a complete modulating system without any summer-winter changeover mechanism, due to the fact that during the winter months heat is required part of the day, and cooling during part of the same day.

The attic was insulated with 5-inch Capitol rock wool applied by the pneumatic process.

Outlets are located directly over the stage opening and are equipped with Uni-Flo grilles, delivering conditioned air a distance of 91 feet.

Quite a different type of system is that installed in the Isis theatre, Forth Worth, Texas. This employs a cooling tower erected on a steel structure above the roof, from which 300 gallons of water per minute are delivered to the condensers. The cost of supplying this amount of water is reported to be very small.

The system employs three Westinghouse C. L. S. 795 condensing units, and three W. E. 124 evaporators, installed in a room 25 feet above the stage floor and supported by a steel structure isolated from the building to prevent transmission of vibration. This location was necessary because of the absence of a basement or other suitable area. Each condensing unit is connected to an individual coil.

The system is controlled by a Minneapolis-Honeywell step controller, which is operated by a duct type thermostat located in the return air duct, starting or stopping the compressors as the load in the theatre increase or decreases. A humidity limit controller acts as a master control, keeping the relative humidity within the comfort limits. The entire system is started or stopped manually by a pushbutton control.

The conditioned air is discharged into the auditorium through sixteen ceiling outlets. Capacity ratings call for the maintenance of 76° with an outside temperature of 100°. The relative humidity is reported never to have exceeded 50% with a capacity audience of 1000.

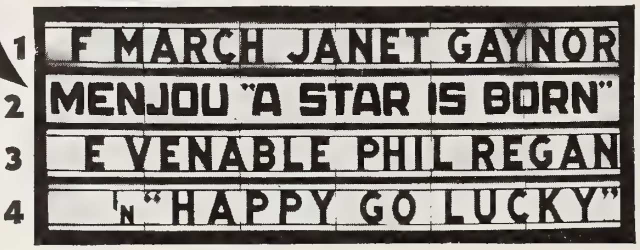
This Visual Test PROVES Wagner Letters SUPREME

In This Test Installation Line #2 Shows Wagner Letters — Lines #1, 3 and 4 Show Imitation Letters.



Wagner's the Only TRUE Silhouette letter

Because:—

- It is the only COMPLETE silhouette — top, bottom and sides.
- It is the only STRAIGHT-EDGE letter—a sharp silhouette—no blurred outlines.
- Wagner Letters have no visual "hickeys" on them to distort and reduce readability.
- Wagner Letters are visually true and uniform dimensionally—they are not "thick and thin."

Notice that Wagner Letters (line #2) are COMPLETELY silhouette, top and bottom as well as sides—BUT the imitation letters on lines 1, 3 and 4 are NOT silhouette top or bottom; the cross-bar mounting requirements for the imitation letters CUT OFF the silhouette at top and bottom.

Notice that the Wagner Letters (line #2) are UNIFORM and DIMENSIONALLY TRUE to the eye whereas the imitation letters have visual "hickeys" at top or bottom or both (notice in line #4 the "hickeys" on the letters P, G, O and C particularly). Also contrast the sharp clean-cut outlines of Wagner Letters (line #2) with the "soft" or "blurred" edges of the imitation letters.

Avoiding Personal Liability In Signing Employer's Contracts

theatre employes may avoid liability on contracts made for their employers, it is advisable to state a rule as follows:

In consideration of the numerous past litigations involving signatures affixed by agents and representatives, it is well established that one who signs contracts, letters, orders for merchandise, or other instruments by authority of his employer, positively is relieved of personal liability on these obligations if he observes that:

(1) The name of his employer appears in the body of the contract, or on the letterhead.

(2) The word by or per precedes his signature.

(3) The word agent or manager or other official title follows his signature.

(4) The employer's name precedes the agent's signature, as follows: "The National Theatre Corporation, by John Smith, Manager."

While this rule appears simple, and may be depended upon to protect theatre officials and managers from ordinary liability on contracts signed for employers, yet it is necessary to review diversified examples of controversies, in which are illustrated variations of the law, in order that readers may anticipate all phases of possible litigations. In this manner readers may avoid all likelihood of financial losses arising from signing instruments as representatives of their employers.

INDICATING INTENTION

As above mentioned, it is good policy for all theatre employes, who sign agreements for their employers, to include in the body of the agreement the name of the employer, and the signature should be affixed to show that he is acting as representative of his employer. However, if contracts have been signed otherwise, and the evidence proves that the signer intended to sign the contract in his official capacity and as representative of the employer, liability may be avoided.

For illustration, in Williams, 287 Pac. 50, it was disclosed that an official signed a note without including the name of the employer. However, it was understood that the employer and not the official was to be liable. Later the holder of the note attempted to collect the amount due from the official. However, the higher court held the employer solely liable on the note because when the note was signed, the holder knew that the official's employer was intended to be bound. This court said:

"The fact that this contract was 'accepted' by the company's manager without adding after his signature words indicating his representative capacity, does not, when considered together with all the other facts shown by the records, require a holding that the loan was not made to the company."

Also, in Nelson Company v. Morton (288 Pac. 845) a note was signed as follows: "Trustees of Greater Amusement Association, Drew Morton, Pres., C. C. Loser, Sec." Later the holder endeavored to hold Morton and Loser personally liable. However, since it was proved that when the note was signed the holder knew that it was intended to obligate the employer exclusively, the court refused to hold either Loser or Morton personally liable, saying:

"Under the findings of the court this is precisely the sense in which the note was understood by the payee at the time it was executed and delivered."

Of course, if an endorsement is made, or a signature is affixed, without witnesses, or the contract is completed by correspondence, signers must be very certain to follow the above mentioned legal rule in order to avoid possibility of liability.

For instance, in Drill v. Rosen (151 Atl. 399) it was disclosed that a contractor wrote to the president of a theatre corporation the following letter:

"Mr. Louis Rosen, Orange, N. J. Dear Sir: We propose to do the following work at the Colonial Theatre, Orange, N. J. [then follows an itemized statement of the various repairs and construction work proposed to be done]. We will do this work at cost plus 10% for overhead and 10% for profit, with the understanding that the final cost will not exceed $4,405. Very truly yours, Drill Construction Company, per Max Drill." This letter was endorsed by Louis Rosen (president of the theatre corporation) as follows: "O.K. Louis Rosen."

The contractor did the work and furnished the materials specified in this letter. When the contractor demanded payment from Rosen it was refused on the grounds that he was the president of the corporation and not personally liable because he endorsed the contract in his capacity as president for the corporation. Notwithstanding this contention, the court held Rosen personally liable, saying:

"The evidence attempted to be introduced was offered for the purpose of showing that Rosen acted as the agent and not as a principal in making the contract. The fact that Rosen, the person to whom the offer was made and who personally accepted it, was not the owner of the theatre premises but was the president of the corporate owner, is immaterial. . . . An agent who contracts in such form as to make himself personally responsible cannot afterward relieve himself from that responsibility. . . . Where the body of the contract . . . is signed by him personally and not as agent or representative of the corporation, he is personally obligated to perform the contract."

SIGNATURE FORM

While we are on the subject of signatures, it is well to explain that any form of a signature, such as that made with a rubber-stamp, typewriter, symbols, initials, and the like, may be enforceable. [Signatures were more extensively discussed by Mr. Parker in the May 29th issue.—The Editor].

For instance, in the leading case of Mayers v. McRimmon (53 S. E. 447) the higher court considered the rights of an employe to bind his employer by endorsing the latter's name with a rubber-stamp. This court said:

"Where the name required has been so placed by one having authority to do it and with intent to endorse the instrument, the authorities hold that this is a valid endorsement."

Also, the same law is effective where a theatre official or executive affixes a signature with a typewriter intending to make a valid contract (195 Pac. 316).

Moreover, it is immaterial whether a theatre official or employe signs a contract by full name or initials, providing the employer intended to be bound when the signature was affixed. For illustration, in the case of Meaton v. Meyers (33 Ill. 424) it was disclosed that a contract was signed "H. C. M.," by a person who intended to make a valid contract. In the later litigation the court held the contract valid.

ACCURACY OF STATEMENTS

There are numerous reasons, excepting signing or approving contracts, why executives and employes may be held personally liable for acts performed, statements made, and contracts completed. Many higher court cases show that they are liable (1) where they knowingly make a false representation of authority with intent to deceive a person; (2) where he performs unlawful acts with or without authority of his employer; (3) if he performs a damaging act believing he has authority, but actually has none; (4) where he performs a damaging act outside his usual scope of authority, but he intends to render his employer a valuable service; and (5) where he intentionally assumes an obligation for his employer.

PRESENCE OF FRAUD

Another important point of the law is that the rules of common honesty and common sense apply alike to all persons, without regard to the capacity in which they act. Therefore, any official of a theatre corporation is personally liable where the testimony proves that he used fraud to induce another to give credit to the corporation which later becomes insolvent or cannot pay off the assumed obligation.

AUTHORITY OF CHIEF EXECUTIVES

THE LAW is well established that a president may not legally bind a corporation except in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws, or by authority of its directors, or from a recognized custom.

For illustration, in First, 227 N. W. 908, it was disclosed that a corporation accepted notes. It sold these notes to a bank. At this time the president of the corporation agreed in writing with the bank that the corporation "shall protect and save harmless and be and remain liable on promissory notes purchased" by the bank.

Subsequently litigation developed over whether the corporation was liable to the bank for the amount of the notes on which the bank had failed to collect. The articles of incorporation of the corporation provided that the business should be managed by a board of directors. Neither the articles nor the by-laws authorized the president to enter into or execute contracts of the character here involved.

The court held the corporation not liable on the notes, since the directors had not authorized the president to obligate the corporation in this manner. The court explained the law, as follows:

"It is well settled that the office of president of a corporation in itself confers no power upon him to bind it by contract. His power must be determined by the organic law of the corporation or by delegation of authority by its managing officers, or be implied from the habit or custom of transacting the business of the corporation. . . . . there is nothing to show that the corporation knew of the transaction; nor is it shown that it was the custom of the corporation for its president to execute agreements in its name of the character here involved."

GENERAL MANAGER

The legal question often has risen whether or not a theatre corporation is liable on contracts made by its general manager without direct authority of the Board of Directors. The courts have held that where the power of a general manager is not limited he has implied authority to bind the corporation by contracts made in good faith and within the scope of the corporation's business.

For example, in Warren v. Littleton (168 S. E. 226), it was disclosed that a general manager of a corporation entered into a contract for the purchase of real estate to be used by the corporation. It was contended by the counsel for the corporation that the contract was not valid because the manager had no authority from the board of directors to make the contract. However, it was shown that the board of directors had not limited the power of the general manager to transact business of this nature for the corporation. Therefore, the court held the corporation liable on the contract, and said:

"A general manager, if his authority is not limited, has power to bind the corporation by contracts made in good faith and within the corporate power, without any resolution of the Board of Directors expressly authorizing the contracts. . . . Upon the undisputed evidence we are of opinion that the authorization of the directors was not essential to the validity of the contract."

Correcting the Errors of Poor Planning rooms. Height had to be gained also, to provide for stadium seating over the foyer.

Centering the foyer wall, directly in front of the foyer doors, is a ramp down to the sliding door entrance to Mr. Edwards's office, now beneath the balcony. On each side of the sliding doors are two columns fitted with lumiline brackets. An ornamental hand rail of chrome metal marks the sides of the ramp. On each side of the columns are two drapery panels lighted indirectly. Foyer walls are of textured interior stucco. At each side of the foyer opens a ramp leading to the auditorium and balcony. The ramps go forward to rest rooms.

The offset ceiling of the foyer is painted in pastel shades with semi-gloss paint in order to obtain maximum reflection with minimum light. The offset light fixture, of chromium and flashed opal glass, provides over 40 color combinations. It is 9 feet long and 15 inches in diameter at the center.

Foyer carpets (furnished by Stebbins Theatre Supply, Kansas City) are in a rich red and tan with a touch of vermillion. Plastered walls have a tan base with an intermixture of orange to harmonize with the vermillion in the carpet. Drapery panels are of light blue with silver figure, while the draperies at the ramp openings are of blue brocaded material, double faced (all draperies furnished by the Kansas City Scenic Company). Foyer furniture (by the Lloyd Manufacturing Company) is of chrome tubing upholstered in royal blue leather.

Foyer doors are finished in four shades of red, striped in silver, and are equipped with aluminum kick plates. Corner torcheres, which provide indirect light, were made from old lamps which the theatre had discarded. They were shortened and the old gold and black finish was covered with a silver and blue glaze. Grilles over the radiators are of prestwood. Prior to remodeling there were no radiators in this section of the theatre.

Control of traffic inside the theatre had been almost impossible, inasmuch as the moment the patrons stepped through the lobby doors he was in the auditorium. Confusion and noise accompanied entrance and exit. Adding to the confusion was the arrangement of the rest rooms, which opened directly into the auditorium from the rear corners. Five rows of auditorium seats were removed and placed at the rear of the balcony, permitting provision of a balcony rail, which shields the audience now from the noise of incoming and outgoing patrons. Each row has a 12-inch rise and is 32 inches from back to back.

Because of the lack of ceiling height, the overhanging type of balcony was impossible. In fact, due to the location of a truss it was necessary to use every available inch of space in order to get the balcony in at all.

Previously, not only had there been no balcony, but 4 feet of space somehow had got lost between the projection room wall and the rear wall of the auditorium. The picture was projected across four feet of space and through a hole in a beaver board wall of the auditorium. This extra 4 feet of space, previously wasted, has been included in the seating space.

The projection room itself was reconstructed of 16x30-inch U. S. Gypsum pyrobar blocks, used for its fireproof and sound-absorbing qualities and its lightness in weight. The pyrobar was covered with a 1½-inch cement plaster to bring the projection room up to State specifications. The ceiling is of metal lath covered with cement plaster.

The new balcony chairs (by Ideal Seating Company) are finished in blue with upholstered paneled backs. The remainder of the auditorium is decorated in harmonizing colors. The balcony rail is faced with prestwood painted in mulberry. Balcony wainscoting is of prestwood in burnt orange, with natural light-finished Celotex above to the ceiling. The column on each side of the auditorium is of prestwood in deep red with chrome and flashed opal glass fixtures, fitted with colored bulbs.

Decorated Celotex, formed in several offsets, covers the ceiling. The continuous center fixture above the balcony, which was designed by the architect and built on the project, extends down 6 inches from the main ceiling panel and is equipped with colored lights operating behind opal glass.—Kenneth Force.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE a lot 53 x 100 feet, upon which I would like to figure on building a theatre. There should be two stores, one on each side and as for the balcony, I will leave this up to your suggestion, in a modern show house.

The population of the town is 2500, but we have a drawing from the entire county, which will probably exceed 25,000 and of course growing all the time.

I would like to know the approximate cost of the building; and if the lots are valued at $10,000, and the building cost added, what should the rental be for same, and the rental from the store rooms, as I want to build this for rental.—S.R.

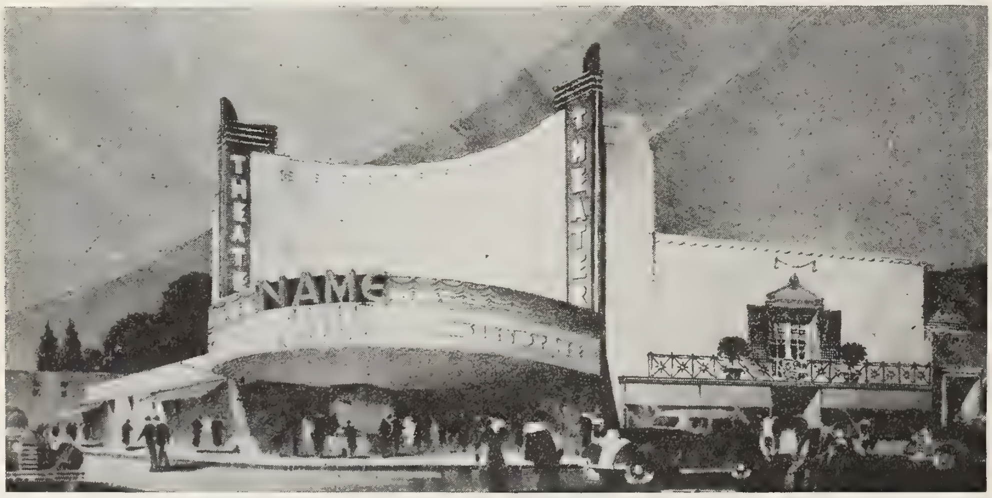
THE ANSWER:

IT IS NOT easy to give you a correct answer to your inquiry on account of lack of information concerning your requirements. A theatre building covering the entire lot, with store rooms and balcony, would cost, exclusive of equipment, around $35,000.

The majority of leases are made on a 10% basis of the cost of building and land value, the owner to pay taxes and insurance on building and land alone; the lessee to purchase his own equipment, which generally is put up for security of lease.

Not being familiar with the location of your property and the demand for store rooms, I cannot give you any idea of the rental which may be derived from these stores. You will be able to judge this by rental obtained from stores near you.

Of course, all leases are not made on the above stated terms—it all depends on location, population and drawing power of the theatre.



A classiscal interpretation of the modern pattern by S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect, for the facade of a theatre to be erected by Fox West Coast Theatres in Los Angeles, one of a new group of six houses to be built by this circuit. It will seat 900, and the cost is reported to be $84,000.

THE QUESTION:

PLEASE NOTE enclosed sketches in which we have tried to give enough details for you to advise us along a number of lines, in connection with the proposed remodeling of a theatre. We can spend about $4,000 on the job.

What would you suggest in the way of improving the appearance of our walls and ceiling? You will note these are now covered with unfinished 4 x 8 Celotex with seams covered with 2¼-inch walnut-stained strips. We have thought of removing the Celotex and cutting it into smaller squares for a better effect, but we doubt if it could be removed without tearing it up. Do you think it would be practical to remove the strips and put wall-paper over the Celotex?

We now have three wall-light fixtures on each side—no ceiling lights. What would you advise in the way of lighting?

Please note carefully our present floor incline in relation to height of screen and advise what should be done. If floor should be lowered, how much, and how much more incline would be given to various distances from the screen.

Do you think our present seating arrangement is best, or would it be better to have a 33-inch aisle on each side, and a center bank of eleven seats? The latter way would lose one seat on each row, but we believe we can make room for two more rows of seats by moving our present foyer and lobby walls nearer the street.

One of the toughest problems is that of the addition of rest rooms. To place them below the foyer means complete excavation and brings up the matter of placement of stairways. We have thought of putting one rest room on each side of the outer lobby, moving the box office forward.—H.A.

THE ANSWER:

I BELIEVE that the amount which you have budgeted for the remodeling of your theatre should be sufficient to give you a nice transformation. If the Celotex wall covering is in a good condition, there is no reason for removing it. You may be able to obtain a modern effect by removing the present heavy horizontal moulding and replacing it with a strip of Celotex of the same width. This strip can be provided with a design in V-grooved lines and beveled edges.

I also advise you to install a built-up strip in angle between ceiling and wall surfaces. This strip could have a scalloped edge. Just below this member it may be well to cut in three horizontal grooved lines in Celotex, about 6 inches apart. Paint the Celotex and vertical strip in a buff or deep ivory. The member in the angle between ceiling and wall, the V-cut grooves and the wainscoting could be painted in a pompeian red, which would give you a very pleasant color scheme. This will save the cost of applying wallpaper.

No ceiling fixtures will be required for lighting. If you do not care for wall brackets, a concealed lighting effect can be obtained by building out in the center of ceiling a 30-inch strip or trough of Celotex about 9 inches to 12 inches below the ceiling. The bottom of this strip may be built up out of three layers with beveled or scalloped edges, or designs may be made with V-grooved lines. Place in this space two rows of colored lamps with bright tin reflectors, with the lamps on double sockets. These lights should be operated by dimmers so that the color scheme may be changed. I suggest that you also place two recessed type ceiling fixtures under the overhang of the balcony—should you prefer wall brackets, you should have at least four on each side wall.

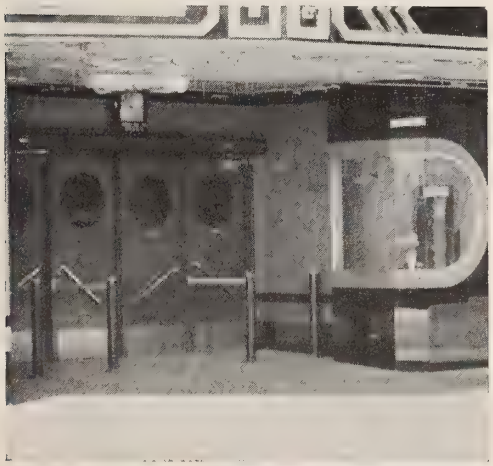
To have the proper incline of the auditorium floors, the slope should be not less than 4 feet-6 feet starting at the ninth row from the screen end. The first six rows should have a slope of not less than 9 inches, the next six rows 12 inches, and so on, increasing the slope of each section of six rows by 3 inches. Personally, I prefer side aisles with center bank of seats, as the center aisle occupies the best space.

Your later sketches for floor plan and front elevation seem to work out very satisfactorily with the exception of men's and women's toilet rooms. These rooms should be provided with vestibules, so as to give more privacy. I think this can be easily accomplished by building vestibule to men's room under stairs and changing location of water closets. It is mandatory that all entrance and exit doors swing out. I suggest that the front entrance doors have glass panels and the doors between entrance lobby and foyer are solid doors.

The covering of foyer walls with wood-grained sheetrock will give a pleasant effect the joints should be made with chrome plated snap-on strips placed either vertically or horizontally.

Porcelain enamel, Formica, Macotta or Terra Cotta are very effective for exterior wall facings, as also is architectural glass.

To ventilate toilet rooms, provide small exhaust fans, connected with sheet metal duct to extend to above roof, in case the theatre is located between other buildings; otherwise, these fans may be placed directly in outside wall. To provide air circulation, install metal grilles in lower part of door between foyer and toilet rooms.



An unusual entrance, achieving a striking modern pattern while supplying efficient handling of patrons. Entrance doors are operated by a photoelectric cell mechanism (installation by the Stanley Works, New Britain, Conn.). Fixtures of General Purpose Include Good Theatre Designs

Bracket fixture.

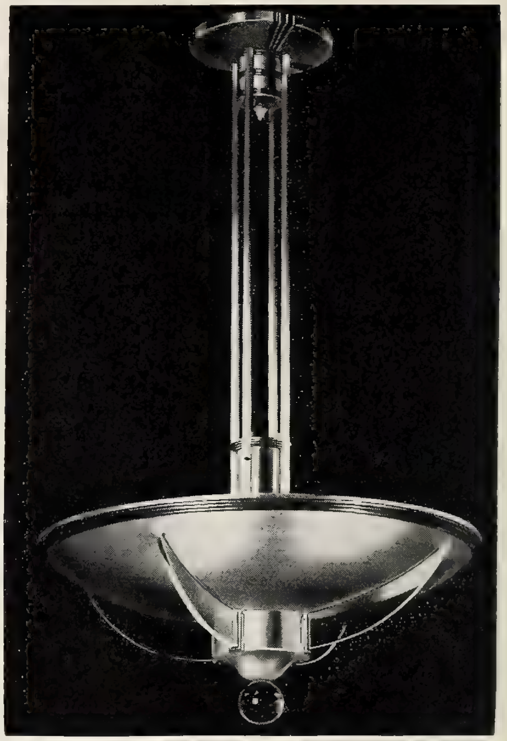
Pendent fixtures.
By Lightolier.



IN THE selection of modern lighting fixtures for theatres both economy and good taste are the more easily served because of the fact that among stock designs developed for homes as well as various classes of commercial buildings, can be found fixtures also well suited to theatres. All of the fixtures illustrated represent designs which are by no means to be designated as theatre types, specifically, yet they are well adapted to theatre foyers and lounges, and in some instances, to auditoriums as well.

For example, the bracket fixture first illustrated, which is suited to both pilaster and panel arrangements in auditoriums. Similarly, the pendent fixture shown next to it. Both are of patterns that are modern in their simplicity, executed in diffusive glass and chromium plated metal. The same materials are used to create the adjoining ceiling fixture, which is probably better adapted to foyers (preferably spacious ones) than to other divisions of the theatre.

Shown second from the bottom of the page is a ceiling pendent likely to prove unobtrusive enough in most instances to be applicable to auditoriums as well as lobbies, foyers and lounges. This is an indirect type fabricated in cast aluminum and given a soft finish, except for the trim, which is polished.

Of quite another class of modern light sources available among stock fixtures is the box unit illustrated. This type is available in various formations and in either bronze or chromium-plated metal for the structural members. The unit pictured is designed to take five 75- or 100-watt lamps, and four 25- or 40-watt lamps. The glass can be either opal or clear. A unit of this type is well adapted to balcony soffits, and also to foyers and lounges in which the ceiling is relatively low.

The Use of Existing Parts With New Sound Equipment

- How reproduction systems can be economically as well as effectively modernized by adapting some components of previous apparatus to the new

By AARON NADELL

THE INSTALLATION of new sound equipment should seldom be a matter of merely discarding an existing system and putting in a new one. In most theatres certain carefully selected components of the old apparatus can be retained in service with material benefit to the exhibitor. Three possible advantages are obtained:

(A) The total cost of the new system, counting installation expense as well as purchase price, may be reduced very substantially.

(B) The retained equipment may provide the theatre, at practically no cost, with a dual amplifying system for use in emergencies.

(C) The retained equipment may be used as the nucleus of a p.a. system, which the theatre then acquires at what may be little or sometimes practically no cost.

These advantages can be combined. For example, a p.a. system obtained in this way may be provided with simple switches that enable it to do double duty as an emergency sound channel.

Since the primary consideration must always be retaining the inherent advantages of the new system, these may be listed here briefly. They are:

(1) Better quality, in terms of wider frequency range, wider volume range, and less distortion.

(2) Comparative immunity, at least for the immediate future, from sound troubles and sound repair costs.

(3) Reduced power consumption.

REDUCING EQUIPMENT COSTS

All of these advantages can be retained even when substantial portions of the old system are kept in service for purposes of economy alone.

Those portions of the existing equipment that handle sound directly cannot continue to do so if modern sound quality is desired. The sound heads, sound amplifier and loudspeakers can never be used in non-emergency operation unless they are of extremely recent date. But a sound system contains a great deal of auxiliary equipment—power supply units, switching units and panels, and meter panels in some cases, as well as the racks or cabinet on or in which equipment is mounted. These have no direct bearing upon the quality of sound reproduction. Where they are kept and added to the new system as intimate components thereof the exhibitor saves the cost of buying new items of the same kind, and the possibly greater cost of installing and wiring up those new items.

Power units that replaced storage battries in supplying amplifiers of early design will never be needed in connection with a modern installation. All present-day amplifiers supply their own power, requiring only simple connection to a standard 110-volt a.c. line. But an amplifier power supply panel which no longer serves its original purpose may very possibly prove suitable for lighting the exciter lamps or supplying the speaker fields of even the most modern system.

Power supply units originally intended for those two latter functions can often continue to serve a new system as efficiently as they did the old one.

If the voltage or current output of the existing units is higher than will be needed, the surplus can be absorbed by a suitable resistor, which is easily installed. The surplus will seldom if ever be great enough to make the waste of power important in any practical sense. If the voltage and current output of the existing units is inadequate, they may sometimes still be retained in service and used in association with fewer, or smaller, new units. Some existing power units possess large unused reserves of voltage and current which can easily be drawn upon if needed to meet the requirements of a new system.

Meter panels, on the other hand, should be kept in service, wherever practicable, as an advantage rather than as an economy. New systems are in general less liberally supplied with meters than the earlier models were. But meters are extremely useful, not only in finding troubles quickly, but also in inspections and checkups that prevent trouble. It is hardly possible to have too many of them.

EMERGENCY CHANNEL

The existing amplifier, which is unlikely to be good enough for standard service with the new sound heads and the new speakers, will still be far preferable to no amplifier at all. It can always be used in emergency with the newer input or output equipment, but in some cases may have to be modified by substitution of new input or output transformers. The cost of the former is insignificant, and even the cost of the latter is amply justified, and more than justified, if it is the only substantial expenditure needed to give the theatre an emergency channel. A regular-emergency changeover switch will of course be necessary, and there will be some small expense in wiring that up. On the average, however, the expense of retaining the old amplifier for service in emergencies should run considerably less than fifty dollars—an insignificant item when added to the total cost of a new sound system.

Similarly, wherever a third projector is available one of the existing sound heads may be retained, and used when emergency requires. The output transformer may have to be modified to match the new amplifier's input. This is a very small matter.

Occasionally, existing equipment may have to be matched to the new in terms of power levels as well as in terms of input and output impedances. It is unlikely that any discrepancy in power level will be too great for ready adjustment by means of the volume control of the amplifier involved; nevertheless, power level maxima and minima should be considered at every point where existing amplifying equipment is joined to new apparatus. Manufacturers can readily supply the necessary data.

P.A. SYSTEMS

Existing amplifiers will be suitable for p.a. work wherever (a) the highest quality is not required for sound reinforcement, and (b) high quality sound reinforcement is required, but the amplifier is one of the later, or modified, types, capable of extended frequency reproduction. Such an amplifier will still not possess the volume range associated with the best sound picture practice of the present day, but will still be entirely satisfactory for microphone work.

Any existing amplifier will need a pre-amplifier, or pre-amplifiers, with many modern types of microphones, but not with all; there are some late model dynamic microphones, for example, that will work perfectly without pre-amplification. Among these are models that can be obtained from independent microphone makers who do not supply complete sound systems.

Where the choice of microphones to be used dictates the addition of pre-amplifiers, retaining the sound voltage and power amplifiers for p.a. still represents a substantial economy as against the purchase of new voltage and power amplifiers for that purpose.

Existing sound loudspeakers can sometimes be retained for p.a. speakers, if the highest quality p.a. sound is not required, and if considerations of space and acoustics permit their use. In most theatres it will be found necessary to purchase separate p.a. speakers, but even then the existing sound speakers may meet some portion of the p.a. requirements.

A very simple switching arrangement is all that is needed to enable the existing sound amplifier to serve both as an emergency sound amplifier and as a voltage and power amplifier for p.a.

All the data necessary for planning the combinations of old and new equipment here suggested can readily be obtained from manufacturers. In the case of power units they are, as has been said: voltage current and degree of filtering desired; voltage, current and degree of filtering available in the output of existing apparatus. Switching panels, meter panels, racks and cabinets are individual items in which details vary enormously, and must be considered individually. In the case of amplifiers retained for emergency or p.a. purposes, the relevant data are input and output impedances, and (rarely) maximum and minimum input and output power levels. In the case of loudspeakers to be retained for p.a. purposes, space available for their mounting and individual acoustic conditions will govern. Installation and wiring costs are always individual factors, upon which no general guidance is possible.

The foregoing has not taken into account any possible value which the existing equipment may have for trade-in or resale purposes, but exhibitors will find that in general this is extremely minute. There is a substantial demand today for the very latest and best in sound apparatus, but the call for used equipment is much smaller than it was. In some cases, especially where the existing installation is comparatively recent, a very moderate price may be obtained through resale in the foreign market or to the smaller domestic theatres. Such cases are exceptional. It is not long since a great many thousand dollars worth of sound equipment (at original prices) was broken up with axes merely because no one wanted it and it could not be sold at any price. Most exhibitors are likely to find that while parts of their existing apparatus can be useful to themselves, they have little value in the market except their value as junk.

Equipment which the exhibitor does not own, but has only leased, can frequently be retained without difficulty or expense, precisely because no one wants it. The existing lease is often extended indefinitely upon payment of the nominal rental of one dollar per year.

New Academy Method Aids Replacement of Filters

ELECTRICAL filters needed in any theatre for replacement or other purposes can be described with great exactness by means of a new and highly advantageous nomenclature developed by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and announced in a current bulletin of the Academy's Research Council. The new method uses not more than six very simple symbols to convey all the information needed in any practical theatre application.

It is based upon the actual work done by an electrical filter, which is to offer different resistance (impedance is the correct term) to different frequencies of current. For example, the simplest form of sound filter is one which permits low frequencies to pass readily and tends to suppress the high ones, or the reverse. Such filters are usually designated as "low pass" and "high pass," but the information conveyed by those terms is extremely incomplete. It is always necessary to know, in addition, at just what frequency the filter in question draws its distinction between low and high, and how sharp that distinction is. Older methods did not convey that information in the absence of a complete response curve—the new one does.

LOW PASS FILTER

A low pass filter may now be defined as 4,000-lo-6,000. The symbol "lo" means low pass. The figures mean that the filter distinguishes between low and high in the region of 4,000 to 6,000 cycles. The degree of distinction is more exactly indicated in that the first figure names the frequency at which the filter has suppressed 3 db of the sound current supplied to it; the second figure is that frequency at which the suppression reaches 10 db. Thus the slope, as well as the point, of cut-off, is accurately defined.

Another low pass filter might be called 200-lo-400, meaning that the suppression has reached 3 db. at 200 cycles, and 10 db. at 400 cycles. A filter with less pronounced action might be 200-lo-800, differing from the one just named in that the effectiveness of suppression is less immediate, 10 db. of suppression not being reached below 800 cycles.

HIGH PASS FILTER

High pass filters used the symbol "hi" instead of the symbol "lo." Thus, 400-hi-200 would be a filter that passed all frequencies above 400 cycles, at which point it introduces 3 db. of suppression, the suppression reaching 10 db. at 200 cycles.

The principle of this new nomenclature is obviously one of extreme simplicity. The symbols "lo" and "hi" refer to admittance, not to suppression: "lo" means low-pass and "hi" means high-pass. The action of the filter is invariably referred to two values of suppression, and only two, that is 3 db. and 10 db. The first figure cited in any three-symbol combination refers to the 3 db. limit, the second always to the 10 db. limit.

It will be noted that even the symbols "lo" and "hi" are not strictly necessary (although their presence will doubtless help prevent errors), since the order of the figures in itself conveys the same information. Thus the first figure always indicates the frequency at which the suppression is 3 db., and the second that frequency at which suppression reaches 10 db. Hence, if the first figure is lower than the second, the low frequencies obviously meet the least impedance; the filter is low-pass filter. If the first figure is higher than the second, the high frequencies encounter the least suppression, and the filter is of the high-pass type.

BAND PASS FILTER

A band pass filter, which offers least impedance to a selected band of frequencies, and more impedance to all frequencies at either side of the band, is described in six symbols, for example: 400-hi-200-4,000-lo-6,000. This device would introduce into the circuit in which it is used 10 db. of suppression at 200 cycles, 3 db. at 400; then pass all frequencies up to 4,000 with less than 3 db. of suppression; at 4,000 the suppression is again 3 db., and at 6,000 reaches 10 db. The width of the band to be passed, and the slope of suppression at either end of that band, are all accurately conveyed in this six-symbol designation.

BAND ELIMINATION

A band elimination filter (the reverse of a band pass filter) is similarly described as 300-lo-400-3,000-hi-2,000. In other words: 3 db. of suppression at 300 cycles; 10 db. at 400 cycles; more than 10 db. as far as 2,000 cycles, and only 3 db. again at 3,000. The suppression is less than 3 db. below 300 and above 3,000.

DIVIDING NETWORK FOR SPEAKER SYSTEM

A dividing network, as used in modern theatre speaker systems, is similarly described as 400-lo-800-400-hi-200. The figure that is given twice, in this case 400, is the cut-off or dividing frequency. The low-pass filter of the network (admitting sound to the low-frequency speakers or "woofers," passes all sound currents up to 400 cycles, at which point the filter action reduces volume by 3 db. The reduction in the volume admitted to the low-frequency speakers reaches 10 db. at 800 cycles. Sound currents admitted to the high frequency speakers, or "tweeters" are reduced by more than 10 db. below 200 cycles, by only 3 db. at the crossover point, and suffer less than 3 db. reduction thereafter, so far as the action of the network is concerned.

4. Frequency Analyses; Treatment Distribution

● Explaining the application of acoustic materials according to their absorption characteristics and to architectural design—the fourth article of a series

By C. C. POTWIN

WHEN MAKING frequency range analyses of theatres, it will generally be found that the "normal" absorption (that provided by seats, carpet, drapes, and interior surfaces) is considerably greater at the middle range and high frequencies than it is at the low frequencies. Naturally, this will indicate a longer time of reverberation at the low frequencies. For binaural (two ear) listening, it is permissible to have a slightly longer time of reverberation at the low frequencies than at the middle range and higher frequencies. However, this tolerance is largely governed by the size of the theatre and the geometrical relationship of surfaces to the source of sound.

Experience has proved that in the case of very small theatres having favorable proportions, a close approximation to a uniform time of reverberation throughout the frequency range presents the most desirable condition; whereas, for large theatres a proportionately greater degree of reverberation at the low frequencies is acceptable, and in some cases, actually desirable.

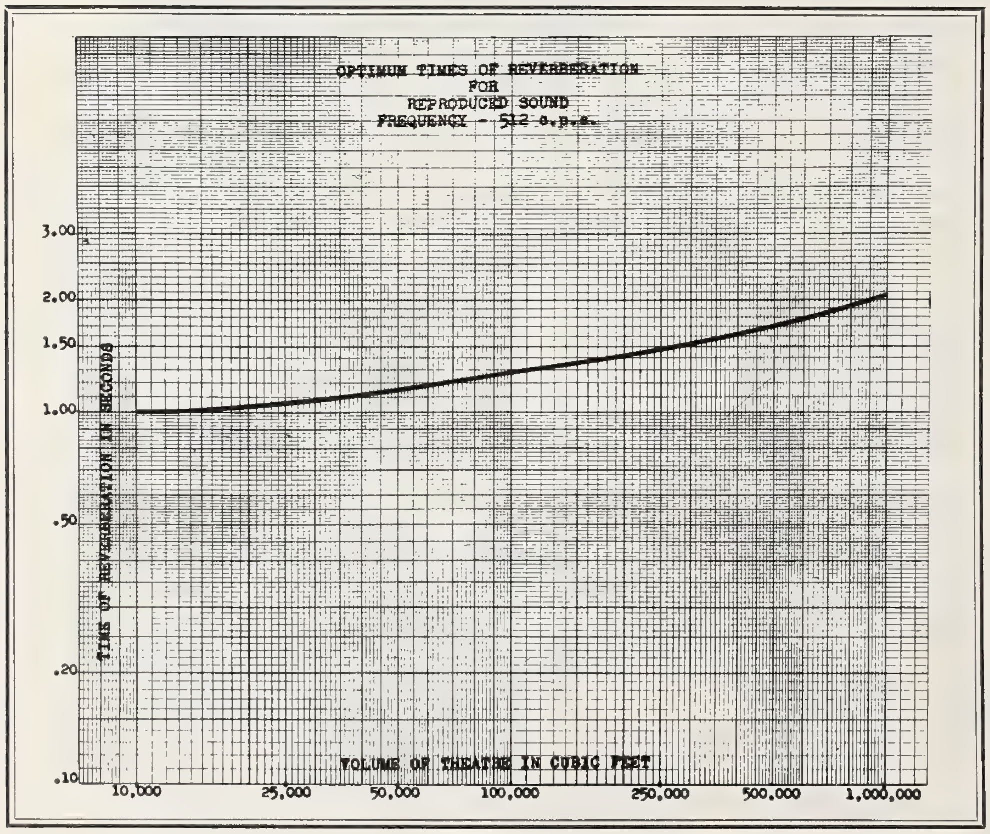
In both instances, however, the magnitude of departure from a strictly uniform frequency reverberation characteristic assumes definite limits which must be maintained to avoid unfavorable conditions.

An excessive amount of reverberation at the low frequencies will give a decidedly "boomy" or hollow effect to reproduced sound, particularly to speech. Too little reverberation at the high frequencies, also experienced where the treatment is not carefully planned, will give the effect of a decided "flatness" or lack of "presence" so essential to good sibilance in speech and brightness in music.

To ensure the proper balance of sound-absorption between the low, middle range, and high frequencies when planning acoustic treatment for the average theatre, the time of reverberation at 64, 128 and 256 cycles per second should not exceed the time at 512 c.p.s. by more than ¾, ½ and ¼, respectivly. Similarly, for the higher frequencies the average time of reverberation from 1024 to 8192 c.p.s. should not be less than ¾ of the time at 512 c.p.s. These maximum and minimum tolerances are based on adjusting the times to the optimum or best values at 512 c.p.s. shown as a function of volume in the accompanying chart.



In the majority of cases, little difficulty is experienced in providing for the proper amount of sound absorption at the high frequencies, because most materials are very efficient within this range. Since the normal absorption is also usually greater at these frequencies, precautions must be taken to avoid the introduction of more sound absorption than the analysis indicates is desirable within this portion of the frequency spectrum. Actually, it will be found that the overall sound absorption characteristic of the acoustic treatment selected for the various surfaces will have to taper off gradually at the high frequencies in order to fulfill completely the requirements for the average theatre.

The provision for the proper amount of sound absorption at the low frequencies presents a more complex problem. There are very few commercial acoustic materials available today having uniform absorption values at the low frequencies equal to, or greater than, their respective values at the middle range and high frequencies. Actually, many materials which appear to fulfill the requirements at 512 c.p.s. and at the higher frequencies, lack the correct amount of absorption at the low frequencies. Since the normal absorption in the theatre is usually less at the low end, it may be readily understood that the utmost care must be exercised in selecting materials for treatment to ensure that they will meet the requirements within this portion of the frequency range.

As stated in the second article of this series [May 29th issue] the low frequency absorption introduced by furred construction, properly designed, will help to place less stringent requirements on the surface acoustic treatment, in that it will permit the use of certain materials which might otherwise have absorption values falling below the correct limits at these frequencies. Furthermore, the absorption provided by the audience, although a variable, is also a contributing element at the low frequencies.

It will be found from the frequency range analysis, however, that even under the best average conditions the total amount of absorption provided by these two elements will not be sufficient to compensate fully for the usual discrepancies at the low end, and that the material or combination of materials selected for treatment must still have relatively high sound-absorption values at these frequencies if the best balance of reverberation time is to be assured for present high quality sound reproduction.

DISTRIBUTION OF TREATMENT

Having determined from the frequency range analysis the total amount of sound absorption in the form of acoustic treatment required for a given theatre, the next important step is to break this treatment down into its correct quantities and efficiencies for the various surfaces within the theatre. The distribution of this absorption will be almost entirely dependent upon the proportions of the auditorium and the shape of individual surfaces.

REAR WALL

In most cases, the rear wall presents the most objectionable surface from the standpoint of sound reflection. Large rear wall areas which are strictly uniform and unbroken in contour almost always require a special form of treatment having an extremely high sound-absorption value throughout the frequency range. This type of rear wall, producing serious acoustic difficulties, is frequency encountered in existing structures and is not uncommon in new designs. As explained in the second article, excessive treatment of the rear wall can be avoided and a better overall distribution of treatment throughout the auditorium be assured when balconies, irregular offsets, or triangular break-ups are correctly employed in design.

In cases where balconies are either installed, or to be provided in new design, an efficient form of acoustic treatment is usually required on the upper rear wall and front face of the projection room behind the balcony. Treatment can be omitted from the lower or main rear wall, however, when the depth of the under-balcony section (measured at the center in the case of curved balcony fronts) is greater than two and one-half times its average height, providing this wall is not curved or greater than 10 feet in height. In cases where the under-balcony section is shallow and a heavily draped standee rail is not provided, an efficient treatment is usually required for the lower rear wall surface. Acoustic treatment is also required on the front edge of the balcony when it presents a smooth unbroken surface greater than 1′6″ in height, and particularly when this surface is curved in the horizontal plane.

STANDEE RAIL

The use of glass in standee rails at the rear of the theatre is to be avoided. Such surfaces can be very objectionable from the standpoint of sound reflection even when they are located well within the limits of the under-balcony section.

If the use of glass becomes a necessary feature in special designs, this glass must be tilted or angled in a manner such that direct sound reflections do not return from this surface to the audience area. Otherwise, the entire surface to the audience area. Otherwise, the entire surface of the glass must be heavily draped on the side of the standee rail facing the stage.

SIDE WALL

The closest approach to the ideal method of acoustic design and treatment of the side walls involves the use of well-broken, nonparallel surfaces having a treatment which is highly absorbent at the rear and which diminishes uniformly in amount and efficiency toward the front. Where the side walls are strictly parallel and regular in shape, as is usually the case in existing theatres, a treatment having a high absorption value throughout the frequency range may be required for the major portion of these surfaces, assuming that the proportions of the theatre do not deviate too widely from the ideal.

In theatres where the length is extreme relative to the width and height and the side walls are strictly parallel and unbroken in contour, it is often necessary to install sections of acoustic treatment arranged in panels or in horizontal or vertical bands, spaced non-symmetrically with relation to directly opposite areas along the side walls.

The purpose of this non-uniform distribution of treatment is to reduce the magnitude of interference from multiple reflections so far as practicable, and still maintain the correct time of reverberation, together with an acceptable degree of liveness at the rear sections of the seating area. Uniformity of appearance is secured with this method of treatment through the use of false panels or untreated sections of a corresponding size, shape and color, on the side wall areas directly opposite the treated sections in each case.

Where balconies are provided and the depth of the under-balcony section is greater than two and one-half times its height, it is usually preferable to omit treatment from the side walls within this section. If the under-balcony section is deep, as is often the case in large theatres, and an excessive amount of sound absorption is introduced in this section, a decided loss of high frequencies is effected in the rear portion of the seating area.

CEILING

Ceiling treatment is frequently required in addition to wall treatment when the seats installed have a low sound-absorption value, when the enclosed volume per seat is high, or when the proportions deviate widely from the ideal. In the long theatre, this treatment should be moderate and distributed over the ceiling so as to ensure a satisfactory gradation of liveness from the front to the rear sections of the seating area.

When the theatre is extremely wide relative to its depth, ceiling treatment may become of even greater importance than side wall treatment. In this latter case, the amount of sound energy reflected from the ceiling at the first incidence is great compared to that reflected from the side walls. Consequently, a treatment having a high

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

SHOULD EXHIBITOR OR UNION SELECT THE MAN FOR THE JOB

AN ILLINOIS theatre manager propounds this question (with the request that neither his name nor location be divulged):

"For eighteen years I have managed theatres, beginning with a small town house and gradually progressing until the seat of my present activity is a city theatre having a capacity in excess of 1500. In fairness, Mr. Richardson, I should say that during all the time of my managerial experience I have been consistently benefited by your books and writing, first in the now defunct Moving Picture World, later in MOTION PICTURE HERALD and BETTER THEATRES, which publications have preformed a service of high value to the entire industry by backing you up in your battle for improvement in projection.

"The question I propose asking may prove an embarrassing one to answer publicly, but it nevertheless should be dealt with, and I am sure you have the courage to do it, regardless. It applies directly to my own case as well as to the case of very many other exhibitors and managers.

"This theatre employs and always has employed union projectionists. It is willing to and does comply with all union rules and regulations. It is quite willing to, this this so long as such rules and regulations seem to be founded on fair dealing and common sense, since myself and the owner of this theatre realize they are quite necessary from the point of view of the men.

"However, Mr. Richardson (and the owner joins me in this), can it be deemed right, fair and just that when the union has a list of idle projectionist members, and an employer against whom they have never had any grievance desires, for what is to him good and sufficient reasons, to have one of his projection staff changed and another union man substituted, with the request that a particular one of the idle men be assigned to his theatre, his request is curtly refused and he is obliged either to retain the man he has or accept one selected by the union business representative?

"Is it not totally unreasonable and wholly unfair that an employer be denied all privilege in the matter of selecting his employes? Can it be deemed either good business or good policy for a union, through its business representative, to force an employer either to retain a man with whom, laying aside the question of competency, he is unable to get along with on amicable

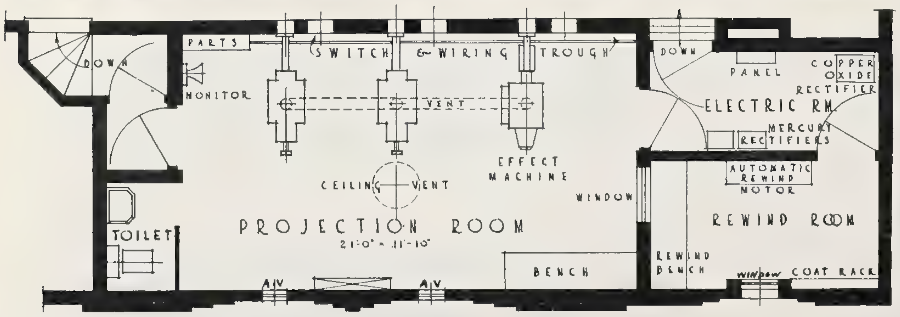
PLAZA THEATRE



The projection layout, in plan and picture, of the Plaza theatre in Vancouver, British Columbia, and a view of the front of this modern 1,000-seat house which replaces the 650-seat Maple Leaf theatre. The pictures and plans were contributed by Projectionist W. A. Crute, who states that the equipment consists in late type Motiograph projectors, Western Electric sound system, Brenkert Enarc lamps, Forest twin copper oxide rectifier. "I am using," explains Crute, "the old mercury rectifiers from the former house for the effect machine, which is a Chicago Cinema deluxe model." Crute further explains, with reference to the picture of the front, "Those four small holes below the windows are cold air intakes at the level of the projection room floor."

terms, or else to accept another concerning whose ability, skill and knowledge he knows nothing at all, nor has he any idea as to whether or not he can work with such individual on amicable terms?

"We ask you, Mr. Richardson, to discuss this matter, in print if you will, for we believe the matter needs a thorough airing."

In the first place, things have now advanced to the point where but very few unions officials are unwilling to accomodate employers in such a matter, at least so far as possible, unless there be very good reasons for refusal. Of my own knowledge, very many unions and union officials will go out of their way to do so. However, there are wheels within wheels and situations in which a business representative is wholly justified in objecting to permitting an employer to select some particular man from the list of idle union members.

As a case in point, suppose the idle list to consist of three men, all of essentially equal ability; however, Mr. A has been out of work longest, Mr. B. next, and Mr. C a comparatively short time. An employer requests that one of his men be changed, asking that Mr. C be appointed to him. Now under these circumstances, unless there be special reasons for such request, the business representative is perfectly justified in refusing it. Indeed he would have no right to grant it without the sanction of the union as a whole. For Mr. A has every right to expect to be assigned to that job, having been out of work longest. That is an item of basic right.

Then, too, there have been many cases in which requests for assignment of some special man to a theatre have been based on ulterior motives. Unpleasant, but quite true! Cases have been discovered, and proved true, where a dishonest union man has made a bid for a job by agreeing with an equally dishonest manager to remit, privately of course, a certain fixed percentage of his union wage each week. He was to be handed his full union wage each pay day, but was later to slip part of it back to the manager. That is another situation against which union business representatives must guard.

These things are pointed out merely to illustrate the fact that union officials may have justifiable reason for not acceding to what on the face of it, from the managerial viewpoint, seems a perfectly reasonable request.

It is, however, an exceedingly unpleasant situation in which a manager is obliged to retain in his employ a man with whom he is unable to maintain at least reasonably pleasant relations. Such a situation is one any able business representative will use every effort to iron out, even to changing the man unless there be some well based reason for refusal to do so.

Where such a case as this exists, I would say, most emphatically, that if the business representative be at all worthy to hold such position, he will call upon the employer and in friendly fashion (note the friendly, please) seek first to ascertain the exact basis of his objection to the man he proposes to supply, and just why he prefers his replacement by some other certain individual, rather than another of approximately equal ability. Certainly if both sides talk in friendly fashion and are willing to lay their cards on the table, some sort of settlement may be arrived at.

But the manager must be willing to explain fully his reasons for wanting a change of that kind, and the business representative must realize that while he may have power to refuse, it most emphatically is not up to him to do so unless cogent reasons exist. He is not a Czar, but the representative of a body of men whose final best interest will be served only by acting fairly and justly in all controversies with managements.

While some years ago it was quite true some business representatives were arbitrary, and in some cases thoroughly unfair, to the credit of the unions that type of officer has been very largely discarded or made to change his ways and adopt methods more in keeping with good policy and fair dealing. As the years pass, unions as well as other human institutions progress.

BUILDING AN OPEN LENS PORT

J. L. JENNINGS of Laredo, Texas, asks, "Is there any practicable way in which sound may be prevented from reaching the auditorium without covering the lens port with glass. I have noted your own published objections to the glass cover, but have not observed any suggestions as to how the port may be left open and projection room sounds prevented from annoying customers seated near the projection room wall."

If you have or are able to examine the sixth edition of the Bluebook of Projection, on page 252 you will find one method both illustrated and described. Another, unless the lens be too close to the wall, is to build a suitable double-wall box of sound absorbing material just large enough not to interfere with the light beam and just long enough to extend from the projection room wall to the lens, its lens end being stopped down to just the dimensions of the light beam at that point. The wall opening must then be stopped down to light beam diameter by inserting two, three or four slabs of sound absorbing material, spaced an equal distance apart. How many to use will depend upon the wall thickness.

The above described box must then be suitably supported so as to enclose the light beam, with its wall end just as snugly against the port fire shutter as may be without interference with its operation. A good plan is to attach box to a sheet of sound absorbing material large enough to cover the entire port wall opening and attach to the wall top, bottom and sides, with ribs of the same material just thick enough to provide ample clearance for fire shutter action.

Sounds complicated, but really it is quite simple. If the job be well done it may safely be said that no audible sound will get through to the auditorium. However, remember that it must be well done or results may not come up to expectations. For the wall slab I would suggest a sheet of stiff sound absorbing material not less than ½-inch thick. For the box, thinner material of the same character will serve, though the ½-inch stuff will do so equally well. It would be well to let the lens end enter the box, but there must be no actual contact, since that would serve to transmit projector mechanical sounds to the box and through it to the wall. If the management will supply a sheet of sound absorbing material, any competent projectionist should be able to build and install the entire thing with the aid of a hammer, square, saw and suitable nails—or preferably, thin screws.

SINCERE MEN IN THE PROFESSION

QUARTERLY BULLETIN No. 3, the official publication of District No. 1, IATSE & MPMO, comprising Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Washington and British Columbia, of which E. A. Clark, Chairman, Seattle; Harry Pearson, Vancouver; L. B. Hines, Yakima, Wash.; and H. J. Young, Butte, Mont., form the Advisory Board, reprints an article by Lester Isaac, director of projection for Loew's Inc., printed in the American Projectionist some while ago, in which the following occurs:

"At the last meeting of the American Projection Society, New York Chapter, after routine business had been disposed of, a discussion was started on sound failures, their cause and remedy. Some very interesting experiences were recounted and much useful information gained

"Someone requested an explanation as to why a tube that had been used as a rectifier had no further value as an amplifier. The discussion lasted for an hour, starting at 3:30 a.m. The members present had all done a hard day's work. Many of them had traveled considerable distances to attend the meeting.

"In what other line of work do we find men willing to devote time at such an unholy hour in seeking information that will help them in their work? It must be remembered that these men do not own theatres, nor do they have any personal interest in the business they serve. They work for a salary. Upon their skill not only depends, at least to a considerable extent, the success or failure of the theatre they serve, but also the ultimate success of all sound processes. We think the situation is unique. We know of no other class of workers willing to travel, often in bad weather, and devote their hours of rest to discussing ways and means to improve results for their employers, all without direct monetary compensation."

To which might be added: And without orders from, or even the knowledge of the employer.

It is a performance not, so far as I am able to ascertain, duplicated in any other trade, craft, calling or profession, considering the unholy hours involved. For projectionists usually cannot attend meetings at a civilized hour, therefore seeking after knowledge in the manner described represents very genuine hardship and strain.

I personally know of dozens of instances in which groups of projectionists have driven long distances, after their theatres closed at night (meaning after 11 p.m.) to attend a single address or lecture on projection. In many instances these drives have exceeded 200 miles for the round trip, the return journey often starting after 3 a.m. I well remember one instance in which a group of projectionists drove more than 50 miles through a driving rain storm to attend such an address.

This is concrete evidence that we now have sincere, earnest men in the profession, men who are willing to sacrifice their own comfort and make a very real effort to improve their knowledge to the end that they may give better service.

SIMPLIFIED FILM CLEANING METHOD

RECENTLY a film cleaner was brought to my attention, examination of which indicated to be entirely effective. It is inexpensive enough so that even the smaller theatres would not be barred from ownership. It passes the film, at ordinary slow rewinding speed, through a bath of carbon tetrachloride, from which it emerges dry and ready to be wound upon a reel.

While there might possibly be some chance of inflicting light scratches, I would regard that possibility as negligible. Even though some possible slight injury of this sort might be inflicted occasionally, certainly it would not anywhere nearly equal the damage done by a smear of oil and liberal coating of dirt on the film.

In a report upon this cleaning process, submitted following tests by Erpi, it is stated that " most of the film noise is above 1000 cycles, and the cleaner is apparently quite effective in reducing the noise of dirty film, since after cleaning the dirty film was almost comparable with new stock. Visual inspection of the film after two cleanings indicated no scratching was caused by the cleaner. It was, however, observed that considerable tension is required to pull the film through the cleaner, and consequently a low gear ratio rewinder is preferable, and poorly patched film will pull apart."

Acoustics Today

efficiency throughout the frequency range is often required for this surface, distributed in panels or in horizontal bands in such a manner as to ensure the maximum effectiveness for reduction of reverberation and elimination of discrete sound reflections.

Treatment is not usually required on the ceiling beneath the balcony unless the under-balcony section is shallow and there is very little sound absorption other than that provided by the audience within this section. If a relatively deep under-balcony is proposed in the design of new theatres, it is well to bear in mind that the ceiling within this section can be used to good advantage for maintaining the proper intensity of sound, particularly of the high frequencies, at the rear seats by sloping this surface slightly and uniformly toward the rear wall.

[In his next article Mr. Potwin will deal with acoustic materials. It will classify and discuss the sound absorbing properties of various types of materials and their general adaptability to theatre treatment. Particular emphasis will be placed on the methods of applying materials to ensure that the maximum degree of sound absorption will be obtained, particularly at the low frequencies. Mr. Potwin is a member of the technical consulting staff of Electrical Research Products, Inc., dealing with acoustic problems. —THE EDITOR.]

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 128, No. 8 August 21, 1937

PERENNIAL SEX

PLEASANT and uncommonly constructive contribution to the popular literature of the motion picture's Production Code is made by Mr. Lupton A. Wilkinson in a piece for the September issue of Photoplay Magazine on the theme of "You can't get away from Sex."

That title of course is chip-on-the-shoulder journalism of the sort popular magazines for the proletariat deem necessary. The article, however, makes it clear enough on the authority of Mr. Wilkinson that no one in the motion picture industry, or among its constructive critics fostering the code, ever suggested the abolition of sex from the screen.

THE issue, as the industry knows and as Mr. Wilkinson now tells the populace, was not sex but indecency. Three years ago, when, as he observes, "the heat was on," Mr. Wilkinson, then in the service of the industry as a member of the Hays office staff in Hollywood, made a tour of eighty-two towns and cities, to count "the silent vote." He found, he says, that the vote of the great American public was against:

> "1—Injected vulgarities.
> "2—Plots of young people who play fast and loose with lives and come out winner. Ditto about married women.
> "3—Triangle plots where the two cheaters win.
> "4—All screen treatment or suggestion of abnormal sex relations.

"Why have movies improved so swiftly in tightness of plot, in number of plot twists, in excellence of dialogue? Because neither writer nor director can be crude any more. He has to think."

MR. WILKINSON is, incidentally, a person of considerable public relations experience. You will be remembering that he was with Herbert Hoover "over there" and here, before he joined the Hays organiaztion, from which he departed a year ago.

" . . . the sex problem . . comes up new with every script; it always will."

And that, dear reader, means that there will have to be a Production Code, and an Administration of it, until decency in production becomes as automatic as a clean shirt every morning. Which will be a while yet, even in this best of all possible worlds.

ASK MR. SENNETT

THE New York State Association of Police Chiefs are positively annoyed at the Hollywood representations of officers. They have decided that it is time to tell movieland that detectives are not "illiterate brutes who smoke cigars, keep their hats on in drawing rooms and are generally not subtle."

The production of Keystone comedies began in 1913, and we have been thinking from day to day ever since that the cops would get on to them.

Besides, the chiefs are right. Detectives are rarely as funny or obvious as they look.

ADVERTISING on SCREEN

THE pressures of advertisers who would proclaim their wares before the motion picture audiences of the land are growing. The advertisers are also becoming more adroit, more persuasive—and better producers of material that flutters in mid-air between salesmanship and entertainment.

The practice of presentation of advertising on the screen before an audience that bought entertainment raises questions which must be answered by each showman for himself—and for his audiences. The tendency, inevitably, when advertising pictures are made temptingly profitable, or seemingly profitable, is to pour in all that the patrons will take. However, one of the difficulties would appear to be that the patrons who will not take it are not often articulate, voting more by their absence than by giving voice.

DOWN in Arkansas some part of one public at least has found its voice in an organized manner, as indicated by a dispatch sent east by the Associated Press:

> LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 9 (AP)—The Society for the Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres claimed another victory tonight following its second vocal assault on a first run show here. Secretary M. C. Blackman scattered his forces throughout the audience instead of bunching them as was done at last week's debut of the society.
> "We've got 'em down to one commercial tonight," he said. "They have been running six or seven. Lots of folks joined in our boos."

AND that some way reminds us, too, that there have been some decided reactions of annoyance from customers who have been fed more trailers on coming attractions than they seemed to like. Mr. Damon Runyon not so long ago raised his voice about it in his daily syndicated column—and he has ample reason for feeling friendly to the art and industry, which no doubt he does.

There have been, and will continue to be, many experiments in selling time on the amusement screen. Inevitably, eventually, the customers will decide. They are slow about it, but they always get around to tending to such matters in their own clumsy, but effectual manner. The customer decision is final.

SOCIAL DOCUMENT

SOMEWHAT after midnight, reading our most especial contemporary, Mr. Maurice Kann, discussing Mr. Samuel Goldwyn's picture "Dead End," as "this emphatic picture of comfortable wealth and extreme poverty brushing shoulders in the same street," we find it "telling the story of the under-privileged," and that it "suggests nothing by way of a solution, if, indeed, there is one. By such an appraisal it falls short. . . ." For those in quest of a "solution" it is suggested that a reading of "The Great Goldwyn" by Alva Johnston, published by Random House, might have suggestion value. Every time Mr. Goldwyn has come to a dead end he has taken a jump.

This Week

291 New Theatres

Plans for construction of 291 theatres were drafted in 39 states from January 1st to August 15th, according to a combination of statistics from independent surveys and data supplied by Better Theatres. The average estimated cost for each house is approximately $67,500, making the total estimated expenditure near the $19,000,000 figure. In addition, hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on remodeling old houses. Erection of the new houses will mean an increase of about 228,000 in the total seating capacity of theatres in the United States.

A complete list of new theatres, already constructed, under construction and contemplated, is included in an article starting on page 13.

Await 'Boycott' Ruling

The independent exhibitors participating in a product "boycott" against Paramount, and the company apparently have no intention of giving ground in the "strike" battle until the federal courts, testing the issue in Philadelphia and Minneapolis, determine the issue, in a few days.

The Philadelphia owners, however, voted this week to continue the campaign "indefinitely," as reported on page 25.

Quota Arguments

Criticisms of the British Government's proposals for the new Quota Bill are gathering full steam. Now comes the Association of Cine Technicians with the charge that while the Board of Trade suggestions represent an improvement over the old Act, "the fundamental issues have not been faced." With much of the same attitude, the Film Directors Association demands that at least 10 per cent of British pictures admitted to Quota registration shall be made by British directors. Isidore Ostrer adds his word that the Government plans would add little if anything for British industry.

These and other developments in England are recorded on page 62.

Radio Inquiry

Investigation of the Federal Communications Commission by Congress is believed certain with the unanimous reporting to the Senate by that body's Interstate Commerce Committee of a resolution for a sweeping inquiry into the radio industry. If the Senate passes the resolution, it is probable that the inquiry will be conducted during the Congressional recess. A similar resolution has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman W. D. McFarlane of Texas.

The story is published on page 28.

French Worried

As a result of stockholders voting down a reorganization plan, French film circles are becoming disturbed over the future of Pathe-Cinema (formerly Pathe-Natan). The company has been in receivership three years and has just undergone another shakeup. A disturbance at the stockholders' session resulted in police being called.

Pierre Autre discusses the situation on page 48.

Equity Appeal

In a letter to President Roosevelt, Actors' Equity Association appealed for continuance of the Federal Theatre Project, claiming it is desperately needed. The theatre will be unable to absorb those thrown out of work for at least another year, the letter stated. It was signed by several actors and actresses.

The letter is explained on page 34.

National Theatre

Theatre groups will meet to act upon the promotional platform for the legitimate theatre adopted at the national convention held last May. The meeting will take place at the Astor Hotel, New York, next Monday, and will elect a council of permanent officers and a promotional manager to administer the program drafted at the convention. One of the chief planks in the platform was the establishment of a national theatre.

The story appears on page 28.

40-Hour Week

Conferences in New York over an agreement for exchange service employees and the election of officers for the newly organized American Federation of Radio Artists vied for the limelight in the union and labor situation throughout the country this week. The exchange union and distributors were expected to reach an agreement on a 40-hour week and a minimum wage scale. The radio artists chose Eddie Cantor as their president and formally applied to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America for a charter. An outline of the Four As' future activities was contained in a statement from Actors' Equity Association, declaring the AAAA "will be in a position to extend the power of both money and men into the organization of those fields . . . which are not, as yet, fully organized."

These and other developments are reported in detail on page 53.

Foreign Blocs

While it is too early to predict final results of the Biennial Congress of the International Film Chamber, held in Paris, writes Pierre Autré, the gathering confirmed the fact that Germany and Italy are working in close accord, that a majority influence of democratic countries depends upon the entrance of the United States and Great Britain, and that the spirit of the Chamber must become universal in scope and sympathy before it can fulfil its announced purposes.

The detailed analysis starts on page 41.

Eastman Earnings

Eastman Kodak Company, manufacturers of cameras and motion picture and still-film stock, reported a 42 per cent increase in earnings for the first six months of this year as compared to the same period last year. The increase, the company reported, was due to a two per cent gain in net sales. The earnings amounted to $11,475,066 as compared to $8,081,870 for the first six months of 1936. A regular quarterly dividend of $2 was declared by the company this week.

Details of this and other financial news will be found on page 48.

ASCAP Box Score

In eighteen states anti-ASCAP legislation has been introduced, five of them making the measures effective. Court decisions on cases testing the Montana and Washington enactments will be handed down shortly and hearings on the suit brought by the Society to test the Nebraska law will open September 11th.

Complete findings of the survey will be found on page 40.

Juvenile Unit Shows

Columbia claims it has the solution to the perennial cry of women's and civic organizations for motion pictures for juveniles. The company has just completed a year's experiment with "Happy Hour" programs, a regular weekly service composed of short subjects selected by better films, parents', teachers' and other organizations.

Already 1,200 theatres are using the service, the nature of which is explained on page 36.

English Building Up

England is in the midst of an extensive theatre building program, D. E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematographer Renters' Society and managing director for First National in England, said in an interview. Mr. Griffiths, who is in New York on a three-week vacation, reported favorably on the prospects in Britain and commented on the proposed Quota act of the British government.

The interview with Mr. Griffiths appears on page 40.

RKO Plan

The motion of the preferred stockholders of the Orpheum Circuit, Inc., to intervene in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum reorganization plan has been denied by Federal Judge Bondy.

The story is on page 48.

Monogram Drive

Plans for a large sale campaign during the months of October and November were discussed at meetings of Monogram branch men in New York and Chicago last week. The drive will be known as the W. Ray Johnston-Monogram Playdate Drive and will promote 19 pictures to be released during the two months that the campaign will take place. It was announced that E. B. Derr will produce four pictures for Monogram's 1937-38 schedule.

Legal Snarls

Legal entanglements over the operation of socalled chance games grew knottier than ever this week, with chief interest centered on Detroit. The city council there has under consideration an ordinance which would ban all chance games. Police and exhibitors in Middletown, Conn., seeking to determine the status of Bank Night in the state, arranged for the technical arrest of a theatre manager. In Florida, a sheriff seized the Bank Night equipment in a theatre.

Detailed reports on these developments and others are included in an article on page 34.

National Meeting

A plea for maintaining pictures on a high moral plane was made by Sidney R. Kent at the convention of National Theatres at the Hotel Broadmoor, Colorado Springs. Topics discussed at the four-day meeting related to general policies, booking, personnel and double features. In a previous address at the convention, Mr. Kent discussed television and color films.

Summary of the National Theatre convention is found in a news story on page 28.

Cullman Leaving

Howard S. Cullman, Roxy theatre trustee for the last five years, will drop his managerial duties September 2nd to be succeeded by Harry C. Arthur, Jr., head of Artco, which has had a management contract for the theatre during Mr. Cullman's supervision. No other change in operating policy and personnel is contemplated. Mr. Cullman will confine his time to his tobacco business and his duties as a member of the Port of New York Authority.

Miller Says "No"

Jack Miller said this week that he has no intentions of resuming the leadership of Chicago exhibition, for which he has been sought by local independent owners. Mr. Miller decided instead to enter exhibition operation, on his own. The Chicago owners, since Mr. Miller's resignation a year ago, have been troubled no end with problems of product availability, chance game trade practice, taxation and Chicago municipal legislation.

China's Troubles

Bombing of Shanghai has wreaked havoc on the amusement districts with many theatres reported destroyed or severely damaged. The Chinese Consulate reports that theatre centers are closed. The U. S. Department of Commerce reports a 25 per cent drop in earnings of American producers during the first weeks of the conflict.

The story appears on page 18.

Warner Regionals

Warner Theatres held regional meetings of managers and executives in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Cleveland this week. Eight theatres, mostly in the west, have been added to the list which will participate in the nation-wide preview of Warner fall product next Monday and Tuesday.

The story is published on page 28.

Tax Battles

The new Quota provisions will result in definite benefits to all phases of the British film industry, said Reginald P. Baker, managing director of Associated British Film Distributors, Ltd., this week in New York en route from London to Hollywood, where he will study production methods.

Regarding the exhibitor situation in Great Britain, Mr. Baker was of the opinion that there is still latitude for the building of new houses. Whereas, in the United States there are 17,000 theatres for a population of 130,000,000, he said, the United Kingdom, with a population of 48,000,000, has 4,300 the-

Totals	291	(190)	$12,856,500

Motion picture exhibitors are doing their share toward speeding up the wheels of industry and supplying work for countless men in a variety of fields, it is revealed in a compilation of data showing that plans for construction of 291 new theatres at a cost of more than $19,000,000 were drafted from January 1st to August 15th.

A great majority of the houses already have been built or are in construction. Ground has not yet been broken for a few included in the statistics which were gathered through independent surveys and supplied by BETTER THEATRES.

Should exhibitors keep up the pace they have set during the first seven and a half months of the year, 1937 is scheduled to end with more than $25,000,000 expended on new theatre construction—construction which means jobs for laborers, craftsmen, white-collar workers and professional men.

Final erection of the 291 theatres will mean an increase of more than 228,000 in the seating capacity of theatres in the United States. The study reveals no definite trend as to the size of new theatres as they vary from rural houses, with seating capacities as low as 183, to the deluxe urban theatres, seating more than 2,000 persons. However, from available data showing 237 houses with a total of 186,100 seats, an average of 785 seats a house was figured for the remaining 54 theatres for which no seating capacities were reported.

The $19,000,000 figure was arrived at by the use of a computed average of $67,665 for each of the 291 houses. Estimated costs were not reported for 101 of the new buildings, but for the other 190 construction jobs, estimated expenditures totaled $12,856,500, an average of $67,665 each.

Another contribution of the showmen's toward prosperity in the country is the outlay of countless thousands of dollars for new equipment and for remodeling of their theatres. The estimated $19,000,000 includes none of this, being only for completely new houses.

Thirty-nine of the 48 United States are represented in the totals.

Of those states where data were available, Ohio takes the lead in construction, having plans for 38 houses. Of these, 37 will have a total seating capacity of 32,008. Costs were reported for 29 theatres and amounted to $2,490,000.

Second in the field of 39 is Illinois with 29 theatres; 22 having 22,222 seats, and 19 costing $2,420,000. Illinois' adjoining state, Indiana, is not faring so well, though, according to the reports. Plans for only one new house have been revealed. Other states in the same category are Colorado, Delaware, Maryland, Montana, New Mexico and Rhode Island.

Rhode Island is the only state in New England where building activity is not heavy.

Reports for the various states, with the name of each owner, the seating capacity and name of the theatre, and the estimated cost (where available) follow:

TAXLESS THEATRE IN CITY HALL TOO MUCH

A generous concession granted a theatre to encourage film entertainment in Puebla City, an old town near Mexico City, was revoked by the Puebla State Legislature.

The law-making body felt that allowing the theatre to use part of the city hall without cost and exempt of municipal and state taxes was a bit too generous.

"NOTHING SACRED" IN

OBITUARY EDITOR

FOR years David O. Selznick has been making the most sacred of the it-can't-be-done theories appear ridiculous. He did so in the cases of "Little Women" and "David Copperfield," and thereby exerted a great influence upon present day production trends. His "A Star Is Born" knocked into a cocked hat the conviction that there couldn't be such a thing as a good "Hollywood picture."

An iconoclast, he has chosen for his newest production a title which attests in so many words his rebellion against general status quo and the contentions of the tradition school of theorists. It sounds as though something appropriate to a Sunday afternoon concert is in the offing. On the contrary, Mr. Selznick will attempt to prove —and he's an odds-on favorite to succeed —that there's nothing sacred in the hypothesis that newspaper stories have been done to death. Of course Mr. Selznick's publicity department forecasts that " 'Nothing Sacred' will be the greatest box office film ever made in Technicolor." Nevertheless, if you listen to the gossip around the cutting rooms, among the non-artist workers on the set, among the juicers up in the rafters, and if you watch what's going on, you can't help becoming convinced that Mr. Selznick will have an A-1 newspaper story.

In character, the story is romantic farce. In plot it concerns an ace reporter and a girl scribbler, fresh from the country, who perpetrated a hoax that almost turned New York inside out. The hoax would have succeeded had not the boy and girl fallen in love. Simply, it is a mixture of love and laughs.

The form chart is usually a pretty good thing to rely upon. To bring to realism

SELZNICK TRADITION

A PICTORIAL PREVIEW

by GUS McCARTHY

in Hollywood

James H. Street's short story, "Nothing Sacred" (soon to appear in Cosmopolitan Magazine), Ben Hecht of "Soak The Rich," "Barbary Coast," "Viva Villa" and, a long time ago, "Scarface," repute, was hired to prepare the screen play. Then, from director William A. Wellman and cameraman Howard Greene, down to the most minor stage hand, Mr. Selznick turned his property over to the same crew that made "A Star Is Born".

For stars he selected Fredric March, whose performance in "A Star Is Born" almost came up to the one he gave in "The Royal Family of Broadway," and Carole Lombard, who first came into her own in "My Man Godfrey," although everybody seems to have forgotten "Twentieth Century." Listed as principal supports are Walter Connolly, currently talked about more favorably than ever as "The Good Earth" descends from road show to popular price classification. Connolly, incidentally, is the only player yet signed for "Gone with the Wind," if it ever is made. There are many others in "Nothing Sacred," but the most prominent are Charles Winninger and Frank Fay, genial vaudeville and night club master of ceremonies, whose "A Fool's Advice" never was released.

The action calls for the stars to do everything from riding on hook-and-ladders and jumping off the dock to being the central figures in a lavish night club sequence.

Thanksgiving will come in November and so will "Nothing Sacred."

Settle Paramount Suits Tentatively

Tentative agreement has been reached for settlement for $2,150,000 of two recovery actions brought in 1934 by the reorganization trustees of Paramount against officers, directors and associates of the company dur-the period 1927 to 1931. The agreement came at a conference between Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, and Arthur A. Ballantine, of Root, Clark Buckner & Ballantine, counsel of the Paramount trustees, in London last week, it was learned in New York Wednesday.

The conditional settlement figure, which is $150,000 more than the original proposal submitted to Paramount and the trustee, Charles D. Hilles, by attorneys for the defendants several weeks ago, is subject to further negotiation as to the manner of payment—whether in lump sums or spread over a period of years—and must be approved by the U. S. district court in New York—which retained jurisdiction over the two actions at the time it approved the Paramount reorganization plan in 1935. It is estimated that 30 to 40 days will be required to complete details and file a petition with the court to authorize the settlement.

Trial of the first of the two suits is scheduled for September 27, before Isidor Wasservogel, supreme court justice. Indications are that a postponement will be asked.

Mr. Ballantine, on his arrival Wednesday, said no settlement has been approved yet but added that he had discussed the proposed terms with Mr. Griffis in London and commented that "in cases of this kind there is always the possibility that an agreement will be reached eventually."

Mr. Hilles is away from the city this month.

The amounts to be paid by the principal defendants, in case of ultimate approval, are understood to be approximately as follows: Kuhn, Loeb & Co., former Paramount bankers, $650,000 on behalf of six to eight defendants, including the estate of Otto H. Kahn, former head of the banking company; Sidney R. Kent, $250,000; Sam Katz, $200,000; Adolph Zukor, $550,000; Jules E. Brulatour, $100,000; Frank C. Bailey, $100,000; the estate of Emil Shauer, $50,000; all others, $250,000.

There are 22 defendants named in the two actions, one of which seeks recovery for losses reported incurred by the company in redemption at gauranteed prices of its stock which was isssued for acquisition of theatres and other property during the company's expansion period, ending in 1931. The recovery sought is for the difference between the redemption price and the market price of the stock at the time it was redeemed. The second suit seeks recovery of sums which it charges was paid to former Paramount officers "in excess of reasonable compensation" and the recovery from financial associates of "actual or potential profits" from participants in an employees' stock purchase plan.

U. S. Sues Jewel For Sex Film's Return

Declaring the Austrian film, "Mysteries of Sex," imported by Jewel Productions two years ago and passed by the customs officers, is obscene, U. S. Attorney Lamar Hardy brought suit in federal court to force the company to deliver the print and for an order to confiscate the negative and print.

After its approval by customs officers in 1935, under the name "Science of Mankind," a negative of "Mysteries of Sex" was seized early this year when it arrived in this country.

Bombing of Shanghai Cripples Theatres, Attendance in China

Aerial bombing and shelling of Shanghai by Japanese and Chinese has turned the amusement center around Avenue VII and Tibet Road into a shambles and has resulted in the wounding of a cameraman. Many of Shanghai's 42 theatres are said to have been destroyed and others have been abandoned.

An official at the Chinese Consulate in New York expressed the belief that all the amusement centers in Shanghai were closed.

Suspension of theatre operations has caused a 25 per cent drop in the earnings of American producers, according to a report received by the U. S. Department of Commerce from Julean Arnold, commercial attache at Shanghai.

George Krainukov, chief Universal newsreel photographer, was wounded by shrapnel near the Cathay hotel. Three weeks ago, a camera was shot from his hands. A March of Time cameraman, Harrison Foreman, and Mr. Krainukov were put off an American naval tender by guards who feared the cameramen would film Japanese warships and that the tender would be fired upon. Two other cameramen were not discovered until the boat got under way. Their equipment was confiscated.

There are 340 known exhibition outlets in China. Of this number, 42 are in Shanghai, which has the greatest theatre concentration in China. Tientsin and Peiping, scenes of other battles, have 33 theatres between them. In 1936, China imported 415 features, 336 of which were of American origin.

American distributors and importers in Shanghai are: Paramount Films of China, Inc.; Fox Film Federation, Inc.; Krisel and Krisel (distributors for United Artists); MGM of China; Universal Pictures Corporation of China; Peacock Motion Picture Company (handling RKO); Warner Brothers and Columbia.

Fleischer Attacks Labor Board Vote

Charges that the election of Fleischer studio employees, resulting in a decision to authorize the Commercial Artists and Designers Union to represent them as collective bargaining agent with the cartoon producer, were "Improper, purposeless and binding on nobody," were made by the Fleischer company this week through its attorneys, Phillips and Nizer.

The election, held under the direction of the National Labor Relations Board, resulted in a 59-0 vote in favor of the union representing the employees. An additional 15 votes cast by employees who had been discharged for fomenting a "slow-down" strike some time ago were not counted, pending decision from the Labor Board on the validity of their ballots.

The company said in its statement that the election fails to reflect the attitude of the Fleischer employees in that "most of them refused to vote." The statement cited also the union's insistence upon representing the animators who, it was said, "feel that their problems are entirely different from those of other employees" and hence are said to favor a separate organization.

Spokesmen for the Labor Board refused comment on the Fleischer statement. The election results had been sent to Washington, it was said, and the next move would emanate from there. It is understood that the Board is considering an appeal to the U. S. circuit court of appeals.

Leslie Howard and Eugene Frenke are planning to form a producing company to make six pictures a year.

EXHIBITORS AND PARAMOUNT AWAIT COURT RULING ON PRODUCT STRIKE

Both Sides in Dispute Over Availability Date of Six Pictures Say They'll Fight It to a Finish

There still are no signs of either side giving ground in the product "boycott" conflict between independent exhibitors and Paramount Pictures, other than forcibly through the courts. Pending a decision in the two test suits instituted by Paramount, in Philadelphia and Minneapolis, both the owners and the distributor are "watchfully waiting," each side apparently determined to fight out the issue in the open.

The Philadelphia United Motion Picture Theatre Owners voted to continue indefinitely to refrain from dating Paramount pictures under contract and to abstain from buying any new product from that company. A "buying combine" in which UMPTO members would participate is being considered, to act when the controversy with Paramount is ended.

Decision by a federal court in Philadelphia on Paramount's petition for a permanent injunction, restraining the owners from picketing and other physical "strike" activities, is due within ten days.

Federal court in Minneapolis continued the temporary restraining order obtained by Paramount in that territory until a further hearing Thursday or next week.

George P. Aarons, UMPTO leader in the Philadelphia campaign, said the move represents some 4,000 independent owners throughout the country.

W. A. Steffes, the Allied and present anti-Paramount leader in Minneapolis, claimed "there are over 3,000 theatre owners in the United States who have joined this movement."

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, was widely quoted in the press as saying that the "boycott" would not make a difference of more than $10,000 to Paramount in lost dates, and that only about 100 of the smaller theatres in Philadelphia are involved.

It's All About Six Films

The issue is over demands by the exhibitors that Paramount return six features to 1936-37 contract delivery, from 1937-38 contracts, as follows: "The Count of Luxembourg," "Artists and Models," "High, Wide and Handsome," "Spawn of the North," "Souls at Sea," and an unnamed Marlene Dietrich production directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

Independents, called to a June 29th protest meeting in Washington, D. C., agreed to effect a "date strike" against Paramount in August, and Philadelphia and Minneapolis owners proseeded to publicize plans for elaborate public and industry picketing of theatres insisting on playing Paramount product.

Paramount's exchanges, too, were to be picketed. The company went into the federal courts and obtained injunctions in Minneapolis and Philadelphia against the picketing, although the exhibitors were not restrained from refusing to date Paramount pictures or buy 1937-38 product.

A hearing on the permanent injunction in Philadelphia was postponed last Wednesday to give Federal Judge Oliver P. Dickinson time to study additional briefs which were filed by both sides this Wednesday.

Aarons Called by Paramount

Mr. Aarons, although the "strike" leader and UMPTO executive in Philadelphia, was unexpectedly called as a witness by Paramount. Judge Dickinson called Mr. Aarons' testimony "very frank," including Mr. Aarons' admission that the independents were determined to boycott Paramount films until the company delivers the six pictures at issue, and that some 400 owners in the Philadelphia territory were "enraged" over Paramount's "holding out" of those films. All these pictures, he declared, should have been delivered to theatres before July 31st, undr 1936-37 contracts.

The independent owners had a further grievance, declared Mr. Aarons, bacause Paramount had proffered to them a new type of contract which "hiked" rentals for product and reduced the yearly quota from about 65 to 53.

Threats Not Countermanded

The witness declared that UMPTO members had abandoned plans to picket by airplane and sound truck any exhibitor continuing to use Paramount films during the "strike," on the advice of Benjamin M. Golder, the organization's counsel, but, to a question by William Schnader, Paramount counsel, Mr. Aarons admitted that the UMPTO had not countermanded threats to virtually every theatre owner in the Philadelphia area that their places would be picketed if they showed Paramount films or signed a 1937-38 contract.

Mr. Aarons told the court that the organization still intended to "urge" every exhibitor not to sign a new Paramount contract unless the six features promised last year were delivered. During the testimony it became known that the UMPTO, operating in eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, had circulated virtually every one of the 4,000 independent owners throughout the country to line up the "buyers' sit-down strike."

Further evidence that the UMPTO is going to push the fight came Monday when its membership, meeting in Philadelphia, voted to continue the "date-strike" indefinitely.

Boston, Los Angeles, New Jersey, Ohio, Milwaukee, San Francisco, and other exhibitor groups, intending to join in the "strike" had held up action when the issue reached the courts, although a strike vote in San Francisco is set for Tuesday.

Additional Protests

The Philadelphia meeting of Monday, discussion at which was led by Attorney Golder of the UMPTO, brought additional protests against distribution practices, this time against Grand National for reputedly advising exhibitors that it would not deliver the second James Cagney feature on last year's contracts. The members indicated that action would be taken in that direction.

Edward Peskay, president of Grand National, said Tuesday that the company would deliver the second—as yet untitled—James Cagney feature under 1936-37 contracts, but explained that the second Cagney was not necessarily a Victor Schertzinger production with James Cagney, which is still another Cagney.

Members of the Philadelphia session questioned Barney Balaban's assertion that his Paramount company would lose no more than $10,000 as a result of the playdate "boycott." It was said at the meeting that three independent members of the UMPTO alone had a Paramount film bill of well over $100,000.

David Barrist, Philadelphia owner, presented a proposition to give the power of attorney to a UMPTO committee to buy 1937-38 Paramount product when the present controversy is adjusted. Distributors, as a rule, refuse to do business with exhibitor buying combinations. In any event, the organization decided to determine the feelings of the membership.

Justice Department Continues Inquiries into Trade Practices

"Informal" investigation of motion picture practices in distribution-exhibition by the Department of Justice are continuing. While it became generally known last week that official distribution circles are aware that the Department has "planted" scores of secret service operatives throughout the country checking on exhibitor complaints against distributors and circuits, present outward interest by the government is centered in New York, where Assistant United States District Attorney Leo Hickey, in Brooklyn, is interrogating film leaders.

Last week, Mr. Hickey talked about the situation in Brooklyn and Long Island with Henry Randel, of Paramount's sales department; Harry Decker, Roy Haines and Sam Lefkowitz, of Warners, and Arthur Greenblatt, of GB Pictures, and this week he is understood to have summoned Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers, and others, besides having attorneys for all of the distributors close by.

This case is said to concern the complaint of A. H. Schwartz's independent Century circuit against Loew's and RKO on product, clearance and zoning.

The Department, too, is understood to be watching the Paramount "strike" situation.

In Jacksonville, Florida, the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association voted to ask Congress to appoint a commission to supervise the sale of films to small theatres, to break up a so-called "monopoly' said to be held by the large distribution and circuit interests. M. C. Moore, president, said his organization would take "drastic steps to correct trade practices."

LEADERS DISPUTE EXTENT OF "STRIKE"

picketing the Paramount exchange in Minneapolis and also theatres playing Paramount product, Al Steffes' Allied Theatres of the Northwest, in Minnesota and the Dakotas, were ready to go into Federal Judge Gunnar Nordbye's court in Minneapolis on Thursday to oppose the Paramount petition for a permanent injunction. As in the Philadelphia case, the Minneapolis suit charges the owners with conspiracy under the federal acts against restraint of trade.

Defendants in the conspiracy and restraint of trade suit brought in Minneapolis are: Allied Theatres of the Northwest, W. A. Steffes, E. L. Peaslee, Paul Mans, William Glaser, Don Buckley, W. D. Gowan, Andrew Anderson, Dave Gilman, George Granstrum, Oscar Woempner, S. D. Kane, L. H. Lano, L. T. Molitor, I. Hanson, Brained Theatre corporation, A. B. Muller, Cletus Widmer, Charles Perrizo, Fred L. Christians, Joe Milnar, E. P. Nelson, Howard Klug and John E. Klug, doing business as the State theatre; Kent Investment Company, Max Torodor, H. E. Simon, Roy A. Palmer, L. O. Lee, doing business as Leola Theatre; Fred Schnee, H. E. Hoffman, Charles F. Vondra, L. A. Breilein, W. C. Schneider, George Carisch, M. B. Mark, Sol Fisher, Nathan Fisher, Irving Gilman, Northland Amusement Company; Isidor Friedman, G. L. Berquist, Albert Charon, John A. Lafontaine, Edward Velat, H. B. Smoots and Lowell Smoots, doing business as Falls Amusement Company; Harry A. Nelson, Paul Helquist, William Volk, David C. Irvine, G. N. Turner, M. A. Miller, R. A. Risch, People's Amusement Company, Inc.; Harvey G. Thorpe, B. R. Parsons, Fred Holzapfel, Harry Dryer, doing business as North Star Amusement Company; J. E. Johnson and Laurence Buck.

A "Call to Arms"

After a preliminary hearing which lasted throughout last Thursday, Federal Judge Nordbye continued in full force until further hearing on Thursday of this week the temporary restraining order obtained by Paramount last week against Allied of the Northwest and individual defendants. The order prohibits mass action by the exhibitors in their "buyers' strike" against the company.

Judge Nordbye adjourned the Thursday morning session following arguments on a motion by the defendants to amend the wording of the restrainer. The motion was granted by the court after the hearing resumed at 2:00 P. M. The change involved only the language of the preamble to the order and did not alter the effect of the order in any respect. Under its provisions the defendants continue to be restrained from concerted action against the company, mass demonstrations or the employment of coercion to compel exhibitors to refrain from playing the company's pictures or negotiating new contracts with Paramount.

A "Call to Arms!" issued in bulletin form to owners to join in the strike, and signed by the "Strike Committee" of Allied of the Northwest, pleaded with "the few theatre owners in this territory who have not as yet joined," to agree with "'the majority" not to play any more Paramount pictures until the argument is settled.

"There are several theatre owners in this strike who perhaps will be forced to close their theatres if the controversy is not settled within the next 60 days," said Allied's statement, adding that, regardless, "these same exhibitors are determined to do that very thing rather than lose the strike."

The injunction, said Allied, "does not mean that the strike is lost, but should solidify the theatre owners more than anything that we can conceive of," although, Allied added, "this strike is not going to be settled in a hurry."

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Productions

Of seven new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, two were found unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Boothill Brigade," "Man Who Cried Wolf," "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," "The Rangers Step In." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Das Schloss em Flanders," "Souls at Sea." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Flight from Glory."

Storm Upset GB's Battleship Preview

The elements played havoc with the press department of Gaumont British last week when drenching rains upset plans for a novel locale for a preview of "Gangway," the new Jessie Matthews musical.

The picture was to have been shown on the open deck of the U.S.S. Texas in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. In the midst of dinner, which was served indoors, a thunderclap heralded a downpour and the original plan for a screening in naval atmosphere had to be discarded. After some delay, equipment was moved indoors for the screening.

Williamstown to See 'Tolerance' As An Institute Show

Two motion pictures, "one dealing with the importance of tolerance among people of all faiths, and the other with the far-reaching influence of different cultures upon the world's civilization," will have their premiere showing at the 1937 Williamstown Institute of Human Relations, which will be held at Williams College in Massachusetts from August 30 through Sept. 3 under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, according to a joint statement issued this week by the college and the National Conference.

The sound film entitled, "This Thing Called Tolerance," shows the history and present activities of the University Religious Conference, which conducts experiments in human relations among students of all religious groups on the campuses of the University of California in Los Angeles and the University of Southern California. The University Religious Conference is an organization headed by a Roman Catholic Bishop, a Protestant Bishop and a Jewish Rabbi. "These leaders, supported by their respective denominations, have recognized the fact that although men and women may differ widely in their religious outlooks, they nevertheless have a common purpose in working together for the advancement of American ideas," the statement said.

"The motion picture shows how thousands of students in the United States acknowledge the same patriotic obligations, and still cherish without conflict religious liberty, freedom of speech, assembly and press," according to the announcement, which explained that the idea for the picture was originated by Gerry Fitzgerald, a former newspaper editor, and a member of the Board of Trustees of the University Religious Conference.

The film was said to have been produced at the RKO Studios with the cooperation of two leaders of Los Angeles Jewry, H. L. Gumbiner, president of the Gumbiner Synchro-Sound Company, and Sol Lesser, president of Principal Productions. "The cast refused to accept salaries for their work and the RKO Studios donated the sound stage and lights."

The second film, "China's Gift to the West—The Everyday Things," is a two-reel silent picture "which reveals that human relations may be made more satisfactory by portraying graphically what contributions one 'fragment of civilization' has made to another." This was produced by the Division of Visual Experiment of the Harmon Foundation in cooperation with the Institute of Pacific Relations.

RADIO INVESTIGATION SAID TO BE ASSURED

White Resolution Is Reported Unanimously to Senate by Commerce Committee

Congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission is assured, say reports from Washington, with the unanimous reporting in the Senate last week of a resolution for inquiry into the actions and policies of the board by the Senate interstate commerce committee and the introduction of a similar resolution in the House by Representative W. D. McFarlane of Texas.

Sponsored by Senator White of Maine, the Senate resolution calls for a sweeping inquiry into broadcasting companies, radio stations and acts of the FCC with regard to broadcasting. If the White resolution should be adopted before adjournment, the committee probably will conduct the inqiury during the Congressional recess.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, has been appointed chairman of the communication commission to put it "in order," it was said at the White House.

The Senate resolution charges that issuance of broadcasting licenses has been irregular and contrary to the spirit and letter of the law and that partiality frequently has governed the granting of licenses.

Other charges include:

1. That the control of licenses and frequencies has passed to others than the original licensees without the written approval of the Commission, as prescribed by law.

2. That there has been monopolistic concentration of radio stations controlled by one chain in certain areas.

3. That in permitting the concentration of radio stations the commission has failed to provide equitable distribution of broadcasting facilities to other territories.

4. That "political and other influences" have guided the acts of the commission.

The resolution also directs investigation of financial practices, such as the sale price of any broadcasting station sold or transferred and the sale of stock and other securities.

In addition, the resolution specifically directs a study of whether the commission departed from or modified the application of regulations and engineering standards. The matter of censorship would also be investigated, especially as it relates to the control of stations by holding companies, affiliation of radio stations with newspapers and the extent of education broadcasts, patent medicine advertising and use of the radio for political purposes.

Representative Robert L. Bacon of New York, who is supporting Representative McFarlane's resolution in the House, scored the employment of Charles Michaelson, Democratic party press agent, by the Crosley Radio Corporation as public relations counsel. Mr. Bacon suggested that the company "might want a friend at court to influence the decisions of the committee."

ROMANTIC STORIES WANTED IN EUROPE

Despite the unsettled condition of European countries, there is a definite movement toward the romantic, according to Edwin Knopf, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario department, who recently returned from a shopping tour of Continental centers.

"Unlike the days prior to the World War, few Central European novelists are penning inflammatory patriotic books," Mr. Knopf said. "All are writing boy-meets-girl things."

Amercian literature, Mr. Knopf said, is partly responsible for the change.

Warners Hold 3 Circuit Meetings, Set 8 More Shows

Warner Theatres held circuit meetings this week in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Cleveland, and added eight houses to the list which will participate in the company's national trade exhibit to take place Monday and Tuesday in 31 cities in the United States and Canada.

Approximately 150 Warner theatre managers and executives in the Philadelphia area attended the meeting Tuesday at the Bellevue-Stratford. Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, and S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, addressed the gathering which was presided over by Ted Schlanger, zone manager. After the meeting, "The Life of Emile Zola" was shown.

Southern Ohio theatre managers for Warners met Tuesday and Wednesday at the Netherland-Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, while representatives of the northern Ohio district convened Thursday at the Warner offices in Cleveland.

Harry Goldberg, in charge of Warner national advertising, attended both Ohio meetings.

The eight additional theatres which will participate in the nation-wide trade preview of Warner fall product are the Broadway, Charlotte; Nile, Minneapolis; Southeast, Salt Lake City; Alhambra, San Francisco; Egyptian, Seattle; the Ritz, St. Louis; Fox West Coast, Ogden, Denver and the Garfield, Milwaukee.

Five hundred motion picture exhibitors from Greater New York have been invited to attend the New York preview to be held at the New Amsterdam Roof Theatre. The New York showings will start at 10:15 A.M.

Keep Films Clean, Sidney Kent Tells National Group

The need for keeping the screen on a high moral plane was emphasized by Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, in an address made last week before the 1937 convention of the National Theatres meeting at the Hotel Broadmoor, Colorado Springs. (Picture on page 10.)

Mr. Kent said that the Legion of Decency, organized some two years ago by the Catholic Church, had done the industry "a big favor" in cleansing pictures.

The address was heard by 105 executives of National Theatres who were convening in a four-day meeting from August 10th to 13th for discussion of general policies, booking, costs, personnel and legislation. National Theatres is the Chase-Fox owned affiliate of Twentieth Century-Fox, controlling some 450 theatres in the west, northwest and midwest, and is operated for Fox-Chase by the Skouras Brothers.

The first day's session consisted of talks by Spyros Skouras and Aubrey Schenck, and the reading of wired greetings from Adolph Zukor, Darryl F. Zanuck, Ned E. Depinet and other executives.

The plea for decency on the screen was Mr. Kent's second address at the convention. The first was delivered at the second day's meeting and concerned itself with television and color films. Mr. Kent deprecated the influence that television might exert on motion picture attendance on the ground that "people want their amusement in crowds." Speaking of color films, Mr. Kent felt that it would not supplant black and white.

"In some cases, color has been invaluable to a film," he said. "In others, it makes absolutely no difference in the final analysis."

Time was devoted to a discussion of the double feature principle which was approved in view of the vigorous public demand for twin bills.

Speakers on a variety of topics included five division managers: A. M. Bowles, of San Francisco, H. J. Fitzgerald of Milwaukee, Al Finkelstein of Portland, Oregon, Rick Ricketson of Denver and E. C. Rhoden of Kansas City. Charles Skouras, president of Fox West Coast Theatres, also made an address.

Between sessions the delegates made a trip to the Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun at Cheyenne Mountain to place a plaque in honor of the memory of the late humorist.

A Fox divisional meeting of National Theatres will be held in Denver August 31st to September 2nd. Approximately 100 representatives from the Montana and other western districts are expected to attend.

Skouras Managers Meet in New York

Approximately 100 managers and assistant managers of Skouras Theatres meet in New York this week at the St. Moritz. Policies and new product will be discussed by George Skouras, William White and other circuit executives.

Hubert L. Voight, now engaged in advance publicity on Republic's "The Sheik Steps Out," has been engaged by the company to handle the advance publicity and exploitation of "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," in production at the Biograph Studios in the Bronx, New York.

"Boo" Heard 'Round Film World Is Born in P.A.'s Typewriter

Little Rock Society Practices Up on Commercial Advertising Pictures

by Special Correspondent in Little Rock, Arkansas

When Marion C. Blackman, official publicity agent for the state of Arkansas, conceived the idea and organized the Society for the Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres, it was beyond his most roseate dreams that it would bring him or his state the nationwide publicity that has resulted.

Although the Society was his brain child, Mr. Blackman is only executive secretary of the Society. Honor of being president went to Bill Bell, Little Rock civil engineer, who has become quite adept at the art of holding his open hands to his mouth and emitting a long, loud "b-o-o-o-o!"

The First "Boo"

The first "Boo" of the Society was held at the Arkansas theatre here with Ralph Noble, manager, among the interested spectators. The Society members—about a dozen in number—had announced beforehand that they would descend upon the theatre with the avowed intention of booing the advertising picture and all its works. They had planned to "boo" the commercials at 7:30, but they became mixed up on their schedule and had to wait until 9:30 to perform.

The moment the first commercial flashed on the screen, President Bill Bell—the bellwether, as it were—gave a loud boo that was taken up immediately by all the Society members, and by others sitting in the same vicinity.

Without the Words

The house lights flared on, the commercials—three of them—continued, although it was hard to hear the words of the speaker, an announcer for Alexander Film Company, which supplies the local houses with commercials.

Preceding the booing at the theatre the Society had gathered at the home of Blackman to practice, and the rehearsal apparently had been a success.

The announced aim of the Society for the Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres is twofold: elimination of commercials entirely in first-run houses, reduction of commercials' time in other houses, even if increased admission price is compulsory.

Back-Fire

One back-fire from the Society's booing session was a query by a columnist in the Arkansas Democrat, Little Rock afternoon newspaper, who asked: "Wonder how many of the booers went in on passes? Or how many had passes and bought tickets that night only to boo?"

A result of the initial booing was a noticeable attitude toward general booing of commercials in houses throughout the city at other times.

A second regular meeting of the Society at another Little Rock theatre was held a week later.

MARION C. BLACKMAN wheedles a new line of campaign out of his fag and his typewriter for his Society for the Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres. He's publicity agent for the state of Arkansas, with headquarters at Little Rock, but insists that the Society is not a concoction in line of duty for that office.

Veteran of Typewriter

Mr. Blackman, a veteran newspaper man who had served as publicity writer for the Resettlement Administration before being named state publicity director by Governor Carl Bailey, reports that he has received requests for charters for other Society chapters in other states.

News and picture services all have shown considerable interest in activities of the Society, have dug up sidelights on the art of booing, interviewed executives in both production and distribution fields of the picture industry.

Mr. Blackman, who has served on the Arkansas Gazette as a reporter and feature editor, on newspapers in Detroit, Mich., and in Louisiana, as well as in Paris, France, and has written for Esquire and Collier's, takes his Society activities with all seriousness, pointing out that it has no connection with his official duties as publicity agent for the state.

As for the reactions of Ralph Noble, the manager of the Arkansas theatre, where Bill Bell booed the boo heard 'round the world, as to whether he might favor organization of a Society for the Suppression of the Society for the Booing of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theatres, his reply to a telegram was the laconic but succinct:

"We have no statement to make."

Council Studies Scientific Aids

A study of scientific aids for the educational field, including the use of films and radio in schools, has been undertaken by the National Research Council of Washington. Irvin Stewart, former vice-chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, is director of the council's educational committee.

Other members are James B. Conant, president of Harvard; Vannevar Bush, vice-president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; L. D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota; Frank B. Continuation of the Chicago Film Board with no connection with New York has been announced by Clyde Eckhardt, president. He said the officers will continue to serve until the annual election next spring. Emma Ablanalp, after an annual vacation will continue as secretary to the board.

ORDINANCE WOULD BAR DETROIT CHANCE GAMES

Test Case Arranged to Settle Status in Connecticut; Trial in Nebraska Set

The fate of chance games in Detroit hung this week upon the results of a city council vote on an ordinance to ban all such practices.

Major opposition to the proposed ordinance was voiced at a public hearing by Dave Newman, of Allied Theatres of Michigan; Sam Carver, of the Krim Brothers Circuit; Walter Kelly, attorney for Skillful Screeno, and J. E. Stocker, owner of the Myrtle Theatre.

In addition, proponents of the games supported their contention with the presentation of a petition signed by 100,000 motion picture theatre patrons.

Among those who spoke in favor of the ordinance were George W. Trendle, president of Detroit United Theatres; Ray Muer, Mr. Trendle's attorney, and H. M. Richey, director of public relations for Cooperative Theatres of Michigan.

The original request that the council adopt the ordinance was made by Nathaniel H. Goldstein, assistant corporation counsel, after the circuit court had dissolved a temporary injunction restraining police from interfering with the games.

The status of Bank Night in Connecticut, which remains in doubt despite a Windsor Locks test case, is now scheduled to be definitely fixed as a result of the technical and pre-arranged arrest of Sal Adorno, manager of the Palace Theatre in Middletown. It was contended the Windsor Locks case could not be accepted as a criterion, as proxy cards were used for Bank Night.

George S. Ryan, Boston bank night attorney; Roy Heffner, New England bank night distributor; Joseph B. Morse, New Haven attorney, and Adolph G. Johnson, Middletown distributor, conferred on arrangements for the new case, which Mr. Heffner said will be brought to trial in the supreme court with as little delay as possible.

Exhibitors to Join in Fight

Mr. Heffner also announced leading exhibitors, including Loew's and Warner Brothers, will cooperate in the fight.

Anthony Sunderland, state police commissioner, had issued a state-wide order that bank nights would no longer be allowed and as a result of this, Ernest Links, manager of the Palace Theatre in Rockville, ordered $280 in prize money given to three charitable groups.

In Blair, Nebraska, the state attorney general's office overrode the refusal of Grace Ballard, county attorney, to order the elimination of bank night at the Home Theatre. Miss Ballard, twice winner of the Home award, refused merchants' requests to bar the game pending a state supreme court ruling on the Fox-Midwest case. This is scheduled to be tried in the first fall term of the court, starting September 20th.

A setback to the operation of the game was delivered in Orlando, Florida, when Frank Karel, sheriff, entered a theatre and confiscated all bank night equipment. He acted under authority given in a circuit court order obtained by the city. City officials supported the action on the ground the crowds collecting on the street outside the theatre created fire and traffic hazards.

Fraud Conviction Affirmed

Another Florida development in the chance game situation was the affirming by the supreme court of a grand larceny conviction of Pete Bussart, sentenced in Palm Beach county court for fraudulently obtaining a $175 prize.

A variation of bank night, "Buck Night," scored a victory in Texas when the 78th district court refused to grant a temporary injunction to prevent three Robb & Rowley houses in Palestine from playing the game.

Rumors that increased theatre licenses in Chicago would bring a return of chance games were checked by William Daly, of the corporation counsel's office, who asserted there is no likelihood of bank night returning.

Eight bingo operators, arrested in Cleveland last April, were discharged when Ernest Molnar, head of the vice squad, requested the court that the lottery counts be dismissed.

Internal litigation developed in Boston when Mr. Heffner, franchise holder of the bank night plan, announced he was instituting action against several exhibitors for failure to pay royalties.

CHANCE GAMES TAX NETS STATE $3,000

While other states continue wrangling over the legality of chance games, Arkansas has turned the games into a revenue producer for the state.

Almost $3,000 has been collected since enactment of a 15 per cent tax law on bank night and other chance game awards. During July, $1,022.64 was collected, the revenue commissioner announced.

Roosevelt Asked To Help Actors

An appeal to President Roosevelt for continuation of the Federal Theatre Project as a "desperately needed bridge on which to cross the chasm of unemployment," has been made by Actors' Equity Association in a letter forwarded by Frank Gillmore, president, and signed by such actors and actresses as James Cagney, George M. Cohan, Frederic March, Edward G. Robinson, Franchot Tone, Mary Boland, Helen Morgan and Warren William.

In the appeal the history of the theatre project is traced. It stated:

"We have watched first with amazement and later with delight as these federal plays drew first only curious hundreds and then built steadily through weeks and months a constant audience over the nation of more than 500,000 persons every week. . . ."

The project, the letter continued, "tapped vast audiences none of whom had ever seen a stage performance."

Mr. Gillmore also pointed out that the private theatre will be unable to absorb those thrown out of work within the next year. "We cannot expect an immediate improvement in conditions which will assure employment for even a part of the people."

Monogram Meets On Sales Drive, Signs E. B. Derr

Plans for a large sales drive for Monogram Pictures during the months of October and November were formulated and discussed at meetings of branch managers, salesmen and bookers in New York on August 14th and in Chicago on the following day. The campaign, which is to be known as the W. Ray Johnston-Monogram Playdate Drive, will promote 19 productions which will be ready for release during those months, almost half of Monogram's 1937-38 program.

Announcement that E. B. Derr would produce four pictures for Monogram's new season schedule came after the conclusion of the Chicago meeting.

More than 30 branch managers attended the New York meeting at the Hotel Astor, representing the Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Albany, Washington and local offices. Among those who attended were the following:

W. Ray Johnston, president; Edward A. Golden, general sales manager; Herschel Stuart, treasurer; Lou Lifton, publicity and advertising director; Norton Ritchey, export general manager and the following exchange personnel:

After presiding at the New York meeting, Mr. Johnston flew to Chicago to officiate at the assembly at the Drake Hotel where representatives of mid-western exchanges had gathered to become acquainted with the sales campaign for the west.

Mr. Johnston will now proceed to west coast cities, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles, in connection with the drive while Mr. Golden, sales manager for the company, will cover St. Louis, Kansas City, Atlanta, New Orleans, Oklahoma City and Dallas, beginning this week on a three-week itinerary.

Announcement of the Derr production arrangement was made by Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production for Monogram, who handled the negotiations. Mr. Derr will do two Jack London stories, "Wolf Call" and "Queen of the Yukon" and will have the first ready for November release.

Mr. Derr has been closely associated with Joseph P. Kennedy, former head of the Pathe Exchange, and filled important executive positions with that company when it was headed by Mr. Kennedy. Later he went to the coast in charge of production for Pathe and subsequently joined MGM as associate producer. In 1936, he joined Republic as associate producer with Nat Levine.

A deal has been closed with the Butterfield circuit whereby Monogram product will play first run engagements in ten key cities in the Michigan territory. William Flemion, sales manager of the Detroit exchange, made the negotiations for Monogram.

Mr. Johnston declared in a statement issued in Chicago that sales during October and November would total $900,000, the greatest two-month revenue in the history of the company.

Robert Pressnell, associate producer with Universal since January, 1936, has resigned.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Buccaneer DeMille

To this bureau came a fancy vari-colored epistle bidding some one's presence at a luncheon that was to be held in Paramount studio honoring a Cecil B. DeMille birthday. Tucked away in a corner was a notice that the acceptee might like to see Mr. DeMille in action directing the initial sequences of "The Buccaneer." So we said to Bill Weaver, fresh from New York, and to whom things Hollywood are still a bit of a chimera, "Let's go."

In order to be prompt we arrived an hour and a half ahead of time and proceeded to Stage 7, where for three days Mr. DeMille had been warming up, to see the first shooting of "The Buccaneer." The shooting proceeded with complications. After shooting the sequence twice, it was discovered that something had gone wrong with the camera. The third time, the film ran out before anybody noticed it. Two takes on a fresh magazine and Mr. DeMille said, "That's it."

In the meantime, a couple of bored newspaper men had discovered a parrot in a cage adjacent to a painted cypress bayou and a seascape that wasn't nearly so cooling as it looked and, for about an hour devoted their activities to repeating over and over again to the bird, "No, Mr. DeMille." Just as it looked as though the parrot might do as all parrots are supposed to do, up came Paramount's Bob Gillham to inform the volunteer instructors that "that ain't the kind of a parrot that talks." It seems the quick learners are gray; this one was green.

Then, after advising Mr. Weaver that we'd better get out of here before everybody else did, and naturally being among the last to leave the stage, we paraded to the commissary. The menu was a mysterious sort of thing, full of all sorts of New Orleans-Creole dishes and no Sazarac cocktails to make for easier understanding. Bravely at first, then to be surprisingly pleased, the assembled press did, as the home town papers say, "full justice to the palate-tickling exemplification of culinary art."

Adolph Zukor, articulate but inaudible, made a few remarks which, judging from the applause of most of those who did not hear, must have been inspiring. Mr. DeMille said he wasn't going to make a speech and didn't. He said he was glad for the good pictures he had made for Paramount and gladder still for the toleration extended him in view of the many "banana peels" he had stepped on. He proposed a toast to the bride, who has always been a bride, his wife—their 35th wedding anniversary will fall on August 25th—and then, reverting to the status of a hard-boiled director, warned Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, et al., working in the picture, that they'd better get back to the stage pronto or else they would hear from him in ways of speaking in which he is expert.

DeMILLE THANKED WITH HUGE CAKE

In appreciation of Cecil DeMille's decision in selecting Louisiana as the site for filming "The Buccanneer," Governor Leche sent the producer a 50-pound cake, shaped like a ship, for his birthday.

With the cake were 350 cotton "bales," each containing 10 New Orleans pralines. The cake was baked with a miniature ship as a mold.

Pace Normal

Hollywood production continued at a normal pace in the week which finished on Friday, the 13th. Seven films started and nine were completed, to reduce the total actually in work to 45 subjects.

Most important of the newly started work is DeMille's "The Buccaneer." Besides Fredric March and Franciska Gaal, the cast will feature Akim Tamiroff, Ian Keith, Walter Brennan, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles Bickford, Anthony Quinn and Margot Grahame.

Its studio reconstructed after a severe fire, Victory Pictures started "Sky Racketeers." Being produced and directed by Sam Katzman, it will present Herman Brix, Joan Barclay, Jack Mulhall, Edward Earle, Hattie McDaniels, Henry Rocquemore, Monte Blue, Duncan Rinaldo, Earl Hodgins and Roger Williams.

Comedy Starts

"High Fliers" started at RKO-Radio. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are starred. In support are Lupe Velez, Marjorie Lord, Jack Carson, Paul Harvey, Margaret Dumont, Charles Judels, Frank M. Thomas, George Irving and Robert Emmet O'Connor. Edward Cline is the director.

With George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains and Margaret Lindsay tentatively assigned as principals, Warner started its second Technicolor feature, "Gold Is Where You Find It." William Keighley is directing.

At Republic "Portia on Trial" started. The cast includes Walter Abel, Frieda Inescort, Neil Hamilton, Ruth Donnelly and Heather Angel. George Nichols, Jr., was named to direct.

"Robbery" Before Cameras

Two productions started at 20th Century-Fox. In "The Great Diamond Robbery," which Malcolm St. Clair is directing, will be seen Phyllis Brooks, Cesar Romero, Jane Darwell, Alan Dinehard, Douglas Wood, Johan Harrington and Natalie Carson. Jane Withers is the star of "45 Fathers." The supporting company lists Shirley Deane, Thomas Beck, Louise Henry, Richard Carle, Joe and Flo McCoy and George Givot.

The general quality of the pictures completed appears superior to that of the group which went before the cameras. As a rule, studios took pictures off the line in groups of two.

MGM's pair are "The Bride Wore Red" and "Double Wedding." The first named will present Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Billy Burrud, Lynne Carver, Reginald Owen, George Zucco, Dickie Moore and Paul Porcasi. Dorothy Arzner directed. William Powell and Myrna Loy again are teamed in "Double Wedding." The support lists John Beal, Florence Rice, Barnett Parker, Jessie Ralph, Sidney Toler, Mary Gordon and Edgar Kennedy. Richard Thorpe directed.

John Boles Featured

Both the completed RKO-Radio productions promise to be above average in entertainment and commercial value. "Fight for Your Lady" features John Boles, Jack Oakie, Ida Lupino, Margot Grahame, Erik Rhodes, Paul Guilfoyle, Gordon Jones, Billy Gilbert and Georges Renavent. Ben Stoloff directed. Burgess Meredith and Ann Sothern are the principals in "Don't Forget to Remember," which also features Onslow Stevens, Mary Boland, Louise Henry, William Brisbane, George Irving, Leona Roberts and Frances Gifford. Joseph Santley directed.

Leading players in "Wife, Doctor and Nurse," a 20th Century-Fox Class A production, are Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce, Allan Lane, Minna Gombell, Jane Darwell and Margaret Irving. Walter Lang directed. "Look Out, Mr. Moto" will feature Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Chick Chandler, George Regas, Robert Kent and J. Edward Bromberg. Norman Foster directed.

Football Picture

A comedy drama and a topical football picture are the Warner contributions. "Sh! The Octopus" will present Hugh Herbert, Allen Jinkins, Marcia Ralston, George Rosener, John Eldredge, Eric Stanley, Margaret Irving, Brandon Tynan and Elspeth Dudgeon. William McGann directed. In "Over the Goal" will be seen William Hopper, June Travis, Willard Parker, Johnny Davis, Mabel Todd, William Harrigan, Gordon Oliver, Herbert Rawlinson, George Offerman, Fred McKaye and Jack Chapin. Noel Smith directed.

James A. FitzPatrick has completed work on five of a new series of 12 travelogues which will be released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. FitzPatrick has sailed for England where he will spend the next five months producing quota features for MGM.

1,200 THEATRES ARE USING SPECIAL SATURDAY UNIT SHOWS FOR CHILDREN

26 Units Completed, at Least 16 More Planned by Columbia; Civic Groups Select the Programs

Columbia Pictures this week rounded out the first year of its extra-curricular business of creating and merchandising complete unit programs for juvenile shows, composed principally of short subjects and specially-made "featurettes," and today the company reports that already 1,200 independent and circuit theatres are using the service. In all instances the shows are staged in conjunction with civic organizations and women's clubs, which also are responsible entirely for selecting the material to be shown.

The programs are advanced by Columbia as "low-cost" for exhibitors, because they are reissues for the most part, and as a separate part of Columbia's distribution and the exhibitors' normal business of films for adult entertainment.

The shows are known as "Happy Hour" units and usually are staged either on Saturday morning or afternoon, although in some places there is a movement to put them on during special weekday matinees after three o'clock school closings. Columbia's home office predicts that 2,500 theatres will be using the service regularly by late fall.

One year ago Columbia Pictures undertook to solve the problem of shows expressly for children by drawing on its library of short subjects for a series of unit programs selected by the very civic groups that were complaining about the lack of juvenile entertainment.

That was the beginning of Columbia's "Happy Hour" entertainments.

At that time the dearth of socalled "juvenile" motion pictures had become so pronounced that the industry was being criticized for it by outsiders. Talk of action was rife among the women's clubs, and in Geneva the League of Nations Child Welfare Committee was even considering national subsidies for the production of motion pictures for children in competition with the regular producing companies.

Today the agitation has died down and while Columbia's "Happy Hour" unit shows was not solely responsible, "it did contribute materially to improving the situation," according to the company.

Indorsed by Clubs

The idea of offering an organized children's entertainment program pre-indorsed by ranking women's and other organizations interested in child welfare is said by Columbia to have won immediate and growing favor from both exhibitors and social organizations.

Columbia's current Happy Hour unit is the 26th, playing in more theatres than any previous of the group, and eight more units are in immediate preparation. Columbia says that hundreds of independent theatres and virtually all of the big circuits are booking the series regularly. Skouras Brothers has just added 28 theatres to the 20 already featuring the shows regularly on its circuit. Other circuits booking the units regularly are Loew's, Warners, RKO, Fox West Coast, Prudential, Century, Sparks, Lucas & Jenkins and Monarch Theatres, Inc.

FOUR TO SIX SUBJECTS IN EACH UNIT SHOW

Columbia Pictures' "Happy Hour" unit shows for special juvenile performances contain from four to six short subjects, each program being selected by one or another of the civic or women's groups cooperating. Typical programs are the most recent two, made up as follows:

UNIT NO. 24 (a)

Screen Snapshots No. 2, 16th series.
"Free Rent," two reels.
"Fishing Thrills," single sports reel.
"Gold—Quest of the Ages," single travelogue.
"Two Lazy Crows," a "Color Rhapsody," single.

UNIT NO. 23

Screen Snapshots, No. 1, 16th series.
"Dizzy Ducks," Scrappy cartoon.
"Hold 'em Cowboy," single sport reel.
"Merry Cafe," Krazy Kat cartoon.
"Star Gazers," single travelogue.
"Merry Mutineers," a "Color Rhapsody," single.

(a) Selected by International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

What They Include

The units consist of a variety of subjects covering cartoon, comedy, travel and sports. In addition, special juvenile features, three reels in length, are being made exclusively for this series. In the last year these productions included "Robinson Crusoe," "The Goose Girl," and "The Old Woman in the Woods." These three all starred the popular children's radio performer, "Uncle Don," as narrator. Many more such productions are planned for the coming season, of which the first, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" is now in work.

"Exhibitors, long harassed by demands from both children and adults for suitable children's fare, find an ideal solution in this ready-made juvenile set-up," said a Columbia statement. "It offers them a prepared children's program so endorsed as to be sure to get the approval of parent and child welfare groups in the community. The children, being naturally restless, find a fast program of shorts more absorbing than a regular program of features. Feature pictures are aimed at adult minds and fail to hold the interest of the juvenile audience. Shorts, on the other hand, have an appeal which is not limited by age, and are too brief to be tiring to the most impatient youngster," it was said.

Nationally known civic and women's organizations, which virtually comprise the critics of juvenile entertainment, select all of the material making up the programs they indorse. Among the organizations which are indorsing are: General Federation of Women's Clubs; the New York State, New York City, Philadelphia, Massachusetts and California chapters of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; the Indiana, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Ohio State chapters of the Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations; Albany Council of Women's Clubs; Cleveland Cinema Club; Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia; the Atlanta, Buffalo, Chicago, and Milwaukee County Better Films Councils; Greater Detroit Films Council; New Haven Council of Theatre Patrons; St. Louis Better Films Council, and Father Flanagan's Boys' Home, Boys' Town, Nebraska.

Indorsements in Billing

The indorsements receive "top billing" in each unit, and are a basic idea of the service. "They bear an unconditional recommendation to parents, teachers and civic organizations in the neighborhood that the entertainment is fit for children in every respect," according to Columbia. "The same tie-up gives the exhibitor a far-reaching exploitation set-up," the company says, adding: "The organizations working with the company in preparing the 'Happy Hour' entertainments have in most cases indicated their willingness to cooperate with exhibitors in putting the pictures across in the theatres and have offered them their facilities. This puts schools, clubs, playgrounds, mailing lists and countless drives behind the pictures for the theatre owners, enabling them to reach every home with a child in the neighborhood."

26 Units Complete, 16 More

In addition to the 26 units now available to exhibitors, Columbia will issue at least 16 new programs during the coming year. "The programs never become dated as far as children under ten are concerned, therefore, new exhibitors joining the 'Happy Hour' Entertainments service have the entire series to draw from," Columbia said, adding: "The cost, too, is very low since the programs are principally made up of reissues."

As would be expected, strongest support for "Happy Hour" has come from suburban and neighborhood theatres. "There it has grown as a community project like boy scout or club meetings," it is said.

A club feature of Happy Hour is said by Columbia to open up a new field for cooperation and exploitation with neighborhood merchants. Premiums have been contributed by many stores for children attending the matinees. Many theatres also have availed themselves of the national "Scrappy" tieups to promote their "Happy Hour" engagements. (The Scrappy animated cartoon and his Color Rhapsodies form a part of every Happy Hour unit). One of these was the Scrappy-Pillsbury Flour Mills puppet theatre promotion last year which distributed 2,500,000 "Scrappy" puppet theatres free through cooperating theatres and grocery stores.

The Happy Hour name has been registered as a trade mark. Columbia sells the franchise exclusively to one theatre in each district, Columbia's own accounts being given preference. Complete lines of accessories are available and the company cooperates in campaigns with local clubs, mothers, teachers and others interested.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Some day, if and when Britain's little Princess Margaret Rose becomes Queen of England, an exhibitor can say he wrote a musical dedication to her, which, contrary to all precedent, was formally and officially accepted by the Royal House.

The charms of Princess Margaret Rose have been set to music in a suite for strings and harp, by Dennis Stoll, son of Sir Oswald Stoll, one of England's mightiest theatre owners

The Princess, younger daughter of King George VII and Queen Elizabeth, will be seven years old on August 21st. She is second in line for the throne of the Empire, preceded only by her 11-year-old sister, Princess Elizabeth, the heir presumptive.

Dennis Stoll had been working on the composition for months, and when it was finished he wrote to the Royal Family for the privilege of dedicating it to the Princess.

Although there is a rule against such dedications, the Queen gave permission and consented to accept a bound copy for her from Mr. Stoll.

The suite is in four movements, "To her hands in prayer," "To her feet in dance," "To her heart in beauty" and "To her infinite variety."

The comparatively new Paramount Pictures business management under Barney Balaban and Stanton Griffis really is getting some place in its efforts toward sound economic operations. We have the Paramount publicity department's word for it that only the other morning the studio learned it would cost $2 a day to rent pigs and dogs, and 50 cents a day to rent roosters—needed for the new Technicolor picture "Ebb-Tide"; so, in view of the fact that Director James Hogan required the animals for several weeks for atmosphere, the corporation ordered him to go out and buy them outright. The next statement of assets, therefore, will include Paramount Pictures, Inc. as legal owner of an assortment of livestock which includes four mongrel dogs (mutts), three red roosters and a litter of pigs.

Not only that, but the company had Director Hogan send direct to the wholesalers in Honolulu for two crates of feis (red bananas), some papayas and, as the publicity describes them: "huge red persimmons and luscious pomegranates," also for "Ebb-Tide."

Knowing full well about how New York's License Commissioner Moss feels about Minsky "strip-teasing," and how Joe Breen in Hollywood feels about Gypsy Rose Lee, we were flabbergasted when we read from a piece of publicity from Paul Gulick, Universal home office press agent, the heading: "CLAUDIA MORGAN IN UNVEILING."

Everything is all right, though. The Gulick publicity down further explains that Miss Morgan merely was participating "in ceremonies launching a series of celebrations."

The celebrations, by the way, were to observe the anniversary of GAS.

Then there's the story of the enterprising chap who escaped from a prison camp in Georgia. The six bloodhounds sent out were never found either.

Three months later he was in vaudeville as "Spiro Spero and His Six Cute Canines."

A great many morning-late-arrival clerks and stenographers of motion picture companies and others in the Rockefeller Center buildings have resurrected that old trick of leaving their hats outside and walking into the office as if they had just been out in the corridor washroom for a minute.

Which reminds of the man named "Two-hat" Kelly (two-hat was a nickname), who had a thoroughly efficient system for being late in the morning and leaving earlier afternoons. He had two hats just alike. One of them he left on his desk when he went home at night. The other he wore from and to the office but left hidden down the hall near the exit. He always made it appear as if he were in, even if he was out.

Personally, we'd rather use the more simple method of walking in nonchalantly backwards when late. This has the sporting touch. One never knows whether the boss is behind you or not, but, if you think he is, you can always start walking forwards. In this case, of course, he jumps to the conclusion that you are just leaving the office instead of entering it. Nine times out of ten he'll fall in and walk out with you, in which case you can have your coffee together.

Many a gal has gone far in Hollywood in a short time, but let any one top the progress of Vera Zorina, blonde 20-year-old ballerina in the Ballet Russe. She arrived in Hollywood for "The Goldwyn Follies," from New York, at exactly 12:13 noon. By four p. m., same afternoon, she had leased a home for herself and mother in Beverly Hills. Two hours later she had purchased an automobile, the first she ever owned. Between eight p. m. and midnight, same day, she learned to drive. Early the next morning she obtained her driver's license after passing the road test. At noon she tore off the right front fender by driving straight into the corner of Stage Eight at United Artists Studio.

Public reaction to Mae West's admission that she married Frank Wallace some years ago is reported by Hollywood to be "amazing." Early unofficial opinion around the Paramount studio reputedly held that it would hurt Miss West at the box office. Now, they claim, scores of Mae's male fan-mail writers have volunteered to punch Wallace in the beezer for being so persistent in looking so far back into the past.

ANTI-ASCAP MEASURES PENDING IN 18 STATES

Restrictive Laws Passed in Four States; Court Decisions Awaited in Society's Test Actions

Legislation directed against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has been introduced in a total of 18 states and made effective in five.

Anti-ASCAP legislation has been enacted in Montana, Washington, Nebraska, Florida and Wisconsin.

Court decisions will be handed down soon on the cases brought by the Society to test the constitutionality of the Montana and Washington measures.

A suit challenging the validity of the Nebraska law will begin in Lincoln on September 11th.

The Florida and Wisconsin enactments will not be contested for the present, pending the outcome of the test cases already heard.

The 13 states which have failed in their attempts to restrict the Society are: Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Texas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The Michigan bill was passed by the legislature but vetoed by Governor Frank Murphy. The Iowa, Minnesota and Ohio lawmakers adjourned without acting on the proposal. Measures in Tennessee and Indiana were defeated and the regulatory attempt in Texas died in committee.

Georgia Bill Invalidated

The Georgia bill, passed by the legislature, was invalidated in a court test of its constitutionality, brought by ASCAP in July, 1936. The negation of the Georgia law was largely responsible for the failure of Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas to enforce their anti-ASCAP enactments, which were modeled after the Georgia measure.

A Congressional attempt to restrict ASCAP failed after the Duffy bill, which was passed by the Senate, languished in the House. The Duffy bill, hotly fought, would have eliminated the $250 penalty.

For the most part, legislation aimed at restriction or abolition of the Society has been undertaken either by prohibitive tax devices or direct order for dissolution of a group representing more than one copyright owner. Other instruments to achieve the same effect are license fees or edicts for the filing of copyright material whose cost, the Society claims, would leave no alternative but disbanding.

Seeks Labor's Cooperation

To assist its fight against the epidemic of unfavorable enactments, ASCAP is seeking the cooperation of labor with the possibility that it may take out a charter from the American Federation of Labor or a subcharter from the American Federation of Musicians, AFL affiliate. Failing in either of these moves, it is understood that the Society will arrive at working agreement with the AFM providing for mutual support in the campaigns which each organization is waging.

The executive board of ASCAP will consider labor alignment at a meeting in New York on September 23rd. Advance sentiment of members and directors is believed to favor combining with labor in one form or other.

In a recent statement, E. C. Mills, general manager of ASCAP, said, "We have arrived at the point we need political support." Mr. Mills added that such support could come only from labor.

ERPI Upheld in Trust Decisions

The anti-trust suits, started in 1934 against American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, and Electrical Research Products, Inc. (ERPI), by Ninth Avenue Amusement Company, Henry D. Behr, Sound Pictures Engineers, Macy Manufacturing Corporation, Audio Equipment Maintenance, Inc., Service on Sound Corporation, Standard Sound Service, S. Theodore Hodgman, Bernard R. Gogel, Thomas F. James and John T. James, have been settled.

Plaintiffs in these suits claimed that defendants by means of provisions contained in ERPI recording license agreements, made in 1928 with a majority of sound picture producers, and by means of further provisions included in ERPI leases of sound theatre equipments to a large number of exhibitors, had created a situation in which exhibitors were compelled, upon terms imposed by ERPI, to employ ERPI sound equipments in their theatres, on pain, if they used competitive equipment, of being unable to obtain sound pictures from ERPI's producer licensees.

In connection with the settlement, Western Electric explained:

"In the spring of 1935 claims presenting the same issues were urged by General Talking Pictures Corporation and Duovac Radio Corporation in suits against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, and ERPI, which were tried at that time in the United States district court sitting in Wilmington, Del. . . . The Court found that the contractual provisions complained of were lawful and proper during the time when sound pictures were in the experimental and development stages, and that, after the sound picture art had become established commercially, these contractual provisions were either abandoned in practice or so applied that no lawful restraints of trade resulted from them."

The settlement was announced jointly by Ralph Vantander and David Garrison Berger, counsel for the plaintiffs, and G. F. Hurd, counsel for the defendants.

Excavation work has started on the new exchange building in Seattle.

D. E. GRIFFITHS

Theatre Building Active in England, Says D. E. Griffiths

Activity in British theatre construction is the most noteworthy feature in the English scene in the opinion of D. E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematographer Renters Society and managing director for First National in England, who is visiting this country on a three-week vacation.

Mr. Griffiths would hazard no estimate on the number of theatres in construction, however, and did not feel at liberty to comment upon those interests which were responsible for the bulk of the expansion. "Generally speaking," he said, "conditions are encouraging and there is no reason to believe that the peak of the upward trend has yet been reached."

Mr. Griffiths declined specific comment on the proposed quota act on the ground that such viewpoint would be inappropriate in view of his position as head of the distributors' organization. He did, however, echo the opinion of Herbert Wilcox, London producer who recently visited New York, by declaring that the answer to the British production problem could be summed in one word—quality. It is quality, not quantity, that is the heart of the quota problem and to disregard this is simply not meeting the problem honestly, Mr. Griffiths said.

Mr. Griffiths said that American product is continuing its hold on the interest of English audiences and there is little reason to believe that such interest will decline. Stimulating British interest, Mr. Griffiths feels, is the recent wave of English themes in American pictures, pointing to such films as "Captains Courageous," "Wee Willie Winkie" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade" as examples.

The Warner studios at Teddington will produce between 18 and 20 pictures this year, Mr. Griffiths said.

Mr. Griffiths arrived August 9th on the Queen Mary and expects to leave on the Aquitania September 1st. His visit is purely one of pleasure, he said, and has no deeper significance. Mr. Griffiths is staying at the Ritz Towers during his sojourn in New York.

NAZI-LED CONTINENTAL FILM BLOC CONFIRMED BY PARIS FILM CONGRESS

Franco - Belgian Group Concedes Future of International Chamber Rests Upon Entrance of U. S. and Britain

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

While it is yet too early to see clearly what will be the final results of the Biennial Congress of the International Film Chamber, these deductions may be made:

Assertions of the American press that up to now the Chamber has been practically in the hands of the Nazis have been shown to be indubitably correct.

Besides their 17 delegates, Germany sent more than 100 persons, all said to be connected with the German cinema industry but, above all, members of the Nazi political party.

The fact that Dr. Oswald Lehnich, state secretary and president of the Reichsfilmkammer, was also for two years the president of the International Film Chamber, points to the more than close connection between the two organizations.

Officials of the French Cinema Confederation appear relieved now that the headquarters of the Chamber have left Berlin for Paris.

On the other hand, the Congress has evinced that a European film bloc, with Nazi predominance, obviously exists.

Throughout the meetings the 17 German and 12 Italian delegates, that is to say the Nazis and Fascists, acted in close accord, followed by the delegates of Austria, Poland, Hungary, Yugoslavia and even Czechoslovakia, although from a political point of view this last named country has an alliance with France.

Other European countries, such as Sweden, Finland, Denmark and Norway, did not have any influence on the deliberations. France and Belgium were followed by Switzerland the miniature state of Luxembourg.

The Italian delagation had at its head Carlo Roncorini, president of the Cineticca Society, but Dr. Luigi Freddi, Minister of Italian Propaganda and Press, and real chief of the Italian cinema, also was present.

All this shows the great importance the German and Italian governments attached to the Congress.

Organized in Paris

France organized the Congress in Paris, through its General Confederation of the French Cinema, with its four branches: Technical Industries, Production, Distribution and Organization. The French official delegates were the members of the board of these four branches, a total of approximately 30 delegates.

Belgium sent 14 delegates, headed by Mr. Van Cauteren, president of the Belgian Cinema Association (ABC) and a director of the board of the UNCB (National Union of the Belgian Cinema). Switzerland was represented by 4 delegates, headed by Joseph Lang, general secretary of the Swiss Cinema Association. Luxembourg had one delegate, Victor Leclerc, president of the Luxembourg Cinema Exhibitors.

Thus the lineup consisted of two groups, the German-Italian bloc, and the Franco-Belgian union.

LIMIT FRENCH STARS TO ONE FILM ABROAD

Alarmed by the migration of French motion picture stars to Hollywood, the French Motion Picture Producers Association decreed that French stars must confine themselves to one foreign picture a year and must consent to participate in a French film during the same period.

Among the stars affected by the ruling are Charles Boyer, Simone Simon, Annabella and Harry Baur.

The German press had announced that Germany would lead the Congress. The French Confederation made a vigorous denial of this, but it would be equally inexact to say that the German and Italian delegates did not try everything in their power to do so.

Disturbed by "Mistakes"

It is not an exaggeration to say that the French officials were much annoyed by several big mistakes made which might definitely forfeit all hopes of seeing the United States and England join the Chamber.

For two years the headquarters will be in Paris with a French presidency. After that, in 1939, Italy will take the presidency, meaning that the Chamber will again be in hands of the Nazi-Fascist block.

All these considerations were reflected at the concluding session in the speech of Georges Lourau, vice-president of the French Cinema Confederation and manager of the French producing and distributing company, Films Sonores Tobis, who was appointed president of the Chamber.

Mr. Lourau pointed out that politics ought not to interfere in any way, that it had to be a real international organ, the possession of no country, and that the only aim of the Chamber was to be an international center of cinema information, and cultural, juridical, and economical studies.

Mr. Lourau insisted that until the United States and England join the Chamber it cannot reach its full development.

Mr. Lourau referred to the presence at the meetings of the Juridical Commission (formerly the Authors' Rights Commission) of Neville Kearney, representing the British industry, and of Harold L. Smith, continental representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc.

Mr. Lourau alluded to an incident of a few hours earlier, the presentation in Berlin of a German film in which the French Government was ridiculed. He reminded the assembly that an aim of the Chamber was to stop films which in any way could be injurious to the prestige of any country.

The French industry hopes that the passing of the presidency and headquarters from Berlin to Paris, and the declaration of Mr. Lourau will be sufficient to bring America and England into the Chamber. Impartial observers think that is doubtful, at least immediately.

France and Belgium have more need of the Chamber than do England and America.

The fact that the president of the Chamber is a Frenchman does not automatically mean that the Nazi-Fascist bloc will have no more influence on the Chamber. The spirit and the character of the Chamber must be changed. Mr. Lourau has promised to effect this.

Mr. Lourau, whose loyalty, independence and energy are not in question, is the manager of French Tobis.

Many times this question of French Tobis and its possible connection with Berlin has been raised in foreign cinema publications. Anti-Nazi leagues have tried to boycott French pictures produced in France by independent producers just because these films were distributed in France through French Tobis. These pictures, such as the Sacha Guitry films, had nothing to do with German Tobis, now an arm of the German government.

The European headquarters of Tobis are in Amsterdam, and the foundation society is Dutch, with Dutch money and the French Tobis is officially an independent French concern which has nothing to do with Berlin, but it is considered here that the French and the German Tobis are in close connection. And Holland does not belong to the International Film Chamber! Will the Reichsfilmkammer not try to bring pressure to bear on Georges Lourau, because he is the manager of the French Tobis?

The Basic Problem

It is very clear that if Germany and Italy continue managing the Chamber, France and Belgium will have nothing to do with it. If France is strong enough to eliminate all special influences in the Chamber, there will be no more obstacles to the joining of America and England.

Matters examined by the Congress and by the Chamber are important. For instance the Juridical Commission, which deals with authors' copyrights, must have interest for America and England.

The Nazi-Italian-Central Europe-Japan film bloc is not a myth. It is as well directed against French films as against American and English productions. The day that America and England join the Chamber, democratic countries will have the majority.

The official opening of the Congress, as well as the Congress of the International Film Press (Fipresci), was held at Le Havre, in the theatre on board the French liner Normandie.

Dr. Oswald Lehnich, after pronouncing the chief aim of the International Film Chamber to be "to deepen friendship between the peoples," said that he "had taken the liberty of sending greetings, by telegram, to the president of the French republic, Mr. Albert Lebrun; to the prime minister, Mr. Chautemps, and to the precursor and pioneer of the cinema, Mr. Louis Lumière."

Whereupon, the French general commissioner of the Congress, Henri Clerc, ex-deputy, caused great surprise by announcing that he had received a request (he did not say from whom but it is not difficult to guess) to send a telegram to Adolph Hitler's right hand man, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, "as a token of remembrance and thanks" for the welcome given the previous Congress, in Berlin, in 1935. Then rose the chief of the Polish Delegation, Richard Ordynski, to ask that another telegram be sent to Comte Alfieri, Italian propaganda minister, because the next Congress is to be held in Rome, in 1939.

French delegates, in spite of their surpise and indignation, raised no objections.

Other speeches were made by Henri Clerc;

Jean Chataigner, a French journalist-publicist and president of the Fipresci (Federation of the International Film Press); Mr. Banet-River, one of the directors of the French Line, and by Mr. Jamati, representing Jean Zay, minister for national education.

The General Meeting

The general meeting was held in the motion picture theatre of the Cinema Pavilion at the Paris Exhibition, under the presidency of Jean Zay.

Dr. Lehnich spoke of the Chamber's activities, of the Juridicial Commission, led by Raymond Lussiez; the Legal Archive; the Economic Commission, under President Meydam, to study quotas, foreign exchange regulations, duties, and practices in foreign trade in films, and the Commission on Cultural Films, constituted under the presidency of Dr. L. de Feo of Italy, at the last session of the executive committee.

Executives Named

The executive committee and the administrative committee named as vice-presidents of the Chamber: Mr. Roncorini (Italy), Mr. Havel (Czechoslovakia), Mr. Ordynski (Poland), Dr. Oswald Lehnich (Germany).

The new executive committee will include 12 members representing 6 countries, two each for Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Italy.

The administrative committee will have 33 representatives of 13 nations: Italy (8); France (4); Germany (4); Austria (3); Belgium (3); Czechoslovakia (3); Hungary (2); Denmark (1); Finland (1); Luxembourg (1); Poland (1); Switzerland (1); Sweden (1).

The executive and administrative committees and the International Federation of Film Exhibitors voted a ban on productions which in any way could attack the prestige of any of the member countries.

The Juridical Commission approved fundamental principles to be considered when copyrights are bought to turn any literary work into a film.

The Study Commission to facilitate the international exchange of films (Economic Commission) urged compilation of statistics to expedite such distribution, delegates of the Chamber were asked to press their governments for duty-free importation for three months. It also was decided to work for an international court of arbitration concerning all cinema and film matters.

The Study Commission considered color, television, and stereoscopic films, and felt that films in color would become commercially successful only when their production and exhibition does not cost more than for films in black and white.

Common action was asked to give the film industry the same treatment as other fields and their privileged goods in the matter of exportation of money.

The Commission of Educative Films suggested that all governments encourage production and diffusion of educational films and that archives be established. Free trade for cultural and educational films also was proposed.

Cooperation with the Venice Biennial and the next Olympic Games was voted.

Exhibitors Hit Substandard Films

The International Federation of Cinema Exhibitors urged general reduction of socalled pauper rights. It agreed that sub-standard entertainment films of 16 mm. and 17.5 mm. are competition to the motion picture theatres, and that 35 mm. standard films should not be transformed into substandard films until after three years of exhibition.

The Federation asked for limitation of construction of new theatres when "not necessary."

It also was decided that the president and the four vice-presidents of the Federation be made members of the administrative committee of the International Film Chamber.

Raymond Lussiez, president of the French Exhibitors' Association, was appointed President of the International Federation, in succession to Mr. Betram (Germany), who will be vice-president.

In his concluding address to the International Film Chamber, Mr. Lourau, the new president, emphasized the need of a universal objective.

"At no time and in no way could the French cinema lend its help to an organization whose object is not purely cinematographic and of universal range.

"Things would have been different if the action of the International Film Chamber had been the action of a purely Continental European group directed against the countries which are at the present time the principal film producers of the world market.

"I will add that our Confederation does not doubt that the intentions of the other countries participating in the International Chamber are not exactly the same as ours on these two points."

The Berlin Incident

A few hours before the opening of the concluding meeting news was received through Mr. Robert Lorette, the Berlin correspondent of the French newspapers Paris-Midi and Paris-Soir, that a German film produced by UFA, "Mein Sohn, Herr Minister" (My son, Mr. Minister), had been shown for the first time and that it ridiculed the French Government and the democracy.

"This film has been adopted from a French play, 'Fiston' (Sonny), by the French author, André Birabeau," wrote Mr. Lorette. "The least we can say is that never before has the French Government been so ridiculed as in this film. It is a pity that Mr. Birabeau has not seen this film, and the way his play has been altered.

"The director of the film, Mr. Veit Harlan, had in this film a good opportunity of 'distinguishing himself.' He did not miss the mark! 'Mein Sohn, Herr Minister' is full of rough attacks against all democracies in general, and against France in particular."

"'Ministers only succeed through women, and, when they have the power, their only care is to transform their cabinet into a boudoir,' reads one line.

"Germans say that these criticisms must not be taken seriously but are only 'humor.' But why do they tolerate this kind of humor which is detrimental to others?

"A few months ago, a German film director was obliged to flee from Germany because he had made a German film in which were some very light allusions to the German system of Government."

In Paris, the chief of the German delegation at the Congress of the Fipresci protested against the articles published in Paris-Midi and Paris-Soir. He said that the play, from which the film had been taken, had run for three months in Berlin without any complaint.

In reply Mr. Lorette wrote: "If this film is not injurious to France, may God preserve us from a real 'anti-French' film."

SEES TOM TYLER PLAYING IN CIRCUS

To the Editor of the Herald:

When the Wallace Brothers Circus was in Decatur Mr. and Mrs. Morrow and their daughter, Betty, met the western pictures star Tom Tyler, who is the feature attraction with that crcus. We found him to be a most gracious and charming host.

I think every exhibitor should take advantage of the opportunity to meet this popular star when Wallace Bros. are within visiting distance. Ask for Mr. West, the publicity agent with the circus, and he will arrange for an interview.

Everyone in attendance at the circus went for Tyler in a big way. He was fairly mobbed by autograph seekers after the performance had concluded. When my next Tyler feature is shown next week I shall have a special Tyler matinee and admit autograph holders free.

I can't understand why the major companies have passed up this star. Thirty years in show business tell me that he is of major caliber.—Cliff E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill.

Woolf to Produce U's British Films

Universal's British production requirements will be handled by C. M. Woolf's General Film Distributors company, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board, said this week.

The alliance relieves the company of seeking outside production arrangements with other companies, under the indicated provisions of the new British quota act. The Woolf company owns a 30 per cent interest in Universal through its participation with Standard Capital Company and others in acquisition of Carl Laemmle's holdings in Universal early last year.

Mr. Cowdin said that negotiations are now in work for a new Canadian distribution arrangement for Universal.

Says GB's Sales Plan is Accepted

The new sales policy of Gaumont British has been accepted by large and small operator alike, George W. Weeks, sales manager of the company, said this week.

"The new plan seems equally workable for both the small theatre owner and the large chain," he said, "and the confidence in our product which prompted us to sell our pictures individually on their merit has, in turn, created great confidence among exhibitors in our new program."

Mr. Weeks claimed that the value of the new plan was its elasticity in that it permitted those exhibitors who preferred to buy the GB program of 12 "A" pictures en bloc to do so.

One Whale of a Sea Film Opens at Globe

By KATE CAMERON.

"Souls at Sea," Paramount picture directed by Henry Hathaway, screen play by Grover Jones and Ted Lesser based on story by Dale Van Every, presented at the Globe Theatre.

Every once in a while, a picture comes out of a Hollywood studio that is so good it surprises its own makers. It happened that, when the Paramount producers saw the finished print of "Souls at Sea," they decided Director Henry Hathaway had created a stirring film play which deserved to be treated to a special release on Broadway, instead of being sent out to the trade merely as a run-of-the-mill product. Therefore, it was brought into New York last night for a flood-lighted premiere at the Globe Theatre, decorated especially for the occasion, where it will continue to be shown indefinitely on a two-a-day schedule.

The picture is based on a sensational marine case that was tried years ago. The story of the court proceedings came to light when a newspaper man, browsing through the old files of a Philadelphia journal recently, came upon the brittle, yellow pages containing the account of a sailor's trial for a mass murder at sea.

Out of this incident, Dale Van Every constructed a fictional account of the dramatic events that led up to the terrifically exciting climax, where one man on a sinking ship assumes command of an overcrowded lifeboat and plays God to the extent of discarding some of the passengers and carrying others to safety.

Suspense Breathless.

With a finely constructed screen play, the work of Grover Jones and Ted Lesser, and a superb cast headed by Gary Cooper, George Raft, Henry Wilcoxon and Frances Dee, Director Hathaway has built an engrossing drama that holds one's attention from beginning to end.

The picture opens slowly and moves with a certain amount of reserve through the scenes of the trial of Nuggin Taylor for the murders at sea. But even through the leisurely progress of the trial, there is a persistent stir of mystery that keeps one's attention riveted to the screen until the court scene fades into the action that provoked it. Then the mystery gives way to a breathless suspense that lasts throughout the horrific sea adventure.

Gary Cooper is a perfect choice for the role of Nuggin Taylor. He

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Denounce "Quickies"

Previous to the issue of the official White Paper on films, the National Association of Theatrical Employees and the Association of Cine-Technicians jointly sent a statement to the press criticizing the fact that, in preliminary discussions of new legislation, the interests of workers in the industry had been overlooked, while the views of producers, exhibitors and renters had been widely publicized.

The statement attacks the expiring Films Act on the ground that it "produced the 'quickie,' upon which type of picture salaries, wages and bad conditions of employment compare very unfavorably on the whole with those of the better class of production. . . . The 'quickie' has done almost irreparable damage to British film interests and prevented the British artist, technician and artist from coming into their own." It asserts that new legislation must "insure that quota pictures are good pictures and that it is British technicians who make them."

As part of a campaign "to stress the interests of film workers as far as the British industry is concerned," the NATE has put forward two resolutions to the Trade Union Congress, to be held next month. At this parliament of trade unionism the delegates will be asked to support the policy of a 50 per cent quota and to recognize the danger of "foreign domination" and the need to protect British labor; also to urge special safeguards for employees in revision of the 1909 Act governing the licensing of theatres.

The two associations plan meetings and a canvass of members of Parliament in support of their policy.

Songs for "Paradise"

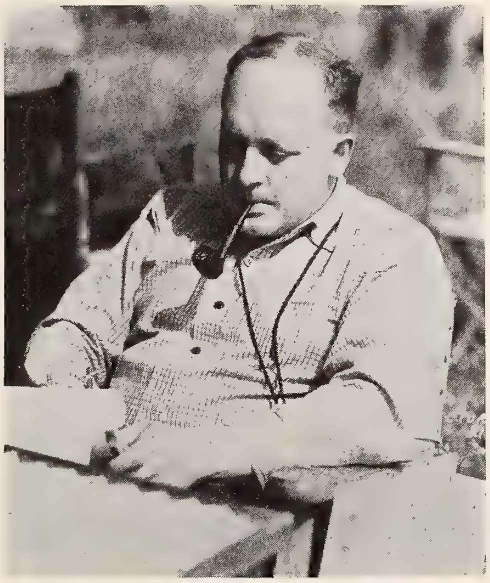
William Kernell has written and Michael Spoliansky composed four special song numbers for "Paradise for Two" (originally "Kiss Me Goodnight"), which Thornton Freeland is directing for London Films. The theme number, with the film title, will be sung by Patricia Ellis and Jack Hulbert. The others are "Kiss Me Goodnight," to be sung by Miss Ellis with a 60-girl chorus, "When You Hear Music," a song-dance number for the two principals, and "March in Springtime," a full-company dance number.

Jack Donahue and Philip Bushell are dance supervisors and ballet sequences are being arranged by Vladenmiroff, from New York, Rene Hubert designed the costumes.

India in Wales

While Geoffrey Boothby's exterior unit for London Films' "The Drum" continues to shoot in the Himalayas and other spots of the northwest frontier of India, matching scenes have been done at Llanbedre in North Wales, where there also are mountains and canyons.

Zoltan Korda, directing, with Mrs. Natalie Kalmus as Technicolor supervisor and Georges Perinal in charge of the cameras, has headed an expedition into the British wilds which in some details is duplicating the procedure of the Indian party. Trains of mules have been used for transport to the location center, seven miles from a railway. The unit is camping, five hundred under canvas. There are 200 Indians among them.



SINCLAIR HILL, director for Grosvenor Sound Films at Pinewood Studios, has 25 years of activity in the industry to his credit. He began in 1912 with the old Itala Company of Turin.

Leads to be used in these scenes are the young Indian "Sabu," Valerie Hobson, Roger Livesey and Desmond Tester.

At Denham, Victor Saville has completed "South Riding" in its exact shooting schedule of 47 days, and it is to have an early West End premiere. One of the last scenes, picturing Coronation rejoicings in the grounds of an English country house, called for a big percentage of the 1,450 extras checked through the London Films gates on a recent day; the number was a record for the studio. Saville's throng included a choir of a hundred, troops of Girl Guides, and contingents of the Red Cross and the British Legion.

London Films have completed four films this year and have six on the floor.

Rehearses Dances

Jessie Matthews already is rehearsing new and intricate dances for "Sailing Along," with Jack Whiting, who has arrived from America well ahead of the two others from U. S. who are cast for leading parts opposite the British star. Roland Young is en route, and Noel Madison is in Cornwall. The fourth is Barry Mackay, also on holiday at this moment. Lesser Samuel has written the screen play for Gaumont-British, and Sonnie Hale will direct at Pinewood.

Maurice Johnson, after writing "My River," "Souvenir of Love" and "My Heart Skips a Beat" for Miss Matthews to sing, has returned to New York.

Gaumont-British Instructional, in collaboration with J. Arthur Rank, who is a leading figure in the Religious Film Society as well as a backer of General Film Distributors and Pinewood Studios, has arranged for John Grierson, leader of the "documentary" field, and H. Bruce Woolfe, chief of GBI, to make a series of films for use in churches. The first will be Tolstoy's "Where Love Is." GBI also will provide complete programs for church use; 26 will be available at once. These will include a hymn, a Bible reading, a nature or interest films, a feature film of the type now to be made or already in existence (e. g., "The Passing of the Third Floor Back") and an epilogue.

GBI also has completed 15 two-reel specials covering the life industries and scenery of Scotland. They plan to cover the whole of the United Kingdom on similar lines, providing a survey of primitive crafts, modern industries, local customs and dialects of each. Mary Field, Paul Rotha, Donald Carter and Jack Holmes, all stalwarts of the documentary field, have headed the units.

Opera Helps Film

Warner-First National concluded shooting on its second musical, "Music and Mystery," at Teddington, with scenes from the last act of "Faust," sung by the chorus of the Covent Garden Opera Company, who were filming for the first time. The scene also used the services, in the orchestra pit, of a number of leading London symphony instrumentalists. Percy Heming, Covent Garden producer, directed the opera scenes, with costume from the "Garden."

Keith Falkner appears, and sings, as Mephistopheles and Marta Labarr as Marguerite, in this sequence, for which the sound-recording was done at the Joe Rock studios.

Arthur Woods is directing and Ivy St. Helier, whose part was specially written up after the first rushes, and Chili Bouchier have important parts.

Annabella, Brunette

Harold Schuster has used a big set representing the Casino at Monte Carlo for recent scenes for "Follow the Sun," second Annabella vehicle for New York. The sequence has the special interest that the blonde Annabella is presented in the disguise of a raven haired Spanish marquise, plunging heavily as one of a crowd of roulette players.

Annabella flies to Paris for costume-fitting for "Let's Go to Paris," her next for Robert T. Kane.

Itemized

Marie Lohr, completing her part in "South Riding," is rehearsing for the Drury Lane show, "Crest of the Wave."

Ralph Richardson is in the cast of the Merle Oberon Technicolor special, "The Divorce of Lady X."

First shots for Gainsborough's "Owd Bob" have been made on Exmoor, Devon.

Liberty Films, Ltd., are shooting sea sequences for their first production, to be directed by Ivar Campbell. Henry Edwards will star.

Eastman Kodak Net Is Up 42%; 3 SEC Reports

Eastman Kodak Company, manufacturing cameras and motion picture and still-film stock, reports earnings of $11,475,066 for the first six months of 1937, representing a 42 per cent increase over the $8,081,870 net for the same period in 1936.

Eastman Kodak and Sonotone Corporation, makers of hard-of-hearing devices for theatres, declared dividends this week, Eastman voting the regular quarterly payment of $2, and Sonotone ordering payment of a 10-cent dividend on common stock.

Other financial news included reports to the Securities and Exchange Commission by Paramount, Universal and Cinecolor, Inc., and a Columbia Broadcasting report to the New York Exchange.

The Eastman Kodak first-half earnings report for 1937, which disclosed a 42 per cent increase over first-half income for 1936, explained the increase was due to a 20 per cent gain in net sales during the first six months of this year, and that the $11,475,066 net was equivalent to $5.01 a common share, which compares with the $3.51 a common share earned by the $8,081,870 net for the first six months of 1936.

Sales aggregated $61,273,205, up $10,000,000 over the 1936 six months, and operating deductions totaled $47,748,704.

Cinecolor, Inc., filed with the SEC a registration certificate covering 407,000 shares of common stock, $1 par value, of which 240,000 shares are outstanding and 167,000 shares are to be issued at an offering price of $1.50 per share, to be underwritten by G. Brashears and Company. The proceeds will be used for new equipment and working capital for the company's business of processing and printing color films, it was said.

The SEC received from Universal Pictures a statement showing the Universal Corporation of Wilmington, Del., holding 228,927 shares of common stock, and acquisitions of 40 shares of eight per cent cumulative first preferred and 20,000 shares of second preferred.

Paramount reported to the SEC that it has entered into oral agreements with 14 theatre circuit partners to take the place of written agreements expired last July 3rd, until new written agreements are effected.

Columbia Broadcasting, in its initial report to the Committee on Stock Listings of the New York Stock Exchange, reports reacquired shares as follows: 2,850 shares of Class A stock and 189,750 shares of B.

Castle Plans New Series

Castle Films is planning a new series for home motion pictures to be called "See," fashioned after the pictorial magazine, Look. Seven issues are to be released a year.

Weber Promoted

Louis Weber, Memphis office manager for MGM Distributing Corporation, has been promoted to special sales representative in the southern district. He is being succeeded in Memphis by T. B. Kirk, former booker.

F. C. Weskil Celebrates 25th Anniversary as Exhibitor

Mack Sennett's cops were dashing wildly and frantically about, Charlie Chaplin had yet to attain success as a motion picture star and Hollywood did not even exist as a city when F. C. Weskil became an exhibitor.

That was 25 years ago and Mr. Weskil was the proud owner of a "nickelodeon" located on the pike at Long Beach, Cal. Now, Mr. Weskil owns three houses—the Rose and the Roxy at Colfax, Wash., and the Panida at Sandpoint, Idaho—and this summer he is celebrating his silver anniversary as a theatre operator.

As a tribute to his father's record, L. H. Weskil plans to hold a silver anniversary week in the Weskil houses.

During the days when he operated the Long Beach house, Mr. Weskil recalls that he often visited with the stars of that time. He frequently was on the set where Mr. Chaplin was working and the sets where the Keystone cops were going through their antics.

Throughout the entire 25 years, Mr. Weskil has been actively engaged in the exhibition part of the motion picture industry.

Deny Orpheum Plea To Figure in RKO

The efforts of preferred stockholders of Orpheum Circuit, Inc., to be included in the reorganization plan of Radio-Keith-Orpheum failed this week when Federal Judge William Bondy denied in U. S. district court a plea by Isidor J. Kresel, attorney for the consolidated preferred stockholders' committee, for intervention by Orpheum in the reorganization proceedings.

Motion also was denied for the setting aside of an order eliminating the necessity of filing statements to show how stockholders acquired their holdings in RKO. The motion was asked by the independent protective committee of RKO common stockholders.

At the same time a plea to require Atlas Corporation to file verified statements showing the claims it purchased or transferred in anticipation of the RKO reorganization was also refused.

Orpheum assets were sold to Stadium Theatres, an RKO subsidiary, for $700,000 cash and a waiver of a $2,908,774 claim. The petition stated that Orpheum profits amounted to $500,000 and constitute 25 per cent of RKO's total earnings. Mr. Kresel also charged that Orpheum assets were sufficient to meet the claims of all creditors but that transfer of assets to Stadium had prevented liquidation.

Oscar W. Ehrhorn, referee, again was attacked as "prejudiced" in the Orpheum Circuit receivership hearings before Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in U. S. district court by Samuel Zirn, representative of the Electrical Products Corporation of California. Mr. Zirn's outburst was laid to the reported disallowance of an $8,600 claim of his company.

Balaban Theatres, Inc., of Chicago, has changed its name to A. J. B. Theatres, Inc. Application for the change was made in Wilmington, Del.

Pathe-Cinema Fate Troubling French

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

French film circles are disturbed over the future of Pathe-Cinema (formerly Pathe-Natan) which has been in receivership three years and has just undergone another shake-up after stockolders voted down a reorganization plan.

The proposed plan was presented by Robert Dirler, who has been in control since the retirement of Bernard Natan and the resultant receivership. Mr. Dirler proposed a 50 per cent reduction in debentures, a 25 per cent reduction in shares and the cancellation of the social capital of the receivership society.

After a disturbance during which the police were called, 250 shareholders representing 600,000 shares voted down the proposal, 438,000 shares to 165,000. Mr. Dirler was defeated for reelection as president of the shareholders, by a vote of 407,000 shares to 220,000.

Upon Mr. Dirler's retirement from the meeting, the following were elected to the council: Verdet Kleber, representing the Unione Parisienne, French bank; Lucien Fabre, of the Credit du Nord, another bank; Georges Deacours and Jacques Thibault, representing some Lyons concerns, and Messrs. Claras and Hayet, both of Kodak Film.

The council will start on a new plan which, it is believed, will meet with the opposition of the Dirler supporters. Mr. Natan is still an important factor, owning 184,000 shares under a decision of the Court of Commerce.

IN COURTS

Biophone Appeal Denied by Court

An appeal by the Biophone Corporation to reopen a case in which the Western Electric Company, Electrical Research Products, Inc., and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company obtained default decrees has been denied by the United States circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia.

The case dates back to 1929 when Western Electric and its affiliated companies took Biophone into court for alleged infringement of 16 of their amplifier patents, used in the defendant's sound picture equipment. Trial was delayed pending the outcome of similar litigation in other courts. When Western Electric won the other cases, the default decrees were entered in federal court, New Jersey. This court refused to reopen the case on petition of Biophone and it was on this decision that the appeal was taken.

Cruze Institutes Libel Action

Charging he was libeled in an article published in the June issue of Photoplay Magazine, James Cruze, director, has filed suit in Los Angeles for $250,000 damages against Macfadden Publications, Inc., and Ruth Waterbury, editor of the publication.

Mr. Cruze contends the article implied his directorial career ended with the advent of sound and that it said he was reduced to "living in a room in the servants' quarters of his home."

Story Suit Dismissed

Two of four claims made by Richard Carroll and William Drake, authors, in an action against Warner Brothers, have been dismissed in United States district court, New York. The plaintiffs were allowed 20 days in which to file an amended complaint. They charge they prepared a scenario for Warner Brothers in 1934 and that it was rejected. But, they contend further, they were unable to market the story because the film company filed intention of producing a picture on the same subject.

Plagiarism Charged

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., Culver Export Corporation and Frank Dolan are defendants in a plagiarism action brought by Henry Rose, author of a play, "Burrow, Burrow." The motion picture, "Man of the People," was a plagiarism of his play, he contends.

Writer Seeks Damages

An action for $30,000 damages has been instituted against Sol Lesser, Principal Productions, Inc., Harold Bell Wright, and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation by Charles Art Powell, writer, whose pen name is Gordon Newell. He charges he did not receive sufficient exploitation and screen credit on the story, "The Californian."

FREE SHOW SOLVES RAGWEED PROBLEM

"A movie ticket presented to any child for some effort is a guarantee of popularity for any campaign," according to members of the Women's Club at Marinette, Wisconsin, and in support of the statement they point to their recent experience.

Worried over possible decreases in tourist trade because of ragweed causing hayfever, the club members appealed to E. R. Brenan, manager of the Fox Theatre, for cooperation in a campaign to rid the community of ragweed.

He consented, so in return for pulling ragweed for half an hour, children were rewarded by being admitted to a special Saturday show.

One thousand children saw the program of a feature, a comedy and a cartoon.

Freddie's Aunt Claims MGM Violated Law

Freddie Bartholomew, child actor, was illegally imported into the United States by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer representatives, his aunt, Miss Myllicent Mary Bartholomew, charged in a Los Angeles court.

Miss Bartholomew, seeking cancellation of Freddie's $1,100 a week contract because MGM refused to raise the figure to $2,000, contends the company violated British labor laws which prohibit the removal of minors under 14 for theatrical purposes.

Judget Emmett H. Wilson, in Superior court, took the matter under advisement.

Cyril McNeile Dead; Created "Drummond"

Cyril McNeile, creator of the Bulldog Drummond character now being made into film by Paramount, died Saturday in Pulborough, Sussex, in England, at the age of 48.

Col. McNeile—better known under his pen name, "Sapper"—started writing Bulldog Drummond stories in 1920 and since then averaged about one a year. Ronald Colman, who played the Drummond character in the first picture featuring Sapper's detective, has become its most famous impersonator.

T. C. Martin

T. C. Martin, 50, theatre operator in Pullman, Washington, died in Portland last week from a heart attack.

Australia Bans Warner Film

"The King and the Chorus Girl," Warner Brothers production, has been banned by the Australian government. No reason was given for the action but it is understood to be for undignified treatment of royalty.

MacArthur Signed by MGM

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Charles MacArthur as a producer and his first picture will be "Only Unto Thee." The company also has signed Eddie Buzzell as a director and his first assignment will be "Under This Flag."

OHIO LAW LIMITS WORKING HOURS

An Ohio law, passed by the legislature in April and effective on Thursday, prohibits an employer from employing a female for more than 48 hours in any one week, more than eight hours in one day, or more than six days in any period of seven consecutive days. "Days" are defined as including any period of 24 consecutive hours.

In addition, the restrictions apply to boys under 18 years of age.

The law fixes the hours of employment at between 6 a. m. and 10 p. m. for females between the ages of 18 and 21 and for boys from 16 to 18 years. Girls under 18 and boys under 16 can be employed only between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m.

All employers are obligated to keep posted on the premises where any female is employed a schedule of the hours of employment, including the maximum number of hours each female shall be employed during each day of the week with the total hours per week, the time of commencing and stopping work and the time of commencing and stopping for meal periods.

McKenzie and McCoy Win at Flower Show

Maurice McKenzie, assistant to Will Hays, is, like Mr. Hays, something of a farmer. Mr. Hays raises soya beans in Indiana and Mr. McKenzie raises flowers up at Lockwood Corners in Connecticut. Last spring he got infected with the literature of Herbert O. Evans, the Bedford, Ohio, gladiolus specialist. As a result of his first season's adventure with high powered, pedigreed gladiolus he sent an armful of spikes to the New York show at Rockefeller Center last week and took three imposing prizes.

He won with McCoy, Mother Machree and Picardy against expert professionals. His specimens ranged from stupendous to colossal.

Al Hanson Resigns From Fox West Coast

Al Hanson has resigned as assistant to Charles P. Skouras, operating head of Fox West Coast Theatres, to devote full time to his two theatres and the one now building.

Mr. Hanson owns 49 per cent in the Tower and Compton, both of Compton, Cal., the remaining interests being held by Fox West Coast.

His successor has not yet been named.

A check for $1,000 was awarded Victor Morris, retired from Loew's after having served 27 years as manager of the Orpheum, Boston, at a banquet held in his honor by the circuit at the Cocoanut Grove, Boston, last week. Mr. Morris will soon leave for the West Coast to become associated with MGM production under Edward J. Mannix, formerly his assistant at the Orpheum.

40-HOUR WEEK FOR EXCHANGES WAITED

Radio Artists Elect Eddie Cantor; A. F. of L. Opens Drive in Same Field

Establishment of a 40-hour week and a minimum wage scale for New York exchange service employes was expected this week as representatives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Local 306 continued their conferences with representatives of the leading distributing companies.

Agreements already have been reached in 24 key cities. New York, Chicago and Los Angeles are the only places where contracts have not yet been signed, according to Frank Phelps, at whose offices at Warner Brothers the New York pact was discussed. Three conferences were held last week but because of the large number attending the sessions, they were continued until this week.

The Associated Actors and Artistes of America also continued to remain in the foreground of the union picture this week when the American Federation of Radio Artists elected Eddie Cantor president and formally applied to the AAAA for a charter. Other officers elected are Lawrence Tibbett, Norman Field, Helen Hayes, Jascha Heifetz and James Wallington, vice-presidents; Lucille Wall, recording secretary, and George Heller, treasurer.

Issuance of the charter is scheduled for August 27th when the board of the Four A's holds its next meeting.

National Board for Radio

Appointment of a national board of directors for the newly formed radio artists' organization marked the opening of an American Federation of Labor drive to organize performers in radio. The board, with ten vacancies yet to be filled by representatives of local radio unions which are to be established, is composed of the following:

Edward Arnold
Phil Baker
Jack Benny
Edgar Bergen
John Boles
Richard Bonnelli
Reed Brown, Jr.
Eddie Cantor
Frank Chapman
Bing Crosby
Ted di Corsia
Norman Field
Edward Fielding
Georgia Fifield
Martin Gabel
Jascha Heifetz
George Heller
Warren Hull
Carleton Kadell
Joe Laurie
John McGovern
Florence Malone
Queena Mario
James Melton
Grace Moore
Osgood Perkins
Dick Powell
Lanny Ross
Mark Smith
Margaret Speaks
Paul Stewart
Lawrence Tibbett
Rudy Vallee
Lucille Wall
James Wallington

Frank Gillmore, AAAA president, termed the appointment of the board the initial step toward improvement of working conditions and establishment of minimum fees for actors appearing before the microphone.

"The caliber of the persons serving on the board," he said, "is indicative of the importance which leading players attach to the radio organizational campaign."

Mr. Gillmore this week received a telegram from Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of Screen Actors Guild, denying any personal or organizational ambitions toward dominating the AAAA.

Mr. Thomson was credited with sponsorship of the plan which resulted in the new radio union becoming an autonomous organization rather than a branch of Actors Equity Association.

This organization waived its jurisdiction in the radio field. In commenting on the AAAA, Equity announced "a new life has opened" for the organization.

"It will of course retain the function it always had," the statement continued. "But to these will be added powers it never enjoyed.

"In brief, the Four A's will become not only the coordinator between all the actors' organizations but their leader in fact as well as in name.

Sees Closer Cooperation

"It will be in a position to extend the power of both money and men into the organization of those fields such as radio vaudeville and night clubs which are not, as yet, fully organized.

"It will be the medium for securing closer and more effective cooperation between the actors' unions and other unions in the entertainment field, to the ultimate benefit of all those whose labors lie in that field.

"It can inject itself more vigorously and authoritatively into those problems of the actors in their relationship to legislative bodies, local, state and national."

In Vancouver, B. C., theatre owners claimed a victory over motion picture projectionists after a special government commission had ruled that "it is not contrary to the public interest to allow less than two licensed projectionists to operate a cinematograph in a motion picture theatre which contains more than one machine."

Discussions of a new contract with a 20 per cent increase in pay were scheduled to start this week in Chicago between projectionists and exhibitors. The increase was requested last year but was not obtained.

A new local of the IATSE has been formed in Independence, Missouri, which adjoins Kansas City, as a result of IATSE approval of separate jurisdiction. The local was formed by eight projectionists.

A charter has been granted by the IATSE to the socalled ushers' union in Washington.

Circuits Meet Union Executive

In Boston, a conference is slated between James O'Brien, business advisor of Theatre Workers' Local B-4, and representatives of Mullen and Pinanski, Loew's and RKO circuits. Mr. O'Brien hopes to establish a wage and work standard contract to be used as the basis for bargaining with other greater city theatres.

Chief ushers in the better theatres would receive $40 if union figures are accepted; assistant chief and captains, $36; ushers, $38.50; cleaners, $36; porters, $26; doormen, $33; cashiers, $33; matrons, $24; candy girls, $26.60; watchmen, $36; checkroom attendants, $28.50, and stage doormen, $33.

Chief ushers in subsequent run and neighborhood houses would get $33 weekly; assistant chief and captains, $27.50; ushers, $22; cleaners, $36; porters, $22; doormen, $27.50; cashiers, $27.50; matrons, $22; candy girls, $22; watchmen, $33; checkroom attendants, $22, and parking lot attendants, $27.50.

Atlas Becomes Nu-Atlas

The name of the Atlas company which is making a series of short subjects for RKO Radio, has been changed to Nu-Atlas.

Broadway Melody of 1938

(MGM)

Musical Comedy

In common with the pyramids of Egypt, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and, to come a little nearer the subject, the late Florenz Ziegfeld's chronological Follies, the Broadway Melody brought forth annually by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is first of all an institution and secondarily whatever else a given edition of it may happen to be. For the showman to omit use of exploitation pressure upon the master title is or should be unthinkable, since mere mention of it sets certain tunes and images aflutter in ear and eye memory. However, this year, as always, the sponsors have supplied exhibitors with substantial additional material with which to work his box office magic upon the public.

The dancing of Eleanor Powell is again a prime factor and the name of Robert Taylor is an item of known marquee marketability. But this time there is also the powerful presence of one Sophie Tucker, the same and only one whose name has been ticket sales tonic for two generations, to tack up snugly alongside the topliners. There is also Charles Igor Gorin, whose air following is given a chance here to see, as well as hear him, and there is Willie Howard in a brief but advertisingly mentionable burst of characteristic comedy.

There are, too:

George Murphy, dancing opposite Miss Powell;

Buddy Ebsen, ditto and also clowning;

Judy Garland, singing one solo number in rafter-shaking manner and another a revival of the old favorite "You Made Me Love You," for a vocal response second only to La Tucker's;

Raymond Walburn, wheedled into backing the inevitable show;

Robert Wildhack, the incomparable snorer, sneezing;

Robert Benchley, drunk again as a Broadway press agent;

Billy Gilbert, brokenly voluble in a Greek barber assignment; and Binnie Barnes, under wraps, as Mrs. Moneybags.

There is also a story, called an original, by Jack McGowan and Sid Silvers, made up in equal parts of the old one about the young producer who needs backing for his show and the older one about the lovely if impoverished daughter of Old Kaintuck, whose cherished race horse wins a Saratoga purse out of which all hands dip happiness. Perhaps it is as well for the showman not to underscore the story.

A majority of the singing, dancing and comedy features are worked into the run of the narrative instead of being placed behind footlights, but when the picture approaches its culmination the audience is taken abruptly to a theatre interior and on to the stage is flung, with no interest-breaking cutbacks to offstage incident, the big dancing, singing and chorus numbers toward which expectation has been building. In this section of the film are concentrated the spectacle, grandeur, opulence and glitter that come under the general heading of extravaganza. The picture ends with a quick closeup.

Produced by Jack Cummings, the picture lacks nothing that money could provide to make it big. Director Roy Del Ruth's seasoned experience is evident in the cohesion of widely varied elements to the narrative thread. Original music and lyrics are by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Dave Gould's direction of the dance numbers is outstanding.

Previewed at the Westwood Village theatre, Los Angeles. Applause was periodic, with Sophie Tucker getting the lioness' share.—William R. Weaver.

Double Or Nothing

(Paramount)

Musical Comedy - Romance

Paradoxically, this film is richer in potential exploitation material than it is in entertainment. It does possess some unusual amusement values, but the slow tempo, together with the irrelevant interludes in the first hour's running time, left the preview audience in such a state of exhaustion that it was hardly prepared to appreciate the fast moving and novel climax.

A Bing Crosby vehicle, far inferior as a crowd-pleaser to his recent "Waikiki Wedding," he nevertheless is its dominating exploitation asset. He assumes a light romantic character into which are woven a few threads of melodrama. He has half a dozen song numbers, none of which was received by the audience in a manner that would presage popularity. The most interesting feature of the music is the fact that accompaniment is provided by a sing band, in which human voices cleverly imitate instruments. Other numbers are sung by Martha Raye in her peculiar style.

Two big production spectacles are included. One, featuring Miss Raye singing "It's On, It's Off," is a water carnival in which the physical mannerisms of the player, as she goes about the business of strip teasing, are not always in good taste. Second is the reproduction of a night club. Moving from one building to another, it serves as the pivot on which the short stories are told.

The production twists a melodramatic story into a musical comedy romance. Four persons, played by Crosby, Miss Raye, Andy Devine and William Frawley, find purses containing $100 bills. For their honesty in returning them they are promised an opportunity to inherit a million. A condition is attached. Each, given $5,000 immediately, must double it legitimately within thirty days to be eligible for the windfall. Though making a pooling agreement, each undertakes separate ventures. Four other characters, played by Samuel Hinds, aided by Fay Holden as his wife, Mary Carlisle as daughter and William Henry as son, plots to fleece the bewildered lucky ones.

In their character roles Frawley quickly loses his money to Hinds in a flim flam gold mining stock deal. A drunken golfer makes a hole in one to break Devine. Strip teaser Miss Raye's water carnival is broken up by police summoned by Hinds. Then the story moves on to Crosby's adventure. Aware of what has been going on, he breaks off his romantic attachment to Miss Carlisle, who he believes is in league with her father. As the production takes on the nature of a revue, Crosby's night club looks like a sure fire certainty to be a money doubler until Hinds' minions notify him that the lease permits the building to be used only for storage purposes. But as Miss Carlisle rushes to the crooner's side, the set starts to move into another building, much to Hind's chagrin. The audience, if it didn't know before, then realizes he will get the million and the girl along with it.

Previewed in Paramount theatre. The balcony audience gave noticeable evidence that it was bored with the goings-on prior to the last 15 minutes. In fact its first burst of spontaneous applause came in appreciation of the Ames and Arno eccentric dance number. There were quite a few walkouts and the applause at the end was not indicative that the audience considered this as ranking with the better Crosby pictures.—Gus McCarthy.

Varsity Show

(Warner Bros. - First National)

Musical Comedy

Warner Brothers previewed "Varsity Show" this week. In the July 24th issue of the Motion Picture Herald, Gus McCarthy, in a Pictorial Preview, said:

"Warner Brothers, eminently successful in the production of musicals, intends that 'Varsity Show' shall uphold that reputation. The plan, although the studio has been very secretive about details, is that the picture will result in a surprise commercial and entertainment attraction that will add to the company's prestige."

This reviewer wishes to go on record that the anticipation was correct. In fact, it is a sin of understatement. As previewed this week in Hollywood, "Varsity Show" was received as a smash riot of laughs and music, squeezing out of situations and dialogue every possible entertainment atom. It seems likely to be listed among the top film musicals of the year from both the standpoints of pleasing the paying patrons and ringing up the box office cash register.

Based on a substantial story plot (lack of which in many musicals has been disconcerting) and having logical characters who, what's more, have intelligent dialogue to deliver, "Varsity Show" has for name value Dick Powell, who, in the last Fame rating, was in sixth place among the top box office draws; Ted Healy, vaudeville and film comic, whose best part to date is in this and who steals virtually all comedy honors; Fred Waring whose name and orchestra are not unfamiliar Ford prospects, to dance and radio fans, and his two vocalists, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, who make their debuts in this as the first and second feminine leads, respectively, to demonstrate tellingly that they have much to offer in the cinematic firmament; and the reliable Walter Catlett, Sterling Holloway and Ed Brophy, who deliver, as usual, their share of the comedy, and the comparative newcomer, Mabel Todd, who scores definitely as a comedienne.

Rather than build the picture completely about Powell, as has been the custom, Director William Keighley and Writers Warren Duff, and Sig Herzig, who wrote the original story, and Jerry Wald and Richard Macauley, who aided them in the screenplay, chose to accentuate the story and the situations, allowing the production numbers to motivate, rather than dominate, the picture.

Winfield College's Quadrangle Club is about to put on its annual varsity show when conservative minded faculty members decide to dictate what shall be produced. In desperation, the student body appeals to Chuck Daly, an alumnus who is a Broadway musical producer. Daly (Dick Powell) and his stooge, William Williams, (Ted Healy) arrive to help the students, lured by an offer of $1,000, which, due to a trio of failures, they sorely need. Through a misunderstanding and quick talking by Ernie Mason (Fred Waring), a faculty member in sympathy with the students, the money is given back to the club. Then the faculty interferes with the production as Daly plans it, the students strike, and Daly, fearing that the ringleaders are threatened with expulsion, agrees to leave.

The students learn that Daly has become known as a "flop" producer on Broadway, bring the entire show, seize a theatre and produce it, giving Daly credit, but not until they have staged a hilarious situation in which the New York police force and the National Guard are called out to oust them from the theatre but are won over by the performance.

The finale number, created and directed by Busby Berkeley, is outstanding among the production numbers, with 500 boys and girls taking part in a demonstration in which the insignia of the various colleges are shown as Waring and an orchestra offer a musical salute to the schools.

Dick Whiting and Johnny Mercer, Tom Waring and Don Raye, and Roy Ringwald and Paul Gibbon are responsible for the nine songs in the production, the first team writing seven of them. The best popularity bets appear to be the Whiting-Mercer ditties, "Love Is on the Air Tonight" and "You've Got Something There."

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood Theatre, August 9, before a studio-patron group, the picture was so constantly broken into with appreciative applause and laughs that much of the dialogue was lost. Sitting outside of the section taken by the presumably favorably prejudiced studio people, this reviewer noticed that "Varsity Show" literally had those who paid to get in out in the aisles—Vance King.

Annapolis Salute

(RKO-Radio)

Romance and Melodrama

Lew Clarke, manager of the Dome Theatre, Ocean Park, said, "I'd be glad to replay that picture." Asked why, he said, "It's the kind of entertainment the people who come to this house want. You heard them in there."

We had heard "them" and it has been a long time since we noted an audience so thoroughly enjoy a picture. They didn't see the greatest picture ever made, a cast teeming over with glamorous names or even a cast that included any great actors. They did see a Service picture that is good for the type of audiences for which it was made. They saw a picture of Annapolis midshipman life that several times caused them to break out in applause, and sent them out of the theatre with a pleasant feeling.

Exceptionally well balanced in production technique, which reveals all sides of the midshipman's activity, parading battalions, athletic events, classroom, dormitory and social affairs, while avoiding any artificial heroics, "Annapolis Salute" tells the story of two boys who go to the Naval Academy.

Serious minded "Bill," son of long time petty officer "Martin," is determined on a naval career. "Clarke Parker" enters the Academy merely because his wealthy father made him do so. The opposites come into conflict. "Chief Martin's" seriousness contrasted with middie "Clemens'" comedy, "Bill" and "Clarke" become rivals for "Julia Clemens'" affections. "Bill" is so much in love with the girl that he is willing to forget all about his father, resign and marry her. "Clarke" is equally determined that he shall be prevented from doing either. This situation makes "Bill" appear to be a participant in an escapade in which campus vamp "Bunny Oliver" is seriously injured. The future is black for "Bill" and his father, but "Clarke" straightens out and prevails upon "Bunny" to absolve "Bill" from complicity. To the tune of "Anchors Aweigh" the erstwhile foes, now arm-in-arm buddies, embark on a summer cruise with all thoughts of serious romance deferred for five years.

The show glows with the spirit of honest, clean living youth, the spirit of kids who, confronted with what looks like a great problem, don't know what to do about it. As a general rule, service pictures, either concerned with Annapolis or West Point, have proved money makers. The chances that this well turned out piece will maintain the tradition are exceptionally favorable, inasmuch as it is scheduled for release simultaneously with the opening of the schools in the fall.

Previewed at the Dome theatre, Ocean Park, Cal. Localed in the beach town, the attendance was made up not only of regular residents but also of visitors from several far western states who represented a cross section of the class of patronage that might be found in all but the most metropolitan houses.—G. Hopalong Rides Again

(Paramount-Harry Sherman)

Action Melodrama

For two years Ralph Ravenscroft, as publicity director, devoted his energies to letting the public and exhibitors know about the Hopalong Cassidy pictures. A couple of months ago Harry Sherman decided to elevate him to the status of producer and make him responsible for the "Hopalongs." What came up on the screen in a studio projection room last night proved that Mr. Sherman made no mistake. In "Hopalong Rides Again," Ravenscroft not only preserves all that is worthwhile in an outdoor adventure picture but introduces notes of novelty that give the type of entertainment a more interesting appeal.

For one thing, he has brought romance into the story. It's not sugary love interest; rather it's the kind of romance that might be expected of cowboys and women in the cow country in the spring time. Secondly, he uncovered a promising new character in the person of young Billy King, a thirteen-year-old boy who fitted into the Bill Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden and Harry Worth scheme of things as though born to it.

Clarence E. Mulford's Bar-20 cowboys are afraid of the sinister Black Buttes that border their range. They have a wholesome respect for the mysterious rustlers who hide out there. But "Hopalong" dreams that one day he will drive the rats out of their den. The appearance of a strange character, "Professor Hepburn," who poses as a fossil collecter, excites a curious reaction in "Hopalong's" mind. Although he is in love with Nora, who he learns is the "Professor's" sister, he is convinced that the stranger is a man to be watched.

The Bar-20 boys' opportunity to even old scores come when a dynamite blast wrecks a mountain to stampede a herd being driven to market. With "Windy" and the injured "Artie" (King) besieged in the wreckage, "Hopalong" starts to draw the net tighter about the "Professor." Though it menaces his romance with "Nora," he lures the rustlers out of the buttes for a fight in the open. The suavely vicious "Professor," seeing the fight going against him, shoots cohort "blackie," only to have the wounded man's miraculous pistol shot set off a dynamite charge that blows the erudite rustler chief to bits.

The outdoor production quality of the picture, especially the two blasts which loose avalanches of rock, is spectacular. Made to fit into the story, their realism accentuates the melodrama, romance and action.

Riders of the Dawn

(Monogram)

Western

Re-entering the western field, Monogram with this picture introduces a new star, Jack Randall, in the first of a series. At least two productions with Randall heading the cast have tentative release dates and more probably are on their way. In tune with his contemporaries Randall is personable and a singer, which seems to be as important these days as the silent and enigmatic hero was in other years.

In his first offering, a western with well worn plot, he shows that poise is still to be developed. The picture has enough of the requisites—hard riding, gunplay, holdups and fist fights—for the Saturday afternoon attendance, and some fine characterizations in the supporting roles. The story for the most part is "telegraphed" far in advance of the action. Supporting Randall are Peggy Keys, Warner Richmond, George Cooper, Frank Hagney and James Sheridan.

Randall, a state marshal, is commissioned to rid Green Valley of its lawlessness. Posing as a gunman he is accepted into the gang that controls the town. He sets a trap for the gang, but the leader, suspicious, outwits Randall. The gunman comes to town. In an old fashioned pistol fight (the two combatants approach each other on a deserted street) Randall kills him. The gang leaves town, with Randall and a posse after them.

On Such a Night

(Paramount-Emanuel Cohen)

Melodrama

Special production effects rather than story quality account for the entertainment value of this picture. Conceived and executed by Fred Jackman, the sequences devoted to the Mississippi River in flood and the breaking of dams and levies provoke spectacular and suspenseful thrill action. They completely supersede plot and characterization and, in short, are the elements which brought forth the only applause.

Highly theatrical in nature, regarded by the preview patrons as a throwback to the old-fashioned 10-20-30 stock stage plays, the story merely traces incidents in a feud between "Ice" Richmond, played by Eduardo Ciannelli, and Nicky Last—Grant Richards. Framed by Richmond, Nicky is convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Floods sweep down upon the prison; Nicky and a guard land in a refugee camp. Arrives Gail Stanley (Karen Morley), revealed as his wife, whose purpose is to right the misjustice. Aided by Professor Candle (Alan Morbray), she transports Nicky to an old plantation where more floods and Richmond arrive to continue menacing all. Terrorized by the rising waters, Nicky makes a heroic swim to dynamite a levee and bring in officers who take Richmond into custody.

NATIONAL SUBSTITUTES 'PREVUE' FOR 'TRAILER'

Although used generally in the motion picture industry long before the recent popularity of homes on wheels, the term "trailer" is now associated by the public with automobiles, officials of National Screen Service have decided.

For this reason, Screen Service has discontinued the use of the term and in its place has substituted "prevue".

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. Other than being legitimately interested in the flood sequences, the audience gave no indication of being impressed by either the story or the work of the players, with the exception of Robert McWade.—G. M.

Bury The Hatchet

(Columbia)

Comedy

With Monty Collins and Tom Kennedy going through their slapstick routine this isn't as much fun as it could be. Their situations lack originality and the dialogue is without sparkle. The Collins and Kennedys live in adjoining houses and when junior Kennedy, with money belonging to Collins, wins a house by holding the lucky ticket in a theatre lottery, both families claim the house and move in. Pending a decision as to the rightful owner the two families decide to live together. By the time the decision is made the house is a wreck.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Speaking of the Weather

(Vitaphone)

Excellent

This probably will be acclaimed as one of the finest jobs yet accomplished in the animated cartoon field. It will richly deserve this distinction for it is vastly entertaining and the product of a most fertile mind. All the action takes place in a magazine store, after hours. The characters on various wellknown magazines come to life, and the result is decidedly pleasing to watch. It is in color. Running time, 7 minutes.

Golf Timing

(RKO-Radio)

Sport Short

The primary appeal of the message of this short subject will be for those devoted but doubtful divot diggers who wonder why their game lacks that certain thing called swing. Calling upon a prominent greensward maestro, Mr. Ira Miner of Old Greenwich, Conn., to preach some pertinent pedagogic principles of pill swatting, the spectator learns that golf, like a couple of other things, depends on rhythm for perfection in timing. Mr. Miner, who banks on his former blacksmith days to substantiate his claims, illustrates the points of his lecture with some shots by himself and his pupils. For no good reason at all—or perhaps there was, since interest was beginning to lag due to the running time—a school of Broadway dancing beauties is introduced to execute a couple of steps patterned after a golf routine. Running time, 11 minutes.

Haiti's Black Napoleon

(Columbia)

Travelogue

A camera study of Haiti which is concerned principally with its most famous citizen, King Henry Christophe, a full blooded Negro. Dead these many years, Christophe left many a remembrance behind. Fearful of an attack by the French the king built a citadel, that was both a fort and a palace, and was 11 years in construction. He waited 20 years for an attack which never came and the place, although still impressive, is now in ruins. Other evidences of Christophe's reign are exploited by the camera.—Running time, 9 minutes.

David Mendoza and His Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Fairly Entertaining

A fairly entertaining "Melody Master" features the playing of David Mendoza's Orchestra, with assistance from Lucille Manners, singer; Minor and Root, dancing team; Robert Simmons, in a duet with Miss Manners, and the Revelers quartet. The numbers are introduced by means of recordings and flashbacks to the actual scenes. Running time, 10 minutes.

Sport's Greatest Thrills

(Columbia)

Exciting

This subject is a collection of thrill producing scenes in sports, and the sports the subject covers include bronco-busting, polo hurdle jumping, motorcycling, auto racing and flying. It is exciting at times, brutal at others, but it holds an audience's attention. Narrative by Jack Kofoed. Described by Ford Bond.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Flowers from the Sky

(Vitaphone)

Romance with Music

The tabloid musical romance featuring Josephine Huston is pleasingly entertaining. The plot is but an excuse for Miss Huston to sing from time to time. It concerns the efforts of a playwright to get Miss Huston interested in his play. With the aid of a daily bouquet of flowers he wins her over and the play is put on with Miss Huston in the lead. Running time, 22 minutes.

Spring Festival

(Columbia)

Color Rhapsody

An entertaining cartoon in color heralds the coming of spring. Arising from a winter of sleep the ground hog emerges from his habitat and, failing to see his shadow, runs to Mother Nature to inform her of the arrival of spring. Mother Nature summons all the plant life and animal life to come out and make merry. The flowers entertain with dances while the panorama changes from winter to spring.—Running time, 8 minutes.

GENERAL RELEASE DATE AUGUST 26th

STAGE COUNCIL TO ACT ON NATIONAL THEATRE

Meets in New York Monday To Elect Officers for Promotion of Program

The first attempt to realize the program for promotion of the legitimate stage drafted at the national convention of the American Theatre Council, held in New York last May, will be made at a meeting of theatre groups at the Astor Hotel on August 23rd.

The meeting is expected to consider the appointment of permanent officers to the council and the selection of a promotional manager. The latter is to be a paid official who will attempt to administer the platform outlined at the national convention.

Included in the objectives that were agreed at the convention were the establishment of a national theatre festival, the rendering of aid to young playwrights and producers of promise, expansion of opportunities for new talent, rejuvenation of the road and an organized defense against attempts at stage censorship and legislation.

The meeting will also consider a constitution for the council acceptable to all theatre organizations. Several theatre unions, notably the Actors' Equity, the American Federation of Musicians and the International Alliance of Theatre Stage Employees, have objected to the provisions of the constitution which would permit the council to commit labor groups to participate in the council's activities without obtaining the consent of the unions themselves.

If an understanding can be reached on this point, it is understood that the unions would be willing to accept membership in the council.

Coburn Urges Action

In Schenectady, Charles Coburn, actor and director of the Mohawk Drama Festival, made a plea for establishment of a national theatre at the conclusion of the Festival's third annual season at Union College.

Mr. Coburn deplored the dearth of opportunity for young actors today and said that the only salvation for them was in organization of a national theatre modeled after the Stratford Productions in England.

Mr. Coburn said that the Mohawk Drama Festival "could easily become the national theatre in America" and that this could be accomplished with an endowment of $100,000.

Cites Shakespeare Memorial

Since America raised $500,000, half the amount sought in the worldwide campaign, for the construction of the Stratford Shakespeare Memorial theatre in England and in addition raised $260,000 with which to endow the Stratford productions, America should begin to take care of its own theatre, Mr. Coburn said.

"Today we have no young stars," he said. "Our accomplished actors are over 40 years old. The theatre must have youth, it must have trained people, if it is to last. Today there are no stock companies to train young people."

Mr. Coburn concluded that the Mohawk Festival was qualified to "perform this important responsibility" in that it is the only union of the collegiate and professional theatres.

The Mohawk group was organized by Mr. Coburn at the request of President Dixon Ryan Fox of Union College and has given 16 productions before 58,000 persons from every state in the Union and Canada.

Pooling Negotiations Will Be Continued

Negotiations for the pooling of four Indianapolis theatres by Monarch Theatres and the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company will be continued, according to Fred Dolle, president and general manager of the Amusement Company. Mr. Dolle recently left New York for Louisville with Charles Krebbs, booker for the circuit.

"Caruso" in Films

The life of the late Enrico Caruso, opera singer, will be picturized. Joseph Auslander, winner of a Pulitzer writing prize last year, and his wife, Audrey Wurdemann, already have finished the script, written to star Sydney Rayner, Metropolitan Opera tenor. The film is understood to have the interest of Warner Brothers and Rouben Mamoulian, director, for production.

Paramount Pep Club To Elect

Paramount Pep Club will elect officers for the coming year on September 28th from the following list of nominations. President, Charles L. Gartner; vice-president, Carl Clausen and Claude B. Keator; treasurer, Allan Adams and William Clark; secretary, Eva Horowitz and Elizabeth Scheuer.

G. L. George Sails to Foreign Post

G. L. George, Hollywood correspondent for Ce Soir of Paris, has been appointed foreign representative of Associated Film Audiences. Mr. George sailed for Paris last week to set up an international bureau which will act as a clearing house for motion picture information.

F. & M. APPOINTS PERSONNEL HEAD

The first step in a plan to develop personnel has been taken by Fanchon & Marco with the appointment in St. Louis of Chauncey B. Nelson, as director of personnel.

Mr. Nelson was athletic supervisor, dormitory director and dean of boys at The Principia, preparatory school.

Under Mr. Nelson's supervision, employees of the service staffs, or in any way affiliated with F. & M., will be given an opportunity to develop in any chosen phase of the theatre field.

The system is to be installed in all F. & M. holdings.

Williford, National Carbon, New York; secretary, J. Frank, Jr., International Projector, New York; treasurer, L. W. Davee, Electrical Research Products, New York.

Archie Mayo, under the terms of a five-year contract with Samuel Goldwyn, will direct two pictures a year for $75,000 a picture.

The action of Celebrity Pictures against Peggy Hopkins Joice, in which plaintiff asks $20,000 damages, will be heard September 20th in supreme court, Los Angeles.

A BOX-OFFICE AFFAIR . . .

When Educational brings you stars such as Willie Howard, and pictures as uproariously funny as "The Affairs of Pierre," the two-reel comedy is a matter of vital importance as a ticket seller.

Howard's first will convince you that Educational has scored another big laugh hit—with a name that will give you big returns for every bit of showmanship you put into plugging it.

Showmen's Trade Review says:

"Howard's name should mean a lot on your marquee."

"Howard's first for Educational is very funny . . . Good for a lot of laughs . . . Bill him heavily."

And the other trade paper critics join in the chorus of praise:

"Excellent . . . Willie Howard is the 'French Professor' in this, mouthing French, Yiddish and English in amusing combination. This will be a scream where the Howard name is known . . . It's all Howard, and he certainly is at his funniest." —The Exhibitor

"Very good . . . Willie Howard treats his audience to the sort of comedy that has made him a much sought after comedian."
—M. P. Herald

"Lively laugh fest . . . very entertaining, laugh-studded two-reeler that is sure to score with audiences generally. . . Exhibitors can write this short down as being top-flight fun."

BRITISH PRODUCTION PERSONNEL ATTACK GOVERNMENT QUOTA PLAN

Cine Technicians Demand Fair Wages Clause; Directors Ask Protection; Labor Wants 50 Per Cent Restriction

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

First of the official pronouncements from trade organizations on the White Paper on film legislation has come from the Association of Cine-Technicians, which represents a very wide range of specialist workers in studios and laboratories.

The Cine-Technicians' general summary is that the Board of Trade proposals are to be welcomed "as incorporating some improvements upon the previous Act" but that "the fundamental issues confronting the British film industry have not been faced and a number of individual points in the White Paper are bad."

Several specific suggestions are made by the Association, the most important of which are:

There should be a Fair Wages clause in the new Films Bill, as "essential to the equitable working of the labour costs proposal and to the reorganization of the industry on a rational basis."

Only one foreign technician should be allowed to work on a British picture registered for Quota.

Employees should be represented on the Advisory Committee.

The "75 per cent of labour costs to British subjects" proviso, and a fair wages clause, should apply to short subjects.

The "double Quota for triple-costed films" provision should be abandoned, as reducing the call for British labour.

Shorts producers should be compelled to "work to a prearranged scenario, submitted beforehand and compared afterwards with the shot-to-shot description of the completed film." This is to prevent "the indiscriminate stringing together of scenes photographed at random."

Company directors' fees should be excluded from the minimum sum to be paid to British subjects.

Declaring that the White Paper plan still provides opportunity for evasion, the Association praises the tightening up of penalties for infringement of the Act. "An insignificant fine on a theatre whose gross annual takings may exceed £150,000 is frankly ridiculous." It finds cause for complaint in the fact that "there is no more recognition of British technicians than in the previous Act . . . there is no protection against the continued employment of foreign technicians in major positions at a time when there are a large number of British technicians unemployed who are capable of filling such positions, and an even greater number of competent technicians working in junior grades, waiting for and worthy of promotion."

Calls Technical Problem Ignored

"The White Paper, in fact," says the statement in a capitalized and underlined passage, "tends to promote the financial existence of the British industry without in any way providing for its continuous technical growth."

"The foundations of an industry lie not so much in the finance behind it as in the creative and technical personnel which makes the expansion of that finance possible," says another passage. "We consider that the White Paper proposals do very little to avoid the possibility of a repetition of just such a financial crisis as the industry has recently experienced (under the first Quota Act). It is obvious, therefore, that considerable attention needs to be paid to this creative and technical foundation. The recent crisis in the industry was a financial crisis, not a technical one . . . any suggested policy cannot succeed and achieve its objective without collaboration between the Board of Trade and representatives of the technical side of the industry.

"The frenzied financiers have failed. Something more than mathematical allocations and stringent penalties for evasions is needed to set our house in order. This can only be done by building an industry founded upon the direct fostering and encouragement of British technical ability. Financial stability will follow."

FILMS PROPOSED AS AID TO PEACE

A common front behind educational motion pictures as a means of promoting permanent peace was urged by H. S. Houston of New York when he spoke before the World Education Federation in Tokyo.

Mr. Houston, commissioner to the Far East for the New York World's Fair, proposed appointment of an international committee of leading educators of the federation to develop a comprehensive plan. He described the mass education work with motion pictures he had seen in Russia and declared that a medium as powerful as films could be used either to intensify nationalism or to guide it to a broad basis of good understanding. The latter, he said, is the only possible foundation for permanent peace.

His proposal has been referred to a committee for consideration.

Want Directors' Quota

Making the same claim, in essence, the Film Directors' Association is unofficially understood to favor amendment of the White Paper proposals with a proviso that ten per cent of British pictures admitted to Quota registration shall be made by British directors.

This proposal, favored by Maurice Elvey, president of the Directors' Association, underlined the prevailing nervousness, genuine in some quarters, assumed in others, about an intensified "American invasion" of the British studio field if the Bill finally sets up Quota requirements compelling U. S. companies to take their British production obligations really seriously.

The prospect which these interests fear, in common with exhibitors—though for quite other reasons—is that American companies will transfer production units to London which, so far as principals are concerned, and up to the limits of any "foreign labor" percentage permitted by the Act, will be American.

This fear on the part of production personnel may, for the purposes of public propaganda and parliamentary agitation, prove a very potent ally of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, which prophesies "Americanization" as a result of a reduction in both the American and the British output following the Government's acceptance of the minimum cost principle in place of the quality test.

"Reciprocity" Criticized

This line of argument is being reinforced by the statement of several, apparently very cogent, criticisms of the "Reciprocity" proposals of the White Paper; which stipulates that by buying U. S. rights for £20,000 in a picture costing at least £45,000 (or £22,500 in "labor costs,") in all, an American distributor shall be excused quota obligations, in England, of the same footage.

This clause is quite frankly ridiculed by practical film men, on the grounds, already stated in the HERALD, that no sane business man will buy a picture, for U. S., for £20,000, to obtain British quota coverage which he can obtain by spending £15,000 on a picture for British release. It is regarded as making reciprocity a pretense and, sequentially, as removing the possibility that effective British productions might have been increased by the plan, inasmuch as an "export Quota" film would not have ranked for distributor's Quota, but would have been available for exhibitor's Quota.

Which appears to illustrate the fact that in Quota discussions all roads lead more or less directly to the same problem; the degree of reduction or production to be expected under the White Paper proposals and the extent to which the reduced British footage will be under American control. A great deal more will be heard on this point, from all sections.

Isidore Ostrer Hits Plan

Something of the same criticism of the Government's proposals was voiced by Isidore Ostrer.

"They will undoubtedly result in more American pictures being made in Britain but not in helping the establishment of a real British industry," he said, adding that there is "no sufficient inducement to the American producer to lessen his obligation to make Quota pictures in Britain by the showing of genuine British pictures in the United States."

Ostrer previously had expressed support of a policy whereby American distributors in England would be compelled to expend a proportion of their takings on British films for American release.

Ralph Hanbury, British Chief of Radio, expressed a general view of the unworkability of this proposal.

Labor Wants 50% Quota

The National Association of Theatrical Employees will put forward two resolutions concerning the British film industry at the Trade Union Congress in September.

In its first resolution the theatrical employees will ask the congress to reaffirm the policy, stated in 1931, of support for a British film Quota of 50 per cent. The resolution alludes to the danger of "foreign domination" of the industry and the necessity of safeguarding British labor.

The second resolution presses for an early revision of the 1909 Act, dealing with licensing, by the inclusion of a series of safeguards for labor, including establishment of minimum staff standards, and the provision of rest rooms for staff.

been fined five times for quota default was raised in the House of Commons by J. R. Remer, M. P., who pointed out that it was the second biggest film company in the U. K. and that its principal, John Maxwell, was a member of the Advisory Committee to the Board of Trade under the Films Act.

Mr. Remer suggested that the president of the Board of Trade make inquiries "in the interests of public policy," but Capt. Euan Wallace, the Parliamentary Secretary, replied that no further inquiries seemed necessary in view of the fact that A. B. P.'s defaults had taken place over a period of three Quota years in some 250 theatres.

Balcon Lauds Hollywood

The high level of executive ability in Hollywood and the fact that, on big pictures, cost is entirely disregarded, were the two things about the Coast studios which most impressed Michael Balcon during his three months' stay at the MGM plant, he said on his arrival to take up his duties as producer with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, Ltd.

Mr. Balcon expressed amazement at the thoroughness of the Coast organization. He was impressed by the pains taken at every stage of preparation.

Also striking to Mr. Balcon was the trouble taken to make sure the picture was released in the best possible shape for audiences.

He announced the addition of Lionel Barrymore and Maureen O'Sullivan to the cast of "A Yank at Oxford."

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, also on the Normandie, was met by Alexander Korda and Murray Silverstone.

Dr. Giannini said his visit was not concerned with the purchase of control in UA by London Films and the Goldwyn interests.

Provincial Sets Profit Record

Associated Provincial Picture Houses, Ltd., a Gaumont British company, made a profit of £123,165 ($615,825) in the year ended May 31st. The increase over last year is £7,929. A total of £192,379, including £69,214 brought in, was available, and a final dividend of four per cent on ordinary shares brings the year's distribution to six cent, with £89,475 carried forward. The profit is a record.

See Lower Rate for Studio

Latest developments in the receivership of Amalgamated Studios, Ltd., are causing some concern in the industry, which anticipates lower floor rates for the studio, the original cost of which was £600,000 and which now is said to be available for only £300,000. It is believed that bidders for the property will include John Maxwell and MGM.

Prime movers in the original Amalgamated plan were S. H. Soskin, Russian banker and uncle of Paul Soskin, and Major Charles Bell, construction engineer.

MOROSCO TO START ALL OVER AGAIN

Oliver Morosco, who started his career as a builder of theatres and a maker of stars in 1899, is preparing to start over again in an attempt to regain part of the $15,000,000 he lost during the depression.

When he launched his career for the first time, Mr. Morosco had $40 and now, he announced, he has financial backing to re-establish a nation wide chain of theatres like he lost in the last few years.

Among Mr. Morosco's first productions were "Peg O' My Heart," "Bird of Paradise" and "Cinderella Man." He developed such stars as Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Harold Lloyd and Marjorie Rambeau.

The lease for the first of the new string of theatres, Mr. Morosco said, will be signed in Los Angeles.

Theatres which underwent a change in name are the Ideal to Esquire; 79th St. to Colony; Sunshine to Chopin; Bay to De Luxe; Luxor to Eagle; Rex to Center at Marlboro, N. Y.; Folk to Century in Manhattan.

Brandt Acquired Three

Major and independent circuits which added and dropped units during the three months include Brandt Theatres acquiring the Colony, Century and Sheldon. The circuit also dropped the Marvin and closed the Imperial. Leo Brecher added the 68th St. Playhouse. Century circuit darkened the Central, Cedarhurst, L. I.

Cinema circuit took the New Amsterdam and Sam Cocalis turned over the Broadway and Parkhill, Yonyers, to RKO, and at the same time added the Casino, Keansburg, N. J.

Harris Theatrical Enterprises closed the Jackson, and Interboro linked the Sunset and Vanity in Brooklyn to its group. Ben Knobel took the Schuyler in Manhattan and closed the Plaza, Mt. Vernon. Loew's acquired the Cameo, New Rochelle, and is now building a de luxe theatre on the Boston Post Road in the Bronx. This is expected to be completed by Labor Day. The Newsreel Theatres, Inc., bought the Concourse, Bronx, which will reopen shortly as a newsreel unit. RKO also closed a deal for the Republic, which will be turned over by Randforce on September 1. Herman Sussman sold the Parkway, Mt. Vernon, to the major circuit.

The Rosenblatt-Welt circuit dropped the Sunset and Vanity, Brooklyn, and Warners increased its New Jersey holdings by taking the Rahway, Rahway.

EXHIBITOR IS WARNED OF BILL CHANGE FRAUD

"Worked primarily on theatres" but used also in other business houses is the bill change fraud, writes Mike Spanagel of Ellaness Theatres, Inc., from the Cincinnati office which supervises operation of the Lyric theatre in Greenfield, Ohio, and the Temple in Bryan, Ohio.

Two men participate in the swindle. One man purchases a ticket to the theatre and gets change for a $10 bill. A few minutes later a second man buys a ticket and deposits a $1 bill at the window. When he is given change for a doller he vehemently argues that he presented a ten dollar bill. For proof, he says that he has his girl's telephone number on the bill. Sure enough, the top $10 bill has a phone number written upon it.

Saratoga House Opens

A new community theatre, operated by Walter Reade and associates, has been opened at Saratoga Springs. "Lost Horizon" was the first attraction. The group recently opened a house at Tom Rivers and is planning to open two others, one at Hundson and another at Morristown. Simultaneous with the opening of the Saratoga house, Mr. Reade purchased the property known as the Congress theatre and office building in the same city from the estate of the late Senator Brackett. The purchase price was $200,000 cash.

Attach Kendis Property

An attachment on the New York property of Jay Dee Kay Productions and of its president, J. D. Kendis, was granted by New York supreme court Justice Timothy A. Leary in connection with the $5,000 suit brought by Principal Film Exchanges for alleged violation of the contract under which Principal was to distribute in New York and New Jersey Jay Dee Kay's picture, "Crusade Against Rackets."

"Firefly" To Open in Detroit

"The Firefly" will open at the Cass theatre, Detroit, August 26th, as a roadshow attraction. The MGM picture opened at the Four-Star theatre, Los Angeles, August 6th; at the Erlanger, Chicago, August 8th, and at the Colonial, Boston, August 9th.

Six features are on the first season's program of Coronet Pictures, formed by Bobby Crawford, Joe Brandt and Pat Powers. There will be four melodramas and Mr. Crawford will produce two musicals.

F. P. Young has been appointed by Western Electric to manage the company's Singapore office.

Your Customers!

ARE YOU GIVING THEM THE LIGHT THEY MERIT?

The response of theatre patrons is ample justification for securing the best feature pictures obtainable. It proves that the theatre-going public seeks out the best. But the theatre patron is critical and is not satisfied with a good picture, poorly screened. Expensive features merit the best light.

The best projection is provided by a steady, snow-white light of sufficient intensity on the screen for clear definition in the presence of a comfortable level of supplementary illumination. This means High Intensity Projection.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Ambassador-Conn-Melody

WILD HORSE ROUNDUP: Kermit Maynard, Dickie Jones—Doubled with "The Man in the Mirror" to fair business. Picture quite good but business terrible.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

Columbia

CRIMINALS OF THE AIR: Charles Quigley, Rosalind Keith—Another one of those double feature pictures from Columbia with no stars and no story. If you have to play it, better buy plenty of shorts and give your customers something for their money. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 17-18.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DODGE CITY TRAIL: Charles Starrett, Marian Weldon—Just another western that was too short to be a picture. Columbia certainly has been going downhill the last few months. They haven't turned out a picture since "Theodora Goes Wild." Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 3-4.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTOR MADNESS: Rosalind Keith, Allen Brook—A fine action picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—Jack Holt always draws pretty good here and this picture was better material than what they have been giving this star but there is something wrong with the recording. The worst sound we ever played in our house. It may be some new improvement in recording but if that's it give us the old as our equipment won't handle it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 31-August 1.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fav Wray—Personally, I thought it had the entertainment value of an average program picture but we could not sell it to our patrons. It just about established a new low for all time. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 3-4.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

First National

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran, Patricia Walthall—Although this is far from his best picture, it still is worth playing, doing us a nice week end gross.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—A very good picture but a little too high class for the average customer around these here parts. Did average business. Played July 4.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—Played on Sunday and broke all records for this town. A finely produced picture that is potent at the box office if properly handled. We had a special screening on Saturday for the clergy. Their enthusiasm did wonders.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Lola Lane, Isabel Jewell, Rosalind Marquis, Mayo Methot—One of the best of the year from Warner Bros. Bette is very good and this time she has an excellent supporting cast. The four night club hostesses are all good, the story is interesting with plenty of thrills. Just an all 'round good production. Running time, 96 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRINCE AND THE PAUPER, THE: Mauch Twins, Errol Flynn, St. Luke's Choristers—Although generally the historical pictures do not go in a rural community, I had a great deal of good comments on this production. The boys' choir came in for a lot of praise, although their part was very short. What a wonderful opportunity lost to give patrons a treat with more singing such as this. Play it. Running time, 10 reels. Played July 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—This was a honey, full of laughs and swell songs. We played up the comedy angle and business was good.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

STOLEN HOLIDAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Just a waste of time for the small town theatre. They don't want fashion shows. They want action and comedy. Played July 6.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—Picture pleased well and did a nice business. Doubled with Monogram's "Thirteenth Man" on Friday and Saturday.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittmore, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN IN THE MIRROR, THE: Edward Everett Horton, Genevieve Tobin—Another English made flop. We either had a bad print or their recording was terrible. Horton hampered by poor dialogue and a story that had to be seen from the very first moment to understand it.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

Grand National

DAMAGED GOODS: Pedro de Cordoba—Broke my house record for Sunday, held up strong Monday and Tuesday. Pleased 100 per cent, had many favorable comments and no squawks. Every theatre should play this picture, not only for the gold in them hills, but for the strong moral results which the picture is bound to effect. Theme delicately but effectively handled, direction and production excellent, sound and photography perfect. What more can you ask? Played August 8-10.—A. J. Sexton, Jr., Strand Theatre, Ironton, Ohio. General patronage.

SING, COWBOY, SING: Tex Ritter, Louise Stanley—Tex improves with every picture. He is already a top-flight attraction for me and getting stronger all the time.—A. J. Sexton, Jr. Grand Theatre, Ironton, Ohio. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN TEXAS: Tex Ritter—This yodeling buck has taken them by storm in our section, the general contention being that Gene Autry is too sissified for the mount of an alfalfa burner. Production values of this western, as in all the Ritters, are excellent for their type. Should go over big in any spot where horse opera is still rampant.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness—Above average program picture, played on a dual bill first of the week with "Mister Cinderella."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOOD OLD SOAK: Wallace Beery, Betty Furness—This one has a fine line of comedy and I believe it will do a better-than average business almost anywhere. Running time, 76 minutes. Played August 3-4.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—A good show but too draggy for a small town. Business just fair. We would like to have Joan Crawford make a real show once, anyhow more up-to-date stuff. This old history is not much to drag 'em in with. Running time, 10 reels. Played August 1.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Had more fine comments on this feature than anything ever played here. Had a very satisfactory four day run.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—This dual with "All American Chump" brought more favorable comments than we have received in sometime. They brought down the house. Our patrons are asking for more of this type.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Nice show but did not do a good business. Our Sunday nights have fallen off. Played July 24-26.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—One of the best of the year. Good story, excellent cast and plenty of comedy. The only thing that marred the enjoyment of this one is that glamorous, vivacious Jean Harlow is gone. Jean was one of my favorite stars and will be sadly missed by her devoted admirers. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 30-August 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PICK A STAR: Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly—Played this on Saturday and our audience liked it very much.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard—They either liked this one or they did not. Some told us it was the finest picture they ever seen, others that it was terrible. In our opinion, it is not for the small town. Business just fair. Running time, 124 minutes. Played July 26-28.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—This one gave excellent results. A good house for the first night and a better one the second, which is evidence of a picture giving satisfaction. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 30-31.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

WOMEN ARE TROUBLE: Stuart Erwin, Florence Rice—Another comedy program picture that we played to capacity business on the week end with many very humorous situations to a happy ending.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY: Mickey Rooney, Anne Nagel—Played on Sunday to capacity business. This is a far better picture than many majors that are called specials. Picture showed that time and effort had been spent in making it and that it wasn't a thrown together job as my "friends" in the major offices would glibly lead me to believe. I think it will pay to watch Monogram.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

THIRTEENTH MAN: Weldon Heyburn, Inez Courtney—Picture lacks names, but pleased almost 100 per cent. If Monogram keeps up as well as their first release indicates we will contend that their product is going places. Production was careful and the recording was so good that people stopped and remarked how much better the sound was than on the other feature which we played, namely, "Great Guy."—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA MAHONEY: Larry Crabbe, Joe Cook—An unusual western. The injection of comedy slowed up to tempo and some of our patrons were uncertain as to whether they approved of this change in pace or not. It gave general satisfaction, however. Business was at the normal level. Played July 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns,

Gracie Allen—A hodge podge of songs, dances, etc. The story is weak and more or less goofy. Played to slightly less than average business. Played July 24.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

EASY LIVING: Edward Arnold, Jean Arthur, Ray Milland—Excellent production in any spot. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: June Martel, Larry Crabbe—From the usual program mill western. Gets by. Running time, 58 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Lloyd Nolan, Claire Trevor—Good action picture, but business below par. Played July 30-31.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Beulah Bondi, Victor Moore—These two did a splendid piece of acting in this picture, the title of which more appropriately could have been "The Tradegy of Old Age." The story is of two parents who make every effort, and successfully, to give their children a first-class start in life, but thereby wind up dependent upon their children. It gives the trials and difficulties of such a situation. The youngsters shunned this picture like poison to the middle aged parents, the few who attended, it gave plenty of food for thought; to the old ones, it was a heartache. It nevertheless was a good lesson for anyone who would take the time to see it. But those who are seeking entertainment at the movies are not paying to see the unpleasant phases of life, but to get away from them. Hence the meager attendance. I believe if we had it do over again we would pay for this picture and not run it. Running time, 92 minutes. Played August 3.—H. H. Ramsdell, Lyric Theatre, Gaithersburg, Md. Rural patronage.

MURDER GOES TO COLLEGE: Roscoe Karns, Lynn Overman, Marsha Hunt—A swell show. Well liked and well patronized. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 4-5.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, James Ellison—A fine picture, but little at our box office. Was well liked by the few who saw it. Played on a Friday-Saturday date.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—This picture was sold for a special, but hit the bottom of our box office so hard they heard it 10 miles away. The film was poor to start with and didn't even pay rental. I really laughed when I figured out the splitting figure on the pencentage sheet.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker, Jack Oakie—A fine western which we played plenty, but bought it at a price that made money for us.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Bob Burns—We sold this heavily and did a good business. Personally, I didn't care for the picture as I am getting tired of Paramount ace "comedians." Raye better get a new line, but I'll admit the squirming scene wasn't bad or was it At any rate, what I thought didn't count on this one. Business was good.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

ROCKEFELLER CENTER, NEW YORK

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—We struck hot weather and business was consequently light. Those who did appear enjoyed the show. Played July 21-22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Republic

BEWARE OF THE LADIES: Donald Cook, Judith Allen—Good program picture. Played on a double bill with "Oh, Susanna!" and had a good program. Running time, seven reels. Played July 30-31.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

OH, SUSANNA!: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—A good show. but not as good as "The Big Show." Hope we will see a better show in his next picture. Running time, seven reels. Played July 30-31.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

OH, SUSANNA!: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—These semi-westerns do well for us. People will accept them who do not care for ordinary westerns, and they seem to satisfy the western fans also. Running time, 59 minutes. Played July 27-28.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

YODELIN' KID FROM PINE RIDGE: Gene Autry, Betty Bronson—Last of the Gene Autry pictures on the 1936-37 program. This one did good business here. Republic has the best westerns. Played this one with "Elephant Boy," a fine double bill.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

RKO Radio

NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard, Milton Berle—Well liked above average programmer. Not box office smash. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OUTCASTS OF POKER FLAT, THE: Preston Foster, Jean Muir—Good action story. Was well liked, although some customers didn't like the ending. Okay at the box office. Played July 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

PARK AVENUE LOGGER: George O'Brien, Beatrice Roberts—Just an average programmer for the Saturday fans. This star has no following here. Running time, 65 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—Fine and cool weather helped us on this one. It was played rather late, but we did the best midweek business in several months. Real satisfaction. Played July 28-29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—This is the best from this star to date. We did better than average business due to the fact that we had "Shall We Dance" booked for this date and RKO pulled it and did not notify us until two hours before time to start the show thus not giving us time to advertise the change. Our customers still think we pulled a fast one on them and won't believe us when we advertise a show. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 26-27.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice; NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard, Milton Berle; SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern; ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Who is helping the small town exhibitor fight the heat? R. K. O. Every one of these pictures is very good and you do not have to wait six months after release before you can book them. There is not another company in the business that would not have put everyone in as specials and booked them next fall. I pulled "Romeo and Juliet" and some more so-called "big ones" and played every one of these RKO pictures on Sundays and was very pleased with the results. Thanks to RKO.—Alvin Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. Small town patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire—Very good. Pleased 100 per cent, but didn't do anything extra at the box office. Running time, 120 minutes.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL (reissue): Will Rogers, Marguerite Churchill—Again Will's ardent admirers laughed at his wit and homely humor. I do not think this one of his best, but it seemed to please. Marguerite Churchill is very good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 4-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM (reissue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—This reissue still has good box office value with no regrets at the box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FAIR WARNING: Betty Furness, John Payne—Of the usual program mill. Gets by. Running time, 68 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Anthony Martin—Very good picture. Packed the house on this one. Jane Withers is getting more popular all the time. Played June 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonje Henie, Adolphe Menjou—When we play Fox product we drive away all the gloom and the box office swells. This certainly is "One in a Million" and proved a natural with no expensive exploitation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Alice Faye, Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll—Played this late to a very poor gross. It is a nice picture, though. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 31-August 2.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—A good picture, well produced and acted, and a flop at the box office. Running time, 102 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye, Robert Young—This picture is very pleasing and does regular Shirley Temple business at the box office. There is only one Shirley. Why does she have to grow up?—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Alice Faye, Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly—Very good. Did extra business and pleased generally. Played July 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—The most satisfactory picture we have ever played in 10 years. Story, acting and coloring wonderful. Business good. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 28-July 1.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer—A very fine north country logging picture that deserves extra playing time. Played it to extra weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Native Cast—A fine animal picture, one of the best of its kind. Business fair. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 22-24.—Beatty Johnston, Red Deer Theatre, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Native Cast—Played this one with "Yodelin' Kid from Pine Ridge," a fine double bill.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—This was truly a beautiful picture and while it flopped in many spots we went to town. Being in an all Catholic community helped plenty. U. A. certainly keep their prints in wonderful shape compared to other majors.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—Better than average picture, although it did not go over so hot there. It was no fault of the picture. Our customers just don't like this type of show. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 24-25.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino, Leo Carrillo—Ran this with Screeno. Picture had little or no drawing power, but pleased 100 per cent. Good music, clever lines and a new story. It's swell, but it's your job to get them to come in and see it.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Fredric March, Janet Gaynor—Many of my patrons claimed it was the best picture they had ever seen and I agree with them. Opened Sunday and held up fine through Wednesday. A picture to warm the heart of any showman. Production and audience reaction nearly perfect.—A. J. Sexton, Jr., Grand Theatre, Ironton, Ohio. General patronage.

YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE: Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sidney—An artistically done job, but not suited to small town business. Many complained about the dim light on the screen during the more "arty" scenes. Business quite good.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

BOSS RIDER OF GUN CREEK: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—This town likes their Buck Jones.—A. B.

Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

BREEZING HOME: Binne Barnes, William Gargan—A breezy programmer that satisfied. Normal business. Played July 24.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LET THEM LIVE: Nan Grey, John Howard—Nice picture. Well liked. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 28-29.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

YELLOWSTONE: Henry Hunter, Judith Barrett—A good program. Can be played any night but Sunday. A little short for Sunday, but all right otherwise. All acting very, very good. Running time, eight reels. Played August 3-4.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—This picture was one of the best we have run. It is the type that was made for big business in a small town. Business was good, the customers raved about it and even the Monday was fine.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason—Excellent story and excellent business. Played July 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason, Mary Gordon—Not a special, perhaps, but more down to earth entertainment than a lot of specials have. Pat O'Brien as a hard boiled cop is great and is supported by an excellent cast including little Sybil Jason. Mary Gordon is fine as Pat's mother. This one pleased. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—We played this very late, but it pleased the audience far better than the new supposedly super supers from RKO. Brown isn't slipping, but the poor stories given him recently aren't doing him any good.—John Watson Moore, New Center Theatre, Whittemore, Iowa. General patronage.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE: Charley Chase—Very poor. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NIGHT 'N' GALES: Our Gang—An excellent Gang comedy. Good any place, any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUBLIC GHOST NO. 1: Charley Chase—The comedy helped the feature "The Gorgeous Hussy" very much and made us a better program on that night. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WANTED—A MASTER: Pete Smith Specialties—Even the clever dog could not put this over. Pete Smith specialties do not click here. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SWING FEVER: Headliner Series—A very good two-reel musical.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WASHINGTON IN VIRGINIA: World on Parade Series—Here is a single reeler that may be all right for a history class in school, but as entertainment it is terrible.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

MOVIETONE NEWS: Every once in a while we are forced to plug this news as to its merits.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

THREE ORPHAN KITTENS: Silly Symphonies—Good as usual.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

Universal

MARINE FOLLIES: Mentone Musical Comedies—This one is the best musical we have had from Universal for a long time. Grab it if you can. It will make any program better regardless how good it may be. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ELISEO GRENET AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Merrie Melodies—One of the finest band acts we ever played. Give it your best time. A real novelty.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GHOST TO GHOST HOOKUP, A: Radio Ramblers—Hope I don't get hooked up with another like this one. Running time, 11 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LEON NAVARA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This single is fine. These Warners certainly know their shorts when it comes to musicals. This is no exception.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

It is well produced and has good sustained interest. Hoot Gibson always means something around this neck of the woods. Corrigan and Sammy McKim both good.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

"GOING ON FOUR"

The decisions of the Judging Committee for July recently arrived at marks the forty-third consecutive monthly convening of leading industry executives to determine the comparative worth of entries submitted in the Quigley Awards by theatremen throughout the world.

An almost unbelievable record in the history of competitive showmanship, to be sure, but nonetheless fairly won and made possible only through the utmost cooperation of all concerned in the success of this momentous project.

And now, as the Awards approach the ending of the seventh month of their fourth year, it behooves your Chairman in the welcome role of steward to review the accomplishments of these competitions inaugurated and sponsored for the improvement of theatre grosses, the betterment of those whose efforts have made this possible and equally important, recognition of these aims and purposes by exhibition and distribution executives, by studio personalities in Hollywood, by leading civic figures who have participated in the Plaque presentations.

Without going completely statistical we should nevertheless like to impress upon our readers the following facts:

That every state in the Union and some twelve foreign countries have been represented among the monthly entrants.

That internationally known names participating in the Plaque presentation ceremonies have included the Vice-President of the United States, the former Foreign Minister of France, U. S. Ambassadors, Senators, Congressmen, the U. S. Attorney General, U. S. Postmaster General, twenty governors and fifteen mayors in states and cities represented by the winners.

That seventy-four Silver and Bronze Plaques and over six hundred and fifty First and Honorable Mention Certificates have been awarded to competing theatremen.

That over twenty-five percent of these winners have as a direct result received better jobs, rises in salaries and bonuses.

That among the winners in each month's listings the majority in most instances are theatremen new to the Competitions indicating a steadily growing interest among theatremen here and abroad, and a universal acceptance of the Award project as a direct guide to greener pastures.

In progressing far beyond the objectives originally set, the Quigley Awards now are pointed not only to greater accomplishments in furthering the boxoffice interests of the industry and the personal fortunes of the man in the field. Now "going on four" the Competitions have definitely established hard-hitting, ceaseless exploitation as a vital factor in any consideration of the motion picture's future.

IT'S ALL IN THE DOING

That story in the news section of last week's HERALD having to do with the high praise given the motion picture by the Columbia (S. C.) State brings to mind another instance of editorial cheering prompted by Sid Blumenstock and published in his leading daily.

To the editor of the local Press-Union, the Atlantic City Warner Theatres publicist addressed a suggestion that since the paper has often acknowledged editorially the publicity received by the resort from sources originating otherwise, a similar bow might be indicated in the direction of the motion picture industry. Blumenstock argued that the city was referred to favorably in many screen stories, its beach and skyline shown frequently in feature pictures. He suggested further that the paper inaugurate a movement for the city to tender a public tribute to the motion picture industry.

All of which and more, skillfully sold, was accepted for the purpose intended and editorially treated at length. Mentioned also was a list of features so qualified, including "New Faces", which coincidentally proved to be the current attraction Sid was plugging.

Often occasions arise whereby agile-minded theatremen can plant important publicity by pointing out the way and the manner thereof.

THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

We like the summertime. Let the thermometer soar, the heat waves embrace a wilting world, the sidewalks sizzle the sweltering.

Bring on Old Sol at his saltiest. Let him bake tender necks, run up laundry bills, turn on his melting rays without mercy.

We still like the summer.

For, while July and August bring torrid days, they also bring vacation days. And vacation days bring Round Tablers from near and far to visit ye Chairman, visits that brighten the days and lighten the weekly load of worries.

Yes, folks, we like the summer.

Art panels, theatre cards and strips, blowups of wires from the stars, were among the units prominently exhibited. . . . Featured song in "You Only Live Once" for date at the Pavilion, London, was plugged strongly by the music publishers in a series of prominent windows. Street ballyhoo is new to Singapore and thus the decorated float put out by Julius S. Fisher for the date on "Elephant Boy" at the Capitol Theatre created a great deal of unusual interest. Not the least of the attractors was a live baby elephant atop the bally and native boys beating tom-tom drums as the float covered the city. Local date was given added importance and publicity through the fact that native boy played the lead in the picture.

KIRKMEYER AND PATCHEN VOTED QUIGLEY JULY AWARD PLAQUES

Entries of Winning Theatremen Bring "First-Time" Honors to Montana, Colorado; Awards Now In Last Half of 1937

Swinging into the final five months of the year's Competitions, the Quigley Awards for July signalize the inclusion of Montana and Colorado into the list of states represented by Plaque winners as the judges find for Ted Kirkmeyer and E. A. "Pat" Patchen.

By the decisions of the Committee, Kirkmeyer, manager of the Rio in Helena. Montana, is selected for the July Silver on his outstanding campaign for "A Star Is Born," the Bronze going to Patchen, manager, Main, Pueblo, Colorado, for his good work on "Captains Courageous."

First-Time Winners

Both theatremen are newcomers to the Quigley Awards, thus making it a first time for themselves and their circuits as well as the states they represent. Kirkmeyer's situation is a town of some 13,000 and his house has a capacity of 419 seats. Pueblo answers to a population of 50,000, the capacity of the Main Theatre totaling 923. The Rio is a unit of Fox Intermountain Theatres, the Main of the J. H. Cooper Enterprises.

Finishing closely behind are three entries selected for the July First Mentions. These Certificates are awarded to Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein, Warner's Hippodrome, Cleveland, on "Wee Willie Winkie"; A. S. Murch, Jr., North Shore, Gloucester, Mass., on "Captains Courageous," and Art Wartha, Roxy, La Porte, Ind., on "The Go Getter." In keeping with the recent trend of the awards decisions it is interesting to note that the three First Mention winners have earned this classification for the first time in the July Awards.

Five Months to Go

Twelve theatremen share in the Honorable Mention Awards, ten of these certificates going to entrants in the United States and two to other countries, namely Hal Bishop of Winnipeg, Canada, and Harry B. Harris of Lincoln, England. The majority of the July Honorables have been taken down by showmen previously represented in the Competitions.

Names, positions of winning entrants and titles of the pictures which gained these honors will be found in another column on this page.

With the conclusion of the July Awards there remain five months to the end of the 1937 Competitions. With the wealth of worthy product scheduled for release during this period there is sufficient incentive and wide opportunity for those theatremen who have not yet clicked to win Award recognition. Plans already are in work for the selection and entertainment of the 1937 Grand Award winners and no effort will be spared to make the presentations outstanding in every respect.

Ace Exploitations Aid Theatremen

Teaser facsimile of ads used for the New York opening were planted two weeks ahead on "Captains Courageous" by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, N. Y., specifying prices on the Astor date and his theatre. Advance screening was held for critics, city officials, educational and municipal department heads in addition to Seaman's Association and Rochester Yacht Club members. Comments were later used.

Large jumbo lobster was planted in case in front of theatre, deep sea contest blanks distributed and cash prizes awarded to those correctly guessing weight and approximate age of lobster. For holdover street bally, Les used Santa Claus on downtown streets distributing cards reading, "I stuck around a second week to see," etc., etc. Recipe folders promoted from fisheries company were given to women patrons and cans of codfish cakes were also presented to first 500 entering theatre opening day.

While in Wilmington, N. C.

E. G. Stellings at the Carolina Theatre week ahead used special still-boards in lobbies of library, YMCA and Boys' Brigade building with "boy appeal" stills on two latter boards. Heralds were placed in rooms of leading hotel with picture mention also included on front page of menu card in dining room.

Day ahead of opening, coloring contest was planted in leading paper, cash prize and tickets of contestants coloring cartoon sketches of characters from picture. Stellings also succeeded in having the Mayor dedicate a living tree on the lawn of the city hall to Wilmington's men who had "gone to the sea." Since this was the first official act of the Mayor after being sworn in stunt and picture came in for plenty of newspaper breaks and photos.

Telegrams from MGM studio carrying Spencer Tracy's signature was also received congratulating the Mayor on his ascendency to leading Wilmington office and his thoughtfulness in cooperating with the tree-planting stunt.

And in Syracuse, N. Y.

Eddie McBride, Loew's State, offered a "Courageous" cup in connection with series of sailing races held at nearby boat club. Yacht used by judges was properly sniped with playdates and title. Through cooperation with station WFBL a boat model contest was run, entries on display in theatre with prizes going to winners.

Girl dressed in sailor suit passed out good luck sailboat charms on main street four days ahead, fog horn atop marquee worked automatically with sign lighted by spotlights and opening night Station WSYR held a street quiz broadcast in front of theatre.

A BEAUTIFUL DISPLAY

Makes the crowds stop, look and buy. It's different with more showmanship, action and life.

3,000 theaters have installed Burch equipment in the past 5 years.

Popcorn adds to the entertainment of the evening. All but one person in a hundred enjoy and will eat popcorn. (Those who won't probably would not come to your theater anyway)... Dozens of great chains have depended on Burch machines to earn extra thousands of dollars annually in the majority of their houses. Numerous other chains have installed Burch machines in 1937.

*In 1,500 theaters, Burch machines are now paying the rent. In another 1,000 they are paying for the cooling system or other improvements. In scores of cases, Burch keeps the theater in black ink.

We receive hundreds of expressions like these: "Sent three children through college." "Buys a new car yearly." "Takes care of the wife's spending money."... To theater owners who could use more money —here's the answer.

Contacting brass company located nearby which manufactured the cables and high-tension insulators used in "Slim," Dick Wright, Warner Cleveland zone manager promoted them on the publication of a mimeographed page calling attention to these facts and urging their 1,200 employees to see the attraction when it played the Madison Theatre. Wright further sold them on using a story with art work in their publication which has a circulation of over 14,000 and is mailed from coast to coast to power company dealers.

Guess

Local restaurateur aided Wally Caldwell on his "Captains Courageous" date at Loew's Valentine, Toledo offering tickets to those who could come closest to guessing correct weight of lobster purported to have been taken from ocean near Gloucester, locale of picture. Also featured was a "Captains Courageous" lobster dinner advertised with theatre credits on menus. Imprinted napkins, window displays, etc., were used.

CANDID CAMERA FANS TIED TO "ARMOR" DATE

For date on "Knight Without Armor", Frank Henson at Loew's Broad, Columbus, tied in local paper to interest candid camera fans. First 50 on line with camera were guests of the house, Henson setting aside special section for the group who were permitted to take pictures of the feature. Photos entered in the newspaper's annual snapshot contest.

McGee Program

Smart job of work is the 16-page nine by 12 art program with coated gold covers put out by Pat McGee, general manager, Standard Theatres, for the opening of the Tower Theatre in Oklahoma City. Information of all kinds regarding the new house, opening program, coming attractions, etc., is illustrated effectively and outside ads though numerous are set so as not to overshadow the theatre copy. Included also is photo and buildup copy for Paul Ketcham, appointed manager for the new theatre.

Mayor Aids

For Morris Rosenthal's opening of "Devil Is Driving" at the Majestic, Bridgeport, Mayor Jasper McLevy and the traffic safety commissioner delivered speeches on safety from the stage. Leading editor wrote special story for his paper tying in with local safety week and stories on the safety campaign were run in all dailies together with picture plug.

Man in devil's costume rode bannered car at local midget auto race track, announcer playing up the stunt with playdate and attraction mention. Parade was held headed by American Legion band which marched through streets with police escort ending at theatre and special showing was held for the Junior Safety Council.

Baseball

Proving effective for Dick Eason, Trenton Theatre, Lynchburg, Va., is tieup with radio station whereby tickets are offered to each player on the local ball team who knocks a home run. Thus Eason gets continual air plugs together with attraction mention. Also found successful is use of "man on the street" broadcast during which Dick gives passes to those telling what the current and forthcoming attraction are at the Trenton.

Alarm Clock

Local sports center tied in with H. F. Digges, Grandin Theatre, Roanoke, Va., on "Knight Without Armor" by staging a "lucky alarm" contest wherein guest tickets were given to patrons paying their checks at the time the alarm rang. Clock placed over cash register was surrounded by elaborate cutouts of Dietrich and Donat. Approximately twice an hour awards were distributed to winners.

Newspaper Ads Favored By Budapest Theatremen

Exploitation Used Infrequently to Publicise Attractions In Hungarian Capitol

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

Though advertising and exploitation as they are known in other countries are not in general use in Budapest, there is much activity in evidence for gala premieres and special campaigns on the bigger features. These facts and others as have to do with the status of the theatre in the Hungarian capital are set down in this article which continues the Round Table series of Showman's Travelogues.

Budapest has often been called the Gay City by tourists and foreign visitors. In fact, the people of the Hungarian capital are fond of entertainment and amusement. They are theatre-minded, easily induced to go to movies and recitals, to dine in restaurants and cafes and listen to gipsy music or jazz. In fact, the Hungarian public has a tendency to spend more money on entertainment than is within their means. And yet, motion picture theatres are not on as high a level as they might be under the given circumstances. The fault lies not with the Hungarian exhibitor but with the innumerable decrees, rules and prohibitions imposed by the government upon them, upon distributors and upon every section of the picture industry. From 1920 up to 1936 ninety-one government edicts have been issued to regulate the film and movie business.

A Home Office license is necessary, for example, for the opening of a new theatre. In 1920, after four months' rule of a communistic regime in Hungary, all licenses were cancelled, strictly revised and in most cases given to new owners, largely as political rewards. These new holders of movie licenses were in most cases quite foreign to the business and sometimes even lacked sufficient capital for the management of a picture theatre, so that they were compelled to take an associate who was either a movie expert or a financier. To enter into partnership, however, was only possible after first obtaining the Home Office's consent.

Eleven First-Run Houses

This unhealthful system created a group of licensed exhibitors who had neither invested capital into the business nor did they take part with special knowledge and work in the management of their movies. Their connection with the industry was only due to the fact that they happened to possess a license for which, in most cases, they received a fixed income from their expert or financier partners. This associate ran all the risks and had to look after all the affairs connected with the movie while the licensed exhibitor himself hardly took any part in its management.

The result of this system is that theatres in Hungary are not on the level on which they ought to be. This is the reason why Hungarian and chiefly Budapest movie business could not flourish and develop. The fact that in 1936 there were 78 movies in Budapest seating 36,980 persons to 78 movies with 26,211 seating room in 1918, is not in proportion with the great growth of the city in the intervening years and the increasing popularity of the film.

A few old movies were closed down, others were enlarged or rebuilt, several new theatres were opened, but these slight changes were nothing in comparison to the enormous development which Budapest underwent since 1918.

There are 11 first-run premiere theatres in Budapest: Royal Apollo, 1,000 seats; Forum, 780; Decsi, 760; Metro-Scala, 774; Radius, 918; Urania, 1,038; Kamara, 723; Atrium, 770; Omnia, 650; City, 467, and Corso, 301. Next come the five second-run theatres which exclusively exhibit the successful films after the first-run houses played them. They are: Palace, 601 seats; Casino, 312; Capitol, 667; Corvin, 1,214; Studio, 250. After the film's run in a second-run theatre is over it is shown in the subsequent neighborhood houses, the third, fourth and fifth-run theatres.

Of the first and second-run houses Royal Apollo, Forum, Decsi, Palace, Capitol and Casino form the Gerö circuit owned by Istvan Gerö. The first-run theatre Metro-Scala is managed by Charles Guttman, head of the local branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The premiere house Urania is owned by the Ufa Company, Radius is managed by the Bioscop Film Distributing, Ltd., Kamara by Hirsch and Tsuk, film distributors. This latter movie is in cooperation with the Gerö-chain.

The Budapest public are keen movie goers and are enthusiastic screen fans. Since Budapest is the only really big city in an agricultural country, it is the center of trade, industry, of the scientific, political, cultural and social life of Hungary. All places of entertainment flourish in the capital and the movies, too, have a regular public.

Budapest has 1,050,000 inhabitants and 78 movies with 36,980 seats. That means one seat for every 27 persons. Although medium-sized cities near Budapest are counted as parts of socalled Greater-Budapest, yet their inhabitants do not count from the point of view of the Budapest movies. They have their own movies and naturally the public prefers to visit those and not spend much time and the additional expense of tramway fares only for the sake of seeing a picture a week or two earlier. It is only the well-to-do people who go to the expense of coming from from the neighboring cities to Budapest first run houses in order to see a film in the first week of its release.

Until June, 1936, it had been generally customary in Budapest for the first and second-run theatres to show in the course of a program a Hungarian and a foreign (American) newsreel, a cartoon or an educational and finally a full-length feature. The Budapest third-, fourth- and fifth-run cinemas, however, exhibited two full-length features in addition to the newsreels and the cartoon or educational. The first- and second-run movies had four performances on weekdays and five on Sundays and holidays. The performances started at four, six, eight and 10 o'clock on weekdays and at two on Sundays and holidays. The third-, fourth- and fifth-run movies had three performances on weekdays and four on Sundays, starting at four, seven and 10 on weekdays and at one on Sundays. The performances are not continual in the Budapest movies. You can only stay to the end of the program for which you have paid admission.

First and second-run movie exhibitors have been clamoring for the abolition of the two-feature system in the smaller movies for years, but the owners of these naturally were not willing to give up this great advantage. Therefore first and second-run theatres introduced the system of half-price tickets at the first performance every day, also on Sundays. This, again, was greatly resented by the owners of the neighborhood houses because the cheap tickets of the deluxe theatres took away a part of their public.

The war between exhibitors was recently ended by a new edict of the Home Office. According to it, deluxe first and second-run theatres may only have three performances on weekdays and four on Sundays and holidays and no half-price or reduced tickets may be issued at either of these performances. Deluxe theatres must not issue cheaper tickets than the price fixed by the Home Office. Every cinema may show in one program only one feature beyond the length of 1,200 meters. The program of the deluxe theatres may not be longer than 3,400 meters including newsreels, etc., that of the neighborhood theatres no longer than 3,800 meters altogether.

New Regulation Unpopular

No section of the movie business is really pleased with the new regulation. It is the neighborhood cinema exhibitors, above all, who are displeased with the new system. They fear that they will lose a great part of their public since those who had hitherto preferred to wait a few weeks for novelties and see two full-length features in one program, will now, since this advantage no more exists, probably go over to deluxe theatres. It does not make much difference that the prices in deluxe houses are higher than those in neighborhood theatres; the difference will not be sufficient to induce a part of the public to go to smaller movies which also show one feature only, just as the deluxe theatres, but weeks later.

THE THEATRES OF BUDAPEST

The public of the first and second-run theatres do not enjoy any special advantage on the part of the patrons, with the exception of regular visitors who are personally known to the box-office or to the manager and are treated with exceptional courtesy. Metro-Scala and Radius are the only movies which work with a mailing list. They inform their regular public of the most important films to be released. Exhibitors of some smaller neighborhood movies, however, are in close contact with their public which is mostly recruited from among people living in the neighborhood. Managers know almost every member of their public personally. They chat with them before the beginning of the performance and tell them of the next picture to be released.

The advertising campaign is almost entirely concentrated on the first-run houses. Generally speaking, the local branches of the American film companies provide for the necessary publicity through their own publicity managers. Independent Hungarian distributors do their own advertising, but in most cases they have no constant publicity manager. Usually they entrust a film editor of a paper to do the advertising campaign, or, if their films are going to be released in one of the houses of the Gerö Circuit, Hungarian distributors entrust the publicity manager of the circuit with the entire advertising.

The propaganda campaign for a feature picture costs about three to six thousand pengoes. This is the average; but, of course, in some cases much more is spent on the advertising of a film. London Film's Wells picture, "Things to Come," holds the record by having cost 11,000 pengoes (1,040 dollars) in publicity expenses.

The advertising budget is concentrated upon the opening campaign. According to their importance, pictures are advertised three to seven days in advance. The greatest stress is laid on newspaper advertising. There are 19 dailies, two sport dailies, four Monday papers (the daily newspapers do not appear on Mondays), two theatrical and screen weeklies and one radio weekly, which are the most important papers and come into consideration from an advertising point.

Film Reviewing Stereotyped

Film reviewing suffers greatly and, since in most cases it contents itself by writing stereotyped phrases of praise about almost every film, newspaper readers have no confidence in it. Since they can never be sure whether the film critic speaks of a picture in the highest terms of praise because it is really good or simply because he cannot give an unbiased opinion, the public pays little attention to the reviews and learns about the real value of a film chiefly through word-of-mouth publicity.

The Budapest public has excellent taste and a sure, unfailing instinct to judge films. Advance publicity and favorable reviews draw the public to go to see a picture in the first days. But if the film fails to come up to expectations, the rest of the public simply refuse to see it, despite the greatest advertising campaign and the most enthusiastic reviews. Releases are usually held on Thursdays and Fridays—occasionally, in the case of a particularly big feature, a much-advertised gala release with compulsory evening dress. By Monday it is evident whether a film is a success or not. The first Monday is always the decisive day for the box-office success or failure of a picture.

Clichés in advertising are mostly used by the American film companies and by the Urania, Ufa's movie house. Hungarian distributors, as a rule, insert only text advertisements in newspapers. Merchants do not go in for cooperation much, although they are exploitation-minded and might probably be induced to do so to a greater extent if exhibitors took the initiative.

Posting Municipal Monopoly

It is only the American film companies, above all the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who go in for cooperation with shops and travel bureaus for competitions and contests. Street ballyhoo is being used by Metro chiefly. They do it by hired cars or hired trams.

Putting up posters on billboards and hoardings is a municipal monopoly and rather expensive. Most movies have fixed place hired for putting up posters announcing their new films, but in the case of an important feature they have about 200 additional posted. The size is three feet by four approximately. Posters, photographs and electric signs are displayed in front of the theatres and in the lobbies. They sometimes distribute pamphlets in private flats or arrange for the telephone exchange to ring up two or three thousand numbers and draw telephone subscribers' attention to the coming film.

Hollywood Publicity Used Widely

Stories on Hollywood as well as screen news of foreign countries are regularly published by all papers, especially by the theatrical and screen weeklies. No paper has a regular staff screen correspondent in Hollywood, only occasional contributors. The newspapers clip their foreign screen material from foreign papers and from the publicity material of American and other film companies.

Projection is first rate in deluxe theatres. In neighborhood movies, where two full-length feature used to be shown in one program, projection was of an inferior quality because two long features and additional program had to be released within three hours. The new one-feature system will naturally improve projection in the smaller houses.

Stage shows are rarely to be seen in Budapest movies. Exhibitors must obtain special permission to show them and are granted this only in case the show is closely connected with the content of the film. This restriction was made in favor of the legit theatres. For example, a song occurring in the film may be sung on the stage or a Russian orchestra may play in case of a film with Russian background. But even in these rare cases stage shows are not greatly appreciated by the public, which is interested in the dominating feature only.

A rather curious type of picture show, a Hungarian specialty, is the "film sketch" which is usually shown during the summer months. It is a locally-made picture, portions of which are actually played on the stage by the same actors who figure in the picture. They usually have a strong burlesque flavor and are built around some topical subject. The "film sketch" consists of a film part of about 1,200 meters in length and contains three or four stage scenes.

Most Budapest movies are very backward from the point of view of air conditioning. Only Metro-Scala, Radius and Atrium are up to mark in this point. Some of the newly built movies have roofs that open so that on warm evenings the public has the advantage of sitting in open air. There are two garden movies in the city, open only in summer, but neither is very popular. On the whole, June, July and August are the dead season in Budapest, and b. o. takings are so small that some movies even close down during these months.

In winter the legitimate theatres compete very strongly with the movies, since tickets are comparatively inexpensive. A subscription in one of the four most important dramatic theatres in Budapest enables the holder to see a first-rate theatrical performance for hardly more than the price of a movie seat. In spring and fall, football matches draw a great part of the public from the movies, and throughout the summer months the population of Budapest finds entertainment in summer sports and excursions.

This is the cross-section of the Budapest movie business. Despite difficulties and troubles, people in this business have time to foregather at the Film Club for a few hours every afternoon to play bridge, rummy or chess and drown their sorrows in an animated discussion of the latest vicissitude of the trade.

C. E. Doe replies to Section A as follows: "The following points demand careful attention if a motor-generator set is to operate at maximum efficiency. (1) Scrupulous cleanliness of the entire machine. (2) Use only exact size and kind of brushes recommended by manufacturer of the set. (3) Commutator surface must make perfect electrical contact with entire surface of brushes. (4) Measure brush-commutator pressure and adjust to between 1.25 and 1.5 pounds per square inch of brush surface. Too little pressure induces sparking, with loss of efficiency and injury to commutator surface; excess pressure induces added frictional heat, unnecessary grooving and wear of commutator surface as well as brushes. It also tends to roughen the commutator surface, which induces sparking.

"(5) Brushes must be perfectly free to move in and out in holders, yet fit into them snugly. Brushes too loose in holders will rattle, chatter and spark. If they bind and stick in holders there will be bad sparking, loss of power, tendency to heat and roughening of the commutator surface. (6) Over-load must, so far as possible, be avoided as it means excessive heat, sparking and loss of efficiency. (7) Keep insulation between commutator bars cut down to depth recommended by manufacturer, usually 1/32 to 3/64 of an inch. (8) Test commutator for perfect roundness once each month and for low bars or high bars once each week. (9) Once each day brush commutator vigorously with stiff bristle brush, to remove copper and carbon dust from commutator undercut grooves.

"(10) Use only the lubricant recommended by manufacturer, keeping oil at proper level in oil wells. (11) Keep all starting equipment, switches etcetra in proper condition and clean. (12) If set is of the sleeve bearing horizontal type, keep it perfectly level so that slight end-play of armature will tend to prevent grooving of commutator and bearings. (13) Make sure that yoke is at proper position. (14) If it be a ball bearing set use only grease recommended by manufacturer as acid grease will ruin ball races. (15) Test once each month to make sure bearing wear is not advanced to a stage where there is insufficient clearance between armature and pole pieces. (16) If it be a set that is joined by a coupling and has no metal base upon which both motor and generator are mounted, be very sure the two shafts are in perfect alignment and that they remain so. (17) Be sure no unnecessary ballast resistance is introduced. (18) Make frequent inspections to the end that all starting apparatus is functioning properly."

(B) P. and L. Felt say, "No piece of machinery that is not properly handled and cared for will operate at high efficiency. In the case of a motor-generator that is not well handled and well cared for, its power consumption as compared with its output, will be increased, said increase being in exact proportion to the fault. This loss will not only be progressive, but will be registered on the meter for every hour the machine is operated. It is quite possible, especially if charges for power be fairly high, that in the life of a set its original cost may be paid out in wasted wattage caused by careless or unintelligent care.

"But that is not all, for a machine lacking careful and intelligent care will not only cost more in upkeep, but will not last as long as will the well cared for one. That, however, is not quite the best way to put it, as of course some parts, the frame, for example, will last for years, regardless of lack of care. But the vital or the working parts will wear out very much faster and must be replaced very much more often with careless or unintelligent care than with careful, intelligent care, and the difference may, where large sets are in use, easily amount to as much as an average of $100 per year in an all-day theatre."

To which I would add the thought that this matter presents a highly illustrative example of how important it is to select men who are to have charge of costly machinery that may be made to operate efficiently or otherwise.

Freeman and Marks To Open New Theatre

A new theatre will be opened in New Castle, Pa., shortly with the taking of a lease by Charles Freeman, formerly of the Peoples Amusement and Victor Theatre Corporations and Mike Marks, manager of the Latonia, Oil City, on the auditorium of the Spanish Rite Cathedral. The theatre will be known as the Cathedral and will feature combination vaudeville and motion pictures.

The house will open early in September following installation of the latest equipment for stage and screen presentation. Seating capacity will be 3500. John W. Ball, formerly with Warners in Pittsburgh, is handling the publicity.

Loew - F. & M. Deal Held Up

Loew's is holding up a deal for the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, until Fanchon and Marco executives meet certain requirements specified by the large crcuit before it takes over the house. Attorneys are in session.

Meeting Postponed

A zone managers' meeting, originally set for August 9th by Warner Brothers Theatres, will be held August 23rd.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Sanborn, Iowa

Dear Herald:

We came over here to meet our two very good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Sanders, who operate the Princess theatre. We have never forgotten the very delightful dinner we had at their house some time back and when Carl Nedly, a film salesman, tried to eat up all the fried chicken and huckleberry pie there was on the table.

Sanborn is located right in the heart of one of the best corn countries on earth, and how they can ever get rid of all the corn they will have is a mystery to us, and this will be true of all of northwest Iowa. But speaking of dinners, if you have an idea that Mrs. Sanders don't know how to put up a real dinner, then you don't know very much about dinners. We had trouble to find Doc, but we finally found him and he reached for his checkbook as soon as he saw us, for, you know, Doc simply won't be without the Herald.

When we came through northeast Nebraska we stopped and called on Mrs. J. J. Hoffman, who operates the Plainview theatre, and this is another place where the corn crop will be immense and where a lot of persons can find work harvesting it. Mrs. Hoffman is now "Grandmaw Hoffman," and she is mighty proud of it. Don't it beat all that when Paw and Maw get to be Grandpaw and Grandmaw they seem to become 20 years younger? But we have noticed another thing, that when Maw gets to be Grandmaw she lays aside the golf clubs, and that's the case with Grandmaw Hoffman. But, Elmer, how she used to play golf; she was the champion of northeast Nebraska.

If you should ever stop at Osmond, Neb., be sure to look up R. J. Dalton, who operates the Osmond theatre. You will find him to be an excellent fellow and you can be assured of a good show at his theatre, and if you should call at his home you will find Mrs. Dalton a very excellent lady. We had a very delightful visit with them at their home.

Some years ago we called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ulm, who operate the Orpheum theatre at Randolph, Neb.; we have never forgotten the delightful visit we had. We called again this time and had the same results. Mr. Ulm, like Mrs. Hoffman and Mr. Dalton, says he can't get along without the Herald and that's why they all asked us to renew it for them. We did that very thing, you betcha.

Oh, migosh, it's the same old thing every day. "Roast beef with brown gravy, roast pork with apple sauce, stewed chicken with dumplings," and the doctor won't let us eat any of 'em, and we are glad of it, and that's the most sensible thing he ever did. So we told the girl to bring us some boiled skunk with garlic sauce. We wanted to try something new for a change.

We crossed the Missouri river at Sioux City, Iowa. We wanted to stop and take a bath in the river and would have done it only for two reasons: the water was too muddy, and, besides that, we are not due to take another bath until some time late in the fall.

We stayed overnight at Le Mars, Iowa. Le Mars looks like a darn good town, if you ask us, but maybe you won't ask us.

After the "roast beef with brown gravy, roast pork with apple sauce, stewed chicken with dumplings" we went and called on Happy Hasselo, manager of the two Le Mars theatres, which are owned by the March Brothers of Wayne, Neb., and Vermillion, S. D. We had a fine visit with Happy and his lovely wife and the wife of his operator out in their car in front of the theatre.

We asked this boy for a theatre pass for Miss Merriam and he told us that he was having a special pass printed for her and would send it direct to her when he got it printed. This pass, as he described it, will be a fine one, for he said it would be eight inches wide by 14 inches long. Note: When you receive it, Gertrude, be sure to write him and thank him. But listen, Gertie, don't forget that your boy friend is already married and has a lovely wife, and she looks like she could throw a dishpan or a skillet like one of your Yankee ball players.

We met our good friend Fred Kouch at Remsen. Marcus was our next port of entry and here we met Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Delaney of the Lyric theatre, two very lovely folks who treated us very royally.

Joe Steeg of the Time theatre at Primgar wanted the Herald. Joe had it figured out and Joe is pretty good on figures, too. It looks like Primbar was located just about right and it looks like Joe's theatre was also located about right, and if he don't enjoy good business then we are a poor guesser, for a Joe seems to know the theatre business backwards.

We always look forward to a mighty pleasant time when we go to Pallina, for that's where W. A. Johannsen operates the Wonderland theatre, and the Wonderland is thoroughly equipped with all a theatre requires, and, besides that, Mr. and Mrs. Johannsen are about as good folks as Iowa can boast of, and Iowa has a lot of 'em. Mr. Johannsen is a professional wood worker. He can make as nice pieces of woodwork as one would care to see. We sent him some ebony roots from the Rio Grande valley and he will carve them into some lovely designs for the Missus. He says he will send us one, too. Our visit with them is always too short. It is just like eating huckleberry pie to visit these folks.

Maybe this is enough. Maybe it is too much. Who knows? Anyhow, it is so darned hot in this room that the sweat is running down our back like the Bridal Veil Falls into the Columbia river, but we had a big rain last night and we trust it will be cooler mañana.

CHANGE

STRONG pressures of change are obtruding just under the surface of the fabric of motion picture production and distribution. As a discussion in the news pages of this issue of Motion Picture Herald indicates, something is happening, has happened in fact, to the line of demarcation between seasons. It tends to fade out. This year August with its openings and releases has been what Septembers have been before. Through the year the most pretentious efforts of the art have been flung to the market regardless of season and weather. In Hollywood the curves of production activity have tended to flatten into a continuous flow.

Greater and greater emphasis of production attention, budget allowances and promotion falls to the bigger pictures and less and less to the lesser.

HOLLYWOOD and its allied principal theatres have no serious consideration for anything save what the trade was calling "roadshows" only a little while ago. "Program" is a dead word, and substantially a dead policy, with what today calls "B" pictures enjoying a degree of attention that reminds one of the unenthusiasm of the last of the silent product as sound swept in to dominate the industry now nearly a decade ago.

At the moment the product situation is not calculated to give great cheer to lesser theatres so situated that they yet require that flow of change that created the program policy so long ago.

To be sure, in due time, the demands and markets will react on production to create the flow of material in the required classifications. Unsatisfied markets do not long remain unsatisfied if they contain enough buying power to encourage supply—certainly not in this vigorously competitive industry.

DISCUSSING the toplofty budgets and pretentious projects of today, Mr. Adolph Zukor the other day, as he paused in New York bound from Hollywood to London, asserted that the industry had come to a step in the cycles of change precisely now just as marked as in the day when the feature drama was born, or when sound came—both periods of innovation which tremendously increased costs and affected policies all the way from the studios to the box office. He repeated the assertion that production costs of now are up by nearly 35 per cent as compared with a year ago, with everybody from labor to stars involved in the figures.

Plainly enough rising costs in production to a considerable degree result from the terrific competitions of the production center, pressures made the higher by the concentration of Hollywood. It seems clear enough that the producers pursuing the prize of the gross will continue to bid against each other with every dollar that the traffic will bear. And most of the bidding is for fame, the ready made reputations of starland. And so it comes that the screen which makes fame by the purveying of personalities to the public by the same process creates instruments of its own higher costs. Nothing will be done about that.

RELATED considerations were involved in another assertion of Mr. Zukor's a fortnight ago that the bigger pictures must have five-week runs.

That denotes an anticipation that for theatres committed to such a policy the customers are to be expected to come around about once a month. And that in turn indicates how far the top rank effort of the industry has departed from the encouragement of the motion picture habit which was once the great assurance of the business. Mr. Zukor, incidentally, admits, or perhaps more accurately, observes, that the motion picture habit is no more. He sees the industry today dependent on customers out shopping for shows.

To the exhibitor this means a tendency toward a decided change in the relation of his theatre to the community, a new status of considerably less intimacy.

"SYPHILIS"

JUST as a word on its own "syphilis" is one of the loveliest in the language, partaking of the pearly charm of "hyacinthe" and "narcissus." But syphilis being what it is, poets and artists have never been able to do much about it. Here and there it has appeared in ulcerated literature for under-the-counter distribution. For many a decade it could not even get its name in the papers, appearing only occasionally as "social disease," or "blood disease."

World war army prophylaxis, the socially militant play, "Damaged Goods," by M. Eugene Brieux in France, and certain hell-bent aspects of the after-the-war psychology of abandon contrived to make syphilis printable, just barely. It has not yet, and probably never will, become quite acceptable at the family fireside.

DOWN the years, beginning with a version of "Damaged Goods," in 1915, there has been a sprinkling of syphilitic motion pictures, taking their origin in and seeing exhibition in marginal areas a shade outside the proprieties of the organized industry. These projects have always borne loud proclamation of "social service," but it is hardly less than remarkable that the entrepreneurs responsible have never given any other sort of manifestation of the urges of creative responsibility to the commonweal.

It is not to be recalled that any of those persons so rampantly anxious to slay the dragon of venereal disease, by way of the box office, always the box office, have been discovered trying to make pictures to educate the public on the prevention of typhoid, scarlet or yellow fever, on mosquito control, grade crossing elimination, highway safety, the boll weevil or the banana peel menace. It is no coincidence that quack producers and quack doctors center their attention in the genito-urinary tract.

The original "Damaged Goods" picture, fortified by theatrical acceptance in restricted regions of the American stage, by influence of the name of M. Brieux and the abilities of Mr. Richard Bennett, even in 1915 was not deemed a venture for the regular distribution channels. Made by the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, chief contributor to the output of the Mutual Film Corporation, the picture became neither a "Mutual Masterpicture" nor a program product. It was sold, instead, by the "state's rights" channel, and bootlegged in several territories.

TODAY, again, because of an entirely constructive campaign against syphilis by the properly constituted medical civil authorities of Chicago and Cook County, Illinois, syphilis is in the news again. Never before has so comprehensive and important a movement in venereal disease control been attempted. It is a movement and a news story that is of the utmost social importance.

All that attention of authorities and press does not, however, make syphilis appear to be any the less a subject of indecent horror.

Let it be pointed out once more that syphilis is not a motion picture responsibility, and that it is not a topic for screen presentation in theatres dedicated to popular amusement. The present tide of publicity attention is not to be construed as either invitation or license to those who may feel inspired to screen expression. Incidentally, and not too incidentally, it chances that there are provisions in the Production Code pertaining to this realm of picture temptations, presumed to guide and control the activities of the organized industry under its commitments to decency.

The place for syphilis is the doctor's office.

School Program

Approximately 1,000 films have been approved for use in the school film program of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association by the group of prominent educators who have been reviewing and appraising the films at the request of the MPPDA. The arduous reviewing process will be completed September 1st, with only 50 reels, all of which belong to the social sciences group, as yet unexamined by the educators. Dr. Karl W. Bigelow, head of the social sciences panel, believes that in the future the screen and textbook will supplement each other in American education.

The story appears on page 56.

Three Erpi Plans

Western Electric officials are considering three plans for the divestment of theatre sound equipment sales and servicing by Electrical Research Products, Inc. The first is to sell a license, probably for one dollar to a new national company, which would sell sales franchises to sub-units headed by officers and leading sales executives; the second, to sell franchises to circuits and groups of exhibitors; and the third, to give the company outright to employees of Erpi.

Story on page 53.

Vaudeville Revival

Signing of a closed shop agreement with the new Isie Hirst circuit, which is offering vaudeville contracts guaranteeing 20 weeks of work, was hailed by Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, as a revival of vaudeville. The circuit, made up of former burlesque houses, will have the longest time available to vaudeville acts on a single circuit in more than five years. Despite Mr. Whitehead's prediction, the Warner circuit is the only one that has announced its intention to add to the number of houses in which vaudeville is played.

Developments in the vaudeville field are described in an article on page 90.

Unscathed

For the first time in several years, the motion picture industry witnessed a session of Congress in which not one bill affecting it was discussed on the floor in either the House or the Senate. A total of 22 bills were introduced but the House Immigration Committee was the only one to discuss motion pictures at all. It voted down the Dickstein bill to bar alien actors. However, all of the measures introduced remain alive and will not have to be reintroduced at the next session of Congress.

Legislation is discussed on page 38.

U.S. Films

Educational films produced by the U. S. government will be shown at the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition, according to George Creel, formerly head of national publicity during war time and now U. S. Commissioner for the Exposition. The films will dramatize the government's work in agriculture, commerce, forestry, chemistry and other fields. The films, like the Resettlement Administration's "The Plow That Broke the Plains," produced some time ago, are said to be a complete departure from the mustiness of the ordinary educational films.

Television

The Federal Communications Commission disclosed in a recent decision that it intends to limit the use of the few frequencies now available for television research to "those who show satisfactory evidence of being able to contribute substantially toward its progress."

Despite the development of television in England to the extent that there is "satisfactory commercial television broadcasting," there is no rush of buyers for the television sets which cost about $350, according to Albert F. Murray, chief television engineer for Philco Radio and Television Corporation.

New developments and incidents affecting television are discussed on page 61.

Seeing the Light

Evincing a more liberal Chinese viewpoint toward foreign product, the government censorship at Shanghai made no complete rejections of motion pictures and ordered few cuts of importance in the first half of this year. But against any rush of optimism as to a widening market for American product there are the problems of education of millions of the underprivileged natives, of heavy taxation which reaches down to the lowest wage classes, and of the long uphill pull which the government is making to improve transportation.

J. P. Koehler's dispatch from China appears on page 89.

26% at a Profit

The United States Department of Commerce, in Washington, is in receipt of a detailed report on the construction and operations of the motion picture business in Switzerland, from A. C. Frost, Consul General in Zurich, who discloses that 48 per cent of the film theatres in that country operate at a loss, approximately 28 per cent operate without a deficit, but without profit, and, only 26 per cent earn a modest income.

American films are in competition with German in Switzerland, as explained in Mr. Frost's report to Washington on page 62.

Test Cases

Test casts on the legality of bank night and other chance games are pending in Connecticut and Missouri. During this period a ban has been placed on the games in both States, but despite this the game is being operated in the smaller communities. In the larger cities, such as St. Louis, Hartford and New Haven, theatres are complying with the prohibition.

Activities associated with chance games are explained on page 66.

Decision Awaited

Briefs, opposing and supporting the issuance of a permanent injunction to Paramount Pictures, Inc., restraining the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania from carrying out a boycott of the company's product, were filed in federal court, Philadelphia. Both sides now are awaiting a decision. In Minneapolis, where a similar injunction is being sought by Paramount, hearing on the case was adjourned.

Highlights of the contentions made in the briefs are part of an article on legislation which appears on page 28.

Hoyts-Union

Although no official announcement has been made, the motion picture industry in Australia is confident there will be no extension of the five-year partnership between Hoyts and Greater Union Theatres when the agreement expires in December. It is generally agreed that this action will result in a renewal of the competition which characterized the circuits' operations five years ago. At present attention is being focused on negotiations to purchase supplies.

Cliff Holt discusses the question in an article on page 38.

Financial

Net earnings for Loew's for the fiscal year ending August 31 will approximate $9 a share, it is estimated. The stock offering of Republic Pictures of Delaware of 1,316,000 shares was approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Stanley company, Warner subsidiary, has declared a $3 dividend on its common stock.

Story on the financial developments of the week is published on page 36.

Washington Warns

Warnings of "drastic penalties" to motion picture employers who are delinquent in paying taxes under the Social Security Act were issued this week by the United States Treasury at Washington, which explained some of the points of the Act to clarify existing erroneous impressions.

The Treasury's statement, issued specially with motion pictures in mind, appears on page 53.

No Strike

Exhibitors in Mexico City averted a threatened strike by meeting the demand of unionized employees for a 25 per cent wage increase and in return the workers are not pressing a demand for a share in the theatres' annual income.

This and other developments in Mexico are reported by James Lockhart on page 90.

Hitchcock Here

Alfred Hitchcock, prominent English director, arrived in New York Monday for a ten-day vacation. Interviewed on his arrival, Mr. Hitchcock deplored the proposed British quota act as a boomerang for English independent producers.

An interview with Mr. Hitchcock, in which he expresses himself freely on the quota measure, is found on page 14.

Labor

The Screen Actors Guild made deep inroads in the ranks of the eastern studios last week with membership among players reported to be on the rise. The Guild engineered improvements in extras' wages, resulting in the signing of many as members of the union. The newly formed Screen Directors Guild received word from major producing companies that bargaining may start immediately providing the directors and assistant directors are represented as distinct groups.

Comprehensive summary of the week's labor news is contained in a news story on page 54.

More Trouble

Standardization of studio rental and studio servicing rates—long a problem to native British studios—continues unaccomplished as a result of the receivership of Amalgamated at Elstree near London, a receivership that is particularly causing disquiet to the owners of the other major British production plants.

Events leading up to and subsequent to the fall of Amalgamated, and other British motion picture news of the week, are described on page 35.

Stock Inquiry

Officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission refused to elaborate on a report that close watch is being kept on activity of Technicolor stocks on the big board. New York brokers were reported to have received questionnaires seeking particulars of dealings in the stock in the weeks between last February and May, when its gyrations attracted much attention.

Story on page 26.

Warner Men Meet

Warner zone managers met in New York with Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, the early part of the week. A general rise in admission prices was considered and rejected. Some 500 local exhibitors and their families attended the New York preview of Warner product, one of the 30 trade shows held simultaneously throughout the nation.

The story appears on page 28.

Tax Drop

Tax collections on admissions dropped sharply during the month of July, the Treasury Department reported. National amusement tax revenues slumped $241,687 as compared with the previous month. In the New York theatrical district, July's receipts declined more than $80,000.

NEW SEASON ADVANCED A MONTH, RELEASES SHOW

August Availability of Important 1937-38 Product Extends Booking Year; Trade Shows Seen a New Factor

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The fall drive, opening the season of 1937-38, is underway weeks early, with Hollywood's best playing their premieres and first-runs at dates unprecedented in distribution history.

The season seems to have opened itself. No one admits starting it.

Along with the early openings are indications that trade show previews promise to become a more general practice of the industry—and that the much debated policy of block-booking will presently be found to apply only to lesser productions.

In any event, between competitive pressures, air-cooling and accumulated big-picture inventories, the once accepted handicap of summer heat has been disregarded, and August of '37 is the show month that September used to be.

August grosses are up and big pictures are credited with bringing them up. Figures in some 24 key cities for the week ending August 12-13, for instance, show first-run grosses higher than in any similar period since the middle of May, following a decline in June and July, when few meritorious releases were available.

Through the August bookings of such draw attractions as "Saratoga," "Good Earth," "Captains Courageous," "Wee Willie Winkie," "You Can't Have Everything," "Artists and Models," "Stella Dallas," "Road Back," "Toast of New York," "Vogues of 1938" and "Ever Since Eve," among others, theatre men may feel there is reason to anticipate a change in summer distribution policies which for the most part kept such high-grade screen fare off the market so long as heat spells were accounted page-one news.

Not a Coincidence, They Say

Though there was some agreement that the season had been advanced, the majority of those queried by your reporter officially professed to see no especial significance in the release of top attractions in August. It was explained that "the big pictures were ready for market and thus were made available for August booking." No one commented on an industry-wide "coincidence."

In the fall of 1936 there were instances of awkward and ofttimes serious booking jams. Pictures discovered strong enough to rate extended runs could only be held over, if at all, by disturbing rigid release schedules and setting back with difficulty previous commitments. Exhibitors in the following runs, hungry for fatter fare after a summer of lean pickings, demanded dates contracted for, and in cases in which these contractual obligations could not be adjusted, distributors were forced to forego additional earnings the pictures merited.

SHORT TO TELL FILM'S BIOGRAPHY

MGM will soon release a short subject, "Romance in Celluloid", which will depict the process of picture-making from earliest stages to the finished product.

Produced by Frank Whitbeck and Oliver Garver, the subject is in effect a trailer for many forthcoming productions. Included among the scenes are shots of pictures in production, such as "Big City", "Double Wedding" and "Conquest". Announcement is also made of Norma Shearer's return to the screen shortly.

Thus by moving available 1937-38 product ahead, distributors may have found a mutually satisfactory method of escaping similar booking hazards for the coming season, especially since so many good pictures are ready for market. In most every instance production schedules are reported ahead of last year and more finished product is on hand.

The booking situation is also being eased by the co-operation of the first-run exhibitor, according to Neil F. Agnew, Paramount vice-president in charge of distribution. The wealth of product now on hand has prepared the theatre men to meet contingencies by clearing the way for extended first-runs, Mr. Agnew felt.

August Compares with Midwinter

That the August releases are bringing in grosses and rentals comparable with midwinter "takes" is also regarded as proof generally that the public will buy screen entertainment in the summer when the entertainment is strong enough to compete with outdoor amusements. In every instance, distributors report record attendance in all situations, despite competition from summer activities.

"A good picture will stand off weather or other opposition," averred Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio vice-president in charge of distribution. "RKO is turning them loose in August. The old practice of holding pictures until September is through. Distributors have lost some of the fears they have had about August bookings. That is also true of RKO. I would rather turn a picture loose in August than in September if it is a good picture, and we have proved this in previous years in more than one instance with such attractions as "Morning Glory."

The increased August grosses were also laid to the fact that money is freer, that people, having more to spend, are going to the theatre oftener. Finances now allow for long-deferred vacation trips, and that the "trippers" are also attending the theatre in far greater numbers is indicated in the better business being done by resort houses.

This is found to be true by William F. Rogers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, on recent trips in the field. Mr. Rogers also held that a decided increase in travel generally had something to do with improved attendance. He pointed out especially the large grosses being rolled up in different situations on "Broadway Melody of 1938," and felt, as did others, that good pictures as well as available funds were responsible for the generally improved conditions.

Air Cooling a Contributor

Increase in the number of air-cooling installations in 1937, made possible partly by improved economic conditions, is another factor that bears on the subject. The more numerous theatres now so equipped were freely credited with attracting much of the increased patronage. However, it was the contention of George Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists, that high picture quality was a more important consideration in attracting business than air cooling systems. He referred to "Stella Dallas" as a case in point.

This opinion was shared by John Clark, general manager in charge of sales of Twentieth Century-Fox, who mentioned "Wee Willie Winkie" and "You Can't Have Everything," two of his company's recent successes, as examples.

The general release of top pictures during the heated months is not without some precedent. Preceded by press stories in 1936, announcing that "San Francisco" was deemed strong enough to do business regardless of summer conditions, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer booked the picture for July and August showings. Returns were reported even better than anticipated. "Gold Diggers," in the summer of 1933, "42d Street" and "Green Pastures," released in the summer months of following years, provided similar experience for Warner Brothers.

If the procedure was not adopted generally in the past years because of lack of finished pictures, it can be said that no such paucity exists today. Distributors announced more product on hand, in varying degrees, than last year at this time. Storage vaults are reported full of prints of pictures ready for exhibition—in the case of Warner Brothers, to the extent that this producer sponsored on August 23 and 24, a series of National Trade Exhibits in various key cities. Exhibitors were invited to view leading 1937-38 Warner productions "now ready for exhibition." Similar screenings were also scheduled for Canadian exhibitors.

"These trade showings were arranged to exhibit product that will not be released for two months," said S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director for Warner Brothers Pictures. "We held them so that the exhibitor would have the opportunity to see the pictures he is to play far enough in advance for him to prepare campaigns for profitable exhibition. The showings also indicate to the theatre operator that he may see before he buys."

Trade Show Gaining Favor

The trade showing is not as general in the United States as it is in England, where the law requires such presentation before release on all pictures. However, distributors on this side have utilized the idea with some regularity on individual pictures. In general, the trade showing is favored. It was found of advantage recently by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to Mr. Rogers, in introducing "Topper," full-length feature from Hal Roach, hitherto known as a producer of short reels. These screenings were also approved by Mr. Agnew, who saw in them an opportunity for the exhibitor to appraise pictures for quicker playdates and often better booking spots than originally scheduled.

"The company that has the product should by all means 'trade show' its attractions," asserted Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures. "The industry should adopt the idea generally. We have had such showings on many of our pictures and there is no doubt of the benefits of this idea."

That such attractions as "Three Smart Girls" and "My Man Godfrey" were aided immeasurably by trade showings was the observation of James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Universal Pictures, who also felt that worthy pictures were given a decided boost in exhibitor regard through such screenings.

The great amounts tied up in 1937-38 million-dollar attractions might also be considered as another reason for earlier release dates. It is assumed that the quicker these pictures are circulated, the sooner they can be expected to bring production money. The earlier dates also allow for extra playing time when extended runs are indicated, and that longer runs might assure producers of greater returns on worthwhile product was asserted by Adolph Zukor at the MPTOA convention in Miami. Mr. Zukor said then that the public has been educated to bigger pictures and suggested the extended run engagement as one means of added rental commensurate with the quality of the big pictures which producers were being encouraged to turn out.

The conclusion that the million-dollar picture that "brings them in" returns the biggest grosses, quickest; the proof that the high-budget production displaying a top job in story, star and production value, means the fattest of profits to exhibitor as well as producer, may have some bearing on the future of the so-called program picture. Well-founded opinion has it that the excellent showings made nationally over the summer period by carefully-tailored, expertly-produced pictures may show the direction that the industry wind is blowing, which is towards the gradual lessening of program-product importance, if not its ultimate demise. However, there is no unanimous expression on this point.

"Program Picture" Inevitable

While it is the view in some quarters that the business being done by top attractions points to the eventual elimination of the program picture, there are others as authoritative who feel that this brand of screen fare will remain an important part of exhibition. Some of those interviewed held that the demand for top picture personalities and artistically-produced stories would in itself automatically hasten the departure of the lesser attractions, but it was also stressed that stories put into production with every anticipation of creating top entertainment often fail of the mark and thus become program pictures—a condition, it was pointed out, that "shall always be with us."

The wisdom of scheduling summer releases to take advantage of outside seasonal promotions was emphasized by Mr. Schaefer in pointing out the recent success of Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938." Built around the character of a leading Fifth Avenue designer, the story includes a sequence in color of an elaborate fashion show depicting the new fall and winter styles. Thus the picture's premiere, deliberately dated to coincide with the first announcements of important Paris fashion openings, according to the United Artists executive, was brought to the attention of newspaper and magazine fashion editors and resulted in extensive additional publicity from these sources which might not have been forthcoming were the picture released at a later date.

Though there may be differences of opinion on various phases of distribution, agreement on the quality of forthcoming product seems unanimous. The executives interviewed were enthusiastic about the new season and these enthusiasms were not confined to their own pictures. Exhibitors in important situations seem well aware of the box office possibilities in the 1937-38 releases to the extent that these attractions have received much attention in discussions at various circuit conventions during August.

SENATE APPROVES NEW FCC MEMBERS

Before adjourning, the Senate confirmed President Roosevelt's nomination of Frank R. McNinch and T. A. M. Craven, as chairman and a member, respectively, of the Federal Communications Commission.

At a hearing held by the Senate Interstate Commerce Commitee, Mr. Craven explained he had divested himself of all interest in commercial radio projects before joining the engineering staff of the commission.

Mr. McNinch was transferred from his position as chairman of the Federal Power Commission, being given a leave of absence from this post. The appointments were seen as a move to forestall a threatened congressional investigation.

Quota a British Boomerang, Says Alfred Hitchcock

The chief effect of the quota act proposed by the British government is that it will awaken a new American industry in England, Alfred Hitchcock, British director, said on his arrival from London this week. He is here on a ten-day vacation, his first visit to this country.

British independent producers will suffer from the act through their inability to compete with American producers in England, declared Mr. Hitchcock, who is celebrated for his "horror" productions. The American companies will simply produce their "English theme" pictures in Britain, he said, instead of in Hollywood. Major producers all have a few "English" pictures on their schedules and these will be produced abroad, profiting from the locale and accessibility of English players.

Mr. Hitchcock said that the minimum cost provisions of the act dictate the production of quality pictures. Under a minimum budget of $75,000 it isn't practical to produce "rubbish," he said.

English supporting players and labor alone will benefit from the quota provisions, the director continued, pointing out that American production will increase the market for their services at home and make it unnecessary for them to go to Hollywood to undertake inferior roles.

On his return to England, Mr. Hitchcock is scheduled to produce two pictures for Gaumont British by next May. The first will star Nova Pilbeam and will be placed in production in November.

He expressed an interest in going to Hollywood when his GB contract expires, but no definite negotiations with American producers have been opened as yet.

Gaumont British will release 12 pictures in this country during the new season, two of which will be produced by Gainsborough, its subsidiary, he said.

Mr. Hitchcock was accompanied to America by his wife, Alma Reville, the scenarist, their daughter Pat, and Joan Harrison, production aide.

Grand National At Birthday Peak

Grand National's production activities are at capacity for September, the first anniversary of the company's operation, with seven productions set to go before the cameras during that month.

The first will be "He Wanted to Marry." Others are "Love Me Again," "Tex Rides with the Boy Scouts," "Face the Facts," "Honolulu Honeymoon," "Wallaby Jim of the South Seas" and "Painter in the Sky."

The company has designated "Something to Sing About," starring James Cagney as its anniversary attraction.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers "Broadway Melody of 1938" is a gigantic musical extravaganza that should click heavily at the boxoffice.

Both previous "Broadway Melodies" are to be remembered for having developed new screen stars. The 1938 edition will prove no exception. There are no less than three whose performances here should carry them to the top. The sensational work of young Judy Garland causes wonder as to why she has been kept under wraps these many months. She sings two numbers that are show stoppers and does a dance with Buddy Ebsen. Hers is a distinctive personality well worth careful promotion.

George Murphy comes into his own at last. He plays his role with effortless ease, and his dancing is nothing short of a smash. No doubt that Murphy has arrived.

Sophie Tucker makes a debut that is surefire. A grand trouper and song stylist, she appears to excellent advantage all the way. She sings "Some of These Days" as only she can, and performs a neat chant in the finale. Her handling of dialog is excellent.

Singling out these three surprise performances is not intended as a reflection upon the work of others in the large expert cast. Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell are co-starred. Taylor is just as his huge following likes him, playing a romantic with pleasing humor.

Miss Powell has added warmth and beauty to her magnificent dancing.

Too much credit cannot be given the splendid production by Jack Cummings and the polished direction by Roy Del Ruth. Weaving the many diverse elements of this pretentious musical into such an entertaining whole called for adroit craftsmanship. Del Ruth allows no slow moments to halt the smooth pace. The piece is perfectly balanced.

Surprise For FDR

Eddie Cantor will fly to Washington next month to show "Ali Baba Goes to Town" to President Roosevelt. The picture kids the New Deal.

Jack McGowan wrote the screenplay from an original upon which Sid Silvers collaborated. Their plot is cleverly constructed of several themes that find backgrounds in the Broadway theatrical district and at racetracks. The writing job is a highly creditable musical comedy book.

Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed contribute five songs for the tuneful score. "I'm Feeling Like a Million" is smartly staged in the rain to feature a dance by Powell and Murphy. "Your Broadway and My Broadway" serves as an elaborate finale wherein the entire cast performs upon a glass staircase, a striking creation by Merrill Pye who did the musical presentations. "Yours and Mine" is a ballad that will endure, and "Follow in My Footsteps" is a fast dance number. Judy Garland does "Everybody Sing," by Brown and Freed; then a sock novelty probably called "Dear Mr. Gable," based on the well-remembered "You Made Me Love You." The patter for this was authored by Roger Edens, also credited with the excellent musical arrangements. The fine vocal and orchestra arrangements are by Leo Arnaud and Murray Cutter. Georgie Stoll's musical direction distinctively stands out. Well-conceived dance ensembles are by Dave Gould.

Buddy Ebsen is a shining light, both in his dancing and his comedy. A swell running gag has Charles Igor Gorin and the very funny Billy Gilbert as a couple of barbers, trying to collect money owed them. Gorin sings two operatic arias superbly. Binnie Barnes plays one of the few straight roles to score, and Raymond Walburn is outstanding as her husband.

Cast in small but decisive incidental parts are Robert Benchley as a polluted press agent; Robert Wildhack, delivering his sneezing routine; Willie Howard as boarding house waiter, a panic of a bit; Barnett Parker, scoring as usual; Charley Grapewin as a trainer; and Helen Troy, doing her telephone girl.

Photography by William Daniels is of his sterling standard, as are the montage effects by Slavko Vorkapich. Gowns by Adrian are striking, and bows are due Blanche Sewell as film editor, and Cedric Gibbons as art director, with Joseph Wright and Edwin B. Willis as associates.

"The Broadway Melody of 1938" will unquestionably repeat the success of its two former "Melodys," causing heavy traffic at the boxoffice. Exhibitors would do well to give heavy billing to Sophie Tucker and do plenty of talking about Judy Garland and George Murphy, as all three are certain new picture stars and the showman's build now will cash heavily for their later pictures.

"I'm throwing away the scissors and giving you every word of it!"

A big, glittering, variegated show, elegantly produced and parading an array of insured money names, this third annual edition of Metro's 'Broadway Melody' tops the series and will be a b.o. cleanup.

As in the 'Melody' of two years ago, Eleanor Powell and Robert Taylor, then newcomers destined to be skyrocketed by that picture, are again in the top bracket. Both here give their mature talents full play in persuasive romance and brilliant dancing as pace makers for a galaxy of show folk including George Murphy, Buddy Ebsen, Judy Garland, Sophie Tucker, Binnie Barnes, Robert Walburn, Willie Howard and ert Benchley, Raymond Walburn, Willie Howard and half a dozen others fitted with roles and specialties to their measure in the two-hour musical extravaganza.

Miss Powell is given wide latitude for her spirited and fascinating dancing and puts warmth and beauty into every rhythic routine, both in the the solos and in the duets with Murphy. She also stands forth as a splendid actress, skillful in her modulations and performing with appealing sincerity, a star by every right.

Taylor upholds his best standards in the love tale which dominates the proceedings, playing with accustomed ease and scoring with the peculiar appeal his name stands for in an elegantly tailored role.

George Murphy contributes his full share to the lavish entertainment in the hoofing numbers and performs effectively in the material story part alloted to him. Buddy Ebsen interpolates his languid drolleries neatly. July Garland scores in song and reads with fine ingenuous sentiment a girlish fan tribute to Clark Gable's photo—one of the novel scenes of the show.

Sophie Tucker puts over a solid hit in the role of an old Broadway favorite, playing herself. To the old timers she will bring a tear of recollection in her tribute to the phantom favorites as a prelude to the production number, 'Your Broadway and Mine.' Charles Igor Gorin delivers effectively several song classics. Robert Benchley gets a chance to flip in some of his characteristic dry quips as a publicity man

Binnie Barnes, Raymond Walburn, Charley Grapewin, Barnett Parker, Helen Troy carry parts of the story which has to do with the production of a Broadway show and the efforts of those who seek to thwart Taylor and his protege, Miss Whitney, from carrying the venture through. Miss Barnes is well cast as the wife of Walburn, the show angel, whose jealousy of Miss Powell provides the chief stumbling block. All carry their roles ably.

Robert Wildhack gets the biggest laughs with his sneeze routine. Willie Howard clocks guffaws with his trained dogs on a rampage in the theatrical boarding house run by Sophie Tucker. Charley Grapewin has a good short part as keeper of Miss Barnes' stables.

Jack McGowan ably integrates his many diverse entertainment elements in the screen play, from an original for which he shares credit with Sid Silvers. Story, romance, comedy and divertissements are well balanced with a wealth of material offering something for almost every taste. Much of the comedy and the thrills are provided in the race horse element which is mingled with the show venture for plot.

Major responsibility for the quality of the offering is the smart and knowing direction of Roy Rel Ruth. Expert and seasoned in the guidance of this type of musical, Del Ruth excels himself in collating and pointing his detail and the big production numbers for swaggering and sparkling effect. From his cast he gets top response, and the tempo, considering the multifarious ingredients, is well sustained. It is a decided coup for Del Ruth.

Jack Cummings has guided the production with an intelligent and lavish hand and adds measurably to his producer prowess in one of Metro's outstanding offerings of the season.

Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed supply a distinguished score of songs to give the piece color. 'Your Broadway and Mine' is a big sock number. 'I'm Feeling Like a Million' is diverting; 'Everybody Sing,' vocaled by Judy Garland and ensemble is musically exciting; 'Follow in My Footsteps' is rhythmically fine. The average merit is high. Sharing in the musical credits are Georgie Stoll for his splendid musical direction, one of the top merits of the piece; Merrill Pye for presentations; Roger Edens for arrangements and Leo Arnaud and Murray Cutter for vocal and instrumental arrangements.

Dave Gould's dance direction deserves special commendation, topping in the Powell-Murphy number in the rain, and the 'Broadway' finale, a strikingly picturesque creation. The art direction is notably fine, gowns are striking and photography by William Daniels and montage by Slavko Vorkapich of high standard.

(HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW) POWERFUL BOX-OFFICE MUSICAL STUDDED WITH FINE ROMANCE, DANCING AND COMEDY.

This is a grand load of entertainment and should click handsomely at the box office. It has a bright, cheery atmosphere, splendid dancing, romance and comedy. Roy Del Ruth's direction is tops, while Jack Cummings rates credit as the producer. Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, head the cast, and, of course, do excellent work, but the picture gives George Murphy and Judy Garland their best opportunities to date and they register strongly. Grand trouper Sophie Tucker scores, too, and delivers her popular "Some of These Days." Charles Igor Gorin sings two operatic arias in splendid voice. Buddy Ebsen, Billy Gilbert, Willie Howard, Robert Benchley, Barnett Parker, Robert Wildhack, with his sneezing routine, and Helen Troy handle the comedy material effectively. Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed furnished five songs, with "Yours and Mine" and "Everybody Sings" scoring solidly. Jack McGowan and Sid Silvers wrote the original story and McGowan the screenplay. Dave Gould deserves praise for the dance direction and William Daniels for photography. Eleanor Powell is given the leading role in the Broadway musical, which Taylor is producing, with Raymond Walburn as the backer. Walburn's wife, Binnie Barnes, is jealous of Eleanor, and at the last moment forces her husband to [illegible] his money from the show. How- [illegible] race, and [illegible] over the purse to Taylor, so that the show can go on.

B'WAY MELODY OF '38

Hollywood. Aug. 17.

Swell entertainment and will do smash business everywhere. Much better than its predecessor of '36, and not far behind the original 'Broadway Melody' of a decade ago which featured Bessie Love, Charles King and Anita Page. This one is red hot merchandise, with some blazing names for the come-on displays. Both stars, Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, have increased their voltage since their last joint appearance, and the supporting cast includes George Murphy, Binnie Barnes, Buddy Ebsen, and Sophie Tucker and Judy Garland. Special niche for these last two, who, with much less to do than the others, stand out like traffic lights.

Music and lyrics by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed are first rate, and will go right from the film to the air. Already they're enjoying wide etherization.

No use getting into the details until Sophie Tucker and Judy Garland are disposed of. Former is somewhere past 40, but when she walks on the screens something happens. You can hear what the others are saying, but Miss Tucker is the only one you see. It's as if all that energy of more than a score of years in vaudeville has been recharged and served up in one package. Then she steps back and pushes Judy Garland, still in her teens, into the camera foreground. Young Miss Garland gives them 'Everybody Sing,' with a Tucker undertone, and it's worth a letter to the homefolks. Coming near the picture's opening, these two give the film a great kickoff. Each does numbers solo later on. Judy sings a plaint to Clark Gable's photograph which is as close to great screen acting as pictures have furnished. Then, to top it off, Soph does 'Your Broadway and My Broadway,' with lyrics which bring in the great names of the past generation. It's sentimental enough to padlock every pineapplejuice joint on the stem.

Bright lights will give 'Melody' to Taylor and Powell. The audience hands it to Tucker and Garland. In combination it's okay b.o. Flin.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Broadway Melody of 1938

(MGM)

Musical Comedy

In common with the pyramids of Egypt, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and, to come a little nearer the subject, the late Florenz Ziegfeld's chronological Follies, the Broadway Melody brought forth annually by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is first of all an institution and secondarily whatever else a given edition of it may happen to be. For the showman to omit use of exploitation pressure upon the master title is or should be unthinkable, since mere mention of it sets certain tunes and images aflutter in ear and eye memory. However, this year, as always, the sponsors have supplied exhibitors with substantial additional material with which to work his box office magic upon the public.

The dancing of Eleanor Powell is again a prime factor and the name of Robert Taylor is an item of known marquee marketability. But this time there is also the powerful presence of one Sophie Tucker, the same and only one whose name has been ticket sales tonic for two generations, to tack up snugly alongside the topliners. There is also Charles Igor Gorin, whose air following is given a chance here to see, as well as hear him, and there is Willie Howard in a brief but advertisingly mentionable burst of characteristic comedy.

There are, too:

George Murphy, dancing opposite Miss Powell;

Buddy Ebsen, ditto and also clowning;

Judy Garland, singing one solo number in rafter-shaking manner and another a revival of the old favorite "You Made Me Love You," for a vocal response second only to La Tucker's;

Raymond Walburn, wheedled into backing the inevitable show;

Robert Wildhack, the incomparable snorer, sneezing;

Robert Benchley, drunk again as a Broadway press agent;

Billy Gilbert, brokenly voluble in a Greek barber assignment; and Binnie Barnes, under wraps, as Mrs. Moneybags.

Produced by Jack Cummings, the picture lacks nothing that money could provide to make it big. Director Roy Del Ruth's seasoned experience is evident in the cohesion of widely varied elements to the narrative thread. Original music and lyrics are by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Dave Gould's direction of the dance numbers is outstanding.

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

Broadway Melody of 1938

MGM Musical Drama 115 mins.

Here's a Box Office Banquet Done to Perfection and Ready to Serve For a Clean-Up

Cast: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, Binnie Barnes, Buddy Ebsen, Sophie Tucker, Judy Garland, Charles Igor Gorlin, Raymond Walburn, Robert Benchley, Willie Howard, Charley Grapewin, Robert Wildhack, Billy Gilbert, Barnett Parker, Helen Troy. Screenplay by Jack McGowan. Original story by Jack McGowan and Sid Silvers. Music and lyrics by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Director Roy Del Ruth.

Plot: George Murphy and Buddy Ebsen have jobs in the stables of the rich Binnie Barnes. There they meet Eleanor Powell, the former owner of one of Binnie's horses. Robert Taylor is producing a show on Broadway backed by the wealthy Raymond Walburn. Eleanor Powell stows away on the train which is transporting her pet horse to an Eastern track. She is discovered by Ebsen and Murphy hiding in the stall. They persuade her to dance with them, when Taylor, traveling on the same train, sees them and goes hook, line and sinker for Eleanor. He puts all three in a show and they are a sensational success.

SUMMARY: A glorious musical extravaganza "Broadway Melody of 1938" is a tremendous infusion of scintillating entertainment that should reach box office heights. Some of the sets are almost indescribable in their wealth of magnificent splendor. The music, the singing and the dancing had the preview audience gurgling with delight. Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell excellently top a cast of outstanding merit. George Murphy demonstrates his remarkable dancing skill in a performance that verges on the sensational. Judy Garland in her rendition of her songs captivated her listeners. She has charm and ability. Much credit must be given Roy Del Ruth for his smart box-office direction. For exploitation see Showmanalysis in this issue on pages 8 and 9.

Catchline: "Latest of 'Broadway Melodys' is a scintillating, star-studded musical extravaganza."

GENERAL RISE IN ADMISSION SCALE CONTEMPLATED IN PLANS FOR FALL

Higher Film Rentals Seen as Making Higher Theatre Prices Inevitable; Independents Expected to Follow Majors' Lead

Admission prices which, contrary to custom, were not reduced during the summer lull, will be increased generally early in the fall with the arrival of the new season's releases if the present tentatively defined plans of major circuits are consummated, and if independent exhibitors follow suit as expected.

Following flat statements by sales managers at conventions early in the summer that a higher admission price level is the only possible answer to increased production costs, national circuits are studying rates and situations with the prospect of advancing prices wherever feasible. No definite trend on the part of independent circuits and exhibitors to follow a similar policy in the fall is discernible at present, but it is expected that slight but general increases will be made necessary by higher rental demands.

Talk of "necessary" increases in admissions was general at conventions of the distributing companies in May and June, and production and distribution executives have publicly stated since then their belief that prices must advance, a claim which they justify by citing advances in production costs.

Kent and Zukor Cited

Strongest of the convention statements was that made by Sidney R. Kent to the Twentieth Century-Fox delegates, in Los Angeles early in June. "Cheap admission prices are the greatest menace to the film industry today in the United States," he said. Indicating that increased rentals might force revision of admission scales, he pointed out that employment was only about 2,500,000 below the 1929 peak and that there was more money in circulation than in several years past, but that the average motion picture admission price was still about ten cents below the 1929 figure.

That this attitude has not changed was indicated in recent interviews with the press by Adolph Zukor, Paramount production chief, and George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists. Mr. Zukor expressed the definite opinion that admission prices must go up and added, in explanation, that the continuing demand of the public for large scale productions, coupled with rising labor and other costs, has forced drastic expansion of production budgets. He said the industry was passing through one of those periods when costs rise sharply. The introduction of feature length pictures was the first of these, sound brought another, and now labor costs have introduced a new factor, he pointed out.

Cheap Films Thing of Past

"We can still make small, inexpensive pictures," Mr. Zukor added, "but our experience shows that they do us no good, and they do exhibitors no good. The public wants personalities. They're expensive. It wants big productions, made with the utmost care and skill, each an advance over its predecessor. These are factors that cannot be controlled. We can't go backward; we must go forward."

TWO STATES SET ADMISSION RECORD

During the first seven months of 1937, a new high record was established for attendance and net paid admissions in the 367 theatres in Washington and Oregon, according to Frank L. Newman, Sr., president of the Evergreen Amusement Company.

In Washington he said, 251 theatres grossed $8,277,750 while the 116 houses in Oregon grossed $5,003,250. Total attendance for the two states as 53,000,000. The grosses, Mr. Newman said, was a six per cent increase over the same period last year, 11 per cent better than 1935, and 20 per cent better than 1929.

During the interview Terry Ramsaye, editor of Motion Picture Herald, pressed the point that these increased costs were getting films away from the ten-cent customers, to which Mr. Zukor replied, "Ten cent customers won't go to see ten cent entertainment. That day has passed."

Continuing the discussion Mr. Ramsaye said: "But pictures are the only thing advancing in cost all the time. Automobile prices go down."

"Ford makes one model a year," the Paramount executive replied. "We make 50, and we can't repeat on any of them. I don't blame exhibitors for arguing about the price of pictures. It's a buyer's privilege; it's good business. But it's bad business not to recognize that if he is going to get the kind of superior product that will turn in profits, he must pay for it. The makers' and sellers' problems are the same in this instance. The ingredients of films remain the same; the treatment becomes more elaborate. . . . "

End of Duals One Answer

The abandonment of the practice of double billing was called the only alternative to increased admissions by Mr. Schaefer in a recent interview at the United Artists home office. He described the important productions listed for release early in the new season as the most effective weapon against double featuring, and continued:

> "The fact that production costs are mounting steadily, with many of the new season's product listed with a budget of over $1,500,000, must be answered with a tilt in admission prices or a departure from the double feature practice. A number of the leading exhibitors are favorably inclined towards such an increase and are planning experiments in strategic situations."

The United Artists general manager said that producers, in their attempt to give the public the finest pictures, must have their investment protected and have a right to expect cooperation along this line from the exhibitor. He cited color in particular as one important factor in increased costs and predicted that when this medium, with its tremendous additional expense, becomes more widely used the questions of double bills and admission prices will become even more serious than they are today. At least 12 of the 26 productions scheduled for release by United Artists in 1937-38 will be in Technicolor.

Circuits Plot Course

Present indications are that no blanket increase will be made in box office scales, but rather that, starting with the first fall upward movement of grosses, slight increases will be made in certain situations by the circuits for the purpose of testing public reaction. Admission prices showed a slow rise in many territories last winter and the new increase is expected to follow a similar course, with scales varying in each section of the country.

The Loew circuit already is trying out higher scales in a few spots and will base its fall price policy upon the results as observed. RKO also has been increasing its scales gradually where possible. Neither of these circuits lowered admissions for the summer, although it has been the usual practice to do so, particularly for children's matinees.

Operators affiliated with Paramount have indicated that a slight increase will be made, particularly in the Middle West. The Warner Philadelphia zone, with about 80 houses, has discussed the matter with independent exhibitors and is reported willing to raise prices if the opposition will follow. A general increase is expected in the fall.

At a four-day conference of Skouras theatre managers and officials, held in New York last week, it was decided to raise prices wherever competition is not keen and to endeavor to work out advances where opposition managers are sympathetic.

Scattered Increases Made

Reports from several cities this summer showed that the trend to higher box office scales has made itself felt even during the vacation months. Increases ranging from one to five cents went into effect in virtually every theatre in Memphis during July as the three per cent gross sales tax voted by the Alabama legislature fell due. Making no change in the night admission of 40 cents for adults, the three major downtown houses added five cents to their 25 cent adult admission for matinees. The Strand and several groups of suburban houses added one cent throughout entire scales.

Increases of from five to seven cents were in effect this season at Atlantic City, N. J., and across the continent, in Portland, Ore., 11 Evergreen houses and two of the J. J. Parker circuit announced slight increases following the signing of new contracts with union employees.

In Omaha, Neb., a new top for neighborhood prices was reached when Ralph Goldberg's Military increased its price to 30 cents, only ten cents under the downtown price. The general level for neighborhood prices in the city was generally raised this year, all but a very few charging 25 cents top.

What amounted to a practical raise in admission prices of the first run houses in New Orleans went into effect when managers decided to put the night schedule of 40 cents into operation at 5 instead of 6 p. m., as previously.

Talk of increasing admissions has been revived in Kansas City, Mo., many of the independents feeling that such a move is long overdue.

SEC IS CURIOUS ABOUT TECHNICOLOR STOCK RISE

Brokers Receive Commission Questionnaire Following Plan for New Issue

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Recent price increases and heavy trading in Technicolor stock on the New York Stock Exchange is understood to have aroused the curiosity of officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission, but SEC heads in Washington this week refused to discuss the matter. The report of the inquiry was coincident with the announcement of the company's plans for expansion necessitating the issuance of additional capital stock.

While it was not denied specifically by officials of the commission that a close watch was being kept on recent Technicolor stock developments, it was explained that a more or less constant scrutiny of the various stock markets is maintained under provisions of the law which are designed to eliminate manipulation, market rigging, corners and like practices.

In New York brokers were reported in possession of questionnaires, signed by Ernest Angell, regional administrator for the SEC in the district, requesting detailed information on trading in Technicolor stock from May 15th, last, to August 14th.

The stock has ranged from a low of 18⅝ in February to 33½, reached last week and was especially active in the week of May 15 to 21, with a turnover of 96,600 shares at prices ranging from 22½ to 31. The company has an authorized capitalization of 1,000,000 shares of no par value common stock, of which the latest figures show 745,372 shares outstanding. Of this figure, 120,000 shares are under option to Pioneer Pictures, an additional 19,000 shares to former associates of Atlas Corporation, and 10,000 shares to executives as compensation.

Inquiries "Frequent"

It was said at the SEC that inquiries are frequently made regarding unusual activities in registered securitties, in connection with which brokers are asked to report in detail any operations in which they were concerned.

In all such cases, however, the commission follows a policy of strict secrecy, in order to avoid any adverse effect upon corporations, officers, stockholders and brokers where it is ascertained that the movement of stock and prices was not the result of a premeditated effort to influence the market although, of course, the fact that the SEC is conducting an inquiry usually becomes known in financial circles.

Investigations of this nature, it was said, are usually undertaken by one of the offices in the field, and in the case of Technicolor the inquiry is being conducted from New York. So far as could be learned this week, no action has been taken in Washington and none is likely unless and until the field office reports that preliminary investigation discloses the desirability of a formal inquiry.

Participation Sought

Clarification of the plan by which Technicolor proposes to increase its stock by the authorization of 500,000 new shares was made by the company's president, Dr. Herbert Kalmus, in a statement to the press in which he said it was the purpose of the company to invite important producers in the industry to participate, thus adding their names to the several producers who now hold blocks of the securities. Dr. Kalmus said:

"The principal purpose of the proposed increase of authorized stock is to provide shares to cover options to producers in connection with contracts for producing groups of feature pictures. The basic idea is to invite all important producers in the industry to participate in the plan which is already in existence between Technicolor and several of the important producers.

"If, in addition to those producers who have already done so, all the larger American producers participated in the plan as contemplated, there would be issued to them options on approximately 225,000 shares of the proposed new authorization of 500,000 shares. If later these options were all exercised and all the corresponding stock issued, the stockholders of Technicolor would be in such a position that the issued stock of their company would have been increased by approximately 25 per cent from its present issued number of shares, for which their company would have received in its treasury some $5,000,000 of new cash and with every prospect that the business of their company would be doubled, if not trebled, beginning some time in 1938.

"And, moreover, what seems particularly not to be understood: after there has been used for the present proposed options plan approximately 225,000 shares of the proposed increased authorization of 500,000 shares, there would remain in the treasury 275,000 shares for the further purposes of the company, concerning which there are no immediate plans."

SOVIET PRODUCERS ATTACKED IN PAPER

An attack on Russia's motion picture producers was launched this week by "Izvestia," government newspaper, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Moscow. The paper's criticism of both the quality and quantity of the films produced was directed mainly at Boris Shumiatsky, head of the industry.

Changing production policies was stressed and, the article stated, any plan for a Russian Hollywood would be a waste as facilities are inadequate and there are too few directors to fill the production schedules which such an investment would demand.

U. S. Leads as Radio Buyers

The United States has the largest number of radio sets of any country in the world, owning more than half the total, according to a report of the Department of Commerce. Of the 56,225,000 sets in the world, the United States has about 30,000,000. The United Kingdom is second with 10,000,000, followed by Germany, 8,200,000; France 2,626,000; and Czechoslovakia, 928,000.

Radio Revenue Increases 28% For Half-Year

Radio advertising for the first six months of this year is reported at $65,426,432 by the National Association of Broadcasters, a gain of 28.7 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Elsewhere it was shown that fewer than 10 per cent of radio listeners could identify the products advertised, in a survey prepared by Royal H. Ray, advertising student at Columbia University.

Radio showed the greatest comparative increase of any major advertising medium during the first half of the year, said NAB.

Regional station broadcasting showed the greatest gain, rising 45.6 per cent over the first half of 1936. Non-network advertising rose 32.8 per cent.

Among types of rendition, "live talent" showed the greatest increase, rising 37.1 per cent. Transcriptions gained by 24.4 per cent, records 25.1 per cent and announcements 34 per cent.

Total broadcast advertising for the month of June declined 6.2 per cent from that in May, amounting to $10,611,913. Gross time sales for the month were 34 per cent ahead of the volume in June, 1936.

Farnsworth Quits Federal Theatre

William P. Farnsworth resigned last week as New York administrative officer of the Federal Theatre Project, a position he has held since last March. He will continue in office until his successor is named.

In his resignation, addressed to Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the Federal Theatre Project, Mr. Farnsworth asked to be excused on the ground that his "personal affairs have suffered from lack of attention." He expected to return to his law practice.

No More Expansion Planned, Says Robb

No further expansion moves are contemplated for the Robb & Rowley-United Theatres, Inc., the company formed recently in Texas following the purchase by United Artists Theatres Circuit, Inc., of a half interest in the Robb & Rowley chain, Harold Robb said this week.

Mr. Robb, together with his partner, Ed Rowley, will remain in New York a week for negotiations with Texas and Arkansas theatre men on product deals.

Mexico Buys Equipment

As part of its plans to attract tourists to Mexico, the government director of cinematography, Louis Ramos Alarcon, has contracted in Hollywood for $10,000 worth of camera and lighting equipment. The films will stress the natural beauty of the country and will be distributed only in the United States, it was said.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

"Gone With the Wind" might have gone that way in Hollywood but for Miss Annie Laurie Williams, a buxom blond Scotch lass who was engaged by the Macmillan Publishing Company to see what could be done about interesting the movie moguls in the novel, which already had brought its author, Miss Margaret Mitchell, many a penny on its 1,400,000 sales.

The story came out when the New York Post assigned its feature writer, Michel Mok to do a series of articles on "The Ten Percenters," those literary agents who collect ten per cent from authors on stories placed in the movies, or elsewhere.

The first subject tackled in interview by Mr. Mok was Miss Annie Laurie Williams, for the simple reason that she had tackled the job of selling "Gone With the Wind" to Hollywood after most Hollywood producers had turned it down, on the grounds that a Civil War picture did not stand a chance because Paramount had just released "So Red the Rose," and Charles Laughton had just delivered the Gettysburg Address in "Ruggles of Red Gap."

One of the first persons Miss Williams attempted to interest in the book was Ronald Colman, who was working for Dave Selznick —Miss Williams really had Selznick in mind— but she told Colman that the "Gone With the Wind" part of Rhett Butler was ideal for him. "I read him hundreds of dollars' worth of passages involving Rhett over the long distance telephone from New York," Miss Williams told Mr. Mok. "'Ripping,' said Colman, after every couple of pages. Sometimes he said 'Topping.' But that was all."

Miss Williams next called up Samuel Goldwyn in Hollywood. Mr. Goldwyn, she was told, was sick. For the next ten days she called the sickroom. "Is Mr. Goldwyn well enough to sit up and read 'Gone With the Wind?'" she would ask. They said no.

On the tenth day they connected her with Mr. Goldwyn.

"Have you read 'Gone with the Wind' yet?" she asked him.

"'Gone with the WHAT' yet?" he wanted to know.

"Have you read 'Gone with the Wind' yet?" she repeated.

"Gone with the WHICH' yet?" he bellowed.

Miss Williams wished him speedy recovery, and that was that.

Later, Miss Williams heard that Goldwyn asked Merritt Hurlburt, his story editor on the coast, to read the book. It was turned down, for which the boss is since understood to have rapped many a knuckle severely.

Dave Selznick's eastern story chief, Kay Brown, was "sold" on the book at the beginning, and Miss Brown went after Mr. Selznick so many times on long distance telephone that she finally wore him down. "All right, then," Selznick said in the last talk Miss Brown had with him. "If you're so crazy to buy it, for land's sake BUY it!"

Mr. Selznick paid $54,000 for the novel for filming. Already, he has received $5,400,000 worth of free publicity on his search for a Scarlett O'Hara.

Harold B. Lyon, manager of the Capitol theatre in Burlington, Iowa, was married the other day. The day before the wedding he was playing: "Married Before Breakfast." The day of the wedding his booking was "Meet the Missus." The day after the wedding he showed "It Can't Last Forever."

SCOOP!

For many years we have belonged to that select little circle of three in the industry who are not Kentucky Colonels. Now we feel even more exclusive, for we have been singled out by United Artists to receive an absolutely unautographed copy of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Great Goldwyn", word portrait of "one of the most incredible moguls of the motion picture industry", according to the frontispiece. As a matter of fact, our copy is one of the very, very few unautographed copies in captivity.

No, Gertrude, there won't be any "love-seats" installed when the old Capitol theatre landmark on Broadway—the "home" of Major Edward Bowes—installs new seats and decorations in the huge auditorium for its gala "20th Anniversary" on September 2nd.

A circuit of movie theatres in Great Britain asked patrons whether those double "love-seats," without an elbow rest between them, would be desirable. Most patrons don't want them. They apparently felt that comfort for their elbows was of greater concern than two hours of holding hands in the dimly lighted theatres. However, a fairish percentage of patrons did enthusiastically request the "love-seats" and they were installed in several sections of the theatres.

So, when Major Bowes started to plan the re-seating of the Capitol, he made considerable inquiry. Again a fairish percentage of patrons, about five per cent, favored a section for "love-seats." But, again, the elbows won.

Major Bowes at about this point was considering installing a "honeymooners'" section with the double "love-seats," until the usual women's clubs, quasi civic groups, parent-teachers' organizations and such pounced upon him with the usual strong opposition. There will be no "honeymooners' section" when the Capitol reopens for its gala "20th Anniversary" on September 2nd.

Any doubts about Mae West being a really rugged-rugged individualist will be dispelled with Paramount's announcement that Mae's next picture will be "Sapphire Sal."

The scene was a rehearsal for one of the last Shakespearean broadcasts over CBS featuring John and Elaine Barrymore.

Action, having nothing much to do with the play, was provided by a squad of still-cameramen shooting a Barrymore publicity layout for Life magazine.

Suddenly one of the flash bulbs exploded, and Elaine screamed the screams of a screamer.

But not John, the imperturable, the Barrymore of Barrymores (excepting Ethel). He, without flinching a flinch, turned slowly, looked at the hapless lensman, and chortled:

"Hah! You can't scare ME! I've been married THREE TIMES!"

The United States Department of Commerce has always felt kindly toward Hollywood's motion pictures because they are among the foremost factors in influencing sales abroad for American merchandise. The government has frequently credited Hollywood product with selling $100,000,000 worth of American goods annually, and only last month the Commerce Department set up a formidable structure in Washington, under Nate Golden, to further co-operate with America's super salesman abroad: the motion picture.

The extent of Hollywood's influence on American commerce can be attested by any American manufacturer. Bette Davis is shown in a Warner film using a garage whose door opens with an electric eye—and, pronto, South America cables to America for garage doors with electric eyes. In Macedonia, the local barber sees the wonders of the American barber chair. He orders one.

On the less serious side is the request received the other day by the Commerce Department for a spanking machine seen in a film comedy. Purely a figment of a motion picture cartoon artist's imagination, a child was shown in the cartoon stepping on a lever, which released a cat, which chased a mouse, which nibbled cheese, which gave off an aroma, which stimulated a meter, which spanked the child. They came, they saw, they wanted one.

They may be cosmocologists to Pat Hurley, but in movie studios they're known as make-up men.

PARAMOUNT UNFAIR, REPLY IN BOYCOTT SUIT

UMPTO Fights Injunction Plea of Distributor with Brief Asserting Agreement Violation

The fight waged by independent exhibitors, members of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, against Paramount for what is claimed was a breach of contract, continued this week with the scene of battle shifted to the courts where a long array of briefs detailing the claims and charges of both sides were under legal scrutiny.

The UMPTO, asking the court to vacate a temporary injunction granted Paramount which forbade boycott activities, sought not only dissolution of the order, but petitioned also that the court find the distributing company guilty of breach of its 1936-37 contract and of proposing unfair terms in its 1937-38 contract.

In its brief the UMPTO asked the court to:

1. Dissolve the temporary order enjoining the boycott of the independent exhibitors against the corporation.
2. Find that Paramount breached its contract made with the defendants for the 1936-37 season.
3. Find that the proposed contract for 1937-38 contains unfair terms.
4. Find that the statements made in the "exhibits" included in the original bill of complaint are true.

The exhibits were primarily pamphlets and circulars distributed by UMPTO. It is on these exhibits that William A. Schnader, former Pennsylvania attorney general and now counsel for Paramount, based his contention that:

"The defendants entered into a combination and conspiracy, as part of a nation-wide conspiracy, to restrain the free flow of interstate commerce in the distribution of the complainant's motion pictures . . ."

Benjamin M. Golder, former congressman, and Otto Kraus, Jr., counsel for the UMPTO, contend, however, that the burden of proving that the exhibits are untrue rests with the complainant.

Deny Anti-Trust Violation

The attorneys also contend that the boycott of Paramount for its failure to deliver six pictures which, it is charged, were on the 1936-37 contracts, is not a violation of the Sherman or Clayton anti-trust acts. Only if there had been a restraint of competition in the intent of the defendants, would the spirit of the acts be violated, the brief contends.

Previous court rulings were cited in the brief in an attempt to prove the defendants' various contentions. Among these was that "it is reckoned as one of the inalienable rights of the individual that he may trade and traffic and render service for any person he pleases, and may also, unless restrained by voluntary contract, quit doing either whenever it suits his pleasure or convenience."

The combining of exhibitors, the defendants claim, is legal.

"If the action of the defendants is declared illegal here," the brief continues, "then every co-operative buying organization must meet the same denunciation whenever it refuses to buy from a vendor whose terms are thought to be unacceptable."

Boycott Called Illegal

Paramount contends, however, that "when an individual ceases to act individually and combines with others to restrict the flow of interstate commerce, the combination is unlawful."

As evidence of concerted action, the Paramount brief points to the exhibits contained in the bill of complaint.

As for the UMPTO charges that pictures were not delivered, the brief stated that the complainant licensed only pictures which would be "generally released" during the term of the contract and that the pictures in question were not "generally released" during that period.

A further argument is that even if the defendants' grievances were right, there was no legal justification for their boycott because no trade evil existed which the exhibitor sought to correct.

Minneapolis Hearing Deferred

An adjourned hearing on another permanent injunction sought in Minneapolis by Paramount was postponed. A temporary restraining order similar to the one obtained in Philadelphia, has continued in effect.

On a card mailed to exhibitors by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, it is stated:

"No injunction can compel you to sign a Paramount contract or prevent you from pulling playdates."

It also stated the organization is planning a playdate cancellation week from September 5th to 11th.

MPTOA Urges Local Conciliation Boards

A proposal that local conciliation boards be established for the adjudication of industry complaints was advanced by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in his latest bulletin to members. He pointed out that he regards the proposal as of vital importance to the entire industry. The boards, he said, would preclude government and individual exhibitor litigation.

Mr. Kuykendall criticized the refusal of leading companies to adopt his plan and stated:

"We have exhausted every resource to convince the producers and distributors that they should co-operate with responsible exhibitors and with each other to provide a practical means within the industry of adjusting trade disputes, prevent abuses, excesses and injustices before they develop into litigation and legislation, just as a matter of good business for their own benefit as well as our own."

Fraud Charged

John K. Palulias, Steve G. Manas, Frank D. Sinclair and George F. Gourlay, all of Steubenville, Ohio, have filed suits against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Cleveland, and Nickitas D. Dipson, Batavia, New York, charging them with conspiracy to defraud. The plaintiffs ask damages of $2,000,000.

Warners Reject General Price Rise; Hold Trade Show

Warner zone managers, convening in New York Monday with Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres, for discussion of business during the past three months and the prospects for the immediate future, expressed themselves as opposed to an increase in admission prices as a matter of general policy. The present system of boosting admissions at the discretion of the individual managers will be retained, it was decided.

The meeting was held on the opening day of the company's preview of new season product at the New Amsterdam theatre.

More than 500 local exhibitors and their families attended the trade show at the New Amsterdam, which was one of 30 similar shows held simultaneously in key cities throughout the nation. Features shown included "The Life of Emile Zola," "It's Love I'm After," "Back in Circulation," "That Certain Woman" and "Varsity Show."

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, announced that the Zola film will be simultaneously opened in eight key cities at the end of the month—Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Toronto.

The preview of Warner product in Canada has been postponed owing to a lack of available prints at the Toronto and other exchanges.

On leaving for Canada this week, Mr. Sears also announced the closing of a national product deal with the RKO Circuit. He is going to Canada to discuss a film deal with N. L. Nathanson's Famous Players Canadian circuit.

Among those who attended the managers' meeting with Mr. Bernhard were Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Nat Fellman, Harry Goldberg, Stewart McDonald, Frank Phelps, Abel Vigard, Harry Rosenquest, Herman Maier and Frank Cahill.

The zone managers include:

James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh; John J. Payette, Washington; Herb Copelan, Atlantic City, and Howard Waugh, Memphis.

TROUBLES OF AMALGAMATED FURTHER CONFUSE OTHER BRITISH STUDIOS

Forced Sale May Lead to Cut in London Studio Rentals; Majors Reported Bidding for Plant Now in Receivership

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The news that a receiver has been appointed for the Amalgamated Studios at Elstree is causing considerable disquiet to the owners of other major British studios.

Amalgamated Studios, Ltd., was formed by S. H. Soskin, the Russian banker, uncle and backer of Paul Soskin, who has made a number of independent productions through its own unit, Soskin Productions, Ltd. The other directors are Major C. H. Bell, O. B. E., the consulting engineer to Paramount British Theatres and other interests, and E. A. Stone, a well-known London theatre architect. Major Bell and Mr. Stone are also associated in the London Casino in New Compton Street, the dinner-revue conversion of the Prince Edward Theatre. Mr. Stone planned the Amalgamated plant with the advice of Major Bell, the Soskins providing the preliminary finance to the extent, it is understood, of £100,000 ($50,000).

The actual structure of the eight-stage studio, with a large central administrative block, was completed more than six months ago. The opening date was originally announced for February and it was asserted Soskin Productions would make six pictures for Columbia there. A general expectation was that Metro-British would also locate at, and possibly invest in, the Amalgamated plant.

On a service basis, the studio was announced to plan an "all-in" charge registering a considerable cut in the rates at Denham and Pinewood studios, the only operating British plants of comparable scale. A few months ago there were rumors of an agreement among the three studios standardizing rental and service rates.

For many months the Amalgamated building has been a virtual derelict, standing complete but empty behind locked gates, without a sign of life or even a nucleus staff. One of the most general rumors in circulation is that the building would not be used as a studio at all, but was for sale to any industrial concern which wanted a factory for any purpose. Supporting this belief was the fact that the building was a shell, either entirely bare of equipment or only fitted to a very small extent. It is understood that a large consignment of American equipment is, in fact, still lying at the docks, due to the inability of the studio proprietary to take delivery.

The climax came when the large firm of contractors, Sir Robert MacAlpine, Ltd., which erected the building at a cost of £600,000 ($3,000,000) took possession in settlement of their claim by putting in a receiver. S. H. Soskin, it is understood, was unable to complete his deal with the builders owing to the drying up of finance for film projects which followed on the recent exposures of British production losses.

Discounting stories that the building is at present to be bought for £300,000 ($1,500,000), or half its cost, it is probable that the Amalgamated plant will in fact cost its new owners very considerably less than the amount actually expended. It is this fact which is causing disquietude to existing studios. If it were possible to cut rental rates in the studio as originally budgeted, it is plain that it is possible to cut them still more heavily if the capital investment is reduced by 25, let alone 50, per cent.

Definitely known is that several specific offers have already been made for the plant by unidentified interests, believed to include a major producing concern. No confirmation was to be obtained of the rumor that one of the interested parties was John Maxwell, of Associated, whose name had been mentioned in connection with the studio before its completion. Another story was that a trade group, which might include existing studio interests, was anxious to take the building over, for use on a straight service basis. Some probability is lent to both stories by the fact, first, that the existing (old B. I. P.) studio of A. B. P. is not regarded as fully up to modern requirements, and second, that the increase of large scale American production in England, under the new Quota proposals, might make a "service" investment a very profitable one. In general lay-out, in the opinion of experts, Amalgamated marks an advance over the best existing British studios.

Maxwell on Production

At the annual meeting of Associated British Pictures Corporation, when the record trading profit of over £1,250,000 ($7,250,000) was formally reported to shareholders, John Maxwell, the chairman and managing director, made several references to general trade problems in his survey of the year.

In regard to the new Films Quota Act he said A. B. P. shareholders need have "no qualms."

"The Government representatives, in shaping the proposed legislation, have always been ready to lend an ear to representations made to them by responsible members of the industry, and I have no doubt that the legislation which will finally be passed will be such as will both strengthen the competitive power of the film production side of the business and enhance the quality of the entertainment provided," he said.

In another passage, Mr. Maxwell declared:

Nearly All American Producers Ready To Produce for Quota Requirements

The eventual enactment by England of the new Films (Quota) Act, providing importation and domestic exhibition requirements far greater than those of the old law, will find virtually all of the American companies set for production in England to meet the stipulations of the new legislation. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers are already set; RKO now is negotiating for British production representation, and Columbia and Paramount are engaged in conversations pointing in that direction.

Warners and M-G-M will produce their own pictures in England. United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal will have their quota requirements handled by independent production organizations in England allied with the American company. Alexander Korda will supply the United Artists quota requirements. Robert Kane and possibly other producers working directly for the company will handle Twentieth Century-Fox's British production, while the C. M. Woolf interests, a Universal affiliate, will provide that company's quota.

Present indications are that RKO's British production requirements will be supplied by Herbert Wilcox. The company has no producer affiliation abroad and is not likely to establish its own studio in England, leaving an outside deal of the sort discussed with Wilcox as the logical procedure. Columbia is in the same position as RKO, but has negotiated no deal with an English producer yet. Its most recent British importation was the Edward G. Robinson picture, "Thunder in the City," produced by Atlantic Films. A quota production arrangement between the two companies for the future is not improbable.

Paramount's British plans have not taken definite shape yet. There is a possibility that the company may set up its own producing organization in England, similar to Warners and Metro's. There is also a possibility that the company's British production will be handled by an English studio, such as London Films. In this case, the studio would receive technical and cast assistance from Paramount. However, no final decision is likely until Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, who is now in England, and Adolph Zukor, who sailed for England on Wednesday, have made their reports and recommendations to the Paramount management and board of directors.

LOEW'S DIVIDENDS SAID TO TOTAL $9 A SHARE

Republic Stock Issue Gets Approval of SEC; Stanley Company Lists $3 Dividend

Net earnings of Loew's, Inc., for the fiscal year ending August 31, are expected to be $9 a share on the common stock, it is estimated by a company official. This includes the payment of an additional dividend of $3 on August 26.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., held August 24, the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on first preferred stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 15c. per share on the second preferred stock were declared. These dividends are payable on October 1, 1937, to stockholders of record at the close of business on September 15, 1937.

The Securities and Exchange Commission last week approved the stock offering by Republic Pictures Corporation of Delaware, of 1,316,000 shares of $1 par value capital stock. The underwriter, Hammon & Company of New York, will not offer the 800,000 shares to the public until after Labor Day, it was stated, owing to the poor market at this time.

Of the balance of the Republic issue, Consolidated Film Industries will receive 150,000 shares; Setay Company, 80,000 shares; and Cajo Company, Republic subsidiary, 225,000 shares.

At the same time the Stanley Company of America, subsidiary of Warner Brothers Circuit Management in eastern Pennsylvania, declared a $3 a share dividend on its common stock, payable August 25. The company has outstanding 904,846 shares of common stock, almost all of which is owned by Warners.

Monogram Pictures sought approval of a stock issue from the Securities and Exchange Commission of more than 650,000 shares of $1 par value stock.

For the 40 weeks ended June 3, Loew's consolidated statement showed a net profit of $11,714,722, which was equal to $85.68 on the preferred and $7.07 a share on the common stock. This 40-week net compares with a profit of $7,390,495 for the same period in 1936. On August 14, preferred stockholders, as of July 29, received a quarterly dividend of $1.62½.

The declaration by Loew's of the increased dividends is due largely to the tax on undistributed profits, it was said. The next action on the new dividends is expected September 1, when the next meeting of the board is scheduled to take place.

Annual elections will be held December 14th, with no changes anticipated in the executive board or directorate.

Nicholas Schenck, president, and Leopold Friedman, general counsel and secretary of Loew's, Inc., have returned from brief vacations. Dave Bernstein, treasurer, is scheduled to return from Carlsbad and England September 9. Al Lichtman, vice-president, is on the Coast and is not expected back for several weeks. J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and chief counsel, recently returned from a vacation in Europe.

BEERY SETTLES INCOME DISPUTE

The Wallace Beery-Internal Revenue Department dispute, which centered on two Eskimo walrus-hide boats, has been settled. Mr. Beery contended he had purchased the boats in Alaska as an investment. He planned to rent them to a studio, he said, but the investment disappeared when a swarm of rats feasted on the skin canoes and ruined them.

The actor insisted he should be permitted to deduct the cost of the boats. The government demanded $2,498. The case was settled for $866.

2 Circuit Meetings Slated; Others Held

Host to the Gibraltar Enterprises' convention this week, Denver will be the scene of two theatre managers' meetings scheduled for next week by Fox Intermountain and by the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region.

In addition, conventions were held or planned by several other organizations. The first two of three district meetings for Tri-State managers were held in Des Moines, Ia., on Wednesday, and in Omaha, Neb., on Friday. The third session will be in Davenport, Ia., Monday.

Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., has advanced the dates for its annual convention from September 21 and 22 to September 9 and 10. It will be held in Kansas City.

A three-day meeting of approximately 100 managers, assistant managers and home office personnel was concluded in New York by Skouras Theatres. Problems pertaining to the operation of theatres were discussed, and on the day after the convention district managers gathered at circuit headquarters to discuss budgets for the new season.

The Rocky Mountain owners and managers will have a two-day meeting in Denver. The first day will be devoted to business, and the second will be given over to a Screen Club picnic.

Fox managers will convene for four days, during which theatre management problems will be discussed, with Rick Ricketson, division manager, presiding.

MGM To Make "Whoppers"

MGM has closed a deal with Liberty magazine providing for the use of the first 11 winners in its "Whoppers" contest as material for a Pete Smith short subject. Judges of the competition will be Fulton Oursler, editor of Liberty, Fred C. Quimby, in charge of short subjects for MGM, and Mr. Smith.

Studios Confused Over Troubles Of Amalgamated

"Undoubtedly the last few years in film production have been disturbing, arising from the fact upon which I dwelt at length two years ago, that the practically unlimited flow of easy money into the hands of inexperienced producers would lead to considerable difficulties when the outcome of the pictures which they had made was realized. My fears were justified by the event, but the belief that these feverish and unhealthy conditions were passing away has been strengthened by recent experience."

Film - Variety Peace

Peace has been signed between Union Cinemas and the Variety Artistes Federation. C. F. Bernhard, managing director of Union, had announced that the circuit would abandon variety, which it used more extensively than any other British group, owing to the V. A. F. prohibiting "doubling," or the playing of two theatres by the same act, out of London.

It has now been agreed that there shall be a secret ballot of V. A. F. members for and against "doubling" in the provinces, the majority decision to indicate the future form of Union contracts with variety acts.

The Union circuit is also in conference with representatives of the National Association of Theatrical Employees, under the chairmanship of a Ministry of Labor official, in regard to wages and employment conditions on the circuit. Recently a strike of over 100 Union theatres was threatened.

Warners May Make "Majors"

Jack L. Warner, arriving in London on October 1st, is expected to give formal approval to greatly extended plans for British production by Warners, which Sam E. Morris is to shape during his coming visit, in consultation with Irving Asher, chief of the Teddington studio.

Addition of two stages to the studio is part of the plan, and Warners are also expected to embark upon a big filming policy, including American release, with Warner stars sent from Hollywood. Probably the present output of 20 pictures yearly, to take care of the Quota requirements of the Warner and First National distributing organizations here, will be reduced to 12 or 15 high priced pictures.

Bernhard-Hiscott Organize

C. F. Bernhard, managing director of Union Cinemas, and Leslie Hiscott, director of many British pictures, are at the head of a new company which will take over the Riverside studios at Hammersmith, recently occupied by Julius Hagen of Twickenham and previously by P. D. C., Ltd. Hiscott will produce and space will also be for rent.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Productions

Of 12 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, nine were approved for general patronage and three were found unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Broadway Melody of 1938," "Feud of the Trail," "Gangway," "Hideout in the Alps," "Love Under Fire," "Mystery of the Hooded Horsemen," "Raw Timber," "Schabernack," "Wild and Wooly."

Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Double or Nothing," "She's No Lady," "That Certain Woman."

"CONFIDENTIALLY . . . a telegram just came through from an M-G-M executive visiting their studios . . ."

He said:

"PREVIEWED 'BIG CITY' STARRING LUISE RAINER, SPENCER TRACY LAST NIGHT. IT IS ONE OF THE VERY BEST POPULAR TYPE PICTURES WE HAVE RELEASED SINCE MY LONG ASSOCIATION WITH THE COMPANY. I PREDICT BIG GROSSES FOR 'BIG CITY'."

(Confidentially, that's just the First Flash of M-G-M's Fall Fireworks!)

HOYT'S-GREATER UNION BREAK CALLED CERTAIN

Australian Industry Sees End of Five - Year Contract, Reviving Competition

by CLIFF HOLT
in Sydney

An extension of the five-year partnership agreement between Hoyt's and Greater Union Theatres is not expected by the motion picture industry in Australia, athough there has been no official announcement on the matter. Lapsing of the partnership in December will mean a renewal of the lively competition which characterized the two circuits' operations before the holding company, General Theatres Corporation, was formed.

While no announcement has been made within the ranks of the Hoyt's organization, it is known that executives and the staff of Greater Union have been told by the board that the company will be independent.

The outcome of each company's negotiations for film supplies is looked upon as the most vital issue at present. It is common gossip that during his recent visit to New York, Charles E. Munro, head of Hoyt's, received assurance from leading producing companies that they would sell to Hoyt's. However, it has not been stated whether contracts were signed.

Hoyt's definitely would have Twentieth Century-Fox and United Artists. It also is believed Hoyt's will sign with RKO and Universal. Columbia remains in the doubtful list, but Greater Union executives expect to close negotiation with Warner Brothers.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount each has key situations in the cities involved and would not be in a position to sell to either of the circuits. Greater Union probably would take all the British product available, except Gaumont-British and anything produced by its affiliated unit, Cinesound.

Thus it seems that Hoyt's would have only to secure either Warner Brothers or Columbia to be in a most advantageous position.

It is estimated that substantial increases in the basic wage throughout Australia will put another £13,000,000 per annum into circulation. With outstanding product promised from Hollywood during the next 12 months, amusement companies look forward to obtaining their share.

Signalizing his return from a trip to New York, Cecil Mason, general manager of Columbia, sold his company's line-up for 1937-38 to the Dominion circuits. New Zealand Theatres, Fuller Hayward Theatres, Christchurch Cinema and West Coast Amusements. More than 70 theatres were embraced in the deal.

George Griffith, Jr., circuit director of Hoyt's Melbourne chain of 40 suburban houses, departs shortly for New York.

SOFT BALL FADS VEX DIXIE HOUSES

A soft-ball craze in the South is providing theatres with the stiffest competition since the passing of the miniature golf fad.

Teams sponsored by local chambers of commerce, business firms and industrial organizations are organized into local, county and inter-state leagues playing nightly to customers ranging from several hundred to several thousand. The admission price is from 10 to 25 cents.

Barely a city in the Memphis-New Orleans area or the Richmond-Mobile section is without an intersectional game one or two nights a week. The games, played in well-lighted stadia, are providing particular concern for non-air-conditioned theatres, and even those with cooling devices are feeling effects.

Alabama Reports Eight New Houses

Reports on the construction of eight new theatres in Alabama since January 1st, this week raised the MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S survey on new theatres this year to 299. (See page 13, August 21st issue.) The cost on only one of the Alabama houses was reported and the estimate was $100,000.

The new Alabama theatres include the Princess, a Tony Sudekum project at Gadsden, which will seat 1,200 and which was built at a cost of $100,000; one at Tarrant, seating 700, owned by Waters Theatre Company; another Waters house at East Lake, and one at Fairfield; a 500-seat house at Bridgeport, owned by Robert Word; the Academy at Selma, built by the Wilby-Kincey interests, which also are planning to open a house at Tuscaloosa, and two houses at Gunthersville.

A complete list of all new theatres under construction in 39 states was included in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week. The estimated cost for the new houses was $19,000,000 and the estimated seating capacity was 228,000.

Warner Club Names Officers

Walter Brandt, Vitagraph salesman, was elected president of the Cleveland Warner Club at its annual meeting. Other officers are Vernon Pease, treasurer; Rose Pekarcik, treasurer; Charles Albert, vice-president and chairman of the entertainment committee; Helen Lynch, chairman of the welfare committee; Bob Cox, chairman of the membership committee, and Evelyn Friedl, chairman of the committee on contributions and loans.

Action on All Film Bills Awaits Next Congress Session

Although 22 bills affecting the motion picture industry were introduced during the last session of Congress, which ended August 22, not a single one of the measures was taken up in either the House or the Senate. Only one committee, the House Immigration Committe, discussed pictures at all, the subject being the Dickstein bill to bar alien actors. It failed in committee.

However, all of the bills introduced since January 5th, will remain alive and will not have to be reintroduced during the next session of Congress.

Except for occasional references to motion pictures, as in discussions of bankruptcy and one or two speeches on broadcasting, the film industry went unnoticed on the floor of the two houses. This was in marked contrast with previous sessions when long hearings on block booking, copyright laws and other problems were held.

Outstanding threats of the session were the investigation of the industry proposed by Representatives Hobbs of Alabama, and Dies of Texas. This got as far as the House Rules Committee, which proposed it should be combined with an investigation of the broadcasting industry.

One of the bills which was introduced during the session will be the subject of an intensive drive for public support in the fall, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, national president of the Motion Picture Research Council, announced. The measure, the Neely-Pettengill bill against compulsory block booking and so-called blind selling of motion pictures, is one of the main objectives of the organization, Dr. Wilbur said.

The price maintenance legislation which won President Roosevelt's approval as a rider to a District of Columbia tax act, will have no application to the film industry, it was stated in Washington.

Tax Measure Fails

Failure of the Chicago city council to pass an ordinance taxing theatre admissions last week was followed by a delay in an expected plan to increase theatre license fees. It is believed the city will double the present fees in an attempt to collect approximately $1,000,000 to help meet a $3,000,000 deficit.

Theatres in Seattle also are faced with an increased license fee for the coming year. As in Chicago, the plan is mentioned as a means of helping to balance the budget.

A move to obtain Sunday motion picture showings in Jackson, Tenn., received a setback when D. W. Luckey, city recorder, returned a petition ruling that it was void. E. L. Drake, exhibitor, declared the petition would be re-submitted.

Drops Negro Theatres

Louis Bernheimer has sold his interest in four theatres in Washington, D. C., catering to colored patronage, to his former partner, Frank J. Storty, general manager of the Alamo and Mid City Corporation. The theatres involved are the Jewell, Mid City, Alamo and Strand, all in or near Washington.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Detour Hollywood

Out of the East, the Middle West, over the pole from Moscow, through the Canal and up the coast, overland by motor, rail and bus they come in confident columns, each clutching the letter of introduction, the document of identity, the badge, brief or brochure that is to open for them the doors of a motion picture studio.

One in a thousand gets in. Usually he is a newspaper man. If he represents an unusually important newspaper, he gets on a set, but a circuit of the lot by automobile satisfies most.

Yet the 999 do not go away mad. They almost get in. Usually they apologize for having suggested such a thing. For Hollywood's publicity men, most of them more or less reformed journalists, are without peers in the fine art of implying no without saying positively. They've had plenty of practice in it this summer.

The Rush Is On

For reasons not very clear to anybody, and agreed upon by none, the annual inpouring of wouldbe studio visitors is up nearly 100 per cent from the 1936 high. This is no studio figure supplied for propaganda purposes. The hotels, apartment houses, bungalow courts, even tourist camps, are and have been, packed to capacity. The intersection of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street is as Chicago's State and Madison and New York's Times Square 16 hours a day, with drivers familiar with all the traffic laws except California's battling, bumper to bumper, for position. Natives say this is very unusual, unusual as the weather, in fact, which has been unusually good. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has issued no official explanation of either circumstance.

The polite young men of the studio publicity departments, to whose desks are routed, in time, all and sundry applicants, take all this in their stride. It is neither new nor news to them, although the current situation is complicated a bit by the necessity of handling groups instead of individuals or pairs. They have an interesting technique.

Their story to the visiting stockholder, if he doesn't hold too much, is the straight one about the inroads on talent time, which translates readily, with a bit of encouragement, into visions of reduced dividends. This is practically surefire.

Exhibitor Treated Differently

Their story to the visiting journalist, if his paper doesn't reach too many subscribers, is a patently confidential and personal confession that these other and manifestly unimportant applicants are getting the staff down, out of which, plus anecdotes, the visitor extracts satisfaction and hies himself home with material for an article, like this, which ought to tend to keep people away but doesn't seem to.

But the exhibitor is a different case. He comes, usually, armed with a letter from a sales executive of the company, usually phrased in something like the nature of a command, and he wants to see what he wants to see, not to hear about it. He is a buyer and knows it. Unless he happens to be a very timid fellow, which he generally isn't, something special is done about his request. (Don't all come at once.)

The story told the rank and file, the fellow who knows a fellow who knows a fellow, the lady whose cousin used to work for a man, the nice enough folks who happened to be in town and thought they'd drop in, and so on, is simplicity itself, disarming, and frequently true. It just happens that this and that unit, duly named, are on location, that this picture, likewise named, was finished last week, and that one will not start until next. Running time for this routine has been brought down, by careful editing, to an average slightly under five minutes.

Overhead Goes Up

Notwithstanding all of which, the visitor problem is far from solved, and loss of time, not to mention temper, temperament and temperature, has run to a fancy figure this season. And it is, of course, the stockholder and the exhibitor who pays the bill, in money, while the visiting journalist and plain citizen are paying in terms of lost illusion and, perhaps, a slight letdown in the quality of pictures produced under strain.

Frequently suggested, more in jest than seriously, has been a sort of community project, sponsored by all profiting parties, which would sustain a practical studio open to the public at a nominal fee, in which picture making would be demonstrated regularly, as motor car manufacture and other comparable operations are demonstrated at World's Fairs. Perhaps the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, now that the weather has been taught to behave itself, will do something about that some time.

Aural Cinema

On the way to a sun-kissed office this shimmering Sabbath morn (tch-tch) a journeyman observer of the Hollywood scene passes the CBS Playhouse flaunting a scarlet banner, bigger than most of those unfurled by the not at all moderate motion picture exhibitors of the area, proclaiming the broadcasting of the Texaco Town program at some undisclosed hour. Other days, other banners, and, elsewhere in the community theoretically dedicated primarily to the propagation of the motion picture art, other radio studios, but always, in sharp crescendo, is to be noted, willy nilly, the onrush of the cinema's young and none too gentle brother, a fellow dubbed, on such a morn, aural cinema, beggin' y'r pardon, please.

PARAMOUNT HAS 115 PLAYERS SIGNED

Paramount has under contract the largest number of players in the history of the company. 101 performers are under term contracts and 14 have one- and two-picture arrangements with the studio.

Speculating, a little pensively, as to how come and whither destined, a journeyman observer probes a bale of publicity releases atop a steaming desk, singles out those bearing the cryptic acrostics of a highly initialed industry, and learns that Hollywood is to have, this year, something like twice as many nationally broadcast radio programs as it had last year. To mention a few:

Al Jolson takes to the air September 7, as do Lanny Ross and Charles Butterworth, with Eddie Cantor following on the 12th. Jack Oakie resumes his collegiate nonsense on the 21st, and five days later Marion Talley lifts her golden voice to one microphone while George Jessel and Norma Talmadge pour a new program into another.

Big Names Start October 2

October's bright blue weather will be permeated, on the 2d, by Jack Benny's first program of the new season, by Joe Penner's ditto, by Jeanette MacDonald's ear filling obligati and something else and new by Rosalind Russell, all of which might be enough to keep certain types of people home from church or the movies, as the case may be, that evening—or might not.

On the 7th of the same month Bing Crosby, of turf and screen, brings himself and Bob Burns back to Kraft Music Hall, and the following evening Jack Haley introduces a new diversion of some sort, from which point on the press announcements become a little sketchy but manage to mention Phil Baker, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee and Irene Rich as among those to be radioactively present hereabouts come football days.

The foregoing is, of course, no workmanlike listing of things scheduled to come out of loudspeakers from Hollywood radio studios simultaneously with the things scheduled to come out of the neighborhood's motion picture plants. Nor is this skimming of the mail offered as more than it is, a quick sidelight on the trend in these parts, a skimpy suggestion of the strides, to use a word reiterated throughout the press releases, being made by radio in Hollywood. As such, and no more, the upsurge of etherial enterprise must be noted in the course of any complete or casual consideration of the Hollywood scene. As to what Hollywood itself thinks about it all, everybody in the motion picture business is too busy making motion pictures to say.

RISE OF JAPANESE HOME PRODUCT SHAVES MARKET FOR FOREIGN FILM

Increase of Japanese Releases Is Double the Decrease of Productions from Other Lands; Daito Goes Sound

by H. TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

There were 163 foreign pictures released in Japan in the first half of this year. This was a decrease of nine from the 172 of the same period last year.

Among the reasons for the fewer releases are the three weeks initial run of "The New Earth," Arnold Fanck production, the exhibitions of such Japanese pictures as "Osaka Natsuno-jin" and "Aiyenkyo" at the Imperial theatre, the fact that the Shochiku is showing first-run exclusive programs of foreign product, and the presentation of Japanese pictures on block program at Nippon Gekijo.

Ninety-two of the foreign pictures were released through first and second-runs of Shochiku circuit, while Takarazuka presented 91, at the rate of 47 at Hibiya Eiga Gekijo, 12 at Nippon Gekijo and 2 at Toyoko theatre. In addition, Takarazuka Company released 10 at its other first and second-run circuits.

The following shows the classification of the above total into 12 units of foreign film distribution in Japan:

Columbia	26	Paramount	20
Metro	19	Warner	16
Towa Shoji	15	Universal	14
RKO	10	20th Century-Fox	10
United Artists	8	Sanyei-sha	5
Toho Haikyu	3	Others	17

On the other hand, the total number of Japanese films released for the same period of this year is reported to have amounted to 275, an increase of 18 over the corresponding period of last year, and 43 more than the six months ended with December, 1936.

This increase is attributed partly to the large number of Japanese pictures produced by units in the Toho bloc (P. C. L., J. O. Studio, Tokyo Hassei, and so on), in the rivalry between Shochiku and Toho interests, and partly to improvement of technical equipment and methods in the Japanese studios.

Pictures which proved great hits as first-runs in the first half of this year, were, in order of release, as follows:

"Swing Time" (January), "San Francisco" (January), "The New Earth" (February), "The Plainsman" (March), "Tarzan Escapes" (March), "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (March), "Lost Horizon" (May), "La Grande Amour de Beethoven" (May), "La Belle Equipe" (May).

Daito Turns to Sound

Among the many producing companies in Japan, Daito long held its own as the only producer of silent pictures. Kyokuto and Zenaho, smaller units, turned to exclusive production of sound films a few years ago. There came, however, the time for Daito to forsake its conventional policy of silent pictures production. At the general meeting of Daito's backers and shareholders the end of May, changes were discussed in a preliminary fashion. Now Daito has adopted the Kohnoton sound system, starting this month. It also is reported that Daito will invest a considerable sum to change the Kohnoton Company into a joint stock company with the idea of enlarging activities to cover automatic film developing and other production processes.

With the number of Daito houses approximating 250, it is generally admitted that foreign pictures, particularly westerns, will find a more practical outlet into theatres of Daito circuit.

In any event, there no longer will be any theatre playing silent pictures even in small and out-of-the-way districts of Japan.

His Nine Attendances a Year

There is every indication that Toyko has the largest number of film theatregoers, as it has the largest number of film theatres in Japan. Yet a survey shows that Toyko residents do not go as often as they are generally supposed to do.

The number of theatres in Tokyo Perfecture is placed at 245. Suppose the number of annual filmgoers in Tokyo to be 57,450,000 as of 1936, that means an average of 640 patrons a day per one theatre. With two shows a day, the attendance for one show is calculated at only 320, averaging the figures from such big houses as Nippon Gekijo, 2,916, down to the very small one where a day's attendance totals 173, as registered at the Metropolitan Police Board.

It may be said, therefore, that in Tokyo the total day's attendance averages 16,000, and that there are 9.2 attendances a year by each of Tokyo's residents.

Aiding School Children

All the primary schools of Tokyo City now are using motion pictures for educational purposes, an idea long under consideration at the Educational Bureau of Tokyo Municipality. The municipality added to its budget for 1937 the sum of Y18,600, Y16,000 of which is for the purchase of motion pictures, exclusive of charges for installations and other items.

The city, with 35 wards, will be divided into seven blocks for the use of pictures, each block to have two or three film laboratories. One laboratory will be supplied with 20 reels of 16 mm. film, and the number of prints kept at each laboratory shall be sufficient to meet the demand of schools in the same block.

The Educational Bureau of Osaka Municipality has in mind the construction of theatres for school children, and is reported to have invested Y500,000 for the purpose. It is expected that the Y500,000 will be included in the additional budget for this year or in the budget for 1938.

The films would be rented out by the Educational Office, or purchased from producing companies, or supplied by Osaka municipality.

COLUMBIA SEEKS TO RE-TYPE PLAYERS

Columbia has started a study of its entire player list of 68 contracted performers with a view to retyping them according to their potentialities in future musicals.

The players will be auditioned and graded for singing and dancing talents by a board composed of Bobby Mayo, casting director; Morris Stoloff, music head, and his assistants, Ben Oakland, Paul Mertz and Mario Silva.

MGM, Federation In Controversy

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's expressed intention of constructing a new theatre in Amsterdam has led to a controversy threatening between the motion picture company and the Dutch Motion Picture Federation.

In 1935 the Federation determined that permission must be obtained from it before the construction of a new theatre. At the time there was considerable opposition from distributor sources, but the Federation's general membership voted approval of the recommendation of the managing board despite the objections. The measure was designed to halt the serious competitive situation which had arisen within the industry.

The plan was extended in October 1935, since exhibitors form a majority of the membership of the Federation. There are about 300 exhibitors and 30 distributors in Holland.

MGM has formed the N. V. Niger Co., with F. L. D. Strengholt, MGM manager in Holland, as its manager. MGM claims that the theatre has nothing to do with the film company.

The Federation management contends that MGM is attempting to drive through its plan to build the theatre, without regard to the regulations of the body. The Federation has declared further that MGM is the only company protesting the actions of the Federation.

The outcome of the controversy is still very much in doubt, with talk of a possible boycott against MGM being instituted by the Federation if the company persists in its present course.

U. S. Films Lead Finnish Market

American films dominated the Finnish market last year, 57 per cent of all films shown in Finland having been of American origin.

Of the 248 films released in the country last year, 142 were American. Warners released 31, MGM 27, Paramount 25, Twentieth Century-Fox 22 and Universal 8. American films often meet with censor objections in Finland, the board having expressed objection to gangster and crime films particularly.

Monogram Divides Michigan Area

Monogram has divided its Michigan territory in an effort to expedite sales and distribution. William Clarry, former general manager of both the Jacob Schreiber and Krim Brothers circuits, has joined the company to handle the eastern section of the state. The western and southern districts will each be managed by Burt Foster and Ralph Riskin.

Thin Ice

(20th Century - Fox)

Musical Comedy

The things the record of "One In a Million" suggest as appropriate to do in exploitation on behalf of Sonja Henie's second picture are precisely the things to do, but in spades. For Darryl F. Zanuck's men have added materially to the box office content of the first Henie vehicle and the young Nordic herself has been busy learning about acting and the language. Consequently, exhibitors are now given the pleasant privilege of informing prospective patrons that this time Miss Henie not only skates but skiis, and that her companion on brilliant flights down snowy slopes and in romantic clinches is her companion in the thousands of columns of newspaper space recently devoted to their association, Tyrone Power. Affiliated with them in their present adventuring are such independently marketable personalities as Arthur Treacher, Alan Hale, Leah Ray, Raymond Walburn, George Givot and Joan Davis.

The locale is again Switzerland, and again, of course, Miss Henie's skating is the prime ingredient with which are mixed, in greater number this time than last, materials in themselves, and as figures in a pattern, important. Miss Davis, for instance, emerging from the void that swallowed up vaudeville, contributes a pair of song numbers such as haven't been seen on the screen. Mr. Treacher's portrayal of the imperturbable man-servant is less explosive but as memorably a billable item.

Thrice during the 79 minutes of the piece, Miss Henie takes to the ice with 150 or more impeccably coordinated skaters of both sexes, executing background convolutions that would put a lesser mistress of steel runners on her mettle and do throw into beneficial relief the stark incredible competency. In between these displays and the purely narrative sequences, Miss Henie and Mr. Power and/or persons who look enough like them for lens purposes perform comparably on skiis. At other times they conduct romantic negotiations essential to the story without being gushy about it.

The story is about a prince who would marry a commoner and, through circumstances which conspire to make such a marriage diplomatically strategic, does so. Meanwhile the press has misinterpreted their association, government agents have blundered amusingly, a hotel has been saved from bankruptcy and divers other incidental issues have been dealt with, lightly but adequately.

"I'm Olga from the Volga," by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, appears, in view of audience response to the tune as sung by Miss Davis, the outstanding musical number. Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell are authors of "My Swiss Hilly Billy," sung with almost equal success by Miss Davis, and two other songs.

The screen play by Boris Ingster and Milton Sperling is from the play, "Der Komet," by Attila Orbok, and picturegoers who insist upon logic, even in comedies, owe these gentlemen, Associate Producer Raymond Griffith and Director Sidney Lanfield a standing vote of thanks for resolving reasonably the long unsolved riddle of the regal romantic.

The picture was previewed August 20th at the Alexander theatre in Glendale, California, with most of the cast, many company executives, the usual quota of journalists and a substantial company of preview-hardened payees on hand and, at the start, dubious if not defiant about the results of trying to recapture the spell of "One In a Million." One hour and twenty minutes later everybody was telling everybody else that the first Henie picture had been only a curtain raiser.—William R. Weaver.

Produced and distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox, Darryl F. Zanuck in charge of production. Associate producer, Raymond Griffith. Director, Sidney Lanfield. Screen play by Boris Ingster and Milton Sperling. Play by Attila Orbok. Music by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell; Mack Gordon and Harry Revel. Dances staged by Harry Losee. Assistant director, William Forsyth. Film editor, Robert Simpson. Photographed by Robert Planck and Edward Cronajer. P. C. A. Certificate No. 3439. Release date, September 3, 1937. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 79 minutes. General audience classification.

The Life of the Party

(RKO Radio)

Musical Comedy

A quick look at the appended cast listing will suggest a far-flung placarding of its screen and radio names as the simplest and surest way of attracting their several separate and substantial followings to the ticket wicket. A look at the picture suggests, as an additional measure, that the placarding be rigged to include the information that Joe Penner and Parkyakarkus play both themselves and their roles in the picture, the neatest trick of the week, and that the other profitably mentionable personalities are never buried deeply beneath cloaking characterizations either. If there is space left, there should be mentioned that, in spite of all this, the story stands up as a brisk, rounded, fresh and substantial fictional background for the talents superimposed upon it, the exploitation job may be considered pretty thoroughly attended to.

Although Joe Penner is given top studio billing, and sings the title song as well as making himself, generally, more effective than heretofore, Gene Raymond's is in reality the central role. It is a suave assignment more to his measure than many he has had and he glides through it with grace and ease that should entrance the feminine legions inspired to attendance by his recent matrimonial publicity. Opposite him is Harriet Hilliard, of the air waves, who sings, alone with him, a number of songs such as her radio public will expect to hear. Victor Moore and Helen Broderick entertain in typical comedy. Parkyakarkus is a house detective named Parkyakarkus and Joe Penner of the Park Avenue Penner radio program is cast as Joe Penner of the Park Avenue Penners. All these convenient arrangements give everybody a chance to be himself and that is, in extraordinary degree, the way to advertise him.

The story is about a young millionaire who meets a young socialite masquerading as a professional singer and, after many and mainly amusing complications, marries her. A private detective, a booking agent, a band leader, a truant Park Avenue playboy, a hotel detective, a tap dancer and assorted others have more or less to do with the young people's affairs in the tuneful interim. There is a single production number near the close of the picture, half a dozen songs and dances occurring where they happen to in the earlier portions.

The work is an Edward Kaufman production directed by William A. Seiter from a screen play by Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby and Viola Brothers Shore based upon a story by Joseph Santley. Five of the songs are by Herbert Magidson and Allie Wrubel. Mr. Magidson collaborating with George Jessel and Ben Oakland on the sixth.

"Bad Guy"

(MGM)

Melodrama

That there are such things as introvert degeneracy and moral imbecility concealed sometimes behind a front of wholesome virility, the daily headlines bear witness. "Bad Guy" is another Bruce Cabot attempt to show that some individuals, regardless of environment, are "born-to-be-bad."

The screen play by Earl Felton and Harry Ruskin is adapted from an original by J. Robert Bren, Kathleen Shepard and Hal Long, and provides a melodrama built around the activities of the "trouble-shooting" gang for a power and light company. Bruce Cabot and Edward Norris are cast as "Lucky" Walden and Steve Carroll, members of the trouble-shooting gang, who have been buddies since childhood. "Lucky" is sentenced to death for cold blooded murder, has the sentence commuted, and later wins parole for bravery displayed in a prison yard accident. Steve remains loyal to his buddie despite Lucky's recklessness and utter lack of honor in stealing the love of Kitty (played by Virginia Grey) from Steve. Lucky breaks parole and is put in jail. Steve helps him escape. Lucky is killed by a high power wire in a melodramatic scene at the power house. Though Steve faces a jail sentence for aiding Lucky, he and Kitty are reunited.

There are definite exploitation suggestions in the heredity versus environment angle and in the realistic laboratory demonstrations of million volt power. Comedy relief is provided by Cliff Edwards, Charley Grapewin and Warren Hymer.

Previewed at the Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles August 19. Perhaps the sombre tone of the story accounts for the lack of obvious audience reaction.—VINCENT ALLABAN.

Gangway

(Gaumont British)

Musical

Against a rapidly shifting background that includes a London newspaper office, a trans-Atlantic liner and a New York cabaret, Jessie Matthews is given ample opportunity to display her singing and dancing ability.

As a motion picture critic for a London paper, Miss Matthews yearns to cover page one news: huge fires, gangster wars, murder mysteries and important jewel thefts. However, she is assigned to obtain the diary of a tempermental motion picture actress who is visiting in London. Barry Mackay, as a Scotland Yard inspector, suspects the actress of being an international jewel thief.

Both sail for New York and Miss Matthews is mistaken by Nat Pendleton, gangster, for the real thief. She also is suspected by the inspector. After provision is made for Miss Matthews to dance and sing, the climax arrives with her foiling the attempted theft of a diamond necklace. The gangsters are herded off to jail and the two visitors from London hurry off to a justice of the peace.

All Over Town

(Republic)

Comedy

The Messrs. Olsen and Johnson have literally "played before all the crowned heads of Europe" and knocked them out into the aisles in their vaudeville tours. They have bowled over house attendance records from here to there with their particular brand of belly laugh provoking antics and gags. They are still among the tops on the road of the almost vanished tribe of vaudevillians, and they bring droves to theatres where they play in person, all of which is useful exploitation information.

But, unfortunately, their style of humor is not best brought out in "All Over Town," their second cinematic attempt for Republic. It is hard to capture the entire mood of the Olsen-Johnson stage antics, in some of which they employ about 30 stooges to work in the audience. The material afforded them in the story is not altogether adequate to display efficiently all their talents, although it seems likely that their special fans will go for it.

The preview audience at the Fairfax Theatre, in Hollywood, was not excited. That was explained by Mr. Leonard Fields, producer of the picture, who said that while the Fairfax audiencee didn't get belly laughs from the film, sneak preview audiences in small communities did.

The story is a pot pourri of vaudevillians on their uppers, a stage show, a radio broadcast, a plot to steal a theatre from the heroine, a murder, the antics, in cinema style, of Olsen and Johnson which can be best described as a combination of Charlie Chase, The Three Stooges and the Marx Brothers, a gunfight between the murderer and the police, and the stunts of a trained seal. It is variation 3CZ of Filmusical Plot No. 1 (without music) which can be simply told by saying it is about an impecunious producer, or producers, trying to produce a show.

Produced and distributed by Republic. Associate producer, Leonard Fields. Directed by James Horne. Original story by Richard English. Screenplay by Jack Townley and Jerome Chodorov. Comedy construction by James Parrott. Photographed by Ernest Miller. Supervising editor, Murray Seldeen. Film editor, Howard O'Neill. Musical director, Alberto Colombo. Roaring Timber

Action

While the title may convey the idea nothing but timber roars in this picture, this is erroneous. Everything roars. Jack Holt, as a logging boss, roars when he believes he is being doublecrossed out of a bonus he was promised for supervising the cutting of an enormous volume of timber for delivery in 60 days. He roars again when a roaring forest fire rages, again when a trestle cracks under the weight of a locomotive and sends three men to their death, still again when a dam gives way, and once more when he learns the owner of the camp, Grace Bradley, had no intention of not paying the bonus.

There are a number of other roaring incidents, one in which the hero does not even take part. This is when the loggers, loyal to Holt who has quit, refuse to work under the new boss, who is one of the two villains in the film. He hires inexperienced loggers but the old employees refuse to permit them to work and there is a roaring free-for-all.

The contract is the basis for all of the action. J. Farrell MacDonald, as the owner of the logging company, makes the contract and hires Holt. But before the picture has gone very far, MacDonald is killed in an automobile accident and his daughter takes over the reins. Goaded on by the agent of a rival company, Holt is led to believe he will not receive the bonus promised by the new owner's father.

He lets work lag and is handicapped by numerous accidents, both planned and unplanned. But, of course, with a last desperate drive, he succeeds in sending the last of the "Roaring Timber" down the roaring river.

Seen at the Rialto Theatre, New York, where steady patrons always expect to see pictures loaded with action. "Roaring Timber" seemed to satisfy a large afternoon crowd. There was a smatter of applause each time the hero's actions brought satsifactory results.—R. B.

Frozen Affair

(RKO Radio)

Ice Carnival

Produced by Condor Pictures for RKO release this introduces Evelyn Chandler, acrobatic ice skating champion, doing her routine for the benefit of theatre audiences. Teamed with Miss Chandler is Bruce Mapes, professional figure skater, and setting off the performance of the two is a ballet of girl skaters. A thread of a story, concerning an ice fan's infatuation for Miss Chandler but never able to get close enough to her to make it known, permeates the proceedings but is entirely incidental to the dominating factor, which is the skating of Miss Chandler. An interesting and different subject, this should be found generally pleasing and especially so for ice skating enthusiasts. Directed by Arthur Dreifus. Running time, 10 minutes.

Mickey Mouse

Cleaning a huge clock located in the tower of a skyscraper is precarious work in itself but Mickey Mouse also has to contend with Donald Duck and the Goof. To Donald is entrusted the job of cleaning the main spring which has a tendency of becoming unhinged much to the exasperation of the duck. The Goof's chief concern is finding some stationary object on which to get a toe hold as he plunges through space with Mickey coming to the rescue in critical moments. The three of them eventually wind up on the balance wheel where they sway in clocklike rhythm. Running time, 8 minutes.

SCOTCHMEN LIKE STAR PORTRAITS

More than 30 million portraits of motion picture stars have been distributed in Scotland, according to David Donald, correspondent for the Thomson-Leng Publications of Dundee, Scotland, who recently was a visitor in Hollywood.

"When we originally made our offer to supply stars' portraits to all those who requested them," Mr. Donald said, "we had no conception that the demand would be so large."

Clark Gable, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, "won" individual honors, Mr. Donald said; six and a half million portraits of Mr. Gable have been distributed.

$5,500,000 Boost Asked by the AFM

Request for an increase in musicians' payroll of $5,500,000 was voiced by Joseph N. Weber, American Federation of Musicians head, at a meeting with six representatives of independent-owned but network-affiliated stations in New York this week.

In the five hours devoted to the question Mr. Webber asked the stations to increase the basic wage now paid musicians by three and one-half times the quarter-hour rate.

As outlined by Mr. Weber, this would result in the re-employment of 3,000 union musicians in the country and would increase musicians' wages by an estimated $5,500,000.

The proposal was brought before the convention of the broadcasters, at the Waldorf-Astoria, by the committee which met with Mr. Weber, but their action on it is not yet known. It is expected that the question will be decided by September, at which time the whole conflict between the musicians and the broadcasters is expected for final settlement.

$30,000,000 Budget Set by Zukor

Paramount will spend approximately $30,000,000 on 50 to 52 features planned for release during the 1937-38 season, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, said on his departure Wednesday for a combined business and pleasure trip abroad.

While in England, Mr. Zukor will survey the production prospects for Paramount in that country. He will also confer with Herbert Wilcox, London producer, in resumption of the discussions held with Mr. Wilcox for a possible production alliance.

MGM Negotiates for Anna Sten

Grand National this week announced that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is negotiating with it for the loan of Anna Sten to play opposite Edward G. Robinson in "The Last Gangster." GN point out, though, that Miss Sten probably will not be available unless MGM postpones filming its picture.

The Afga-Ansco raw film company will occupy September 1st its new building in Hollywood at Santa Monica Boulevard and Cole Avenue. The new quarters will house the coast general offices of the corporation, research laboratories and the headquarters of C. King Charney, Inc., distributors.

"Firefly" Roadshow Opening

"The Firefly," MGM operetta, opens August 31st at the Astor, New York, as a two-a-day feature. The picture stars Jeanette MacDonald and is based on the stage production by Rudolf Friml and Otto Harbach.

Disagreement over price has resulted in negotiations for the purchase of seven Leff-Meyers theatres by Sam Strassberg being abandoned.

U.S. WARNS FILM EMPLOYERS OF FINES ON SECURITY TAX DEFAULTS

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Issues Statement to Clarify Points After Indication of Delinquencies

Indications of a large number of delinquencies in the motion picture business on tax payments due the Government under the Social Security Act prompted the United States Treasury recently to warn film employers of "drastic penalties" now piling up against the delinquents.

"Clarifying some of the points in the Act about which they may be uncertain," Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in a special order issued for motion picture employers, pointed out that every person employed in the motion picture industry, in production, distribution and exhibition, and allied lines, came under the provisions of Title VIII, which imposes an income tax on the wages of every taxable individual and an excise tax on the payroll of every employer of one or more persons. This tax is payable monthly at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in the federal district in which the business of the employer is located. The present rate for employer and employee alike is one per cent of the taxable wages paid by the employer and received by the employee.

Of importance to production is the ruling that actual money, when paid as wages, is not necessarily the sole basis on which the tax is levied. Goods, clothing, lodging, if a part of compensation for services, are wages and a fair and reasonable value must be arrived at and become subject to the tax. Thus, there immediately arises the status of goods, clothing and lodging given actors and actresses in Hollywood, including the lodging given players on location. If the producer figures such goods, clothing (for filming) and lodging as part of compensation for services, then apparently they must be considered taxable under the Social Security Act as part of actual cash wages paid.

Commissions Taxable

Commissions on sales and bonuses paid to employees by employers are declared wages and are taxable. This would include commissions and bonuses paid to distributors' salesmen, which, so far as can be determined, have not hitherto been considered taxable under this Act.

Officers of motion picture production, distribution and exhibition or otherwise, whether or not receiving compensation, are considered by the Treasury Department to be employees for the purpose of Social Security taxation.

Wages paid during sick leave or vacation or advances paid at dismissal are taxable.

Traveling expenses required by motion picture or other salesmen in the film business are not considered wages if the salesmen, by receipts or otherwise, account for their reasonable expenditures. That part for which no specific accounting is made is construed as a wage and is taxable. The Treasury Department at any time may question the "reasonableness" of such expense payments and expenditures.

Under Title IX of the Act, all motion picture employers of eight or more persons must pay an excise tax on their annual pay roll. This tax went into effect on Jan. 1, 1936, and tax payments were due from the employers and the employers alone—not employees—at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue on the first of this year. This tax is payable annually, although the employer may elect to pay it in quarterly installments.

Responsible for Collection

The employer is held responsible for the collection of his employee's tax under Title VIII, the Commissioner explained, and is required to collect it when the wages are paid the employee, whether it be weekly or semi-monthly. Once the employer makes the one per cent deduction from the employee's pay, he becomes the custodian of federal funds and must account for them to the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

This is done, Mr. Helvering said, when the employer makes out Treasury form SS-1, which, accompanied by the employee-employer tax, is filed in the month directly following the month in which the taxes were collected. All tax payments must be made at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in the district in which the employer's place of business is located.

Penalties Against Employer

Penalties for delinquencies are levied against the employer, not the employee, the Commissioner pointed out, and range from five per cent to 25 per cent of the tax due, depending on the period of delinquency. "Criminal action may be taken against those who willfully refuse to pay their taxes," it was said.

The employers of one or more persons are also required to file Treasury forms SS-2 and SS-2a. Both are informational forms and must be filed at Collectors' offices at regular quarterly intervals. Form SS-2 will show all the taxable wages paid to all employees and SS-2a the taxable wages paid each employee.

Participation in a state unemployment compensation fund, approved by the Social Security Board, does not exempt employers from the excise tax under Title IX, Commissioner Helvering said. Nor does the fact that there is no state unemployment compensation fund relieve the employer of his federal tax payments. In those states where an unemployment compensation fund has been approved, deductions up to 90 per cent of the federal tax are allowed the employer who already has paid his state tax. These deductions are not allowed unless the state tax has been paid.

Rate One Per Cent

This tax is due in full from all employers in states having no approved fund. The rate for 1936 was one per cent of the total annual pay roll containing eight or more employees, and for 1937 it is two per cent. The rate increases to three per cent in 1938 when it reaches its maximum. The annual returns are made on Treasury from 940.

An employer who employs eight or more persons on each of 20 calendar days during a calendar year, each day being in a different calendar week, is liable to the tax. The same persons do not have to be employed during that period, nor do the hours of employment have to be the same.

CONVICT FAILS IN "GANG BUSTERS" SUIT

The action of a convicted murderer to enjoin the radio program, "Gang Busters", from dramatizing his case over the air was denied in Chicago district court last week. The case again established the right of freedom of speech to commercial broadcasting as an entertaining medium.

Martin Durkin, now serving sentence for murder, brought the action against Columbia Broadcasting Company and Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, broadcaster and sponsor, respectively, of the program. His contention was that dramatization would endanger his chances for parole.

The decision handed down by Federal Judge LeRoy J. Adair ruled that sponsored radio has the same privilege of relating facts and mentioning names as newspapers.

3 Plans Weighed For Divestment Of ERPI by WE

Three plans are under consideration for the divestment by Western Electric of the physical aspects of the theatre sound equipment sales and service operations of its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, Inc. Although no plan has been decided upon, the acquisition of the business by officers and leading sales executives of Erpi is indicated. In any case, the divestment is expected to be completed within the next two months.

Under the first plan, Western Electric would sell a license, probably for $1, to a new national company which would in turn sell sales franchises to sub-units headed by and operated by the individuals, who would do their own financing.

The second plan is to sell franchises to circuits and groups of exhibitors, while the third idea under consideration is to give the company outright to employees of Erpi.

Regardless of which plan is adopted, it is expected International Projector Corporation will acquire the rights to manufacture Western Electric soundheads and incorporate them directly in their Simplex projectors at their own factories.

RCA officials have declined to comment on a report that RCA Photophone servicing would be taken over by the organization acquiring Erpi.

Wurtzel Signs Four Directors

Sol Wurtzel, executive producer for Twentieth Century-Fox, has signed four directors for new pictures soon to be produced under his supervision. They are Alfred Werker, Bruce Humberstone, Eugene Forde and Frank Strayer.

STRIDES MADE IN EAST BY FILM ACTORS GUILD

Membership on Rise, with Gains Made in Behalf of Extras; Directors Guild Hits Snag

Organization of motion picture workers continues its march forward with the Screen Actors Guild making rapid strides in eastern studios with victories won in minor skirmishes on the West Coast. At the same time the newly formed Screen Directors Guild was informed by major producers that bargaining would be agreeable, providing the directors and assistant directors did so as separate groups.

The Screen Actors Guild's eastern membership soared impressively upon the Guild's achievement of the usual dress-extra pay for some 100 extras working in Republic's musical, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" at the Biograph studio. Extras signed hurriedly after being told that they would not be permitted to work on the Republic or Al Christie sets unless they joined the Guild. A contract with Educational Pictures is said to be imminent.

The Guild expects its ultimate eastern membership to be between 400 and 500.

The eastern branch is also assisting its West Coast missionaries by signing up new talent in the East before they leave for the Coast to fulfill contracts. Agents are assisting in this so that there will be no stoppage in work for the new faces on their arrival in Hollywood.

Wins Paramount Dispute

Meanwhile in Hollywood, the Guild won from Paramount its demand that two checks be issued to players appearing in two separate productions on the same day. It was the Guild's first conflict with the company.

In a letter to the Screen Directors Guild, a board representing all the major producers, consisting of Darryl F. Zanuck, Jack Warner and Edward J. Mannix, expressed willingness to begin negotiations at once, but insisted that it be done with directors as one group, and fledgling directors as another.

"Negotiations which directly or indirectly place these two groups in the same position is illogical and would be destructive of the character of the relationship that should exist between the two groups," the letter stated.

Characterizing the producers' stand as one designed to force the Guild's dissolution, the directors' group addressed a reply to the producers, castigating them for attempting to thwart the stipulations of the Wagner act.

Exchanges Grant Increase

In New York, exchange employees also won a victory when their union obtained a contract from the local exchanges of eight major distributors providing for wage increases estimated at from 10 to 45 per cent. The agreement calls for a minimum of $24 for day workers and is effective immediately.

Negotiations between projectionists and major theatre circuit executives are in progress in New York. C. C. Moskowitz, Marvin Schenck, Loew's; Leslie E. Thompson, RKO; Robert Weitman, Paramount; Irving Lesser, Roxy; Frank Phelps, Warner Brothers, and Al Reid, Si Fabian Circuit, are representing the circuit men in the discussions with Local 306 of the IATSE and MPMO. Among those representing the union is Louis Krause, assistant to George E. Browne, president of IATSE.

STRIKERS OBTAIN FOOD WITH STRING

Bernard Satensberg and Robert Hinson, projectionists at the Cameo theatre, the Bronx, New York, determined to strike for shorter hours and higher wages, decided to apply the the "sit-down" method in the projection room. The strike had lasted two days when the two men discovered they were facing a food shortage. The problem was solved with a piece of string. Climbing out on the marquee, they lowered the string and hoisted up food parcels supplied by friends.

In other labor developments in the east, discussions between Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, and Pat Casey, labor mediator for the film industry, on the question of dubbing retrictions, have been postponed until the end of this week.

The first meeting of the officers of the new American Federation of Radio Artists was held this week with the intention of naming a salaried national executive secretary and outlining a membership drive.

The Empress and 55th Street theatres, New York, signed union contracts with Local 306, the latter after an eight-minute sit-down strike by projectionists. Operators at the Cameo theatre in uptown Manhattan, began a "sitdown" last week.

West Coast Developments

On the West Coast agreement has been reached by the Screen Actors Guild with several commercial producers in Hollywood under which the producers accept the Guild's demands unqualifiedly, it was reported. The producers are said to be Audio Productions, Jam Handy, Wilding and Caravel.

William R. Walsh was appointed by the National Labor Relations Board as special attorney in Los Angeles to handle all cases pertaining to the film industry there.

Also on the Coast, J. Buckley Russell, film extra, was fined $1,000 and suspended for 12 months by the Screen Actors Guild for attempting to organize a rival body to the Guild and persuading members of the latter to join it. It was called Hollywood Picture Players Association.

Screen Playwrights, new scenarists' labor group, has won its members the right to receive credits in all advertising matter which mentions the name of the producer and director.

Czech Censors Pass 98 in June

Ninety-eight films were passed by the Czechoslovak Board of Censors during June of this year as compared with 77 during the same month in 1936, according to a report received from Praha by the United States Department of Commerce at Washington.

In all 478 films were admitted from January through June, 1937. Of this number 95 were dramas and 44 were comedies, the balance consisting of short subjects, nature pictures and newsreels.

The United States furnished the largest proportion of films imported by Czechoslovakia. Of the 139 dramas admitted to the country during the six-month period, 53 were of American origin. Germany was next with 35.

See Same Clearance In New York Area

New product deals under discussion by the major companies will not affect clearances in the first and subsequent runs in the Greater New York area, it is learned. Several requests are understood to have been made to change the first runs in various neighborhoods, but exchanges are said to be favoring the status quo.

The report that the Roxy was demanding a 50-mile clearance on all Twentieth Century-Fox product was emphatically denied by all parties involved. No change was made in the deal recently completed by Century Circuit with United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox, considered strong evidence that the existing arrangement will not be disturbed.

Paralysis Scare Affects Business

Newspaper suggestions that theatres in Toronto and Western Ontario centers be closed or barred to children due to fears of an epidemic of infantile paralysis are not so far being seriously considered by authorities in the cities concerned.

The number of actual cases is relatively small, but public uneasiness is the deciding factor and these drastic measures are urged as a preventive measure.

School openings already have been postponed in Toronto. Should the disease show signs of reaching epidemic proportions, action would undoubtedly be taken. In the meantime the scare is having an adverse effect on business which may continue another 10 days to two weeks.

Distribution Arranged

Distribution arrangements for "The Eagle's Vengeance" have been made by William Steiner with Preferred Pictures, Inc., for Washington and Philadelphia; with Times Pictures, Inc., for Greater New York and New Jersey, and with Teitel Film Exchange, Chicago, for northern Illinois.

EDUCATORS FIND ONLY 1,000 SHORTS IN 15,000 FOR USE IN SCHOOLS

MPPDA's Board of 70 To Complete Inspection of Majors' Vaults Next Week in Search for Educational Plan Product

Only one out of every 15 short subjects produced by the major companies since 1926 are of sufficient educational value to be suitable for exhibition in the schools of the country.

This became known with the announcement that of 15,000 shorts examined only 1,000 have been approved for the school program of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. They are being appraised by a group of 70 educators working in cooperation with the MPPDA in the plan to release films of instructional value to the school market on the wholesale.

Completion of the reviewing of the films has virtually been reached with only 50 reels yet to be evaluated and those are to be finished by September 1st, Arthur de Bra, of the MPPDA, said this week.

Some 2,000 films were actually viewed by the educators. They were selected "as most likely" from 15,000 shorts which have been produced since the advent of sound. Approximately 1,000 films were approved as possessing merit, Mr. de Bra said, and these will immediately form the basis of the majors' educational film library.

In their present form, the films are the raw material from which the finished product will be made. They are to be edited to conform to educational needs. Some will be combined with others when subject matter coincides. Newsreel shots, for example, will be fused to form a logical sequence on a number of topics.

Distribution the Next Factor

With the analysis completed, only two weeks behind schedule, the next step will be consideration of the distribution problem to be taken up at the regular quarterly meeting of the MPPDA in September. A single national exchange system for all companies will be set up.

The distribution problem is admittedly a formidable one with some exhibitors taking the stand that visual education creates unfair competition. Some producers are likewise opposed to the plan on the ground that revival of the old short subjects will compete with those planned for current release.

The MPPDA meeting in September will consider distribution with the possibility that a central clearing house, acting cooperatively in the interests of all producers, may be set up to handle the educational films.

It is understood that with the completion by the educators of the reviewing of the films, there will be no further examination of those already in producers' vaults. Future expansion of the film library will come from new short subjects, after their release to theatres.

NEW JERSEY BANS SCREEN LIQUOR ADS

Banning of liquor advertisements on the screens of New Jersey motion picture theatres was announced this week by D. Frederick Burnett, State Alcoholic Beverage Commissioner.

Commissioner Burnett said that he could not "countenance screen advertisements . . . bound to incense those who hold moral or religious scruples . . . and to offend the good taste of all right-minded persons, wet or dry, who are opposed to liquor advertisements at a mixed gathering in a public place."

The 50 films yet to be examined by the educators come under the social science panel which comprises the greatest number of films of any of the classifications. Examination of the social science panel is headed by Dr. Karl W. Bigelow, professor of education at Teachers' College, and embraces geography, history, civics, economics and current events.

The other panels, which have all been completed, include music, physical sciences, biological sciences, physical education and elementary education.

Dr. Bigelow said that in the future the screen and the textbook would supplement each other in education.

"The screen's greatest advantage as an educator," said Dr. Bigelow, "is its presentation of subjects in a vital and full-bodied form."

Dr. Bigelow said that one of the problems that faced the MPPDA's board of educators in their review of the films was that of classification. As an example, he pointed to a FitzPatrick travelogue which might have qualified under geography, history, or architecture with equal honesty. This problem was met by deciding to group shorts under more than one heading when they were thought to qualify for a number of panels.

Meanwhile, it was announced that the National Research Council, a new organization in Washington, D. C., has begun a study of scientific aids for the educational field. The study would embrace use of both films and radio in the nation's schools and possible means of increasing their use.

The survey, which is independent of the MPPDA program, is headed by Irvin Stewart, recently resigned from the Federal Communications Commission.

MPPDA and Rockefellers Financing

The MPPDA's project contemplates that films will be made available by the majors and evaluated by educators.

A $75,000 Rockefeller grant and a $50,000 Hays organization appropriation is paying for an exploration of the field.

The plan, in work since last November, was created by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and some educators, and was disclosed July 1st at the convention in Detroit of the National Educational Association, by Dr. Mark A. May, director, Institute of Human Relations of Yale University, who is working with the Hays organization on the project.

Preliminary studies—more frequently known as tablecloth arithmetic—at that time placed the potential annual gross film rentals from schools at $108,000,000, and net profits at $80,000,000, and an additional $70,000,000 in total projection equipment sales for manufacturers—if and when an anticipated 200,000 schools are equipped.

The Hays organization set up headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York, for the group of educators who are reviewing all non-current short product of MGM, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Educational, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers—Columbia is not, at this time, participating.

In addition, a board of educators, which Dr. Mays says is acting voluntarily, proposes to advise the producer-distributors on new production of films for schools. This board is composed of Isaiah Bowman, president, Johns Hopkins University; Edmund E. Day, president-elect, Cornell University; Frederick H. Baer, superintendent, Bronxville Public Schools; Karl T. Compton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Royal B. Farnum, executive vice-president, Rhode Island School of Design; Jay B. Nash, professor of education, New York University; Mrs. Bess B. Lane, New York Ethical Culture School; Dr. Paul B. Mann, New York City Public Schools; Professor Karl W. Bigelow, Teachers' College, Columbia University; Dr. Alice Keliher, Commission on Human Relations, Progressive Education Association; Dr. James Mursell, Teachers' College, Columbia; Dr. Dana Jackson, head of the Department of Chemical Engineering, Columbia; and, Dr. May.

It is intended that the source of supply shall be the non-current shorts dating back to the beginning of sound in 1926, which the distributors have promised to make available; short subjects cut from non-current features; the pedagogic films now available through Eastman Kodak, Electrical Research Products and such other companies, which for years have had an eye on developing the field.

The board of educators will return the films after their evaluation, and a contemplated centralized joint distribution system will undertake the selling and servicing. The MPPDA and member companies have not determined the nature of the physical construction of the distribution system. They predict, however, that several hundred small offices will be required, and that profits and expenses will be shared proportionately according to the demands for an individual distributor's product. The more optimistic sponsors see a nationwide exchange system of 500 branches.

Meanwhile, E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, said his company may set up a national distribution agency to handle the educational films approved for school use by the MPPDA, after acquiring them from the original producers.

U. S. LIMITS TELEVISION CHANNELS TO "CONTRIBUTORS TO PROGRESS"

Licensees Must Show They're "Able to Contribute Substantially Towards Its Progress", Federal Commission Says

Use of the few frequencies now available for television research is to be limited by the Federal Communications Commission to those "who show satisfactory evidence of being able to contribute substantially toward its progress." This was revealed in a commission decision denying National Television Corporation's application for a construction permit.

While not barring the company from the field of television, the petition was refused on the ground that the company can continue its experiments in the laboratory without undertaking actual brodcasting. It also was pointed out that there was no finding that the company's activities might not contribute materially to television progress.

National Television sought a station to determine the effect which actual transmission would have upon the quality of the picture produced, claiming it is able to transmit a 600 line, 20 frame picture with greater brilliancy than would be expected from an average picture of this size.

Greater brilliance is brought about the company explained by the use of a helicoidal mirror which directly reflects a modulated source of light in synchronization with the scanner at the transmitter, and reported capable of being improved to accomodate a 120-line picture. The company also claimed it has an invention which will permit the spacing of carrier frequencies much closer than now possible, but refused to divulge details of its equipment in hearing before the commission's examiner in Washington.

Depends Upon Program

The commission's opinion gave no indications of its future policies with respect to television, but emphasized that at present it is determined to limit the use of frequencies to companies which it feels can best assist in development of that branch of broadcasting.

"In view of the limited frequencies available for experimental purposes, in the present state of the art," it was declared, "the commission has found it necessary to restrict the granting of experimental licenses of all classes to those only who are engaged in fundamental research or improving the technique of the radio art and who show satisfactory evidence of being able to contribute substantially towards its progress.

"This policy has been given expression in the commission's Rule 307. Likewise the commission has found it necessary to limit the granting of experimental visual broadcast applications to those applicants who can show that they have a program of development outlined that promises to lead to improvement in the visual broadcast art. This policy has been given expression in the commission's Rule 322."

In England there is "what might be called satisfactory commercial television broadcasting," according to Albert F. Murray, chief television engineer for Philco Radio and Television Corporation. But, he added, there is "no rush to buy television receiver sets at $350 each."

AUDITION OFFERED CONTEST WINNER

A television audition at the New York studios of the National Broadcasting Company has been offered by NBC as one of the awards in a Washington beauty contest. The winner of the contest will compete for the title of Miss America in Atlantic City.

Talent and beauty will be the points on which the entrants will be judged, said the company's publicity department.

Despite the fact the commercial phase of television has not been developed to this extent in the United States, Mr. Murray said: "From the standpoint of technical development, this country leads the world in television."

Mr. Murray estimated there are 5,000 receiving sets in use in England.

Studio Delay Explained

Fear that use of television on a national scale would make present day radio studios obsolete was advanced as the reason for the delay of National Broadcasting Company and Mutual Broadcasting Company in undertaking planned building programs in Hollywood.

Commercial development of television, in the opinion of Douglas MacLean, motion picture producer and director, will not be a serious threat to established theatres.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, and E. F. McDonald, Jr., president of Zenith Radio Corporation, share almost identical viewpoints on television.

Mr. Sarnoff said: "Television, as a public service, still lies in the world of tomorrow."

Mr. McDonald remarked: "Television is still a laggard. It is coming, but is still a long way off for general use in the home."

A. T. Murray, president of United American Bosch Corporation, believes that: "it is going to be a long time before worthwhile television programs are available."

Urges Commercializing

Allen B. DuMont, pioneer worker in the cathode-ray field, believes the United States should commercialize television at once.

"As see it," Mr. DuMont said, "television is an evolution and not a single invention. It is a development that must come out of practical experience. Kept in the laboratory for another few years, if that be the unfortunate decision of our radio leaders, we may not know the right answers relative to technique, program, service areas, networks and economics until we have made a real 'try.'"

in Paris

The longest run of any American film in Paris during the 1936-37 season was Columbia's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." The picture played 22 weeks at the Cinema des Champs Elysees from June to November 1st, 1936.

Reports that MGM was planning another theatre to replace the Olympia, which was forsaken by the company last January, are denied.

26% OF SWISS HOUSES EARN 'MODEST INCOME'

46% Operate at Loss, 28% with Practically no Profit, Consul General Reports

A. C. Frost, Consul General for the United States, at Zurich, Switzerland, has forwarded to the United States Department of Commerce, at Washington, a detailed report on the construction, procedure and economics of the motion picture industry in that country. The highlights of Mr. Frost's report follow:

by A. C. FROST
in Zurich

There are 352 motion picture theatres in Switzerland with a combined seating capacity of 132,000. The largest theatre, the Appolo in Zurich, has a seating capacity of 2,000, followed by the Forum, also in Zurich, with 1,500, the Metropole in Lausanne with 1,450, and the Rialto in Geneva with 1,350.

A survey of the 10 largest Swiss cities shows the following distribution of cinemas and seating capacity in proportion to their population:

Cities	Number of cinemas	Number of inhabitants per cinema	Total seating capacity
Zurich	27	11,800	15,779
Basel	15	10,700	9,590
Geneva	20	6,200	9,230
Bern	8	15,100	4,100
Lausanne	11	7,800	7,055
St. Gallen	6	10,600	2,435
Winterthur	4	14,000	2,050
Lucerne	7	7,600	3,330
Biel	6	6,400	3,990
Chaux-de-Fonds	5	6,300	2,630

Forty-six per cent of the cinemas operate at a loss and are unable to earn enough to take care of amortization and interest on invested capital. Approximately 28 per cent operate without deficit, but practically without profit. The remaining 26 per cent earn a modest profit, which in most cases is not adequate to provide funds for the usual depreciation.

Reasons Cited

Since 1932 box office receipts have been declining steadily, having dropped in certain cases to 50 per cent of the receipts in that year. The principal reasons for this unsatisfactory development may be summed up as follows:

1. A large section of the population seldom or rarely goes to motion picture theatres. The Association of Swiss Cinema Owners estimates that less than 10 per cent of the entire population may be regarded as motion picture "fans."

2. Many years of economic depression with the resultant unemployment and lower earning capacity are reflected in a decline in attendance, and a marked tendency towards the cheaper seats.

3. The increasing popularity of other forms of amusement such as sports and athletics, week-end trips, and radio broadcasts likewise affected unfavorably box office receipts.

4. The improvement in business as a result of the introduction of sound films failed to come up to expectations. On the other hand, the change from silent to sound films required the installation of expensive sound film equipment and other financial outlay. This made it necessary for many theatre owners to borrow additional capital. However, despite the higher investment, cinema attendance after a brief initial improvement began to decline. With a few notable exceptions, this tendency still continues without visible signs of a change for the better.

5. The years of economic depression also brought, in many places, an amusement tax, until then practically unknown in certain sections of this country, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent of the admission price.

According to the Association of Swiss Cinema Owners, motion picture theatres in Switzerland last year suffered a combined loss of 1,825,700 francs as shown by the following figures:

Receipts and Expenditures:		Amount (in Swiss francs)

In order to prevent undue competition in the years of economic depressoin various economic groups succeeded in inducing the Government to enact legislation prohibiting the establishment of new enterprises in their respective lines of business. Thus, legislation exists prohibiting the establishment of new hotels, department stores, and branch stores. The Association of Swiss Cinema Owners endeavored unsuccessfully to obtain similar legislation with regard to motion picture theatres. Failing in this, the association attained this end through an agreement with the film rental agencies, which makes it practically impossible to open new motion picture theatres in this country.

According to this agreement, the Association of Rental Agencies, comprising practically all distributors of films in Switzerland, obligated itself to supply films only to those exhibitors who are members of the Association of Swiss Cinema Owners. By refusing membership in their association, the Swiss cinema owners can make it practically impossible for new theatres to obtain films in this country through the regular channels.

Film Chamber Approved

Legislation creating a Federal Film Chamber has been approved by the government. While the functions of the chamber will be chiefly advisory, the wide scope of its activities, as outlined in the draft law, would seem to indicate that the future developments of the trade in Switzerland will be influenced in large measure by this organization.

The chamber will comprise 18 members elected for a period of three years and selected from representative groups of the nation's industrial and cultural life and representatives of various government departments, in addition to persons directly connected with the film industry.

Immediate tasks of the film chamber include study of the development of film industries in other countries, with particular emphasis on political aspects; establishing criteria for a Swiss national film policy, and compilation of statistics showing the development of the cinemas, demand for films and the employment of Swiss nationals.

Among other tasks which will be charged to the film chamber will be opposition to the system of blind or block booking, and combating films adjudged worthless or obscene.

The Language Problem

Since Switzerland is not a film producing country, practically all films, especially feature fims, must be imported. Films of American and German origin supply two-thirds of the demand. Inasmuch as the majority of the people in this country speak German, films of German origin are naturally preferred. However, conditions of a political nature militate strongly against the showing of certain German pictures produced under direct Government control. As a result the demand for American films is increasing perceptibly.

Switzerland is a tri-lingual country, 69 per cent of the population speaking German, 21 per cent French and eight per cent Italian.

The question of language presents a serious problem as one group of cinema goers is always disappointed if an American picture is dubbed or if it is shown in the original language.

American films starring well known actors and which have had a long run in New York and London draw large audiences, even if shown in English, with the usual brief German or French test. For instance, one such picture played for several weeks to full houses without being dubbed.

American gangster films, detective stories, and tales of adventure usually attract large audiences. In this connection it should be pointed out that while the gangster films enjoy a large measure of popularity, they are accepted by most spectators as picturing real America, thus creating a deplorably erroneous impression. Certain American films with a typical European setting, such as Viennese life, have had a successful run in this country. Pictures of this type, however, must be dubbed, for to a German-speaking Swiss the fact that typical Viennese characters speak in English is disturbing.

Competition Among Foreign Films

Inasmuch as there is practically no domestic production, competition is confined to films of foreign origin, with Germany and the United States leading by a wide margin. However, the political tendencies displayed in certain pictures produced in Germany militates against their being shown in this country. It is apparently for this reason that many of the films imported from Germany of late are either musical comedies or simple plots with a strong musical background. So long as the present system of censorship and Government control of film production in Germany practically excludes a certain share of German productions from the Swiss market, American films will be able to hold ground despite the adverse effect of the language problem.

Rental Charges for Films

One of the principal grievances voiced by the cinema owners is the existing system of rental charges for films. Exhibitors are required to guarantee a minimum sum for the use of films plus a fixed percentage of the net box office receipts. The amount to be guaranteed varies widely according to the quality of the picture and the size of the theatre. The percentage of the net receipts usually ranges from 35 to 50 per cent, in exceptional cases 60 per cent.

BUMPER CROP REPORT AUGURS BIG RECEIPTS

Chicago and Middle West Pleased by Expectation of $9,000,000,000 for Farmers

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH

in Chicago

Dame Fortune is expected to smile sweetly on exhibitors in the midwest this fall as reports of the largest crops in eight years pour in. The middle west, so largely dependent upon the farmer for the success or failure in business, is looking with pleasure upon the reports from authoritative sources that the $9,000,000,000 which farmers will receive this year for their crops will mean that at least $5,000,000,000 will come to the midwestern farmer.

In Kansas a month ago they reported that the wheat crop would be 158 million bushels. They now report they were mistaken. The latest report shows the crop is running 20,000,000 bushels more than that, or another $20,000,000 to spend in Kansas.

Last week in Iowa the corn crop, the largest in years, received beneficial rains that will put it into the big figures and the estimated crop for several million acres will be better than 45 bushels per acre. Wheat in Iowa was the best in years and the oat crop was well over the 50 bushel-per-acre average. In other words, the income from farm products in the midwest this year will be about $500,000,000 more than last year.

Cattle, hogs and other livestock are selling at the highest prices in 15 years. There is a scarcity of hogs and fat cattle, but the prices are such that they will probably hold up for some time to come and this will be of great help.

The summer slump is not of great concern to the midwestern exhibitor this year, it is reported by those who have been travelling throughout the central states. The big harvests that are keeping men in the fields from daylight to dark mean that business will be much better this fall and winter when the farmers have more time than just Saturday nights to attend the theatre.

In Illinois the corn crop, which was delayed by the heavy spring rains, is looking much better and will be safe if no heavy frosts hit too soon. Small grains and other crops have been very good and the prospects of a record year seem excellent for the Illinois farmers.

Rush for Film

With this bright outlook on the agricultural situation as an inspiration the downstate exhibitors in Illinois have been signing up for next year's film product faster than ever before, local exchanges report. More than 80 per cent of the out-of-town deals for films have been contracted, major exchange managers point out, and it is expected that they will have more deals signed by the time the new pictures are out than they have had in years.

On top of this spree of film selling is the report that the new deals are for advanced rentals and it is not to be unexpected that the midwestern exchanges reach the best figures in years this season when the sales are totaled.

Independent exhibitors from the small towns and the medium sized cities point out that the conditions in their communities will possibly bring about a situation whereby few giveaways will be called into use this fall and winter as trade stimulants. The boxoffice grosses are expected to stand on their own as the result of the pulling power of pictures plus the fact that more people have more money to spend on motion pictures.

LABOR FEDERATION "PUBLICITY" WISE

The Federation of Labor in Madison, Wisconsin, wants no part of any publicity "stunts".

The federation members were a bit concerned over the fact the Paramount newsreel of the Memorial Day riot at the Republic Steel plant in Chicago had not been shown in Madison. They appointed a committee to investigate and received a report that Ed Benjii, manager of the Capitol theatre, supplied the reason by stating the film just had not been sent to Madison by Paramount.

After receipt of this report, a resolution to petition the motion picture company to release the film in Madison was proposed.

It was defeated because showing of the picture "would only give publicity to the Committee for Industrial Organization."

Among the sources of income to farmers other than from the bumper crops will be the Government payments of $400,000,000 to them against a total of $287,000,000 which the Government paid the farmers last year. This source of income will also have considerable effect upon the farmers' general welfare because in the central states business is usually as good as the financial condition of the farmers, not Wall Street. So for the first time since 1929 the midwestern farmer can look upon a bountiful crop at fair prices and chances are that the middlewest and the nation as well will find 1937 a big year.

Wisconsin Resorts Using State Films

Wisconsin summer resorts possessing projection equipment have availed themselves of the state conservation department's motion picture service for the entertainment of their guests; 33 subjects are available, dealing primarily with wild life and conservation work, and the only expense to the resort is transportation costs.

The State of Ohio collected a net profit of $163,106 from the censorship of films in 1936. Gross income was $187,888.

Dickinson Describes Advance in Safety

The experience of the motion picture industry with fire is the basis of an article contained in "Facts About Fire," a campaign bulletin issued by the National Fire Protection Association, Boston, in connection with its Fire Prevention Week drive, October 3-9.

Written by A. S. Dickinson, director of conservation for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the article cites the action taken by Will H. Hays with regard to fire upon his appointment to the presidency of the MPPDA, in 1922.

"More than $30,000,000 was spent the past fifteen years," writes Mr. Dickinson, "for new motion picture exchanges, all modern fireproof buildings, not only equipped with automatic sprinkler systems but other approved protection.

"It is estimated . . . that nearly 30,000 miles of film is handled each day . . . by the distributing offices. . . . This amounts to 9,000,000 miles in the 300 working days in the year. That the loss from the handling of this tremendous quantity has been small is due to adequate preparedness to prevent fires," the article states.

Use Radio and 16mm. Film For Television Effect

Combining motion picture and radio facilities, Sheridan & Ross, a newly formed radio production concern in Oakland, Cal., has developed an idea which is called tantamount to television in effect.

Sheridan & Ross says that an ordinary 16 mm. projector is used in conjunction with a radio broadcast. A studio announcer gives the listener his cue and the air program that follows is broadcast simultaneously with exhibition of the film in the home. Due to limitations of average 16 mm. equipment, broadcasts would be confined to 30-minute periods, according to Sheridan & Ross, and repeat air programs would be arranged to accommodate listeners unable to obtain film prints at the original broadcast time.

United Acquires Cinderella

The Cinderella, 2,000-seat, second-run house on the east side of Detroit, has been taken over by the United Detroit Theatres. The theatre formerly was operated by James N. Robertson, who also operates the Roosevelt which will be acquired by Wisper and Wetsman September 1st.

CASH GAMES GO ON DESPITE STATE BANS

Larger Connecticut and Missouri Cities Comply; Smaller Communities Retain Prize Nights

Exhibitors in St. Louis and in the larger cities of Connecticut faced an almost identical situation this week as officials continued their ban on bank night and other chance games pending the disposition of test cases.

Despite enforcement of the ban in St. Louis, the game is still being played in the smaller communities of St. Louis County and in the eastern part of Missouri, while in Connecticut, although such cities as Hartford, New Haven, Stamford and Greenwich have dropped the games, in Hamden, Meriden and Waterbury the cash award systems have been reopened.

In both Missouri and Connecticut one case has already gone to the state supreme courts. In Missouri the case was referred back to a circuit court. In Connecticut exhibitors and State authorities agreed the decision could not be accepted as a definite ruling on bank night, since a proxy card system was used by the manager, who was found guilty of violating the State lottery laws. For this reason it has been agreed to pre-arrange another ärrest and to carry the case to the supreme court in the fall.

Although the Illinois supreme court has held that the drawings are lotteries, in the southern section of the state, including East St. Louis, no attempts have been made to stop the games.

The last of the theatres in Boone County, Neb., to use bank night was to suspend operation of the game this week on order of William Keeshan, county attorney. Maynard Nelson, manager of the house, the Alex, was given until August 28 to dispose of all remaining funds provided for the game.

The public's attitude toward chance games in Utica, N. Y., was revealed when an Olympic theatre audience overwhelmingly voted for cessation of "Cash Night."

In Marion, Ohio, however, when police raided the Palace theatre during a "Sweepstakes" session, Mayor F. C. Smith branded the raid an insult to the public and charged that the police action was a political move to defeat him when he runs for re-election.

Games in RKO theatres in Greater New York continue to operate, but now are on a week-to-week basis so that these houses may be in a position to eliminate the practice on short notice.

Mexico Plans Shorts for U. S.

Purchase of $10,000 worth of new camera and lighting equipment has been made by the Mexican government as part of the country's plan to employ films to attract tourists. The pictures are to be made on 16 mm. film with English narration added later to the series of short subjects. They will be distributed only in United States.

COLUMBIA EXCLUDES SERIAL FLASHBACKS

Columbia Pictures, in its serial production, "Jungle Menace," will eliminate flashbacks.

Instead, at the start of the chapters an off-screen voice, aided by brief action scenes, will explain what has gone before. Thus, Columbia officials believe, in a minute or two those who have not seen the previous episode will be able to follow the story. At the end of the installment, the same procedure will be followed, and this, it is pointed out, will serve as a trailer for the next chapter.

New Coast Circuit Dominant Independent

The largest independent circuit on the west coast now is United California Theatres, Inc., as a result of the pooling of the Golden States Theatres with the T. & D., Jr., Enterprises.

About 65 theatres are included in the new setup, owned by Bob McNeil, Michael Naify and E. H. Hammick, making it second only to Fox West Coast in California.

Stern Joins Grand National

Alfred Stern, formerly production supervisor at Universal, has joined Max and Arthur Alexander at Grand National as associate producer. He will assist in the production of Flash Casey and Shadow features.

United Adding One

United Detroit Theatres is reported to be adding the Cinderella, large Detroit house, to its circuit of 16 theatres. The chain is now building the Vogue, 1,500-seat house, which is expected to be completed November 1st.

Johnston in Hollywood

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, is in Hollywood and is planning to make a tour of Monogram exchanges in San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Denver.

Staub in New York

Ralph Staub, co-producer with Jimmy Fidler, National Broadcasting Company film gossip columnist, of a series of short subjects, is in New York to arrange for release of the series.

Renew Seattle Leases

Three exchanges in Seattle, Warners, Universal and United Artists, have renewed their leases on current quarters for an additional 10-year period.

Shanghai Bombs Oust 2 Producers

The recent Shanghai bombings have forced at least two producers with offices in that city to move to safer locations. LeRoy Brown, Universal manager, has removed the company's headquarters to Manila. Morey Marcus, MGM manager for China, will transfer the Metro office to Hong Kong.

Twentieth Century-Fox is rushing "Shanghai Deadline" into production to take advantage of the timeliness afforded by the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Hutchinson Sails On Australian Pooling

Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign head for Twentieth Century-Fox, sailed for Australia last week to discuss with Greater Union Theatres executives extension of the five-year pooling deal with Hoyts.

The existing agreement expires the end of the year. Hoyts has already submitted a proposal, but definite decision on it will not be made until Mr. Hutchinson arrives in Sydney.

German Production Short by 44 Films

German film production for the 1937-38 season has fallen short of schedule by 44 pictures, according to a report received by the U. S. Department of Commerce from Berlin.

Of the films announced, 190 have been completed and passed by the censors at the end of June, 1937, and 17 are in preparation.

Weber Promoted

Louis Weber, office manager of MGM's exchange at Memphis, has been promoted to special sales representative in the southern district.

FILMS PROPOSED AS AN EYE DOCTOR

The prevalent view held by outsiders that motion picture attendance is damaging to the eyesight is contradicted by Dr. Harry J. Baker, director of the psychological clinic of Detroit public schools. Dr. Baker maintains that the movies are, in fact, a corrective for pupils suffering from defective vision.

Moving pictures seen through a special kind of eyeglass help children with enlarged "blind spots," he said.

"Certain children who have reading difficulty have a rather large blind spot," Dr. Baker told a conference on mental hygiene at Buffalo State Teachers College recently.

"A simple treatment discovered is to put a certain kind of glass to the eye and send children off to the movies with it. By constant eye motion they tend to cultivate the blind spot."

PICTURE COMPETITION SEEN KEENER IN PERU

American Productions Lead, but Popularity of French, English Films Increases

David M. Clark, assistant trade commissioner at Lima, Peru, reporting to the Department of Commerce, at Washington, finds that the Hollywood influence on Peruvian motion picture tastes is falling off, though film exhibitions are still 90 per cent American. Highlights of his report follow:

by DAVID M. CLARK in Lima

Motion picture competition was estimated during 1936 at 80 per cent American in the pictures exhibited, while at the end of the first five months of 1937 it is estimated at 70 per cent American.

The Argentine and Mexican films are continually increasing in popularity, especially in the neighborhood theatres and in the provinces. This preference has been particularly shown since the success of the Argentine film entitled "Ayudame a Vivie." This film is said to have netted a return of $17,500 in four months. The Spanish film "Morena Clara" also enjoyed a large box office success. The Argentine picture "Abajo los Hombres" and the Mexican film entitled "Alla en el Rancho Grande" have just recently been released, and it is predicted by some distributors that both these films have the possibilities of even surpassing the success of "Ayudame a Vivie." The demand and acceptation of these Spanish talking films is to be taken into consideration, more so since approximately 70 per cent of the motion picture houses are under contract with American distributors.

Well filmed American pictures containing much action always are received well in this country and are definite moneymakers, but the mediocre American films have suffered to some extent because of the competition afforded by films in the Spanish language. This increased popularity for Mexican and Argentine films logically has had some effect on the demand for American films on the whole, but this does not signify that the caliber of American-made films is at present inferior to that of former years.

It is to be noted that the neighborhood houses represent 80 per cent of the total number of cinemas. Since these theatres are mostly patronized by the laboring class, who have little culture, it can be readily realized that pictures in the Spanish language would have some preference if American pictures of the "thriller" type were not available. On the other hand, the theatres in the center of town, which represent five per cent of the total, definitely give preference to English-speaking films.

Production

The standstill in the production of Spanish films caused by the internal troubles in that country, it is understood, will not tend to increase the demand for Mexican and Argentine productions.

There has also been a noticeable increase in popularity for French, and English produced films during this year. At present, for example, such British films as "Spy of Napoleon," "Jugernaut," "The 39 Steps" and "The Clairvoyant" are playing in Lima.

Despite the competition of other foreign films in the Peruvian market, the American productions are leading the field in the share of business available, but it is now evident that the competition with other foreign-produced films is now more serious than formerly.

Censor Board Statistics

The censorship body, called the "Patronato Nacional de Censura de Peliculas Cinematograficas," is composed of the following members: Censor, C. Oritz de Zevallos; assistant censor, Srta, Carmen Tillit; secretary and treasurer, J. I. Ferreiros; chief of materials and operator, Lorenzo Pinto; inspectors, J. H. de Munoz, Maria Velarde, Victoria Tamayo, Lucila Cornejo B., de Guillen, Christina Sologuren, Zoila de Raigada, Naty Valcarcel, Aurelia Lynch, Julia de Pastri, Teofila Tafurt, Victoria Escalante, Mercedes del Valle and Victoria Montoya.

The first pictures reviewed by this board were on May 12, 1930. The following table shows the total number of films that have been passed by the censor board since May 12, 1930, that were considered fit for adults and minors.

Year	Number (Long and Short Lengths and from 1 to 12 reels per film)
1930	549
1931	749
1932	649
1933	778
1934	752
1935	885
1936	982
1937 (From Jan. 4 to March 24)	274
Total	5,618

During 1936, there were 43 educational films that were passed free of censorship duties, while so far during the present year approximately 19 have been passed.

The present censorship tax is 3 centavos per meter on sound films and 20 soles on films not over 500 meters in length. There is some talk that in the near future a straight tax of 4 centavos a meter will be imposed on all films.

Complaints by importers of films and cinema owners regarding unjust censorship and other irregularities in film legislation in Peru resulted in a decree dated December 27th, 1935, supplementing and modifying former ones on the subject. This decree, in turn, was supplemented by decrees of January 9th, 1936, and February 19th, 1936. A decree dated July 7th, 1937, has been issued supplementing and modifying the former ones and also incorporating all the regulations pertaining to the censorship of films into one single text.

The decree of December 27, 1935, provided that films may only be introduced into Peru through the Callao Custom House and films entering through other ports will be forwarded to Callao for clearance. The present decree further provides a list of all films entering the country must be submitted monthly by the custom house in Callao to the censorship office in the department of justice. This regulation was added so all films entering Peru will not escape the notice of the censor board. It is understood that on occasions films have been exhibited in the provinces without first being reviewed and passed by the board of censors.

According to the new regulations, censorship duties which were formerly 3 centavos per meter on sound films, and 20 soles on films not exceeding 500 feet in length, have been fixed at a straight charge of 4 centavos per meter for all sound films. It is further provided all silent films will pay a straight charge of 2 centavos per meter, the duty of 10 soles for silent films under 500 meters being discontinued.

Children under five years of age will not be admitted to theatres at any time, while children under ten years of age will not be admitted to night performances.

NEGROES CONSTRUCT ST. LOUIS THEATRE

Skilled negro workers, claiming they have been barred from membership in local unions affiliated with the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, are constructing a 700-seat motion picture theatre in St. Louis. When the house is completed it will be opened for negro trade.

The project, which will cost about $50,000, was started two weeks ago by Oral Stubblefield, negro contractor, with an all-negro construction crew. Twenty-two skilled mechanics are being employed on the job to demonstrate that negroes are fully capable of doing such work.

Greece Undertakes Close Censorship

Motion pictures have been subjected to close censorship in Greece as part of a government plan to guide youth toward the ideals of nationalism and absolute discipline.

Argentine Company To Make 20

Attempting the most ambitious schedule of any South American producer, Argentine Sono Films will make 20 features during the 1938 season. The company is now negotiating for acquisition of Rio de la Plata, another local producer.

Jessel is Associate Producer

George Jessel, recently associated with Mervyn LeRoy, has been made an associate producer at Warner Brothers. He is preparing a story based on the life of Haym Salomon, a Revolutionary War figure.

Beecher Transferred

Milton Beecher of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer casting office has been transferred to the story department to become assistant to Edwin Knopf, head of the unit.

Skeets' British Film

Skeets Gallagher is the latest Hollywood player to turn a London holiday into a British film contract. He is a friend of William "Buster," Collier, now a producer for Warner-First National at Teddington and currently engaged on "Dr. Satan" for them.

It all happened at Buster's home one week end, when he read the script of "Dr. Satan" to Skeets and, doing so, realized he had written one of the parts with his friend in mind. A labor permit for Skeets, a hurried signing of a contract and a rearrangement of shooting schedules to allow the comedian to return to Hollywood for his dates there were the sequels.

Skeets will play a newspaper photographer with the usual line of backchat. Starred is James Stephenson, an ex-cotton broker in Manchester who is one of Irving Asher's British discoveries, (You've heard of Errol Flynn.) He's the star reporter, doing, as usual, detective work, on the trail of an arms magnate. Stephenson had his first Warner part in "The Dark Stairway," playing a detective.

Chili Bouchier is the feminine lead and Arthur Woods the director.

Cricket in 1797

If, despite Aubrey Smith, the United States still knows nothing about cricket, it soon will, but the information won't help much to enjoyment of a game at Lord's or the Oval in London. For "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel" at London Film's Denham plant, they have been shooting a match as the game was played in 1797 when the participants wore ruffled shirts, cravats, knee breeches and tall beaver hats. The batting on this occasion was in the hands of Barry K. Barnes and Anthony Bushell, using implements somewhat like the present day hockey sticks.

Ralph Straus, author of twenty-five books on sport and authority on cricket through the ages, has been advising producer Arnold Pressburger for these scenes. Hans Schwartz directed and Sophie Stewart, as Lady Blakeney, watched the prowess of her "Pimpernel" husband, Barnes.

This week will see the finish of "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel."

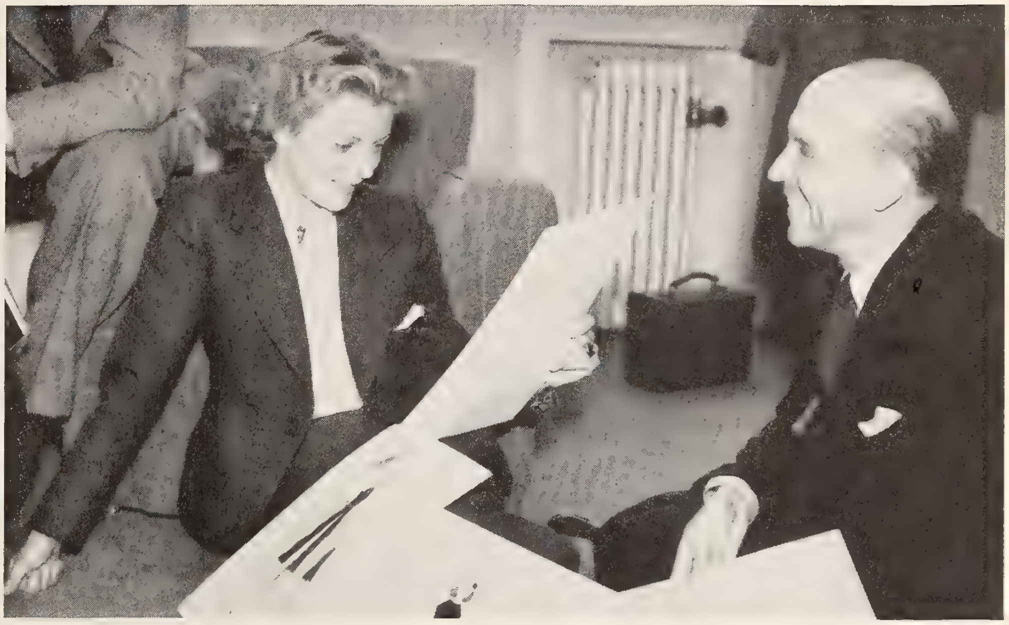
Oberon in Colour

Tim Whelan has shot the first scenes of "The Divorce of Lady X," which is an all-Technicolor production of London Films; they are sequences of a fancy dress ball in Park Lane and Rene Hubert has gone all out to give Miss Oberon a gown with many of the hues of the rainbow as one woman can be expected to show with advantage. The scene is important, it starts the film and the comedy story and it will show Merle Oberon in her very first color shot.

Laurence Olivier is the leading man and Ralph Richardson has an important part.

London Films' second Technicolor feature, "The Drum," is going apace in exteriors as widely separated as the Indian frontier and the Welsh mountains.

The "home" unit has been busy for three weeks in the pass of Cwm Bychan, a thousand feet above Llander, which is said to duplicate almost exactly the rock and lake features of Chitral, and where London Films have 500 men, including 200 Indians in camp.



ANNABELLA'S third picture for New World at Denham, before she sails for Hollywood to co-star with William Powell in "Jean" for Twentieth Century-Fox, will be "Let's Go to Paris." She is now making "Follow the Sun," also a Robert T. Kane production with Harold Schuster again directing. Rene Hubert, who designed the Parisian costumes for "Follow the Sun," is shown here with the star.

In climbing scenes on the sides of the Welsh peak Rhinog Fawr, Sabu, the Indian boy lead of "The Drum," the also youthful Desmond Tester, Martin Walker and Roy Meredith have been doing venturesome horseback riding on precipitous paths, and there has also been a "frontier skirmish" in which a party of Gordon Highlanders have shown how mountain guns are used.

A week will see the end of the Welsh scenes and Zoltan Korda, directing, has four weeks to follow on the floor at Denham to complete the picture.

Itemized

Erich von Stroheim has gone to Paris, for a French film, after completing his part in "Mademoiselle Docteur" for Max Schach. He has other dates in London in the fall.

Reginald Purdell, who has been in the script department of Warner-British at Teddington, is being starred in "Quiet Please," which he wrote.

Brian Donlevy has been cast in "He Was Her Man," first Gracie Fields picture for Twentieth Century-Fox at Denham.

Back from Ceylon

Eve Shelley is back from Ceylon, where she has been having adventures in the course of playing scenes for the Neville Clark "Tea Leaves in the Wind" Rogue elephants, cobras and devil-dancers helped to add color to the trip, on which went also Nils Asther, Gibson Gowland and Jack Kellino, with Ward Wing as director and Barr Smith as producer. Not to mention the "heavy," Cyril Chadwick, who broke his leg and was left in hospital in Colombo.

"The Rat"

After a fortnight's exterior shooting in Paris, Jack Raymond, director of the Herbert Wilcox "The Rat" (a Radio world release) has brought his company to Denham for interiors.

Ruth Chatterton, Anton Walbrook, Mary Clare, Rene Ray, Geraldine Hislop (daughter of the famous tenor, Joseph Hislop) Beatrice Lehmann and Nadine March have all been in current scenes. Also cast are Basil Radford, Gordon McLeod and Bob Gregory, famous as a boxer and all-in wrestler.

"The Rat," from a stage play and silent film which made fame and fortune for Ivor Novello, is a mystery story with action plus.

Annabella's Third

The production unit of "Follow the Sun," third Annabella vehicle for New World-Twentieth Century Fox, has been working on exteriors at the Hotel de Paris, Bray, which is on the Thames not far from London.

Annabella and Romney Brent have been playing in the disguises of an Indian Rajah and Ranee and Paul Lukas and David in more up-to-date attire.

"Follow the Sun" will finish at Denham in a few days and preparations are already well advanced for "Let's Go to Paris."

CHINA'S CENSORS SEEING THE LIGHT; NO REJECTIONS, FEW CUTS ORDERED

Optimism Regarding Widening Market Tempered, However, by Millions' Lack of Education and Transportation Obstacles

by J. P. KOEHLER

in Shanghai

If the first six months of 1937 can be accepted as a criterion, government censorship at Nanking apparently has adopted a liberal view toward foreign films, as no banns and few cuts of relative importance were ordered. Such deletions as were made were items regarding Oriental servants, actual scenes of brutality, gambling scenes at dice, roulette or cards, or criminal actions not pertinent to the moral of the story.

Appeals in the case of "Theodora Goes Wild" (Columbia); "After the Thin Man" (M-G-M) and "Notorious Sophie Lang" (Paramount) were heard and licenses granted after elimination of objectionable matter.

While on the surface this appears as leniency on the part of the censors, it must not be considered as such. It merely indicates that the censors are disposed to allow films to be cut instead of banned, where such cutting can be done, and in no way lowers the stringent rules of censorship.

The accompanying table gives a comparative view of the 1936 and 1937 January-June period, and shows that American product (including 11 British features and five British shorts released through United Artists and 20th Century-Fox) still hold first place in the Chinese exhibition field, in the matter of quantity.

On the other hand, Chinese productions are making extremely long runs, at least two such features running to 40 or more consecutive days for first run in Shanghai, whereas the longest foreign film first run in Shanghai in this 1937 calendar period was for "Tarzan Escapes" (MGM), which ran concurrently in two first run theatres for eight and 10 days respectively.

Censorship Protested

Apropos of the failure of the Shanghai Municipal Police to stop the performance of the Dr. Arnold Franck's film "The New Earth," which ran without license at a Japanese cinema in the International Settlement, in defiance of the Shanghai Municipal Police's ban, this issue has now culminated in a united protest of Chinese societies against the censorship of Chinese films, books and pictures by the International Settlement Police, and a demand by these Chinese circles that such censorship be discontinued, since it is declared that in view of the incident of "The New Earth" the Shanghai Municipal Police have discriminated in favor/of a foreign power.

The subject is a complicated and delicate one, and without a full knowledge of the situation judgment must be withheld. Suffice to say that in the present state of Sino-Japanese tension, the enforcement of any ban on a Japanese cinema by local foreign police officers undoubtedly would result in a situation fraught with extreme danger to business conditions in Shanghai, a situation entirely out of proportion to the issue at stake. "Peace at any price" seems to be the best policy at the moment, while both sides have the sympathy and understanding of level-headed residents.

The Military and Receipts

North China—Peiping and Tientsin especially—again are suffering heavy losses in performance curtailment, due to military operations in the Peiping area. Whatever the outcome, the motion picture trade is bound to suffer, as it has suffered heavily for the last three years of unrest and alarms in the North. With artillery and tanks rumbling in the near distance, with city walls guarded and gates closed, with strict curfews and with thousands of soldiers passing through the streets, the populace is little inclined to poke heads out of doors, let alone attending the cinemas. Foreign distributors already have been affected through refusals of exhibitors in Peiping to take films booked, and in any event "force majeur" may be the excuse for the cancellation of more than one contract.

National Language Films

The National government issued an order that no further production of Chinese language film may be made except in the official Chinese language.

As a result, Cantonese producers with heavy investments at stake entered a joint protest against sudden application of the order, pointing out the hardship it would make on both themselves and the South China exhibitors. The protest was considered by the Central Propaganda Bureau, who now have granted an extension of time and terms of the order. Despite additional protests they have denied further concessions.

The ban on the Cantonese pictures will be effective June 30, 1940.

Prospects and Problems

"Optimistic" seems to be the general attitude of foreign film representatives who cover Chinese territory, and, generally speaking, for the very near future they may be quite right, but within limits. If we look only at China's enormous population figures, at her areas still untouched by motion pictures, then we have to believe that herein lies a great future market.

But analysis of this vast population, this wide and virgin territory, qualifies the conclusion:

First as to population. There are millions whose present earning power is such that they have insufficient income to provide food and shelter in even China's minimum standard of living. These still lack the simplest fundamentals of modern Chinese education.

Then there are the governmental and Chinese production factors. With all countries slowly strangling American high-grade production within their borders in favor of home industry, is it safe to assume that China will not do likewise? Certainly not. And emphatically not, if present tendencies towards subsidies of home production, increased quotas, increased duties and taxes on foreign film are any criterion.

Vaudeville Seen In Revival by Actors' Group

Hailed as the first step in a national revival of vaudeville, the signing of a closed shop agreement between the American Federation of Actors and the new Isie Hirst circuit, has resulted in acts being offered 20 weeks of bookings—the longest time available on a single circuit in more than five years.

Despite the optimistic viewpoint of AFA, whose executive secretary, Ralph Whitehead, characterized the development as a "revival" other theatre circuits, with the exception of Warner Brothers, have announced no plans for expansion of vaudeville.

Already playing stage shows in five houses, Warner Brothers expects to add "five or six" theatres to the list by the end of September, according to Don Sherwood of the company's booking office. He said, however, that no definite plans have been formulated as to which houses will be included.

At present, Mr. Sherwood explained, stage shows are played at the Earl and Oxford, Philadelphia; the Earl, Washington; the Stanley, Pittsburgh, and, on Sundays, the Stanley, Camden.

Controlled by Mr. Hirst, former head of the Independent Burlesque Association, the new circuit includes houses in 20 cities between the Atlantic Coast and the Mississippi River. They are the Howard, Boston; Jacques, Waterbury, Conn.; Century and Majestic, Brooklyn; Hudson, Union City, N. J.; Empire, Newark; Troc and Bijou, Philadelphia; Embassy, Rochester; Casino, Toronto; Rialto, Chicago; Gayety, Milwaukee; Garrick, St. Louis; Keith's, Indianapolis; National, Louisville; Gayety, Cincinnati; Gayety, Detroit; Capitol, Toledo; Roxy, Cleveland; Casino, Pittsburgh; Gayety, Baltimore, and Gayety, Washington.

Establishment of the circuit, while seen as a boon to vaudeville, is generally regarded as a death blow to burlesque as the theatres in which the actors and actresses will be guaranteed 20 weeks' work are all former burlesque houses.

Mr. Hirst has agreed, according to Mr. Whitehead, to eliminate the strip tease, the blackout and similar burlesque acts from the circuit. In addition, Mr. Whitehead explained, the word burlesque will not be used. He elaborated on the plan by stating:

"Good, clean vaudeville, backed up with a line of girls modestly clad will be offered in the former burlesque houses."

As another sign of the revival of stage and variety shows, Mr. Whitehead said 14 New York houses will use vaudeville this year. He named Loew's State, Paramount, Roxy, Music Hall, Eltinge, Irving Place, Apollo, Oriental, Gaiety and Uptown Appolo.

On the other hand, though, Joseph Vogel, head of the booking department for Loew's Theatres, said his company is "not contemplating booking any vaudeville." The Walter Reid Theatres also plan to run no stage shows with the exception of amateur shows in several locations.

While stage shows are played at the Paramount Theatres in New York, the company does not operate many theatres itself. Operation of its 1,000-and-odd houses rests principally in the hands of operating partners who declare and define the policies of their individual properties.

RKO has no plans for expanding its vaudeville circuit which during the season totals six weeks, according to Nate Blumberg, vice-president in charge of theatre operations. Cities in which RKO vaudeville now plays are Boston, Cleveland, San Francisco, Chicago, Dayton and Cincinnati.

Skouras Brothers, who operate the Twentieth Century-Fox Theatres in addition to their own houses, also are planning no additional activity in the vaudeville field, according to Matty Fox of Skouras Theatres' booking department.

MORE BANDS VOTED IN PARAMOUNT POLL

Popularity of dance bands is indicated in the Paramount theatre's annual contest to determine the favorites of its patrons.

The poll shows votes cast for 156 different bands, as compared with ballots for 136 last year. The five leaders in the contest, which closes Christmas, are Benny Goodman, Guy Lombardo, Phil Spitalny, Shep Fields and Eddy Duchin.

Circuit Negotiates For Ten Theatres

Cinema Circuit, which operates eight theatres in Greater New York, is reported negotiating for 10 northern New Jersey houses. In addition, the company is planning to construct another theatre in one of the key locations.

Polesia Named Producer

Herbert Polesia has been promoted to associate producer at Paramount. He formerly was assistant to Barney Glazer, who recently left Paramount to produce for Warner Brothers. Mr. Polesie's first assignment will be the Bing Crosby vehicle, "The Badge of Policeman O'Roon."

Obtains Rights to Films

American distribution rights for "Helene," with Madeleine Renaud, and "Avec Le Sourire," starring Maurice Chevalier, have been obtained by John S. Tapernoux, president of French Motion Picture Corporation. The films are to be released in the United States in the fall.

Jungle Film Planned

Merian C. Cooper, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, will be joined by his former associate, Ernest B. Schoedsack in the production of a jungle picture in color. It is to be made in the East Indies with an all-native cast.

To Distribute Korda Film

Although pictures produced by Alexander Korda usually are released in United States through United Artists, Paramount will distribute "Lawrence of Arabia," which Mr. Korda is producing.

Nelson House Opened

The Nelson Theatre, owned by Burgess E. Nelson, has been opened at Mount Jackson, Va. Paul McDaniel has charge of operation and promotion.

154 Playdates Set

"100 Men and a Girl," new Deanna Durbin picture, has been booked into 154 theatres for the weeks of September 10th and September 17th.

Exhibitors Avert Strike in Mexico

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

The possibility of a theatre strike in Mexico City vanished with exhibitors meeting the demands of unionized employees for a 25 per cent wage increase. The action proved so satisfactory to the unions that they decided against pressing their demand to share in the theatres' annual income.

Charges of fraud, involving a total of 200,000 pesos (about $56,000) have been made against directors of the Mexico Cinematographic Producers Cooperative Society and are being investigated by police. Records have been falsified, some members of the society charge.

The Mexico Federal Board of Conciliation and Arbitration has refused to permit a group of motion picture players to form a union separate from the national picture players' union. The board denied registration sanction on the ground it would pave the way for a split up of actor unionism in the country.

United Artists to Release 33 Shorts Abroad

United Artists has obtained foreign distribution rights from three producers to a total of 33 short subjects, Arthur W. Kelly, in charge of foreign distribution, has announced. Deals were closed with Russell Spaulding, World Pictures Corporation and Celebrity Productions, Inc.

To Release 16 Hungarian Films

Hungaria Pictures, Inc., New York importers has acquired 16 Hungarian pictures for American distribution, Bertha Farkus, manager of the company, announced on her return from abroad this week. The number is half the total of annual Hungarian product, it was said.

"PLEASE CORRECT YOUR RECORDS"

"A Love Like That," the Herbert Marshall-Barbara Stanwyck RKO-Radio picture, known for a time as "Here Comes the Groom," will be released, unless somebody changes his mind again, as "Breakfast for Two."

And Paramount's Gilbert Roland-Marsha Hunt production of Zane Grey's "Arizona Ames," retitled "Riders of the Panamints" after a period in production as "Buckaroo," is going to be released as "Gun Smoke," if that's all right with everybody, because Mr. Grey said it wouldn't be quite right to call it "Riders of the Panamints" because the Panamints are in California instead of Arizona.

Please correct your records and stand by.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

The Arbitrary Advertising Budget

You can't say the bossman is all wrong. And you can't blame the condition entirely on the manager. But since one of the visiting brothers brought up the subject again, it may be well for us all to sit down and give a bit of going over to the weaknesses and virtues of restricting theatremen to a rigid budget in advertising outlay.

The average exhibitor-executive concerned with the operations of anywhere from 20 to 100 houses, for instance, is often concerned with what might be termed the lack of uniformity in his circuit's personnel values and importantly so as has to do with managerial manpower. Unless every situation is in the hands of a capable theatreman who knows his showmanship and the possibilities of his operation, the bossman may have good reason to conclude that all of his managers are not sufficiently gaited to determine day-in and day-out just how strong to go in spending hard earned dollars to bring in enough extra at the boxoffice.

Secondly, even if the executive is satisfied with his managerial lineup, he is tempted by reason of his position and experience to act as a court of final appeal on extra appropriations requested by managers for projected campaigns, individual or institutional. In this, he is often guided by a reasonable desire to hold down the nut wherever possible. The same position on the subject is often taken by district supervisors, for generally they, too, are indoctrinated with the virtues of spending as little as possible to obtain problematical grosses.

Thirdly, and no less important to contend with is the situation of the average manager. He is impressed at all times with the necessity of exploiting his coming attractions and in his desire to show the same satisfactory progress reported by more talented fellow-workers is liable to splurge on advertising expenditures even though the expected returns at the boxoffice are not always what they should be.

There may be other reasons for advertising budget control but these set down can be accepted as indications of the executive's views. And since he believes or is forced to believe that "a dollar saved is a dollar earned" the bossman sits down and arrives at an arbitrary weekly figure or percentage for each of his houses which may not always be the correct answer.

Your active, capable and ambitious manager, however, feels differently and his reactions to such executive reasoning are also to be considered. The manager is the lad right on the ground. He claims familiarity with local conditions. He asserts his ability in knowing as much if not more about his individual situation as his superior, what it needs and when. Thus your able theatreman forced into a position far from his liking and one he feels penalizes his talents, refuses to accept the home office findings, at least quietly. And so the argument rages from year to year without completely satisfying either exhibitor or manager.

A solution? Yes, there is one, and it seems to be working out in circuit operations where the individual manager is allowed latitude in deciding his own advertising expenditures. In short, put every man at "scratch" for a period long enough to discover how capably each manager goes about the business of spending when allowed to make his own decisions. The results in actual figures will answer many of the arguments.

The exhibitor who adopts the arbitrary budget for all hands must be prepared to discount a definite percentage of expected increased takings in situations where the device inclines to handicap the initiative of managers who can "stand without hitching."

THE ADMIRABLE CIRCUIT ORGAN

The list of papers published for the information of circuit personnel that highlight boxoffice and social activities in the various houses, continues to expand. Among the most recent received and studied with interest is to be included "Carry On," sponsored by Ted Schlanger, Warner Philadelphia Zone headman and ably edited by his crew of keen publicists.

As a morale builder and goodwill cementer, the circuit house organ does an admirable job of work that more than compensates for the time and effort expended in its publication.

There should be more of them.

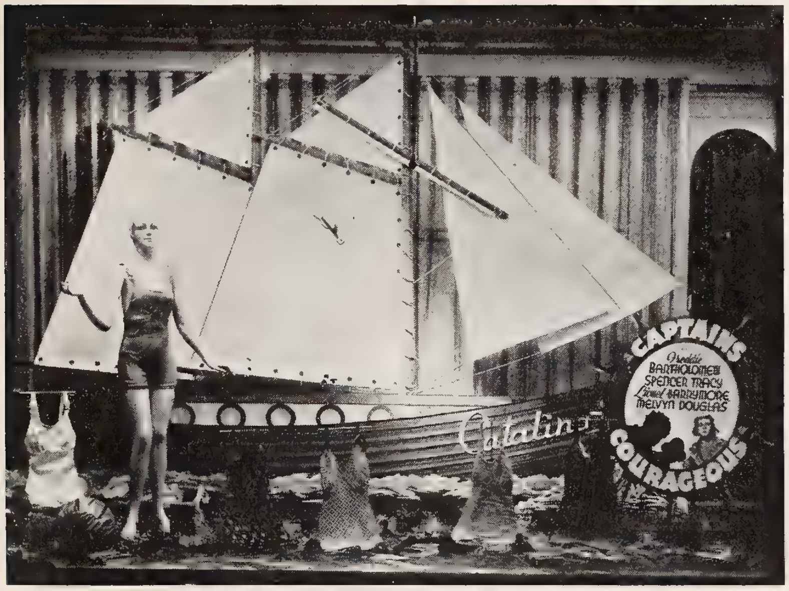
Quigley Plaque Winners for July

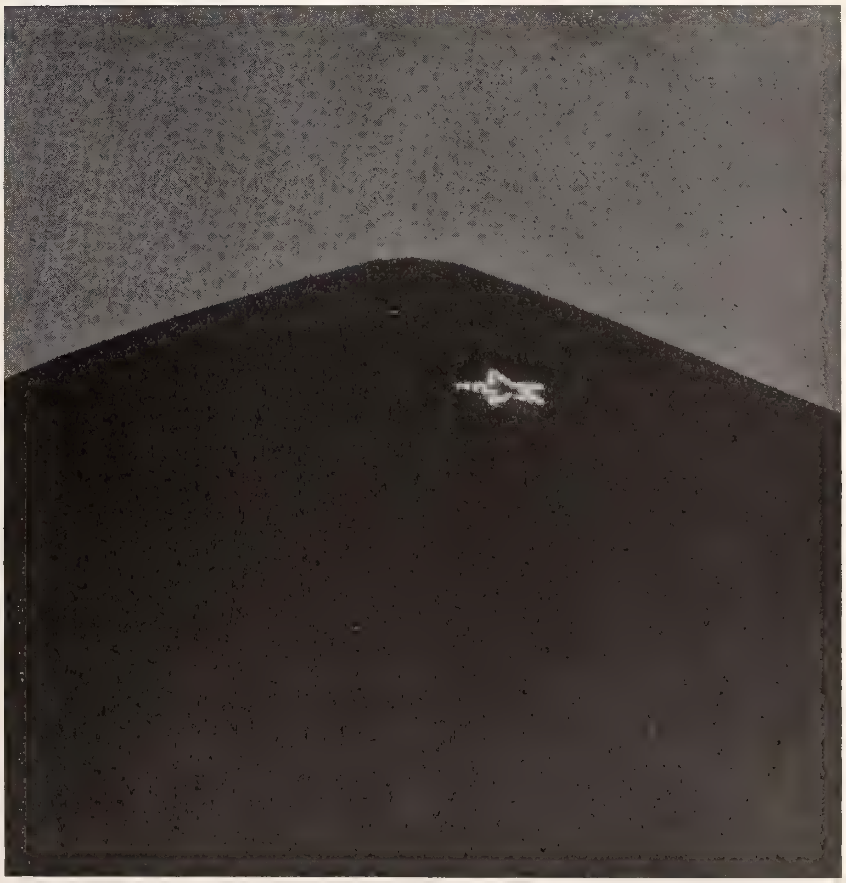
Immediate above is pictured Manager Ted Kirkmeyer, Rio Theatre, Helena, Mont., voted the Quigley July Silver Plaque for his campaign on United Artists "Star Is Born." Kirkmeyer is the first theatreman in his state and also the first of his circuit, Fox Intermountain, to win Plaque honors. Details of his winning entry will be found on another page of this section.

Another first-timer to take down Quigley Plaque mention in his state and circuit is Manager E. A. "Pat" Patchen (above, right). Patchen, skipper of the Cooper Enterprises Main Theatre, in Pueblo, Colo., was awarded the July Bronze on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Captains Courageous." Highlights of his entry are set down on a following page and also shown here are reproductions of some of the featured exploitations of both Plaque campaigns.



Among the highlights of Pat Patchen's campaign on "Captains Courageous" was a series of impressive windows in the better locations. Featured was a promotion of women's beachwear with leading department store, background of display being sailboat setpiece which previously had been planted in theatre lobby for advance showing. The Bronze winner devoted much of his campaign to arouse women appeal, with many of his ideas pointed to interest the other sex.

Reported to be one of the outstanders effected by Ted Kirkmeyer on "Star Is Born" was a giant star erected on side of mountain overlooking the city and illuminated at night following a fireworks display. Star measured 280 feet and lighting was supplied by railroad flares set off by committee of 30 stationed around the star, each holding individual flares and igniting them on prearranged signal from the city, which was announced widely in advance.



QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Hospital Stuff

Novel gag was used by Dick Moss, Fox Boulevard, Los Angeles, for "Internes Can't Take Money" by promoting for use in front of theatre a scale with special device for testing heartbeats. Copy on machine read "test your heart beats to see if you can stand the thrills." Another stunt for further bally was stationing of ambulance in front of theatre with interne in constant attendance to answer questions and plug picture. Dick also invited internes from two local hospitals to attend special showing. Inner lobby display contained surgical cabinet containing instruments, operating table, sterilizer, ultraviolet and infra-red lamps all promoted from cooperating hospital.

Baby Contest

Baby popularity contest at the Orpheum in Fulton, Ky., was found sufficiently interesting by Manager Burgess Waltmon to promote a lot of unusual space from merchants invited to cooperate. Waltmon promoted gratis three full co-op pages plus the sponsorship of the paper which ran front page stories on the tiein and also coupons for the voting.

Bike Race

Held at local sports arena in Melbourne, Australia, George Griffith, Jr., Hoyts Suburban Theatres for "Swing Time" date planted a bicycle race during interval of recent football game. Mayor presented prize to winner and praised the picture over p.a. system. Through tieup with juvenile talent school, two theatres featured an Astaire-Rogers dancing chorus, boys dressed as Astaire and girls as Rogers wearing replicas of one of the star's gowns worn in the picture.

At all circuit's houses during the run, cardboard disks were attached to front and back wheels on either side of bicycles advertising stars, playdates and theatre. For Street bally boys rode bannered tandem bikes and "swing" dancing championships were held in each theatre.

Newspaper Stunt

Impressive newspaper tieup was effected for "Saratoga" by Ray Bell, Loew's, Washington, D. C., paper running a series of six scene stills from various Harlow pictures. Readers were offered vacation trip to nearby resort for best letter on which role they liked best and why.

ED BECK ANNOUNCES FOOTBALL TIEIN

With the opening of the pigskin season now under way, N. Edward Beck, MGM exploiteer, has already arranged with the Deseret News of Salt Lake City to conduct weekly football pool on leading games. Tiein with local Paramount Theatre offers weekly prizes for best guesses and seasonal prize of tickets and transportation to Rose Bowl game.

Dance Tieup

Five weeks ahead of "Champagne Waltz" opening at the Capitol, Melbourne, Australia, James L. Thornley, general manager and Eric E. Wahlquist, advertising manager, tied up with local dance hall to sponsor a "champagne waltz" contest for which prizes were awarded. Stunt started with seven couples giving demonstration of the new dance. Advertising material was well displayed in the dance hall and couples giving the best interpretation were selected each evening and presented with two bottles of promoted champagne.

Columnist

In the widely read "You, the People" column, daily page one feature of the Cleburne, Texas, Times Review, George Limerick's date on "Mountain Music" at the Yale Theatre received some additional publicity by neat kidding from the columnist. Cut of Elmer Davis, who appears in the picture, was used to illustrate the yarn.

Opening

Newlyweds

"Waikiki Wedding" for three days ahead of opening at the Diana Theatre, Medina, N. Y., was publicized by Allen Newhall with decorated car driving a newly married couple throughout countryside within a radius of 20 miles.

Bally Truck

Week ahead of "Mountain Music" opening at the Colfax, South Bend, Ind., Guy Martin used truck decorated with compo board mountain cabin, heads of Bob Burns and Martha Raye filling the window spaces. On the back of truck various hill billy characters lent further atmosphere, touring surrounding sections where handbills were distributed.

Autographed photos of the stars were distributed to all children attending special matinee show and for adult teaser giveaway, corn cob pipes with sticker carrying title and playdates attached to stem were given to all gentlemen patrons week ahead. Displays made to resemble old wooden signs were placed in prominent spots on all leading highways entering South Bend.

Special Section

Special section of the Brantford Daily Expositor was devoted to congratulatory messages to Ernie Moule for the reopening of the Capitol, Brantford, Ontario. First page carried cut of Mayor MacBride with his message to the citizens and statement that he would officially open the house. Photo was also run of Ernie together with biography of his years in show business, stories on forthcoming attractions and plugs for the new equipment, etc.

Beery Clubs

Wallace Beery's frequent visits to Utah were occasion enough for Charlie Pincus, Capitol, Salt Lake City, in response to the demands made by the Fan Club members, to feature a double-bill program of two of the star's past outstanding successes, "Billy the Kid" and "Hell Divers," one of the ads being reproduced on a following page. Members of the newsboys' scout press club attended an invitational showing, boys signing their names in club book which was forwarded to the star.

Stuffed Ostrich

For the reissue of "Trader Horn" at the Community, Miami Beach, Fla., Manager James Barnett dressed a negro as an African native riding about town seated on stuffed ostrich planted on sound truck. Barnett further dressed his front with grass, palms, etc., covering both sides on which were mounted picture copy.

JULY AWARDS PLAQUE CAMPAIGNS FEATURED BY OUTSTANDING TIEINS

Spectacular Exploitations and Effective Contests Arranged by Kirkmeyer and Patchen on Entries Voted Quigley Honors

Using a star as the trademark, so to speak, on his campaign for "Star Is Born" at the Rio, Helena, Mont., Manager Ted Kirkmeyer arranged a number of effective stunts, contests and displays incorporating this device. Weeks in advance Kirkmeyer planted a six foot illuminated star atop the theatre painting the surface with metallic flitter with cutout title letters nailed on the face. Outer edge was lined with three bands of illuminated lights in three colors and 100 watt lamps placed at the five points of the star. Sign was wired to a flasher.

This was followed up with a series of heavy wallboard stars of different sizes lettered with the title and attached to prominent locations all over the city. Stars varied in size from four to eight feet, in all some sixteen of the best locations secured for the tiein.

As effective and even more spectacular was another star stunt employed by the Round Tabler in which Mount Helena which overlooks the city was utilized as the background for a gigantic star which was laid out with wire and measured 280 feet from tip to tip. The star was illuminated in a fireworks display at night in which aerial bombs were set off from the five points to be followed by a series of exploding sky rockets and finally the illumination of the star itself which was accomplished with railroad flares. Kirkmeyer reports the cooperation of a committee of 30 which stationed at various points of the star illuminated the flares at a given signal.

Arranges Three Contests

Contests were numerous. The first was an identification slant for which Kirkmeyer obtained a series of photos of leading stars and had these pasted on specially imprinted and lettered cards which also carried explanatory copy. The idea of the contest was to secure as many windows as possible and since their display would insure to the merchants widespread attention, Ted had little difficulty in securing the best stores in town to work with him. Entrants were instructed to look in all the downtown windows for the contest photos and to those correctly listing the names guest tickets were given.

A baby photo contest was also arranged in cooperation with local photographer, newspapers announcing the competition and the photographer setting aside main window for the entries. No voting angle was involved, the winners being selected by a committee of judges, first prize being silver loving cup. The baby angle was utilized further by a tiein with leading department store to sponsor a baby week in which the title was incorporated in the store advertising and prominently displayed in the windows. The manager also arranged for a baby shower, local merchants contributing a layette for the first baby born on the opening day of the picture.

AUGUST DEADLINE AND AUGUST JUDGES

As announced in last week's issue, the deadline for the Quigley August Awards has been set for midnight of Wednesday, September 8th. This leaves exactly 10 days from date for entrants to get their campaigns to Quigley Headquarters.

Judges asked to serve for August include John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox; S. Charles Einfeld, Warner Bros. Pictures, and Louis Frisch, Randforce Theatres.

A third contest confined to high school students took the form of a resemblance idea which the high school paper publicized widely as did the local dailies. Another cooperation that earned the support of the schools was an exhibit of photos furnished by United Artists of pictures showing various phases of the feature in production. Photos were shown at the school, in libraries and also in prominent windows.

Mayor Proclaims Theatre Week

Since Helena is known as the home town of some of today's leading stars, Kirkmeyer was able to sell the Mayor on the idea of a special Theatre Week in honor of these local sons and daughters. Endorsed by the city council the Mayor proclaimed the week which started on the opening day of the picture, papers running a photo of the executive handing a copy of the proclamation to one of the theatre usherettes. Wires from all members of the cast to the Mayor were arranged for from Hollywood.

Featured also and prominently by Kirkmeyer was a citywide picnic in which the entire community cooperated. The city park was set aside for the event, refreshments promoted. The highlight of the party was a plane stunt wherein the pilot dropped lettered star points which when brought to the theatre were good for a free admission at a special morning show. In addition many other prizes were promoted.

Co-op windows secured for the date were topped by one of the Janet Gaynor original costumes modeled by local beauty. Other tieups included "star" badges worn by employees in leading stores, kiddie dance revues, giant banners across main street, personal announcements from the stage and elaborate street parade, among other slants arranged on this campaign that won for Kirkmeyer the Quigley Silver for July.

Featured exploitations in both the Kirkmeyer and Patchen campaigns are illustrated in the Round Table photo section of this issue.

The three main objectives set down by Manager E. A. "Pat" Patchen for his campaign on "Captains Courageous" were, first, to arouse women appeal, second, build up the importance of the picture, third, fight outdoor and seasonal opposition. To accomplish the first, Patchen arranged with the Juvenile Court judge to sentence a girl to see the picture, had a leading clubwoman broadcast a talk on the date, stuffed laundry bags, distributed blotters to office girls, contacted Campfire girls, put a girl out on the street to distribute heralds.

The second main point was reached with a Hollywood premiere including lobby broadcast, special lighting and all the local prominents in attendance. Three-week advance campaign was employed and highly elaborate front created for the event. To lick the summer opposition, Patchen went after the crowds at swimming pools, in parks, recreational centers, in cars. Tug-of-war contests at ball park, 24-sheet A-board on float moving from place to place, parade and band concert on opening night, tagging parked cars, etc., were some of the slants used to reach these sources for the date at the Main, Pueblo, Colo.

Well ahead, a huge setpiece of a sailboat in motion was constructed for lobby showing bordered with ships' wheels carrying theatre copy and cutouts of the players. Standees, and specially -paneled shadow boxes were placed on stair landings, three-sheets pasted on lobby floor. Front was decorated with strings of ship's flags, giant cutout star heads, valance and side panels with a 24-sheet pasted on sidewalk directly in front of the house and covered with liquid water glass. Sea atmosphere was carried out through entire lobby with use of marine equipment and uniformed sea scouts on hand to distributed heralds.

Patchen also put on radio program wherein students of local college drama club did a 15-minute broadcast of the picture. Radio review was arranged for on the evening of the opening day and questions having to do with Kipling, the picture, fishing, etc., were asked on a "man-on-the-street" program.

Amateurs Review Picture

In addition to a strong ad campaign, Pat arranged to secure a co-op ad page and also obtained newepaper cooperation for an amateur critics' contest. To the entrant writing the best review on the picture was given a six-week paid assignment by the paper to write reviews of attractions at the Main Theatre. With another daily Patchen arranged a special showing for underprivileged children publicised as sponsored by Freddie Bartholomew. Children not having the admission money were allowed in free on presentation of letters from adult.

The Hollywood premiere was built up closing the theatre after the matinee on the day before regular opening in preparation for the premiere at night. The proceedings were accompanied by the usual trimmings and in addition Patchen organized a parade with police escort through the center of the

Tokyo "Horizon" Campaign Started 11 Months Ahead

Aiming at all classes of Japanese theatre patrons, the Columbia Tokyo branch heads started the advance on the picture almost a year ahead in varioues fan magazines and other publications and followod with a wide post card campaign by direct mail. Campaign was strengthened as the date for showing neared at both the Hibiya Eiga Gekijo and the Toyoko Eiga Gekijo, leading first-run houses.

Stressed were posting of special and regular one-sheets. Over 100 24-stands were used for the local date and advertising balloons displayed in four of the most prominent Tokyo locations. Bus signs were utilized and three-sheets planted in suburban railroad stations, public bath-houses and other prominent locations.

Tieins included hookin with leading confectionery manufacturer to display posters in all retail chain stores of the company and to imprint reverse of sales slips with picture advertising. Also promoted were small bags of candy for giveaway, each containing a frame of film from the picture. Merchant co-op ads were also arranged in leading Tokyo papers and folding screens were displayed at strategic points about city, each carrying production scene stills, title, playdates, etc.

Parade of sandwichmen was arranged, each wearing coat with title lettered on back and squads of kimona girls were also used, girls carrying parasols with the title in Japanese lettering. Exhibition of picture material was shown at prominent stores and featured in the newspaper campaign was a special edition put out by one of the prominent dailies.

town with decorated floats, Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, etc., all led by brass band which gave concert in front of house. Powerful searchlights were obtained, bombs fired from the theatre roof at three-minute intervals followed by fireworks supervised by city fire department.

Electric organ set up in lobby furnished music amplified by p.a. system for entertainment of waiting crowds, important locals were interviewed on the picture over the radio, print of the picture forwarded by plane was met at airport by City Commissioners. Branch offices were opened in downtown stores for advance sale and postcards handwritten and addressed locally were sent to New York to be mailed from the metropolis to the Pueblo direct mail list.

Co-op windows included beachware display in leading department store, ships' background and picture copy used for background. Also effective was another window showing a miniature electrical city featuring theatre front with "Courageous" display. Patchen was able to promote from drug stores a number of animations showing fishermen and boats in motion and previously used to advertise cod liver oil products. With copy changed to sell the picture, these proved to be highly effective at little cost.

In addition to other items mentioned, the July Bronze Plaque winner arranged for bulletin type telegrams to be sent to all club meetings, distributed imprinted sailor caps to newsboys, lifeguards and special heralds by girls costumed in sailor costumes attired thus for added atmosphere.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 87

(A) What does magnetic force represent?

(B) If a.c. current be sent through a wire wound around and in close proximity to a bar of iron, what will occur and what will govern the amount of that effect?

(C) How is the density of a magnetic field considered and described?

(D) What is "residual magnetism"?

This week only one question was asked because it dealt with a very important matter. Many of the above received credit largely by courtesy, their answers being quite too brief to convey any adequate idea as to how well the matter was understood.

The following answer is by R. and K. Wells:

"A glare spot in a motion picture theatre auditorium may be defined as a spot of concentrated white light considerably more bright than its immediate surroundings. We say white light, though it is true a glare spot in modified form may be set up by concentrated colored light, but such light would of necessity have to be much brighter in order to equal the effect of white light. Moreover, we do not believe some colors could be made to constitute a true glare spot, except when the illumination is very high indeed. Of course, to be a glare spot as indicated by the question, it must be within view of at least some portion of the theatre audience.

"The effect of glare spots is cumulative for a time after entering a theatre auditorium when projection is in progress. This is because the eyes of those entering have usually been exposed to much brighter illumination, hence the pupils are contracted. But in a short while the eyes adjust themselves to semi-darkness, the pupils dilate and admit more light. They then are more suspectible to the effect of spots of light that are brighter than their immediate surroundings. The effect is felt, even though such spots of light may be less bright than the screen itself. Their sharp contrast with immediate surroundings is what makes them annoying.

"The injurious effect of such spots does not stop there. The eyes may be said to be worked pretty nearly at capacity when viewing a motion picture continuously for from two to three hours under the best possible condition, though under such conditions no undue strain is imposed. But if, in addition, a glare spot must be viewed for an equal length of time, strain is imposed, very possibly to such an extent that slight headache results. Different people have eyes more or less susceptible to such outrage. Some indeed hardly feel it at all unless the effect be very bad. Others feel the effect of even a moderately bad glare spot, either by having their eyes smart or burn, or by a headache, or by both.

"Many managers fail to realize the damage being done by such spots of light for the reason that their eyes happen to be more or less immune to their effect, or they seldom sit in such position that the glow is visible for a sufficiently long time to get the full effect."

Nearly three hundred employees of the International Projector Corporation attended the 20th annual outing of the company at Semler's Midland Park, Staten Island, N. Y., last Saturday. The manufacturing company's staff, executives and clerks alike are pictured above during the affair which has long since become a respected tradition. Brief addresses in the interludes of play were made by R. C. Kneuer, chairman of the outing committee; Earle G. Hines, president; L. S. Frappier, H. Griffin and K. Carson.

OBITUARIES

Charles Midgley, Pioneer Exhibitor Dies in Oakland

Charles William Midgley, pioneer motion picture exhibitor, died at his home in Oakland, California, on Wednesday evening, August 11th. He had been in ill health for three years. He was 72 years old.

Born in Nephi, Utah, on September 21st, 1864, Mr. Midgley moved with his parents to Salt Lake City, and in 1888 married Josephine B. Vissing of Vejle, Denmark, in that city. He entered the interior decorating business there and also built several of Salt Lake City's first apartment houses.

In 1908 Mr. Midgley became one of the country's earliest pioneers in the exhibiting field of the motion picture industry, opening and operating his first motion picture theatre, "The Casino." Soon followed "The Liberty" and "The American," which at that time was considered the largest motion picture theatre west of the Mississippi River, having a seating capacity of 3,000, a 25-piece symphony orchestra, and one of the world's largest pipe organs.

In 1915 Mr. Midgley moved to Oakland, where, during the past 24 years, he has operated the original Alameda and Franklin Theatres; the American Theatre and, of more recent date, the Ritz Theatre.

Mr. Midgley is survived by his widow, two sons, Van Vissing of Berkeley, and Charles William, Jr., of Oakland; a granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Deane Midgley of Berkeley, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. William Perry and Miss May Midgley, both of Salt Lake City, and five bothers, John, Ephraim, Benjamin, Joshua and Earl, all of Salt Lake City.

Services were held in Oakland, from whence the remains were taken to Salt Lake City for interment.

Federal Judge John M. Woolsey dismissed the $1,000,000 plagiarism suit of Allan Caruthers against RKO Radio over the picture "Cimarron" holding that he found "no basis for the charge of literary larceny."

Asks End of ASCAP Action

A motion has been filed in United States District court at Lincoln, Neb., by the state Attorney General's office seeking dismissal of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' suit attacking validity of the last legislature's statute outlawing the organization in Nebraska. A three-judge Federal court is to hear the ASCAP suit in Omaha September 11 unless the Attorney General's motion is granted.

Warners File Denial

Warner Brothers filed a general denial in United States District court this week in answer to the $500,000 libel action brought by Casino Productions and Yermi Stern. The action originated in the New York Supreme court and was transferred to the Federal court because of diversity of citizenship. The complaint charges the reputation of the plaintiffs was damaged in the Warner picture, "Go Into Your Dance."

Columbia and Circuit Sued

Moses Lopez of Kansas City, Kans., filed suit in circuit court there August 20 against Columbia Pictures and Fox Midwest, alleging that August 11, 12, and 13, the Fox Plaza at Ottawa, Kans., showed "The Devil Is Driving," and in connection with the exhibition, displayed a wrecked car in front which bore the placard, "This Wreck Was Caused by a Devil Driver." The car, Lopez alleges, was his, and he was driving it July 14 when it was wrecked.

Because, Lopez's petition asserts, the picture purports to show the dangers of drunken driving, the display of the motor car reflected on him, and carried the false impression that he was drunk when the accident occurred.

Stock Increase Granted

The National Theatre Supply Company, Delaware, in Oklahoma City, has been granted an increase in capital stock from $18,844.01 to $19,459.86, it has been announced by the secretary of state.

"Vogues of 1938"

brings
Universal Acclaim for Technicolor

"... We doubt if there was a man or woman, producer or director, writer or artist, who did not carry home (from the preview of 'Vogues of 1938') the desire of doing a picture in color and doing it as soon as possible. ... With 'A Star is Born' and 'Vogues of 1938' the value of color has now been established, demanding a greater consideration for this new technical advantage because it most definitely adds attractiveness to pictures thereby creating box-office."

William R. Wilkerson, Tradeviews,
Hollywood Reporter.

"... If color has never been a box office asset before, this picture ('Vogues of 1938') will make it one."

Hollywood Reporter.

"... Technicolor advances by a great stride toward the day when all important pictures will be prismatic."

Daily Variety.

"Showmanship with a capital $ . . . Technicolor has never been used more effectively."

Variety.

"Sharing honors with the producer is Technicolor, the very essence of the picture, which establishes another new high for beauty and perfection in color photography."

Box Office.

"The production is manifestly the most thoroughgoing glorification of pigmentation yet undertaken."

J. C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Hampton, Iowa

Dear Herald:

If we were to pick out a spot in Iowa, or in this western country in general for that matter, as the banner spot of the United States, we'd pick Hampton. There are two reasons for this. One that it is located in the best agricultural country on earth, and the other reason that our very good friend Charlie Peterson operates two swell theatres here.

We called on him last night and had a delightful visit with him and his most excellent wife and son. Charlie was playing "Saratoga," with Clark Gable and Jean Harlow.

We don't know just how large Hampton is, but we would guess it to be somewhere around eight thousand. Anyhow, it is a mighty fine town in a mighty fine country, and it has two mighty fine theatres and as swell a manager as any town, barring none. Charlie is strong for the HERALD; says it is necessary to the correct management of any theatre.

Iowa should have had us come over here sooner to bring them rain. It has rained every day we have been here. It is raining now, looks like it would keep up all day. This rain will put the corn crop in the bag, but it is going to take a mighty big bag to hold it. As we said before, we can't figure out what they will do with all this corn. We know what they would do with it down in Arkansaw and Kentucky; they could make a lot of "White Mule" with it down there.

There is no sense in anyone going to Hartley without going to the Capitol theatre and meeting Charlie Sartorius and his very estimable wife. We called there and had a delightful visit with them, just as we always do, and this reminds us to say that northern Iowa has as swell a bunch of theatre managers as there are in the business and the business has a lot of them. Hartley is also located in as fine a country as there is, and we judge that Charlie is doing a very good business.

L. W. Nolan operates the New Legion theatre at Ruthven, and while there are no street cars or stop lights in Ruthven everybody stops at the New Legion theatre, and listen, Mabel, you will find Mr. Nolan about as swell a fella as you ever met. We had a very delightful visit with him and we hope to go back sometime.

We never get within a whole lot of miles without going to Rolfe and visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Obrecht, who operate Rolfe's popular playhouse. We called at their home and had our usual pleasant visit with them. They have as lovely a home as one would care to have, well shaded with beautiful trees and a fine bluegrass lawn without a dandelion in it. If it was our lawn it would require the entire C.C.C. force all summer to dig up the—dandelions, and they could put in their Sundays working on grasshoppers.

Mr. Jack Bouma still operates the theatre at Pocahontas, and we drove clear down there to see him. Jack, you know, is the boy who beat the socks off us once playing golf, and Jack probably could do it again, for he holds the belt as the best golfer in northwest Iowa. We like to play golf, that is, we used to like it, but we wish the boys would show us a little more consideration. Jack wouldn't show us any but he did show us the best projection and the best sound in his theatre that we ever have seen or heard in any theatre, and we have been in a lot of the big ones. Pocahontas can surely be proud of her theatre and the manager. Jack was determined that we should renew his subscription to the HERALD although it had over a year to run yet, but he said he didn't want to miss a copy and we might not be around again soon. We were sorry we didn't get to see Mrs. Bouma.

W. B. Frank has the Humota theatre at Humbolt, and his theatre pass indicates that he also is connected with theatres at Bodie, Livermore, Luverne, Bradgate, Ottosen, Thor, Hardy, Rutland and Gilmore. You should meet W. B. You will find him a very fine chap and you will find Mrs. Frank a very fine lady. We wish we could have had more time to visit with them, but tempus fugits, or something like that.

These boys all gave us theatre passes for Gertrude Merriam of the "Round Table" department of the HERALD. Thanks to you and all the others on behalf of Miss Merriam. We know she appreciates your courtesy.

Mr. Smith at Clarion is soon to open a new theatre. He hopes to have it opened this fall, or winter, at the latest. He is certainly a mighty swell manager to meet. He treated us just like one of the family, just as he always does every time we call on him. Clarion is also surrounded by "The Tall Corn"—you know that out here is where the tall corn grows—and if Mr. Smith don't have good business this fall then the balance of the country might as well fold up and go fishing.

We got a letter from Mrs. Zeb Hopkins back in Indiana, and she said that Zeb had a couple of beagle hounds they wanted to sell to the government to use on the "shelterbelt" during the dry weather. You know that beagle hounds are very excellent for shelterbelts. Zeb says he will sell 'em cheap.

It has stopped raining now and we can get on the road, so let's stop right here and get hold of the wheel.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Ambassador-Conn-Melody

SING WHILE YOU'RE ABLE: Pinky Tomlin—I set this feature with "Tundra" for four days, Sunday opening against "Slave Ship" for opposition, and much to my amazement the box office fairly clicked and held up for a satisfactory four-day run. "Sing While You're Able" is a big improvement over last Pinky Tomlin offering. Pinky will step into big time soon. Watch him.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Burroughs-Tarzan

TUNDRA: Del Cambre—I set this feature with "Sing While You're Able" for four days, Sunday opening and against "Slave Ship" for opposition, and much to my amazement the box office fairly clicked and held up for a satisfactory four-day run. "Tundra" is the most unusual picture realized in years.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Columbia

CODE OF THE RANGE: Charles Starrett, Mary Blake—A little better than normal business for this type of attraction. It pleased but some of our patrons laughed at parts of the direction. They ask why a director allows his highwaymen to rob a stage coach and make no pretense at disguising themselves? Played August 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

I PROMISE TO PAY: Leo Carrillo, Chester Morris—This programmer makes excellent entertainment. Average program business. Played June 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PAROLE RACKET: Paul Kelly, Rosalind Keith—Our patrons came expecting to see an expose of the parole system which the press material promised but instead found only a routine cops and robbers story. However, the picture is not without its entertaining moments and is quite adequate for action days and double bills. Just don't stress the parole angle and there will doubtless be few complaints.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—We had no complaints on this one. Bing Crosby is a showman beyond question. Average business. Played August 4-5.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RACKETEERS IN EXILE: George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable—The modern version of an evangelistic racket. The choir is effective in the closing reels, even if their music does seem somewhat jazzed up. Played June 22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—Good programmer. Running time, 67 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

First National

BULLETS OR BALLOTS: Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell—A good gangster or G-Man picture. It shows gangsters in all their dishonesty, depravity, brutality and proves that honest officials, as played by Robinson, could, if brave enough, overcome a condition that is becoming a menace to the country.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, N. D. Small town patronage.

CASE OF THE STUTTERING BISHOP, THE: Ann Dvorak, Donald Woods—Very good mystery picture which was well liked. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 4-5.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—Fine picture that did not do a lot of business for us, although it drew all those who are interested in airplane advancement.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent, Marcia Mae Jones—A very strong drama. That young girl who had the sob role, sister of Hutchinson, was swell. We always like Brent and Hutchinson. Running time, 82 minutes. July 30-31.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN: Hugh Herbert, Mary Maguire, Tom Brown—Very good. They may kill Hugh Herbert with too much to do in these features. He is best in support. And that little Maguire girl is a honey. The trailer on this subject did not do her justice at all. But the feature showed great possibilities. Why is it that they take such poor material for the trailers when they are supposed to do business instead of driving it away? Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 6-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British

SILENT BARRIERS: Richard Arlen, Lili Palmer, Barry Mackay. The best box office picture we have had from Gaumont British. Picture is chuck full of action and the scenery is marvelous. We enjoyed a very nice business on this one and have booked it solid through our portable circuit of twenty-four situations.—Harry Weber, Rialto Theatre, Hood River, Ore. Small town patronage.

Grand National

DAMAGED GOODS: Pedro de Cordoba—Get behind this one and it will do the biz. Give it plenty of advertising. Played Friday and Saturday to mixed audiences. Four times normal business on Friday. Rained out on Saturday but still brought near normal gross for the day. Here is a well made picture that every man, woman and child should see. Nothing offensive or suggestive. Audience reaction good. Received plenty of comment both before and after showing.—W. D. White, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—A fair sized Cagney production. Good enough as a programmer but not as Class A stuff. Played July 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SINS OF CHILDREN: Eric Linden, Cecelia Parker—Not a moron type of picture such as the title suggests. In fact this is one of the cleanest and best pictures of the year. The title packs them in and the picture helps to make you new customers.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BETWEEN TWO WOMEN: Franchot Tone, Virginia Brice, Maureen O'Sullivan—Excellent production in any spot.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BIG HOUSE, THE: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery, Lewis Stone—This picture is a re-issue that I wish we had not bought. Women went out of their way to tell me it was terrible. A story of ruthlessness and unfairness in a prison. What I didn't like personally was the emphasis on holding "stool pigeons" up to scorn. It is a religion among criminals that it is a greater sin to "tell" than it is to commit crime. This attitude is already found as a problem with all employers and even teachers. Our own help has formed a confederacy among themselves not to tell on each other when they waste time, ruin materials, carry on in a way they know they should not. An honest person is a rare jewel and immediately hated by his fellow workers unless they can bring pressure on him to overlook their shortcomings. I do not like pictures that increase this attitude. There is too much of it already.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

EMPEROR'S CANDLESTICKS, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—Costume picture and slow in tempo. It is a picture for the intelligentsia and those we had but some of the masses walked out on it. In other words it is a class picture and as such with lovely Miss Rainer it drew a fair business. But I don't want many like it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—Wonderful production in any spot. Running time, 130 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—Costume type of picture which usually fails in this type of community did big business. Thanks to MGM's big buildup and a lot of exploitation on our part. If you can get a good opening day, the picture takes care of itself after that. Running time, 138 minutes. Played August 8-12.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

GOOD OLD SOAK: Wallace Beery, Betty Furness—This fell away down at the box office. A partial reason may have been the fact that many confused it with "Old Hutch" and thought they had seen it. A keen disappointment with us. Played July 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOBODY'S BABY: Patsy Kelly, Robert Armstrong, Lyda Roberti—Good comedy drama. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—Played it on Bank Night and not to a large crowd. Was enjoyed for story part, not for its stars. Rather dragged. Could have been half as long and would have pleased more. Was much too slow for the majority of my patrons. Running time, 119 minutes. Played August 4-5.—E. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—Another MGM hit and Clark Gable at his best. I would like to see this boy make more pictures. He has what it takes and seems to be a regular pal. Myrna is O. K. too and they brought me in dough like it was a Sunday and Monday picture. Pleased all and I showed it for the same low price that I always do—5-10-15c. Don't let it get too old. Play it now. Running time, 116 minutes. Played August 12-13.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

THEY GAVE HIM A GUN: Spencer Tracy, Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Well, sir, MGM has made another hit. It looks like these boys do think of someone else besides themselves. Tracy at his best and Gladys George on her way to town. Tone is always a pulling card in my town. Played this on a Sunday and Monday and packed them in and pleased all. Give us some more Metro. Running time, 94 minutes. Played August 8-9.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Cary Grant—A good entertaining picture. Improbable but good entertainment. You can step on this one. Played August 1-3.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant, Roland Young—A superb comedy. One of the best in many a long time. Packed with hilarious situations. Should do a fine business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town Patronage.

TOPPER: Cary Grant, Constance Bennett—Here's a natural. We were forced into preferred playing time and are we glad. Left all the patronage satisfied and made some of the big shots look bad at the box office. Needs plenty of exploitation and ties in perfectly with the safety councils. Running time, 96 minutes. Played August 15-18.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

SARATOGA: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—Good picture to extra large business. Pleased the fans and personally thought it Harlow's best in some time. Too much talk about the substitute but was there. Maybe that is what helped to get them in. Played August 4-5.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

SINNER TAKE ALL: Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay—Melodrama that pleased. Suspense is good until the last.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—A very funny comedy feature. Played June 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Monogram

BLAZING BARRIERS: Florine McKinney, Edward Arnold, Jr., Junior Coghlan—Hardly an auspicious debut for the new Monogram. No names, a trite story and cheap production make this a very ordinary picture which will suffice only on double bills and action dates where the patronage isn't particularly choosey. Junior Coghlan as the lead is miscast and young Arnold, Jr., is too inexperienced to be convincing. The story relates in fairly entertaining fashion the reformation of a petty thief of the New York tenements through the wholesome influence of a C.C.C. camp and a lovely young girl. A forest fire is the climax in which Arnold, Jr., sacrifices his life heroically. Miss Florine McKinney is by histrionic ability the real star of the picture and proves herself worthy of better opportunities. She has a nice singing voice and the acting assurance of a veteran but bad sound did not do justice to her songs. Our patrons were not impressed enough to say anything for or against this film, merely regarding it as just another picture on a double bill.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—What a honey! Entertainment with a capital E. Nothing to get you excited but just swell, interesting episodes all the way through. But it was not good enough to draw them away from a cheap tent show. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Here is a picture that will please all. It did me good to hear the frequent outbursts of laughter from our well filled house when we were showing this.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Lloyd Nolan, Claire Trevor—A good programmer. Played June 29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard—This repeat booking turned out quite satisfactorily. The picture is good, the print was fine and the folks were pleased and they turned out well for it. Played June 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Cary Cooper, Jean Arthur—The most perfect western epic drama ever filmed.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

TRAIL DUST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—An excellent western neatly produced. Should satisfy even non-western fans. Played July 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Republic

BOLD CABALLERO, THE: Bob Livingston, Heather Angel—Good show and good color. In places too many dark scenes make it hard to project but very entertaining. Played this as double bill and it is too long a program that way playing 16 reels or eight doubles. Running time, eight reels. Played August 6-7.—Rodolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

JOIN THE MARINES: Paul Kelly, June Travis—Nice program but too long for a double. Would be better with a two-reel comedy than another feature. As good a program we can expect from the small producers and just as good as any from the big producers. Running time, eight reels. Played August 6-7.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS: Bob Livingston, Syd Saylor, Ray Corrigan—Here is a combination that will make their series as outstanding as the Hopalongs.—C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur, Ill. General patronage.

RKO Radio

NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard, Milton Berle—It has been a long time since the manager had to hide when the audience came out. Don't let them see you after seeing this picture. Just awful, and the ending, there is no word to describe it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played August 7-8.—Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Only fair. These stars not so good here, however. Business below average. Played August 8-10.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—With this picture Joe E. Brown once more steps into the good graces of the movie fans. It's fast and furious and will send your customers out with a smile on their faces. Give Joe E. a good story and he'll come through. RKO has demonstrated it in this one.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster—Good show from any angle you look at it. A regular rough and tumble from start to finish. McLaglen good and all the cast supports him well. Running time, 10 reels. Played August 10-11.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Anton Walbrook, Margot Grahame, Elizabeth Allan—Almost a special. Great picture. Full of action. Good acting. Good for city or town anywhere. Played August 7.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Lily Pons, Gene Raymond—An improvement in weather conditions helped us and our business was slightly better than normal. We think Lily Pons is marvelous. Her flare for comedy is a great aid. Everybody satisfied. Played August 11-12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THERE GOES MY GIRL: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—Kept my people on their toes and they seemed to like it. Quite a good picture and will go over anywhere. Played July 24.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Very good program picture to poor business. Too hot. Not even the blower can keep 'em cooled off. That's why business is bad. Running time, 10 reels. Played August 8.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GREAT HOSPITAL MYSTERY, THE: Sally Blane, Thomas Beck—I can't understand what drew me a nice house on this one. Personally I didn't like it, but my patrons seem to go for it. Had above average business for the middle of the week and my competitor had a good show on also. Anyway it pleased and made us a little money and that is saying something when you show first runs for 5, 10, 15c. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—Almost a big special. Splendid picture. Simone Simon acting was fine, but her voice was so low that much of what she said was not clearly heard. Ending somewhat hazy as to what happened. Good, anyhow. Played July 17.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SLAVE SHIP: Wallace Beery, Warner Baxter—Good production in any spot. Running time, 93 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Passable programmer. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Alice Faye, Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly—One of the best musicals of the season. Did good mid-week business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen—Not up to par with other Temples. Although the picture was great, its drop at the box office can be attributed to the Khyber Pass and Bengal Lancer setting which scared away some of the adolescents. Running time, 99 minutes. Played August 1-4.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Joel McCrea—A fine picture that pleased all. The scenes in a lumbering camp were grand, the comedy and love interest well played, and held interest all the way through.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—A fine woman's picture, well produced and interesting to all. Shows up the foolishness of women of 40 trying to get out and look for attention that in the end ruins her happiness.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Sabu, Native Cast—Exhibitors cannot afford to pass this up for a Friday, Saturday showing. Don't be afraid to spread it on thick when you tell the public about this one. Because it has everything, story, action and real appeal. You can make big promises and your patrons will compliment you for giving them the privilege of seeing so wonderful a picture and such reaction naturally means good box office and what more do we small town exhibitors want. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 6-7.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino, Leo Carrillo—Was rather dubious of this picture for the week-end, but received a very gratifying box office attendance with no regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Jean Arthur, Charles Boyer—An excellent picture well played and holding the interest throughout with a smash climax, but it did not draw a cent. Running time, 97 minutes. Played August 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—Good entertainment that failed to draw flies. Played June 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

REMBRANDT: Charles Laughton, Gertrude Lawrence—An intelligent picture for adult audience. Definitely not the type for our spot. Played June 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—This picture is worth an extra bit of praise as it turned in a most satisfactory business on one of the hottest days of the year. The theatre going public seems to know what they want and are able to sense when a picture is good. Gaynor fans are pleased that she is being given a chance to show her real ability. Running time, 111 minutes. Played July 18.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—A harum scarum comedy with a laugh every minute which seemed to please our midweek crowd. Certainly ends up with a bang. Running time, 71 minutes. Played August 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Universal

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD: John Wayne, Louise Latimer—Wayne is gradually developing a following at our houses. As a western star, he was somewhat difficult to sell. Now sans horse and chaps, he is, next to Jack Holt, our best bet on action days when a strong action western picture is not available. This feature has about as much action as any roughneck could demand, what with fisticuffs, nitro explosions, truck wrecks and a race between a railway train and a caravan of trucks.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward—Pleased. Average business. Played July 31.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OH, DOCTOR: Edward Everett Horton—The exhibitor that runs this will need a battery of doctors and their stethoscopes as well. It is dumb directing and still dumber in story and acting. Just glorified two reel comedy that you could take off on the second show.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin, Ray Milland—Here is a swell picture from every point of view. One that should be played in every theatre. The singing of the little Deanna is marvelous. The picture is as a whole one that has an appeal to every person, young and old, cultured and ignorant.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin, Ray Milland—A very good production that sold out opening night to below average business the second night. Universal makes too few good ones.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Was surprised that this picture did not draw better. It is well made, manifestly costing a great deal of money, but attendance was only average or lower.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—Dick is okay and soon will draw better than Autry. This picture is one of the best westerns that I have ever played and I showed to a full house all day. It looks like westerns are coming back and I hope they do for they have made us more money than all the rest put together. Come on, Warner, and get a couple of more western stars and give us some more westerns that click like Dick's do. Running time, 60 minutes. Played August 14.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL, THE: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—An entertaining if unpretentious bit of celluloid. Played June 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—Typical western. Gets by.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Doris Weston—A Powell show from start to finish cut along the same pattern as all the Marine or Army musicals. This time Powell is somewhat of a "heel" due to his radio contracts and being in the money, but of course that was all hunky dory. Before the end he vindicated himself. The scenario writer suffered no brain fag on this one. High percentage and the producer got the gravy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Doris Weston—This one proved that Dick Powell can't stand alone. Although musicals go big here, this one took a nose dive. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 24-27.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

SLIM: Henry Fonda, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Was enjoyed by all who saw it. Had hard time to get them in, though. The advertising photos were very poor. They gave no suggestion of the type of picture it was. Suggest you bill it as an outdoor picture if you play it. I'd say play it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 6-7.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SLIM: Henry Fonda, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Was afraid to run this on Sunday as my patrons do not seem to care for too much action on this day. But was gratified at the comments they made. However, think that the Friday, Saturday change would have been better for this one. Nothing wrong with the picture, though. Just my mistake in not booking it right. Don't think it should be in the percentage class, though, as it just makes extra work to turn in the reports. Running time, 86 minutes. Played August 8-9.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MERRY CAFE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Average cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOTHER HEN'S HOLIDAY: Color Rhapsodies—Excellent. But this is a Mother's Day cartoon and if these dated cartoons were only ready so all could use them on the appropriate day they would be much more acceptable, but as it is we get Christmas at Easter and Easter on the 4th of July.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

BIG GAME HUNT, THE: Terry-Toone—Here is a swell little short that just gives the kids what they want. Plenty of laughs and has all it takes to make a good one-reel comedy. Running time, seven minutes. —Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

MELODY GIRL: Two-reel Comedies—Fair musicomedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MIXED MAGIC: Buster Keaton—A good comedy. Enough said. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLAY GIRLS: Song and Comedy Hits—Here is a good singing and dancing short that gives the younger set just what they are looking for. There is better singing and dancing in this short than lots of the big feature pictures they make. Give us more like these. Running time, 18 minutes.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

READY TO SERVE: Two-Reel Comedies—Just another week attempt at two-reel fun.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RED HOT MUSIC: Terry-Toons—Here is a good little short that Educational goes to town in. All the kids will see this twice and it will please both old and young. Give it advance selling. It will get them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

TIN CAN TOURIST, THE: Terry-Toons—Fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Elissa Landi, Charley Chase—Two reels of sock entertainment made to order for the average theatregoer. Could be an aid at the box office with a snapper title, if a series were made. Running time, 21 minutes.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

INDIA ON PARADE: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—FitzPatrick knows the answers when it comes to travelogues. This is no exception.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KILLER DOG: Pete Smith Specialties—This is a particularly good subject dealing with a killer dog on trial for his life.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies—A very clever musical comedy which I believe is more suitable for larger centers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE: Special—The Romeo and Juliet of short subjects. Playing it in opposition to "Charlie McCarthy," he made us look bad. It's too bad, but Indiana isn't ready for the rich stuff yet. Running time, 21 minutes.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

WAYWARD PUPS: Harman-Ising—One of the best cartoons I've had the pleasure to give my patrons. The kids went wild and the adults enjoyed it about as much. Running time, nine minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

BUNNY MOONING: Color Classics—Pleasing color cartoon. Fairly funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING SOCCER: Grantland Rice Sportlights—No good in my town, boys. We don't play soccer in the south and they will walk out to get a drink when this hits the screen. Running time, 10 minutes.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 6: This pictorial is just about as good as any of the pictorials. None of them go good with us. Running time, 10 minutes. —Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

PLEASE KEEP ME IN YOUR DREAMS: Screen Songs—Screen songs are nice and they fit in to any picture if you can get your patrons to sing them. Mine don't. This screen song has quite a lot of comedy and it went over okay. Running time, 10 minutes.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

SWING, HUTTON, SWING: Ina Ray Hutton and Her Orchestra—Despite Miss Hutton's obvious charm she spoils her acts by too much of Miss Hutton, if you know what we mean, Ina. The other girls are good, too. Why not feature them occasionally?—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DAY WITH THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS, A: Special—The usual Quint entertainment which doesn't thrill me or the help, but it does bring in the customers. Give us more of them. Running time, 19 minutes.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Seen worse but not very many. Kennedy gets on our nerves here and grows pathetic.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Radio Flash Comedies—Here is a comedy that provides laughs and that is what the public wants laughs—and some more laughs and horse laughs to top it off. Running time, two reels—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 9: Some say okay, but most are entirely noncommittal. And silence doesn't usually mean they want more.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THAT MAN SAMPSON: Radio Musical Comedies—Another poor excuse for a comedy. How they can make them so poor is a mystery to me. Running time, 20 minutes.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MEMORIES OF SPAIN: Magic Carpet Series—Okay black and white travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCOURING THE SKIES: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Good, but we think it's about time we saw the last of that plane wreck where the thing goes up in smoke in front of the hangers.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

DOUBLE TALK: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—This little fellow is good short subject material. Our people like him very much. They have done so much with ventriloquism of late, especially this Bergen fellow. Running time, 10 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IT'S ALL OVER NOW: Dan Healy—Fair Broadway Brevity. Some good dancing. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JAM SESSION, THE: Clyde McCoy and His Orchestra—Another of those McCoy musicals that click here 100 per cent. We played it at end of show for ourselves. Lots stayed. Warners should be congratulated for getting Clyde Moody. He's a natural here. Our young people go for him in a big way.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JIMMIE LUNCHFORD AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Here is a good short that has swing and good red hot music. It's worth the money in any spot. Give it marquee billing and it will bring some in that you might not get. It's okay, boys. Running time, 10 minutes.—Jack A. Farr, Strand Theatre, Yorktown, Texas. Small town patronage.

MOVIE MANIA: Dave Apollon—Excellent two reeler. Plenty of variety to this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUSICAL OPERATION, A: Broadway Brevities—Poor. Sound was bad and acts were very dumb. One person got quite a laugh out of it, but then some enjoy anything that's supposed to be funny. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PORKY OF THE NORTHWOODS: Looney Tunes—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PRETTY PRETENDER, THE: Bernice Claire—A pretty good subject. Miss Claire would be better if they selected a more melodic score for her to sing. Not so arty.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

BRADDOCK-LOUIS FIGHT PICTURES: Drew very good against a tent show opposition. In fact, it was the only thing that did do business against them. Most everybody thought the pictures very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgen, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.
